Although not exactly in line with my argument, it will be well to note right here the decline in the status of women that succeeded the triumph of churchism. Moncure D. Conway, in his dissertations on South Place Institute, remarks that " there was not a more cruel chapter in history than that which records the arrest, by Christianity, of the natural growth of European civilization as regards women. In Germany it found woman participating in the legislative assemblies and sharing the interests and counsels of men, and drove her out and away, leaving her nothing of her ancient rights but the titles that remain to mark her degradation. In the pagan countries of Egypt, Greece, and Rome, woman's position was far higher than under Christian sway." Speaking of the doctrine of her original sin, which was maintained with such force in the early church, Lecky says that "women were represented as the door of hell, the mother of human ills. She should be ashamed of the very thought that she is a woman, and should live

CONTINUED ON PAGE 3

CHRISTMAS.

"Is This Christ, or Shall We Expect Another?

A LECTURE BY MRS. CORA L. V. RICHMOND.

"And this is the immortal promise," says Vishnu, "that the light of the world shall twelve times descend upon the earth."

From the Scandinavian: "Such time as Odin sends forth his mighty messengers of light to prepare for the spring-time, when the sun in the Winter Solstice departs the farthest in his influence from the earth, the shortest day being the day that precedes the new birth." It is the birth of the new light, for from this time the sun sheds added rays each day upon the world, making more palpable the approach of spring-time; and when the Vernal Equinox comes in March, the new birth is already here. In the North the celebration was at the yule-time, and in the latter part of March, or that time of the year which is now denominated March.

Among the Egyptians the celebration was in the spring-time alone; for it was then that Horus dipped his mighty bow in the waters of material life, and then the world had rebirth. For Horus was the light of the world. Isis, the veiled mother, gave forth the young child Horus, and under the baptism of that spring-tide, the floods came down from the distant mountains to inundate and fructify the valley. Even thus, the Egyptians declared, was the spiritual nature of man renewed such time as the divine light, descending into the abyss of the waters of the oblivion of earthly night, gave the new birth unto the world. Souls, it is said, in this ancient religion, have their rebirth, and, by constant struggle, at last reach the life that is embodied in Vishnu, in Brahma, in Horus. But whatever be these ancient forms, they have passed; their influence is only felt in astronomy and tradition, which are separated now upon the earth. Astrology is no longer accounted an exact science, and the world stumbles on in blindness concerning the spiritual rebirth, accepting only the latest manifestation of the Christ life. Buddha is denied in Christian lands; the light which vivified Asia before Christ had birth in Palestine was a light born of the surpassing power of the rebirths of Messiahs.

Five times has the splendor of the Soul of Truth dipped into the shadow of material life and given forth the Christ birth; five times have the nations been exalted from the foundations of the earth to the knowledge of spiritual truth, for you can trace in the five primal races the exact spiritual symbols for that which Christ taught—the Golden Rule is found in every ancient language under some form or other—whether in the revised Brahminical faith and philosophy, as taught by Confucius; or in that of India, declared by Zerdusht; or in the still more remote Brahminical faith; or in that of ancient Egypt, who holds in her sacred keeping all knowledge of science, art, and religion; or still further back in that dream of the pre-historic ages, which has made this Western world the more ancient of the two, and has found carved on pillars of stone and entablature the images of the life that once was here. Whether you accept these indications of history or not, whether the records of stones and traditions are valuable or not, the cycles declare them to be so, and the religion of the present day is being modified by their presence.

No poet like Edwin Arnold could have sung his song in New England one hundred years ago; no "Light of Asia" could have gleamed across that sky, through the Orientalism that has since pervaded your literature; for the minds of the Western world were not illumined concerning the nations of the East. All is changed: To-day the Jesus Christ of Christendom is the corner-stone of the Christian faith, but the Orient is the foundation of the Christian philosophy and literature; and more hearts turn to-day toward a possible solution of all the mysteries of life through something that shall be incorporate into Christianity from these ancient shrines, renewed from above, than from the revivification of formal worship in Christendom.

The Christ of Galilee, the Jesus of Bethlehem, the lowly babe, whose life introduced into the mortal form was heralded by angels, who gave the prophecy of the fulfillment of "peace on earth and good will to man;" who, whether a person or a principle, is cherished as a distinct personality, around which must cluster the oppressed of the world; the living Christ, declaring his teachings, proclaiming upon Olivet the blessed benefactions to the world—the Beatitudes, that exaltation for all humanity, that hope of each individual life, that makes the moral nature as exact in its requirements as mathematics—the Christ that breathed his life into the healing touch and walked with the lowly and the outcast; the Christ that died that his principles might live, is not the Christ of form and ceremony, or the evangelical creeds in Christendom. That Christ was denied by the Jews, as alas! he would be, were he here at this hour, by the Christians; that Jesus was rejected by the constituted authorities, as he would be to-day by Rome and Westminster, and all the churches in Christendom. The light of truth in the form of a lowly child, the symbol of innocence, is not the light expected by the scholarship of the churches, the trained priests, the educated divines of the schools and universities, that can bestow ordination whether it cometh from within or not. That which takes the name of Christ for the garment, but does not share the spirit nor the spiritual gifts, cannot be denominated the service of him. Remember many lives walk in that way, many footsteps turn to the sanctuary sincerely worshiping the spirit of Christ, but the form itself is not the living Christ.

When Jesus appeared he had been preceded by John the Baptist, the herald, the light bearer, the proclaimer of the new truth, who declared himself unworthy to unlatch the shoes of him who should follow. When they asked him if he was the Christ, he declared himself to be but the herald of that Christ. When Christ came, those endowed with spiritual knowledge recognized the light and understood that it was foretold; knew the cycles that were included in the ancient Oriental calendar; understood that the rebirth was to be a spiritual light, as well as a renewal of the vast cycles in the material heavens. Yet those Wise Men, who knew this neither proclaimed it on the house-tops nor published it in the temple, but silently gave their recognition and their homage; as the angel had appeared to them in the night, so they gave their devotion and went away.

The light was to fulfill its purpose, born in lowliness it was the symbol of humility; the child was the symbol of innocence; the persecution of the parents was the symbol of all who bear the form or work of truth unto the world; and the despised people of Nazareth, to which Christ owed his earthly parentage, was the symbol of that unworldly greatness which accompanies truth that is to be valued only for itself. The child of twelve years speaking in the temple was the only indication of the voice of truth in the recognized form until the mature ministration, during which time the spiritual fulfillment and requirements had been completed, was the indication that the truth was ready to be declared. Brief though the period of ministration was, meager as is the account which has been spared to you through interpolations and mistranslations, you still have the cardinal and essential principles of the Christ life; for each Christ comes to declare more perfectly a separate form of truth. That which Buddha declared in Asia partook more of the general nature of human life, with specific instructions concerning the nature of the soul and of its embodiments or incarnations in human form. That of Zerdusht partook more of the nature of the divine as introduced into the form of science; and still farther back to the primal source of knowledge in Egypt which were derived from the Messianic cycles which gave all learning to the world.

The Christ of Christendom had a distinct purpose; his mission is very clear and simple—the palpable declaration of that mission being one of love instead of a mision of power; the declaration of the spiritual worship; the relation of man as symbolized in the word Father applied to the Deity instead of the the tion of subject to king, and the fulfillment of all spiritual requirements in the fellowship and fraternity of the world. While those principles had been taught in previous dispensations the crystallization and embodiment of them was essentially the work of Jesus of Nazareth, and being essentially his work must needs bear his name; for when we speak of the teachings of Plato we do not require another name, but call them Platonism; when we are speaking of any period of human history it is designated by the pervading thought or ruling power of that age. The Christian interpretation, as manifested in the life of Christ, was a distinct rebirth of the old knowledge of love and good fellowship among men, forgotten in the ten commandments of Moses, denied in those tables that were rejected because the multitude could not understand them, broken by the Children of Israel into a thousand shards; these little fragments of shining light shone through all history, gleamed in the teachings of prophets, but were looked forward to in perfect completeness by every prophetic mind in Israel. The Christ was the impersonation of the love of neighbor as the love of self, the overcoming of evil with good, the returning of good for evil, and the fulfillment of all divine attributes. In that essential particular the Christian era marks the event of the transcribing and fixing from the theories, teaching and diffusive forms of the past the idea of immortality, of the love of God for man, and the good fellowship of man, into human life; making a distinct cycle in human history. Not that these teachings were unknown before, but many things are included in human knowledge that are not particularly specified.

In order that the world may learn the lessons not only as a whole, but learn them severally and seperatly, each embodied Christ is an illustration of one principle of Divinity; as Jesus of Nazareth expresses that of Love. But as he declared that all could not then be spoken, as there was much of truth that they could not bear, much of the light that their eyes could not see, as those in immediate contact with him seemed blind and ignorant of the spiritual principles that he taught. He declared the advent of another, who would reveal all things. He also said: "If I go away I will come again; I will not leave you comfortless, but will return unto you." But that was with them a literal promise and testimony, to take the shape of a personality, and they thought that as he had been personal with them, and they recognized his divine relationship to truth and to the Father; that if he did go he would return with added power, with his spirit-strength commensurate with his spiritual glory. In fact the whole interpretation of those who followed Christ, excepting a chosen few, was the interpretation of the sense instead of the spirit: they supposed the Father to be a king, they believed his kingdom was to be literal, they looked for him to be transformed any day into a prince of power with attending armies to take possession of Jerusalem as a literal and temporal citadel. When, therefore, the great shock came upon them that he must die; when the truth was known, that he could not remain upon the earth, they still clung with expectant hope to the idea that he would reappear and take possession of his crown and kingdom. A few only interpreted correctly the meaning of his words and followed in the spiritual ways that he taught, undoubtedly on all occasion when they commemorated his birth or presence among them they saw the Presence and frequently held communion with him there, for he had not departed from the spiritual heavens of the earth. Nor had he departed up to a certain cyclic period which is within the remembrance of all, the light of that Presence still clung to the earth, still hung over the hearts that followed the form of Jesus as representing the truth. Although the churches, the external shrines and creeds could not represent him, the lives of many who had come up through great tribulation, who had served him for the sake of truth, who had bestowed upon humanity their lives and their strength, and their best endeaveor in Christ's name: these were among those whom his presence blest. Of course it cannot be exaggeration to suppose that on such occasions as being exalted and uplifted his followers in spirit beheld him face to face; it can be no exaggeration to suppose that into their lives his sphere penetrated filling them with glory. As the monk who was accustomed to bestow alms upon the poor at the twilight hour when the vespers chimed; while engaged in prayer he was conscious of a surpassing presence; looking up he beheld the image of Christ; he heard the chiming of the bells that summoned him to duty, he fain would have remained with the image of Divinity, but duty called; when he returned he found the apparition still there.

Speaking then, he said: "I thought that thou must have vanished." And the presence said: "Hadst thou remained, I must have vanished." For the Christ cannot remain if a selfish wish, even of adoration, takes possession of the human life. All along human history individual lives have thus been blest by vision or conscious presence; and by vision or conscious presence; and when engaged in their works of love, not only have guardian spirits and angels watched their devotion and ministered to them, but the Christ life has pervaded them. Who can doubt?

But the world cannot always look backward; seasons hasten on to new spring-tides, the great cycles of the universe fulfill themselves in many added forms, and the heavens of suns and stars are replenished from the ancient altars of light, renewing and giving forth their life and strength through the succeeding cycles, each of which is marked by an especial change. So human life on earth requires rebirth.

The typical and historical Christ is as much the Christ that moves in the upper heavens as the guardian of his kingdom upon the earth is an illustration not of how to follow Christ when he is in heaven, but how to follow him him here in the meshes and labyrinths of time, surrounded by the shakles and chains of matter, environed by the senses, imbued with the spirit of the dust; and so the great tides of rebirth bear the pulsing waves toward the world of a new evidence of light.

Even the Christians look forward to the "end of the the world" when Christ will claim his own. As though he had not already claimed them in that inner kingdom if they are ready to share his life.

But the fact is that the times are portentous: that as long ago as one or two centuries there were certain sects in Christendom who taught the end of the world and the advent of Christ to claim his own; and the fact that the second Adventists of to-day, whatever their other differences all believe, that in some manner that Christ is to reappear proves that the time is imminent, for the forebodings and indications are at present in the earth's atmosphere; there is truth in the form of thought, there may be a mistake as to the exact manner in which Christ another shall come, is not decided by these believers who look earnestly for the reappearance of Jesus. The more literal minded expect him to come to dwell on earth with his followers; those more spiritually minded expect him to judge the world and claim his own, bearing them to the kingdom of celestial light, the heaven which they hope to possess. All the world in a spiritual direction expects something.

While in many ways it is mournful, in some ways it is almost mirthful, that there are lives upon the earth to-day who arrogate to themselves the personality of Divinity, who declare themselves to be the promised Christ.

We know of two or three hundreds outside of the lunatic asylums who think this. It still is a significant fact that the Christ life is drawing near.

Among those who claim a knowledge of the Christ principle and claim to embody it in themselves there are not a few who are signally exalted, whose spiritual natures are acted upon until their native egotism arrogates to themselves the light which they only partially reflect. Nor is it strange; if a sudden beatitude falls upon you, if a great love or happiness comes to you; you think yourself the most blest of human beings, and in the triumph of the hour, is there any human life so valuable as yours? The meanest and poorest human life is the most valuable to itself. It is a significant truth that no human being is willing to exchange his personality with any one else, though often willing to exchange circumstances. When, therefore an exaltation enters the human state, the result of spiritual presences brooding near, the result of the outpouring of the spirit; like that came to the Quakers and the Shakers; it is not strange that many should worship Mother Ann Lee as almost the Christ; that they should declare among the Shakers that "she is indeed the feminine Christ." It is not strange that many whose spiritual perceptions are easily affected shall feel themselves exalted to some sudden height and imagine that the Christ has really come.

Pitiable as this sight may seem it still is an indication of the prophecy that is in the world; it is an indication that the Christ life draws near; and that the close of the cycle which was marked by the year 1881 is the close of a messianic period, recognized among the ancients. Therefore the Wise Men knew when to expect the birth of Jesus; the symbol appearing in the heavens being but the symbol of the angel that denoted the birth of the new Christ. To-day the spiritually wise observe the signs of the heavens, but may not mention it; many are aware of and see the tokens that are in the world, but do not declare them too freely; and, above all the spiritually wise do not make a personal application of that which, when it does appear in personal form, will leave no doubt as to itself.

The significance and meaning of Christ, though crucified, was not denied as the teaching of the highest truth, it was simply that the error which prevailed in the world could not bear the presence of that truth; if Christ appears in any form of truth to-day, it is not among the praised and flattered of the world, but doubtless among the despised that these principles are known. They are still accounted true, only that the world is not ready for them. When the messenger of the new life declares the teaching upon Olivet to be practicable the worldly minded say it is a dream; and when the Golden Rule is proclaimed as possible in human life the teachers in the accepted temples in Christendom declare it impossible.

The light of the spirit makes its ways in gradually advancing lines, which may seem partially to recede, but never withdraw; and the incoming light of spiritual truth, the signs and tokens that are in the world declare the approach. But let no one make a mistake; the Christ is not yet in human form; the spirit of that over-brooding presence may be already here; the winged messengers, guardian spirits and angels may declare it as a hope and prophecy to the world. But the incarnated love of the new life, that which shall crystallize and place it in a distinct and practical form is not yet here. When that life appears it will be a dual Messiah, will depict the entire nature of man; the perfect man and the perfect woman are yet to be born, and the typical life of earth only yields approximate perfection, until by years of preparation the race becomes the citadel of that which shall enshrine the New Light.

The indications that are here many misinterpret. Some think they point rather to a general distribution of the principles of truth, than their incorporation in any human life. But when we tell you that human life never expresses a principle without the incarnation on earth typical of that principle, you will understand; as the geniuses of poesy and religion have been crystallized in a destinct human life, so the teaching which belongs to any crystallization is possible. The new birth was heralded by the prophets in Israel, but Jesus of Christendom illustrated it in person.

Today there are many prophets; there are those endowed with the light of wisdom and knowledge inspired by the angels of the New Birth, who give themselves at once to the world.

Therefore it is no wonder that as Christmas tide draws near people look expectantly forward; although the Christ life imagined in the beautiful child in Bethlehem is as a dream, a beautiful image of sacred loveliness, the world is looking for the life that is to be; and this principle is to be incorporated into the life of man. The teachings from the spirit world would be valueless if they did not tend toward a culmination that could illustrate the truth on earth. As that culmination is the possible state of all, so it is preceded in the lines of human existence by the culmination which is denominated the Christ life.

Twelve times this sun of splendor in the form of a Messiah vivifies the earth with brightness. The twelve kinds of fruit upon the Tree of Life are the twelve messianic cycles; and the leaves for the healing of the nations are the messengers of ministration and spiritual powers that go forth from this Tree of Life to prepare for the fruition.

You are entering upon the sixth cycle, you draw near the time of the accredited birth of Christ; the whole world in Christendom bends in homage unto that shrine, and before another Sabbath the chiming of Christmas bells will bring joy and gladness to many thousand hearts. Little children, with bright eyes and lovely smiles, will hold up the gifts which love has brought them and declare the Christmas time the brightest of the year. The hearts of those that are sad will turn, possibly wearily and with few smiles, but toward the light reflected from the faces and hearts of others. Even the abject poor, those whom Jesus said you always have with you, will turn from their squalor, from the shadows unto the brighter light that gleams from the Christmas festivals. Hearts full of love, or charity, or that which wears its semblance in human life, will give some gleam of happiness, some little item of comfort to those who are immured in the shadows. But when the Christ births redeem the world there will be no poor; when the entire light of truth is given there will be no shadows to chase away; pinched faces pressing against the window panes to look upon festivities they cannot share will be unknown; the chiming of merry Christmas bells which the lonely outcast cannot participate in will not be known; and the light which comes from within will thrill and pervade the whole with greater splendor.

Yes, you are to look for another Christ. Spiritualism is but John the Baptist preparing the way for the footsteps of this added light, the herald in the wilderness that opens up the avenues of Spiritual Communion that you may better prepare for the added glory. Glimpses flung down into human minds; the teachers, reformers, those who suffer for truth's sake are persecuted by the world, possibly driven heavenward, even in this Christian age, because of espousing the life of Christ. These few glimpses, though only glimpses, flood the world with expectancy.

Beware how you turn to any personal form; beware how you follow the ignis fatuus of any individual life, thinking it is the Christ. For although there are prophets many, though there are many inspired, the Christ life has not yet come, the form of the new Christ has not appeared. In some fair valley, some beautiful place upon the earth, or possibly amid the striving, hurrying multitude, the New Life will make its appearance, such time as the full rebirth is ready, such time as many hearts are prepared for its coming; and you are neither to expect nor to look, but to wait for the light within your souls. When generations shall have passed away, from your height in spirit states, or walking the earth with added knowledge you may behold that presence and understand it.

Already the summoning pinions of the angels of the New Dawn are at your doors; already the quenchless altar-fires have been rekindled; already the hearts of many are bent in attentive listening unto words of wisdom and prophecy, that human lives may be more perfect, that human love may be more expressed, that the divine life may find such fitting habitation, suitably prepared in your lives, as shall make Christmas chimes mean the advent of "peace on earth and love to man."

How the stars chime down this night and the voices of eternity are pleading at the doors of your lives for the admittance of this Christ of truth. The mittance of this Christ of truth. The messengers passing to and fro, your loved ones bending near, the archangels environing them around about, declare the celestial promise unto the world; such time as the earth is ready, such time as the great needs of humanity shall be piled mountain high where they are now only as mole hills, such time as the measure of Mammon's voice and human persecution shall be such that the lives of the world will rise up to claim the New Christ; then will the visible life appear, then the word be spoken for which the ages have listened; then will another great step in human progress be taken; then will all obey the new found light, and the whole world will be one step nearer to that kingdom of heaven which is to come on earth.

"Human Culture and Cure. Part First. The Philosophy of Cure. (Including Methods and Instruments)." By E. D. Babbitt, M. D., LL.D. A very instructive and valuable work. It should have a wide circulation, as it well fulfills the promise of its title. For sale at this office. Price, 75 cents.

"Religious and Theological Works of Thomas Paine." Contains his celebrated "Age of Reason," and a number of letters and discourses on religious and theological subjects. Cloth binding, 430 pages. Price $1. For sale at this office.

"Atlantis: The Antediluvian World. By Ignatius Donnelly. Sums up all information relative to the lost continent of Atlantis. He regards the description of it given by Plato as veritable history. It is intensely interesting. Price $2.

"The Philosophy of Spirit, and the Spirit-World." By Hudson Tuttle. A most able and interesting presentation of a most important subject. Every Spiritualist and every inquirer into the proofs and philosophy of Spiritualism should have this excellent book. Cloth, $1. For sale at this office.

"The Gospel of Buddha, According to Old Records," Told by Paul Carus. This book is heartily commended to students of the science of religions, and to all who would gain a fair conception of Buddhism in its spirit and living principles. Spiritualist or Christian can scarcely read it without spiritual profit. Price $1. For sale at this office.

GENERAL SURVEY

The Spiritualistic Field—Its Workers, Doings, Etc.

Bear in mind, please, that we cannot publish weekly reports of meetings. Whenever a change is made in speakers, or anything of special interest, send us a brief item, please. A great deal can be expressed in a dozen lines; but long reports will not be used. Meetings are of local interest only. We extend a cordial invitation to all speakers to send in their appointments to lecture, and general movements, which will be read by at least 40,000. We go to press early Monday morning, and items must reach us as early as Friday or Saturday in order to have immediate insertion

Communications must always be accompanied by the full name and address of the writer, or no attention will be paid to them.

Vey Cramer, ten years old, writes from Avoca, Iowa, that at seances given by Mr. Wheeler, spirits talked through the trumpet, and forms materialized and performed several feats playing on a jewsharp, shooting arrows at a target, and other things.

F. S. J. writes: "F. Corden White, of Chicago, is filling an engagement with the Unity Spiritual Society of Milwaukee, Wis. The audiences Sunday evenings and at the midweek social are large and enthusiastic, and the tests given phenomenal. In his private work Mr. White is giving to unbelievers positive proof of the life beyond the grave. A good slate-writing medium is much needed in Milwaukee; one who could give a writing in public under test conditions would be well patronized."

E. W. Sprague is serving the First Society of Spiritualists of Fort Wayne, Ind., for December. He has January still open. Address him for December at 49 Taylor street, Fort Wayne, Ind. Permanent address, 965 Grove street, Meadville, Pa.

G. W. Kates and wife will hold special meetings in Titusville, Pa., December 28 and 29; Pittsburgh, Pa., December 31. During January they will hold meetings in Alliance, Canton, Massillon, East Clariden and Burton, Ohio. They have open time first and last of January. Please address them at once at 283 Seventh street, Buffalo, N. Y.

E. C. Gray, Chicago, writes: "The Christmas season is fast approaching, and the little ones—yes, and the grown people, too—are full of schemes to make it memorable. If you want to see the finest entertainment in town come to our hall, corner Indiana avenue and Thirty-first street, on December 24 to the Christmas eve programme. It is gotten up by G. V. Cordingley, the hustling leader of the Progressive Spiritual Church, in behalf of the children's lyceum, which he conducts every Sunday afternoon. We have between two hundred and three hundred children, and it is a sight to make hearts warm to see how they flock around Mr. Cordingley and their dancing teacher, Mr. Harry W. Miller, even accompanying them to their very doorsteps after every service. These popular young workers not only have the Sunday lyceum, but also a free Saturday afternoon dancing class for their children, which is much appreciated by the parents. You are all welcome to our Christmas entertainment. The charge is low from the grown people, and free to the chilren. Gifts for all so that each little one may go home contented after it is over. Prof. Miller has trained several of the pupils to dance fancy steps, and there will be a grand stage scene, with Christmas carols, etc., as well as an appropriate spiritual programme, giving of presents, and dance. I have been about among the various local societies, and do not find anywhere the enthusiasm among the children that I find here, where our beloved leader, the great-hearted lover of children, Mr. Cordingley, reminds us at every turn of him who said: 'Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not.' If we win the children we win the world for good; let us then emulate this example. The first of the year we hope to become a chartered society; will you help us, Southsiders? Now, with a merry Christmas to all of you, and ever may we grow nearer to the dear ones on the other side of life."

Mrs. H. L. Bigelow writes from San Jose, Cal.: "The First Spiritual Union has had W. W. Tatum, of New Orleans, to speak and give tests for the month of November. His tests are considered good. He has now returned to his home. We were also favored with solos by the famous contralto singer, Mrs. Emma Sherwood. The society has re-engaged Sarah Seal for this month. As a speaker she cannot be excelled. We have established an Aid Society, and she was elected chairman. The Aid Society meets every Friday afternoon and makes comfortables and clothing for the needy. We have been very busy the last two months, as the weather has been quite cold. On November 1st the members of the Ladies Aid gave a social, which was quite a success. During the evening a silk lounging robe was presented to Sister Seal by the Aid Society—Sister Starks, vice-president, speaking in behalf of the society. Mrs. Seal responded in a neat little speech. On Tuesday evening, December 8, the friends and members of the Spiritual Society gave a reception to Sister H. A. Griffin, who is about to remove to San Francisco. She was made the recipient of a recommend from the society, testifying to her ability and the appreciation of good qualities which we have proved she possesses in her two years' stay with us. She was also presented with a beautiful gold badge, such as symbolize our philosophy and spiritual work."

India Hill writes from Decatur, Ill.: "A few courageous souls who have held the charter of The Progressive Society inviolate, are again striving to stem the tide of oppression, and have attracted quite a number of investigators, so we have two public meetings a week, besides quite a number of private circles for the phenomenal phases and development of quite a number of new mediums. We are sorely in need of spiritual songs, and are at a loss to know where we can get books within the reach of all. The Spiritual Songs are gems in themselves if we could get them set to music, so all would have a chance to learn them. If Mattie Hull has such, we would be pleased to get our supplies of her. We would like the voice of our successful workers on this particular part of our worship and would gladly receive any information that would be a benefit in our work."

Thos. H. Black writes from Cleveland, Ohio: "The Church of the Occult held its first meeting here in Army and Navy Hall, December 13, Frederic Bell, speaker. His subject was 'Cranks,' which he handled in a masterly manner. Mr. Bell is a profound thinker, logical reasoner and eloquent speaker, besides being a fine vocalist. We hope he may organize a permanent society."

Wm. Mason writes from Fond du Lac, Wis.: "The Rev. W. D. Cowell, pastor of the People's Christian Association, preached a sermon on Spiritualism Sunday evening, showing the high standard of its adherents, such as Professor Hudson, of Cambridge University, England; W. T. Stead, editor of The Review of Reviews (himself a medium); Bishop Phillips Brooks, late of Boston, and a number of others; and also that he had visited a medium and had had demonstrative proof of his deceased father's presence. This from one who is or has been an orthodox Methodist preacher shows an inroad of light given to his congregation, who are for the most part orthodox, but showing generally a disposition to listen to facts brought before them by their pastor. Many of our Spiritualist friends attend his congregation, which is the largest Protestant one in the city; and I think that by treating the people kindly, and refraining from saying anything to excite their prejudice, Spiritualism may regain the foothold it had here in Governor Talmadge's town, forty years ago."

Mr. Wm. A. Fisher writes thus of the ministrations of J. C. F. Grumbine at the First Spiritual Temple, Boston. The subject was "The Science of Materialization." He says: "I want to tell you how glad I was made by the superb utterance of yesterday afternoon. You are a chosen one to give proclamation to the truths of real Spiritualism—truths as yet very little known even by those who call themselves Spiritualists. Of Spiritism the world has heard more or less, but of that for which you stand—Spiritualism—very little indeed. I feel that you do not as yet realize how high a place you are chosen to fill as a radiator of light. How great the world's darkness seems, until we remember that we are after all but in infancy—but a baby race. It is pitiful that the majority of mediums are so under the dominance (unconsciously) of the discarnate on a low plane, that the true state of things is actually kept from them by these lower forces."

Mrs. Ella Woodward writes from Toledo, Ohio: "I wish to say to the friends of truth that we have been blessed for the last week with our dear old friend, Farmer Riley. His seances each night prove to the most skeptical that spirit return is a fact, He has gone to Findlay, Ohio, for a few nights' engagement, whence he expects to go to Chicago."

M. H. Carsion writes from Bozeman, Montana: "Mrs. C. T. Newton, physical medium, is doing good work here, and the people are very much interested in her work."

Geo. Maddocks writes from Hamilton, Ontario: "One of the recently appointed missionaries of the N. S. A. has paid us a visit—Mrs. Loe Prior, who has been for some time past staying in Toronto, and who on request gave us two lectures in the interest and for the benefit of the N. S. A. The two lectures created a feeling that is likely to develop into an organization, besides bringing into the Spiritual fold quite an influx of new investigators, who want to learn more of our beautiful philosophy as portrayed by that paragon of mediums, Mrs. Prior. There are a very great number of people here who have some knowledge of spiritual manifestations and quite a few who have been reading the weekly spiritual press, and all we now need is to organize, as the harvest is ripe, and our hope is that we may very soon have Mrs. Prior return to complete the work so that we we can with the Toronto and London societies put our shoulders to the wheel and help to lighten the darkness of this church-ridden people. I may say we realized quite a donation for the N. S. A., and that Mrs. Prior refused to accept any remuneration for her gracious services. I will not dilate on the beauty of the lectures; suffice it to say, she fairly captured all who heard her, and now we are craving for more."

The following comes from Topeka, Kansas; "We have with us Dr. and Mrs. Noyes, of California, who we hope will remain here during the coming month. The Doctor is doing his usual good work as lecturer and healer, while Mrs. Noyes gives psychometric readings and tests on the platform, giving descriptions and names in full, all of which are recognized.

Mrs. Lora Holton, musical test medium, has moved from 83 Thirty-first street, to 3909 Indiana avenue, where she can be addressed for engagements.

Moses Hull announces that he will speak before the Manhattan Club of New York on Christmas night.

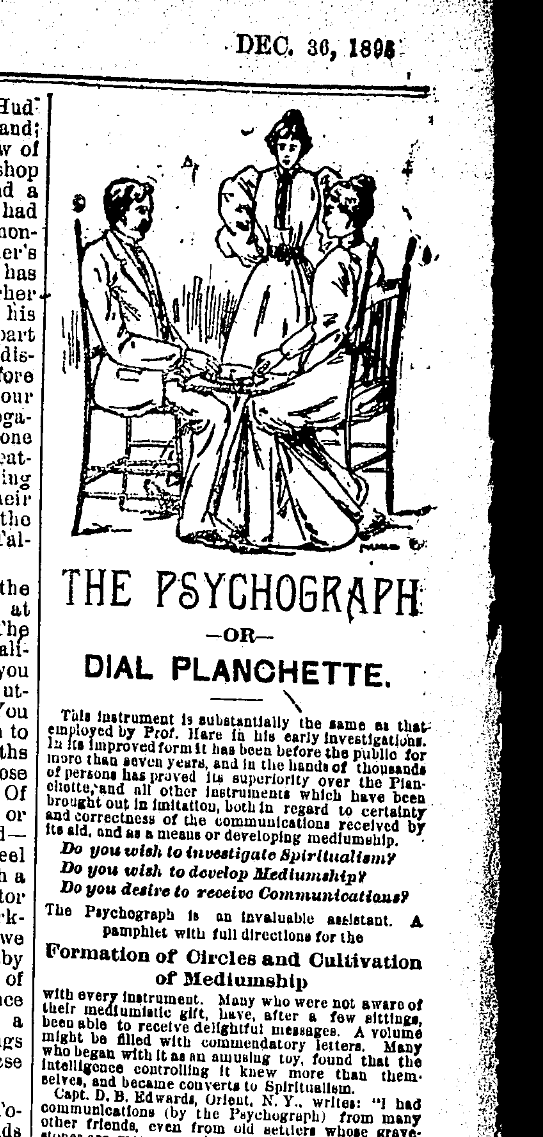
Dr. Dean Clarke, who gave great pleasure and profit to his audiences in Grand Rapids during November, is obliged to suspend public speaking till his health is improved, and he has returned to the Soldier's Home, Milwaukee, Wis., where his address will be till further notice. May the good angels aid him and soon return him to the public where his eminent ability as a speaker is needed, for the good of our cause to which he has been devoted many years.

Moses Hull is to speak before the Manhattan Club, N. Y., on Christmas night. Remember that Mr. Hull's permanent address is Stoneham, Mass., where he can be addressed for engagements.

D. L. Druliner, president, writes: "The Spiritualist Society of the South Side, 3120 Forest avenue, holds its annual election Sunday the 27th inst., 4 p. m., to elect officers for the ensuing year. It is the wish of the society, as far as practicable that the various positions may be filled by young people. A full attendance of the members is particularly desired."

Dr. P. J. Barrington writes: "Tomorrow I return to Strawberry Point, Iowa, to spend the holidays with my wife and friends, and give them two or three lectures. Then we go from there to Independence, Iowa."

E. W. Sprague, trance and inspirational speaker and platform test medium, has the following engagements: December, 1896, and January, 1897, Ft. Wayne, Ind.; February, Philadelphia, Pa.; June, Bankson's Lake, Mich., and November, Rochester, Ind. Societies, or campmeeting associations, desiring his services, may address him at 94 Taylor street, Ft. Wayne, until February 1. Mail will reach him addressed 965 Grove street, Meadville, Pa.



Moses Hull is forming Bible classes in the East. He instructs his students in the spiritual interpretation of that misunderstood book. He has not yet made appointments to take the place of his last April and May appointments. Address him at Stoneham, Mass.

Religion of the Future. By S. Weil. Cloth. $1.25; paper, 50 cents.

"The Fountain of Life, or The Threefold Power of Sex." By Lois Waisbrooker. One of the author's most useful books. It should be read by every man and woman. Price 50c.

"From Night to Morn, or An Appeal to the Baptist Church." By Abby A. Judson. Gives an account of her experience in passing from the old faith of her parents to the light and knowledge of Spiritualism. It is written in a sweet spirit, and is wel adapted to place in the hands of Chrlistian people. Price 15 cents.

"The Occult Forces of Sex." By Lios Waisbrooker. Three pamphlets are embodied in this volume, in which questions of great importance to the race are discussed from the standpoint of an advanced social reformer. Price 50c.

THE PSYCHOGRAPH
—OR—
DIAL PLANCHETTE.

This instrument is substantially the same as that employed by Prof. Hare in his early investigations. In its improved form it has been before the public for more than seven years, and in the hands of thousands of persons has proved its superiority over the Planchette, and all other instruments which have been brought out in imitation, both in regard to certainty and correctness of the communications received by its aid, and as a means of developing mediumship.

Do you wish to investigate Spiritualism?
Do you wish to develop Mediumship?
Do you desire to receive Communications?

The Psychograph is an invaluable assistant. A pamphlet with full directions for the Formation of Circles and Cultivation of Mediumship

with every instrument. Many who were not aware of their mediumistic gift, have, after a few sittings, been able to receive delightful messages. A volume might be filled with commendatory letters. Many who began with it as an amusing toy, found that the intelligence controlling it knew more than themselves, and became converts to Spiritualism.

Capt. D. B. Edwards, Orient, N. Y., writes: "I had communications (by the Psychograph) from many other friends, even from old settlers whose gravestones are moss-grown in the old yard. They have been highly satisfactory, and proved to me that Spiritualism is indeed true, and the communications have given my heart the greatest comfort in the severest loss I have had of son, daughter, and their mother."

Dr. Eugene Crowell, whose writings have made his name familiar to those interested in psychic matters, writes as follows: "I am much pleased with the Psychograph. It is very simple in principle and construction, and I am sure must be far more sensitive to spiritual power than the one now in use. I believe it will generally supersede the latter when its superior merits become known."

Securely packed, and sent postage paid from the manufacturer, for $1.00. Address:

HUDSON TUTTLE,
Berlin Heights, Ohio.

HERESY,
...OR...
LED TO THE LIGHT.

A Thrilling, Psychological Story of Evangelization and Free Thought. It is to Protestantism what the "Secrets of the Convent" is to Catholicism.

BY HUDSON TUTTLE.

The distinguished author, Hudson Tuttle, requires no introduction to the readers of THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER, but the following headings of chapters will show them what they may expect from the book: CONTENTS:—An Idyl—Fordham—Building the Church—The Evangelist—Blood—The Saloon—The Lost Daughter—Law—The Harvest of Souls—Jane Grey—The Mother of Cain Evolution—Stella—The Cell—Death—A Step Forward—The Home Circle—The Double Role—Heresy—Annette—The Bank Robbery—Liberty—All Is Well That Ends Well—The New Church—The New Way, Led to the Light.

Every chapter is devoted to one idea, and the whole presents so many tableaux moving onward to the climax. The fiendish career of the revivalist is contrasted with the character of the honest minister and the thinking agnostic. The steps by which a preacher emerges from the church, and the difficulties he meets are graphically presented. The new church and progressive lyceum evolved out of the old, form an interesting study to those seeking new methods.

It is a beautiful volume of 223 pages, and the price in accordance with our new departure, is 30 cents, postpaid, or five copies for $1.25. For sale at the office of THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER.

THE MEDIUMISTIC
Experiences of John Brown,
The Medium of the Rockies, with an introduction by
PROF. J. S. LOVELAND.

This book should be in the hands of every one interested in Spiritualism.

Chapter 1, Notoriety; Early Mediumship. Chapter 2, The Heavenly Mansion. Chapter 3, Removal to California; Return of His Guide. Chapter 4, Remarkable Tests. Chapter 5, His Work as a Healer. Chapter 6, Leaves the Body. Chapter 7, Visit to the Spirit Land. Chapter 8, Methods Used by Spirits to Communicate; How to Conduct a Circle. Chapter 9, Miscellaneous Articles. Chapter 10, A Strange Experience. Chapter 11, Remarkable Manifestation of Spirit Power. Chapter 12, New Experiences—Illustrative of Prophetic Visions. Chapter 13, The First Break in the Atlantic Cable Shown to John Brown. Chapter 14, Unseen Opposition. Chapter 14, Ola-podrida.

For sale at this office. Heavy paper cover, price 50 cents.

THE UNKNOWN LIFE
—OF—
Jesus Christ
—BY—
NICOLAS NOTOVITCH.

TRANSLATED FROM THE FRENCH.

Since the writing of the New Testament no book has appeared of as great importance to Christianity as the UNKNOWN LIFE OF JESUS CHRIST.

This volume, written by the discoverer of the manuscript, contains a thrilling account of the privations and perils encountered in his search for it, a literal translation of the original manuscript, and lastly a critical analysis of what it contains.

This work contains 185 neatly printed pages, and is published on the basis of combining cheapness and excellence. Price, neatly bound, one dollar. Paper cover, price 25 cents, postage 5 cents.

Address this office, 40 Loomis St., Chicago, Ill.

LIFE IN TWO SPHERES.
A Fascinating Work.

The readers of THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER will remember the story under the above title, by Hudson Tuttle, which was published in its columns. At the time, constant inquiries were made as to its appearing in book form. This wish has now been gratified. It makes a volume of 243 pages, in style and form like the "Convent of the Sacred Heart," with a finely-engraved likeness of the author on the cover. The scenes of the story alternately shift from earth to the spirit spheres, and the philosophy of Spiritualism, the occupation and modes of life of spiritual beings, are presented in the pleasing form of narrative.

The following are the chapter-titles: Introduction; The House of the Sage; Home of the Miser; The Low Societies; Hades; Christmastide in the Spheres of Light; Christmastide and the Golden Gate; The Unhappy-Marriage; Easter Day in Heaven; A Visit to the Earth; The Change Called Death; Coming to the Knowledge of the Light; The Society Again Visits Earth; The Forsaken and Despised; Discussion; A Visit to a Distant Globe; Reunion in the Spirit-world; Contentedness Not Goodness; Address of the Sage.

It is a book the Spiritualist will be delighted with; a book in which the investigator will find answers to ever-recurring questions; a book which will interest the church member, nor repel the most prejudiced. The price in paper is 50 cents; muslin $1; postpaid.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A New Edition, Profusely Illustrated.

"I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find nothing in it trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all, that under the appearances of fable, there may appear some latent truth, obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observation of the vulgar."—VOLTAIRE.

CONTENTS: "The White Bull," a Satirical Romance; "Zadig, or Fate," an Oriental History; "The Sage and the Atheist;" "The Princess of Babylon;" "The Man of Forty Crowns;" "The Huron, or Pupil of Nature;" "Micromegas," a Satire on Mankind; "The World as It Goes;" "The Black and the White;" "Memnon, the Philosopher;" "Andre Des Touches at Siam;" "Bababec;" "The Study of Nature;" "A Conversation With a Chinese;" "Plato's Dream;" "A Pleasure in Having no Pleasure;" "An Adventure in India;" "Jeannot and Colin;" "Travels of Scarmentado;" "The Good Brahmin;" "The Two Comforters;" "Ancient Faith and Fable."

One volume, post 8vo, 480 pages, with portrait and 82 illustrations. Extra vellum cloth, $1.50; postage, 15 cents.

"Voltaire's satire was keen and fine-pointed as a rapier."—Magazine of Am. History.

"A delightful reproduction, unique and refreshing."—Boston Commonwealth.

DEATH AND THE AFTER LIFE.

By Andrew Jackson Davis. Something you should read. Price 75 cents.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

This department is under the management of the distinguished author, speaker and medium,

Hudson Tuttle.

Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio.

F. V. B.: Q. (1) What is the spiritualistic idea of God? Does Spiritualism teach a personal God?

A. (1) As a body, Spiritualists have no expressed idea of God, differing widely, and this may be said of the communications of spirits. As nothing certain or absolute can be known of the Infinite, all ideas which it is possible to form must be derived from heredity and educational bias. Hence it is that among Spiritualists there are all shades of belief and opinion, from the acceptance of personality, to the negation of agnosticism. Where no belief or idea can be demonstrated, all have equal value, and the broadest toleration should be exercised.

Q. (2) In answer to A. J. P., do you mean that spirits can be no more conscious of our presence than we of theirs? I thought they could see and hear us and read our inmost thoughts.

A. (2) See answer to next question.

W. C. K., West Gardner: Q. (1) You say in a recent answer: "Spirit can only see spirit." This raises the question: Do all material things possess spirit essence? Otherwise, spirits could not see any material thing.

(2) Where is the Bible text which contains something like this: "Wilt those become altogether to me as liars, and as waters that fail"?

A. (1) All material things have a spiritual essence or pervading being, which is recognized by the senses of the individual spirit, in the same manner as matter is recognized by the physical senses. For this cause clairvoyants and spirits who are not informed or observant mistake those in earth life for those who have departed therefrom.

It is true that when with us, or even far distant, they can see and hear us, reading our thoughts, but it is by the laws which relate spirit to spirit, and our speaking aloud has no other effect on them than the concentration of our thoughts. It is not always possible for a spirit to read our "innermost thoughts," or even any of our thoughts, for when the mind becomes disturbed, or the thoughts rambling and diffused, they go out as a multitude of cross currents on the face of the waters, mutually conflicting with and destroying each other. Hence the first step in spirit communion, to make our wishes felt by our spirit friends, to draw them to us by our earnest prayers and to be susceptible to their thoughts when they come, is an absorbed concentration of the mind in the realization of its paramount desire for such communion.

(2) The full text, which is desired, will be found in Jeremiah, xv., 18: "Why is my pain perpetual, and my wounds incurable, which refuseth to be healed? Wilt thou be altogether unto me as a liar and as waters that fail?"

Querist: Q. Is Spiritualism new?

A. It is not new. History records it; the poets have sung of it in all ages. It forms a part of the sacred and common literature of all races. The Old and New Testaments are inwrought with allusions to its beauty. In the year 364 of the Christian Era, in the reign of the Roman Emperor Valens, mediums are said to have conversed with departed spirits by means of rappings and the alphabet. The spirit-pendulum, resembling the dial in its method, was then in use. It consisted of a ring suspended by a thread over a basin of water, around the margin of which the alphabet was arranged. By successive swinging to the various letters, words and sentences were spelled. Numa Pompilius used it in this manner in augury. Such a pendulum has been used by modern mediums successfully.

"Materialist," Milwaukee, Wis.: Q. Would it not be well for Spiritualists, Materialists, Agnostics and all freethinkers to unite their scattered forces on a common ground of purpose, ignoring belief?

A. There has been almost since its advent, a constant effort made to unite Spiritualism and Materialism, or in milder phrase, freethought and liberalism. It has been the custom of the managers of spiritual meetings to advertise that "Spiritualists and Liberalists" would meet in such a hall or grove. Liberalism and freethought are high sounding, but vague terms which admit of a great diversity of meanings, and when thus attached to Spiritualism they have been prolific causes of bringing in issues remote from those desired by Spiritualists.

All Spiritualists are liberalists and freethinkers, but all freethinkers and liberalists are not Spiritualists. They are often opposed to it as a superstition. In essential aims and purposes, Spiritualism is much nearer related to Christianity than to materialism. There are many things which it holds in common with the first: none whatever with the last, except its assertion of freedom of thought and the destruction of superstition. Hence, a handbill announcing that the "Spiritualists and Materialists will hold a meeting," etc., is more astonishing than the announcement that the "Spiritualists and Methodists," or any other church, would be. The result fully justifies this statement, for whenever or wherever this has been tried, it has met with failure. No persuasion can make water and oil unite, without first blending both into something remote and distinct. The platform where Materialism and Spiritualism had equal rights has been an arena where one destroyed what others have built.

Destruction is a narrow plank for two great movements to work on together. Yet both use the term iconoclasm as synonymous with reform. There can be but two methods by which the origin and phenomena of the universe can be explained—the material and the spiritual. The first sees in matter all potentialities, all possibilities, and claims that by and of itself it passes through the changes called custom. There is no need of external intelligence, or God. There is no spirit existence. The conceptions of love, justice, truth and right grow out of selfishness; are a part of it and go out with the expiring taper called life. This is the philosophy of muck—the science of dirt.

Spiritualism sets out with the claim that beneath the fleeting phantasmagoria called creation, is a realm of force or energy, of which we only know by the effects we observe. Justice, light, truth and love are inwrought in the foundation of things, and not because in the struggle for existence man found them expedient in the conduct of his life. The human being is not a wave thrown up from the seething sea of life, to fall back again in foam, but an heir of infinite existence.

How can two systems so radically distinct and antagonistic, unite?

Spiritualists seek to become free from superstition and bigotry and liberal in the broadest sense. But as they have escaped from the dogmas of the churches, they have at the same time passed over the barren fields of materialism. The first taught that a spiritual existence was foreign to earth life, and bestowed because of the acceptance of certain beliefs, or for the purpose of fearful punishment. The latter would have us believe that there is no future life, and that our hopes and aspirations are cruel mockeries. Neither satisfied and we come to this mountain summit where we can gaze into the dim vistas of two eternities, the past and the future. In the past we see the infinite evil and suffering by which nature has pursued her undeviating aim, until the perfected fruitage of the tree of life appears as man with his intellectual and moral consciousness. Beyond, into the future, we see the escaping spirit carrying forward into another state of existence in unbroken continuity the individuality which has been the object of creation's infinite travail.

The muck philosophers may talk of the morality of chemical changes, the religion of the foot-rule and pint cup, by which they essay to fathom the depths of the universe, and measure the aspirations of the soul; the agnostic may bow to the crucible of dirt, from which the dictations of science are to be received as finalities—the Spiritualist has a science beyond them all.

We do not, with egotistical presumption, after eliminating God, bow in servile homage to the "Unknowable;" for to pronounce on what can and cannot be known, we must be all-knowing. Yet the wisest philosopher or scientist cannot explain beyond the immediate cause of any effect. With true understanding of the Baconian method the Spiritualist sets no such boundary to his investigations. He creates no goblin of the "Unknowable" to bar his progress. On the contrary he affirms that to know is the birthright of the spirit, and its possibilities in this direction undefinable. Having for its aim the development of the highest faculties of the mind and the perfection of character; uniting the present with the future; bringing the world of spirits near, and into direct relations with us in our daily lives; cheering as well as instructing us by inspiration, and kindling our aspirations for the perfection and sweetness of the beyond, Spiritualism has little in common with any other system, and least of all with materialism.

How vain, then, to attempt to marshall the forces of the two. The Spiritualist has not time to waste in discussion of issues dead in the time of Voltaire and Hume. He has not time to listen to tirades against Christianity and the churches, the defamation of Gospel ministers, or the cheap ridicule which passes for criticism of the Bible. A vast constructive work is before him, and he is assured that when his temple is completed, with its deep foundations resting on the material world, and its dome alight with spiritual knowledge, none will go astray from its gateway.

James Guildersleve: Q. What is the meaning of Hypermesia?

A. A word used by some older writers who made it synonymous with sensitiveness; or the sensitive state, memory was quickened, by which Hyperaethesia has been employed with similar meaning.

A. S. C., Boston, Mass.: Q. May I ask—do you know that your explanations of psychic principles comes to you from sources external to yourself, and, if so, do you know the source? Is it from an individual intelligence, a human being once on earth? I do not ask for mere curiosity but because I am so perplexed about the subject of inspiration.

A. If I did not feel as certain that the intelligences which have written through me were as they purport to be, I should under no circumstances make the claim. Of course, my own opinions, conclusions and the facts in my experience that have led thereto have only secondary weight to others. Everyone must be convinced by direct evidence. The many instances of spirit control and interference; the great amount of writing that began in early life, which I have received either by impression or automatically (I use this word in the new sense that has been given it), all together to me are overwhelming evidence, and yet I am fully aware how deficient it would be to others.

At first my hand moved and wrote as guided and I had no consciousness of what was written. Then again I would catch, as it were, glimpses of the thoughts being recorded, and at other times I would know in the beginning all that would be written. The impressions grew stronger and it is now rarely that my pen is directly moved. Yet there is always a state of intense absorption or concentration, out of which I have no assistance. There are days and weeks together that this is not felt and my mind to spiritual experiences is as a barren field. Sometimes I feel an individual presence, one that I know, and as the kindest friend. Those having some special knowledge come to assist, or again a dear friend. Then again, I do not recognize any special individuality, but it seems that my mind is like an instrument which vibrates to the thought atmosphere, and is possessed of a selective power, responding most clearly at different times to thoughts (I should say to "thought waves") of different character. This state is accompanied with well marked physical changes—cold feet and hands, heat in the brain and slower respiration. It is often preceded by a more or less acute headache, and followed by lassitude.

It is not often that I allude to this subject, for the method by which truth comes is of small consequence to the truth itself. The readers of this Department have been so exceedingly generous with words of commendation, and fraternal cheer, that I feel assured that they will take some small interest in the manner by which my writing is obtained, and not accuse me of egotism. Whatever value may attach to what has been written and published by me, I take no credit therefor, more than that of an humble amanuensis, who has endeavored faithfully to transcribe the thoughts impressed, and so far comply with the conditions known to be favorable to correct communication as to eliminate, as far as possible, the sources of error.

"Human Culture and Cure. Marriage, Sexual Development, and Social Upbuilding." By E. D. Babbitt, M. D., LL.D. A most excellent and very valuable work, by the Dean of the College of Fine Forces, and author of other important volumes on Health, Social Science, Religion, etc. Price, cloth, 75c. For sale at this office.

"The Priest, the Woman, and the Confessional." This book, by the well-known Father Chiniquy, reveals the degrading, impure influences and results of of the Romish confessional, as poved by the sad experience of many wrecked lives. Price, by mail, $1. For sale at this office.

SPIRITUALISM.

It Is Founded in Science and the Nature of Man.

Its Benefits Morally and Spiritually.

Spiritualism is founded on science, the outgrowth of facts and the nature of man. The true Spiritualist believes nothing that he cannot prove, that he cannot give a reason for. Spiritualism has no dogmas, no infallible guide, books, oracles nor priests. All of its manifestations or phenomena are free from miracles, the result of a proper use of eternal, fixed laws. These laws in the past were misunderstood. Superstition and bigotry prevented their development and comprehension.

Like all new knowledge, like all scientific development, it has come up out of darkness, through persecution, martyrdom and ostracism. Yet truth, however mixed with error, doubts and fraud, ever pushes onward, upward, and out into the clear light of perfect day. So this, like all other sciences and philosophies, is slowly and surely coming forth, as the pure gold is taken from the quartz to the crucible through the crushing power of the mill, and the refining power of the furnace, until at last it becomes the pure, spotless gold. So with the science of Spiritualism; phenomena, facts, tests and the many forms of spiritual manifestations prove the fact that there is no death, that our loved ones live in the spirit world, or heaven, with all the entirety of life, with all the memory, all the loves, that life has given.

Out of these proofs, these demonstrated facts, comes to us a beautiful philosophy, a rational idea of the nature of life, the duties and responsibilities of life. Still further, as the result of these facts, not only does it bring to us this cheering philosophy, but it gives to us the true nature of religion, the true knowledge of the spiritual nature of man; how that nature can be cultivated, developed, unfolded and become the governing force of all our senses, appetites, passions and being, until harmony peace, joy, fulness and sweetness dwells in our lives.

It gives us health of body and fits us to meet life calmly, successfully and patiently. This science makes plain the mysteries—so-called miracles—of past ages. It gives us knowledge of how to properly estimate what is true in all other religious systems, makes plain to us the nature of all bibles and sacred books, serves as a high and holy revelation for all the light, moral precepts and spiritual things found in them.

It reveals to us the true nature of God, his methods of guiding, directing and lifting humanity up and on toward a higher and better life. It unfolds to us a proper conception of Jesus Christ, his life mission, cause of his death, the beauty of his spiritual resurrection, and the many manifestations which afterwards came to his disciples; also the beauty, simplicity, grandeur and power of his teachings; their truthfulness and adaptation to humanity's needs and salvation.

It is true that there are many Spiritualists that are only on a phenomenal plane, who are satisfied when they have proof that their loved ones still live, content to have communication with them; these facts, these truths, not leading them to the philosophy, nor entering into their lives to make them more spiritual, more earnest, devoted and true in all of life's duties and relations. It is with them as with many church-members, who parrot-like say their prayers, attend church service and feel they are saved; while others there are, who have taken into their hearts and lives the teachings, sublime precepts and true nature of the Christ-like life.

Spiritualism nor Christianity should be judged by the human weakness of many of its adherents, or disciples, for even those whose lives are so frail and imperfect have been made, no one knows, how much better by the same.

Spiritualism, as a science, unfolds to us the mysteries of life. How that we, as mortal beings, are composed of both a natural and a spiritual body. Many, no doubt, have asked themselves, what is life? What is that power that keeps up the forces of the human form, the harmony and perfection of health? Many are the answers that have been given, yet, to my mind, no true answer comes to us only as we comprehend man in his dual relations. The phenomena of life are found in good digestion, respiration and circulation, the vital functions which build up the system, repair the waste, and keep the mechanical part of the machine in harmony.

Our physical bodies are composed of fourteen chemical- or inorganic compounds, from the earth earthy; but the thinking, living, praying, deeper, holier emotions of the inner man, are from that Divine Life that breathed on man and he became a living soul. So while our physical bodies are from the earth, our spiritual bodies, which are enshrined in the same, are from the spiritual forces which fill the universe—a finer substance, yet the more potent and all-powerful, the essence and origin of all life.

On this basis alone are the phenomena and mystery of life explainable. No scientist can explain the facts of our intuition, clairvoyance and the marvels which are proven by the mind powers, on the ground that all thought is produced by the brain, that the brain secretes thought as the liver does bile, as the stomach does gastric juice; neither can he explain the mystery of the universe, and the harmony, order and designs found (apparently) everywhere therein, from the premises that, inherent in matter, are the laws found that produce and govern all. Here is a more sublime force, acting through all matter, back of all law, finding manifestations through eternal, unchanging laws. Here are laws physical, mental and spiritual, yet each is perfect, each is true to its sphere and realm. No suspension of law can exist and still have harmony. These laws are for the greatest good to the greatest number. We are given reason, intuition and conscience to teach, guide and direct us how to make a wise and safe use, a proper adaptation of ourselves to all the laws of our being, that physically, mentally and spiritually we may perfect our lives and find peace, harmony and happiness.

Spiritualism, when properly comprehended, unfolds our spiritual nature, which illumes our intellect, directs our understanding, leads us into a spiritual life—into companionship with our loved ones that have passed on before; when their increased knowledge and experience may guide, aid and strengthen us in life's battles. It opens our spiritual nature to the illumination of that higher and better world so that the light which shines upon, directs and guides those in that higher world, may guide and teach us. It leads us to know that the true source of life, strength, hope and courage is from that Divine Life which fills all nature and guides all things. It teaches us how to reach for and receive that life, thus giving us strength to endure losses, trials, afflictions and the many sorrows of life.

It makes us know that when the soul cries out for food, strength and help in our Gethsemanes and Calvarys, that the same divine life which came to and was in Christ will come to us and be called out in us, giving us strength to rise above the senses, to endure the agony of soul and body, with the peace that the world cannot give nor take away.

It is true, as Spiritualists, we do not feel that any dying Christ can saye us; that the mistakes of our life can be atoned for by another; we feel that we must each atone for ourselves and by repentance and growth, making a right use of all our being, step by step reach salvation.

This philosophy, these truths, which science and experience reveal to every human heart, bids us be diligent, earnest, faithful and true in all departments of our being, realizing that we make our own heaven and hell. This does not belittle Christ or his teaching, but it enlarges, makes more beautiful his divine life, his patient death and his glorious resurrection.

Many are the propositions or assumptions that I have made thus far in this article which to many may need more positive proof.

The materialists contend that all mind and spirituality, or phenomena of the mind, is the result of the organization of the brain, and its combination of cell life. I admit that integrity of body and brain have much to do with mind manifestations, but I do not admit that these are the source of mind, or will explain all the powers of the same.

If once in the world's history, any person ever saw, heard or felt, or by any means was enabled to describe anything beyond the limit of the senses, it proves conclusively that the mind is not dependent alone upon the senses. Mollie Fancher, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was for nine years so paralyzed that only one sense was left to her, namely, feeling. In that state her limbs were twisted around each other, her right arm behind her head, yet, in that condition, she could read books, letters, tell the time of day, etc., while the natural eye was totally blind and paralyzed. She saw friends, objects, things, and related circumstances, miles away.

Swedenborg saw Stockholm burning seventy miles away. Jarvis, in his experiments with mesmerism—some of his sensitives described persons, what they were doing, and all the surroundings, as far as three thousand miles away. They did not reach his mind, because they saw and described what he nor they knew, and what he afterwards found to be true.

I could give instances and proofs of this power of the mind, well attested, that would fill many pages. No one who will read or investigate need be ignorant of these facts, which have occurred all along this world's history.

Now if the mind or spiritual body has such perfect powers, such ability to reach beyond the limit of sense, in the body, what must death be but the laying off of the physical form, while the spiritual body forms itself from the same, retaining all of life's experiences, loves and memories? Then is it anything mysterious that nothing dies—nothing is lost; that our loved ones live and possess all their selfhood, all their living interest in us that they did in the form?

Instead of spirit communion, the power by which our loved ones can manifest themselves to us being a mystery, it is the most natural thing in the world, strictly in keeping with the laws of our being and the laws of the universe. Facts, science and scripture prove this to be true. Many are the death-beds that I have sat by in my professional life, so often, as the rational senses begin to fail have I seen the spiritual senses quickened, and the feeble one in body describe the long-ago dead as close to them, waiting to waft them to the world of bliss; so often have they told of sweet songs, whose music fell upon their quickened senses.

Then again, I have seen many persons entranced by the hypnotic touch, and in that state, when the rational senses were closed, they would describe persons whom they saw perfectly, whom we call dead.

But, best of all, our loved ones have managed in the real, the spiritual life, to devise many means by which they can and have communicated to us. This phenomenon is not new, because the same things have occurred in past ages, but superstition, fear and bigotry called it witchcraft and the work of the Devil, but as many instead of few organisms (as the human race developed in mental and spiritual conditions) were enabled to be the medium through which these telegraphic communications could take place between the two worlds, knowledge, truth and light took the place of darkness, and to-day millions know these things are true. Our whole literature is full of these sublime truths, and this soul-cheering philosophy.

Shall I tell you a few of these things which have come under my observation during the last thirty years? So often have I heard the tiny rap come upon the table, bedstead, chair or floor, and the same be backed by an intelligence which could and did answer my questions, and give me knowledge of my loved ones, as much, as closely and truthfully as any telegraph could tell me of a friend in some distant city.

I have taken the slates closed, clean, never letting them out of my hands; the medium holding one corner, and the slate in five minutes would be covered all over with writing, which was in keeping, form and knowledge, like the ones who signed their names. I have sat by an open door with only a cloth hung across the same, the medium behind said screen—have seen the cloth part, the form of my mother, natural and perfect, materialize, and before my eyes dissolve. In ten minutes after, I have seen the large form of my father fill the same aperture, perfect as life, and pass away before my eyes. When the curtain was thus parted, the medium was still setting in his chair, perfectly entranced. But I will not weary you with facts, proofs and demonstrations that I have had unnumbered.

Yet none of these phenomena occur only in this age of the world; the same proofs, same phenomena, are chronicled in the sacred book called the Bible. Moses was a medium and did the marvelous things he did as such. Daniel was another; Elijah was full of this marvelous power; Jacob saw the heavens open and the angels descending to him; Abraham had two angels come to his tent; Lot was visited by angels. Jesus on the mountain with his apostles saw Moses and Elias. His resurrection was his spiritual body, for he would not allow Mary to touch it; "he passed into the room" when the door was closed; he came to Cephas and five hundred at one time; lastly to Paul, when he heard his voice, his natural eyes were closed and remained so until he received help.

Magnetical John on the Island of Patmos thought that the angel who gave him the book of Revelations was God; but he told John he was one of his fellow servants.

But, say many, what good does it do to know all these things? What difference whether we know there is a life beyond this or not?

To me it does great good. First—it takes away all fear of death. Second—it gives us great comfort to know that there is no final separation, but that all whom we have loved here, all whose hearts and lives are close to us, will be closer still in the better world. Third—there is no power in the world that should have more effect to make us live life earnestly, faithfully and perfectly, than the knowledge that all of our actions, all the effects of this life will follow us into the life beyond. It is not death that I fear, but life.

Fourth—there is no philosophy in the world that, to my mind, so fits one to make duty his watchword. It fits one for life's battles, giving courage, patience, faithfulness and firmness to stand and do for the right.

Fifth—no one that feels knows, and makes these truths a part of his life, can commit suicide, for these truths reveal to us that death, or the change, does not free us from the sins, sorrows, or mistakes of life. It is selfishness or cowardice that makes one think of self-destruction. Spiritualism makes one forget self, and gives one courage to stand brave and true through evil as well as good report.

Sixth—this science reveals to us the law, the beauty of eternal progression, that the gaining of knowledge, the growing in grace and spiritual things, does not end with this life, but continual progress unfolds through the ages yet unborn.

What higher truths, or greater stimulus to moral action can come to a human being than the facts this philosophy, this religion, brings? It awakens our whole spiritual being into activity, calls out the most holy and sacred of our social life, giving one power and strength to control the appetites, passions and physical being. Thus making the body a fit temple for the indwelling spirit.

Friends and fellow Spiritualists, let this philosophy, this religion, enter into your daily life. Come close to the spirit world, catch the whispering voices, the divine benediction; listen to the same, and they will lead you by the side of still waters and in green pastures; your hearts will be an oasis of peace, your influence a joy and strength to others, your life fragrant with good deeds, your death a sweet transition, and the life beyond a full fruition.

ANDREW B. SPINNEY, M. D.
Reed City, Mich.

Passed to Spirit-Life.

Early Saturday morning, November 21, at his residence in East Aurora, N. Y., the spirit of John Nichols passed to spirit life; the direct cause being hemorrhage of the lungs. For many weeks past he had been ill from pneumonia and its after effects, but his passing out was not expected at the time it occurred. The funeral was held at his late residence Monday, November 23, at 9 a. m. The services were conducted by Mrs. Lucy Benton Powers, a former speaker for the society of Spiritualists of which Mr. Nichols was a member.

The body was taken to Couriers Corners for interment. Upon its arrival there it was found that a large number of relatives and friends were assembled at the church of that place and another service was conducted. In this Mrs. Powers was assisted by the pastor of the church, a Congregationalist.

In his passing out East Aurora has lost a good citizen, and the cause of Spiritualism a staunch intellectual and financial supporter and true helper.

Translated to the realms of light, at Columbus, Pa., December 1, Mrs. Lovina Baker, whose life was crowned with 65 years of mortal time. Her life was an embodiment of helpfulness. Possessed of good health, mental attainments and spiritual unfoldment, combined with a sunny, genial disposition, she was a blessing to all who knew her, and indeed to the world, for the influence of every good life has wider range than that of kindred or near friends, and reaches out and uplifts other lives.

The final summons came suddenly, almost wholly without warning, and yet she was ready to depart, and the kindred ones who survive her are consoled in their great loss, with the assurance that comes from an understanding of the spiritual philosophy, that death is life, and not decay; only the loss of the physical is known. Mrs. Baker was a firm Spiritualist, a stockholder, cottage owner and yearly attendant of Cassadaga camp.

The funeral services were held in the Columbus church, and were conducted by Mrs. Clara Watson, of Jamestown, N. Y., and the body deposited in the bosom of mother earth, beside that of her husband who preceded her to the spirtual life. C. W.

QUESTIONS FOR THE MASTERS

Seeking for Light Concerning Reincarnation.

To the Editor:—I was highly interested in the article written by Paul Avenal, in The Progressive Thinker, No. 367. I would be highly pleased if the Masters of Wisdom would explain if those various incarnations take place before the soul reaches the human plane or doesit come back after it leaves the human body? and if it does return after living in the human form, what does it return for? Has it not carried the undeveloped atoms of the human plane with it to the spirit plane? We don't say it has gone to the unfolded spiritual plane, for we think the soul as well as the body is subject to the laws of evolution; and is not the law of evolution as active on the spirit plane as it is on the material plane? What makes me think it is, is because I have left my material body many times, and I know my mind was clearer and more active than when it was in my material body, and if so, why could I not progress faster and easier out of the body than in it? not that I would advise anyone to transgress Nature's divine law, on purpose to leave the material body, but am asking the Masters of Wisdom for light on this much-talked-of question—for I think the time has come that an honest inquirer can ask questions of the Wisdom Masters, and honestly doubt their truthful answers without being damned and sent to an orthodox hell, or burned at the stake for his ignorant opinion, or his honest mistake. So I would be highly pleased if the Wisdom Masters would inform me, if the reincarnations they spoke of, were below the human plane, or after leaving a human body. If the Masters of Wisdom will explain this much-talked-of subject and so little understood, I will try to rightly understand it; and if I don't understand it, I may ask some more questions. There are others, no doubt, seeking for light, besides my ignorant self, and no doubt they wish to know the truth if they can get it from a truthful source. We will wait for an answer. A. C. DOANE.

The attachments of mere mirth are but the shadows of that true friendship of which the sincere affections of the heart are the substance.—Burton.

LIFE WORK
—OF—
CORA L. V. RICHMOND.

COMPILED AND EDITED BY
HARRISON D. BARRETT.

With portraits representing Mrs. Richmond in 1857, in 1876, and in 1894.

OUTLINE OF CONTENTS:
INTRODUCTION.
CHAPTER I. Parentage—Place of Birth—Childhood—School Experiences—First Mediumistic Work, etc.
CHAPTER II. Hopedale—Mr. Scott in Massachusetts—Removal to Wisconsin—The Ballou Family—Adin Ballou's Work—Work of Spirit Adin Augustus Ballou.
CHAPTER III. Ouina—Her Earthly Life and Tragic Death—Her Mission in Spirit-Life.
CHAPTER IV. Other Controls—The Guides.
CHAPTER V. Work in Cuba, N. Y.—Buffalo Pastorate—Workers in Buffalo—Thomas Gales Forster—Sarah Brooks—Horace H. Day—Removal to New York City, 1856—Philadelphia—Boston—Baltimore.
CHAPTER VI. Work in New York City.
CHAPTER VII. New York City (continued). Prof. J. J. Mapes—Hon. J. W. Edmonds—Dr. Gray—New York Editors and Clergy—Other Places in the East—Meadville, Pa., 1864—Hon. A. B. Richmond.
CHAPTER VIII. Washington, D. C.—Reconstruction—Senator J. M. Howard—George J. W. Julien—Gen. N. P. Banks—Nettie Colbern Maynard—Statement of Geo. A. Bacon.
CHAPTER IX. England—Robert Dale Owen—George Thompson—Countess of Caithness—Mrs. Strawbridge—Mr. and Mrs. Tebb—Mrs. Nosworthy—J. C. Ward—Mrs. Slater—Andrew Cross.
CHAPTER X. Work in England (Continued in Three Subsequent Visits.)
CHAPTER XI. California Work, 1875—Other Visits—Letter of C. M. Plumb—Letter of Mrs. John A. Wilson.
CHAPTER XII. Chicago Work, 1876 to 1895—First Society Chartered, 1869—Complete Account of Work in Letters and Statements of Members of the Society.
CHAPTER XIII. Camp Meeting Work—Cassadaga—Lake Pleasant—Onset Bay—Lake Brady—Lookout Mountain, etc.
CHAPTER XIV. Literary Work—Hesperia—Volumes of Discourses and Lectures—Psychopathy; Soul Teachings—Poems—Other Literary Work.
CHAPTER XV. Literary Work (continued)—Lecture on Gyroscope, 1858—"The Shadow of a Great Rock in a Weary Land," 1887—Poems—Choice Selections in Prose and Verse—Work of William Richmond.
CHAPTER XVI. Letters from Personal Friends; from Orpha E. Tousey; from Lady Caithness, and others—Appreciation of the Work from Those Best Qualified to Judge—Frederick F. Cook—Wendell C. Warner—Drs. Emmett and Helen Dinsmore.
CHAPTER XVII. Mrs Richmond's Experiences While in the Trance State, Written by Herself.

Price $2, Postpaid. For Sale at this office.

Woman, Church and State.

A Historical Account of the Status of Woman Through the Christian Ages, with Reminiscences of the Matriarchate.

BY MATILDA JOSLYN GAGE.

THE AMOUNT OF VALUABLE IN- formation succinctly and clearly stated in this volume of 554 pages is amazing. The title, as above given, fails to convey an idea of the fulness and completeness with which the subjects are treated. The Matriarchate, or Mother-rule, is the theme of the first chapter, in which much lore, quaint, queer and curious, is brought to view in elucidation of the subject. This is followed by chapters on Celibacy, Canon Law, Marquette, Witchcraft, Wives, Polygamy, Woman and Work, The Church of To-day, Past, Present, Future; and there is not a chapter in the book that is not handled in a masterly manner, and that for quantity and quality of information, is not worth the full price of the volume. It is packed with knowledge well-arranged, and intensely interesting from beginning to end. No one can possibly regret buying it; it is a valuable addition to the library of any free and truth-loving mind.

Price, $2.00. For sale at this office.

ROMANISM AND THE REPUBLIC.

A WORK THAT EVERY LOVER OF his country should have at hand for consultation. By Rev. Isaac J. Lansing, M. A. This is a most able work, consisting of a Discussion of the Purposes, Assumptions, Principles and Methods of the Roman Catholic Hierarchy. The work contains 447 pages, and may be considered a mine of valuable information for every patriot in the land. Price $1. For sale at this office.

RIGHT LIVING
— BY —
SUSAN H. WIXON,

Author of "Apples of Gold," "All in a Lifetime," "The Story Hour," "Summer Days at Onset," "Sunday Observance," etc., etc.

"Living is an art, a method of expressing great conceptions; in fact, the highest method, the noblest of the arts."—THOMAS STARR KING.

This book gives an admirable course of study in ethics, and supplies a long-felt want of an ethical text-book especially adapted to the comprehension of children, as well as older persons whom it is wisely and appropriately designed to interest while teaching them valuable ethical lessons.

The author shows a wise practicality in her method of teaching the principles of ethics. She illustrates her subject with many brief narratives and anecdotes, which render the book more interesting and more easily comprehended. It is especially adapted for use in children's lyceums. In the hands of mothers and teachers it may be made very useful. Young and old will be benefited by it. It is a most excellent book and should be widely circulated.

CONTENTS:

Right Living. What Is Morality? What is Ignorance? Knowledge the Great Treasure. Concerning Education. Conduct; or Right Doing. Virtue, the Illuminator of Life. Prudence, an Economy of Life. What Know Ye of Justice? Fortitude a Noble Possession. Temperance and Intemperance. Is the Use of Tobacco Dangerous? Cultivation of Individuality. Character, a Jewel of Great Price. Idleness, Another Name for Loss. Industry, the Staff of Life. Value of a Trade. Recreation a Necessity. Games of Chance. Truth and Falsehood. What is an Oath? or the Worth of a Promise. Fraud a Crime. The Poison of Slander. What Is Hypocrisy? Conscience, or Moral Sense. Selfishness, the Menace of Society. Gratitude, a Fragrant Flower of Life. Is Reverence a Duty? Self-Reliance. Self-Control. Self-Respect. Foolish Pride and Silly Prejudice. Anger, the Distorter. The Angel of Forgiveness. Observation a Great Faculty. Perseverance, the Friend of Man. Punctuality, a Promoter of Success. The Difficulties of Life. Temptation, the Demon on the Highway. Habit, Second Nature. Power of Will. Courage, a Necessity to Right Living. In Regard to Concealed Vice. Beautiful Charity. Fidelity, the Giver of Strength and Honor. Value of Wealth. Avarice, Not a Means to Life's Best End. Good Nature, One of Life's Best Blossoms. Reason and Free Inquiry. Free Speech. A Free Press. Rights of Animals. Rights of Children. Human Rights; or the Equality of Man. Moral Cleanliness. Politeness—The Gentleman. Politeness—Continued—The Gentlewoman. Best Society. Progress; or Enlightenment. Wisdom.

Price, Cloth, $1. Sold at this Office.

The Development of the Spirit

After Transition. By the late M. Faraday. The origin of religions, and their influence upon the mental development of the human race. Transcribed at the request of a band of ancient philosophers. Price 10 cents.

HUMAN CULTURE AND CURE

MARRIAGE, SEXUAL DEVELOPMENT, AND SOCIAL UPBUILDING.

BY E. D. BABBITT, M. D., LL. D.

A most excellent and very valuable work, by the Dean of the College of Fine Forces, and author of other important volumes on Health, Social Science, Religion, etc.

Price, cloth, 75 cents. For sale at this office.

CHURCH AND STATE.

The Bible in the Public Schools; the New "American" Party. By "Jefferson." Third edition. This beautiful pamphlet of 28 pages is the most thorough presentation of the Church and State question that has appeared. Price 10 cents.

LIFE, A NOVEL.

It beams with advanced thought, and is fascinating. Price, 50 cents.

THE KORAN.

Commonly called the "Alkoran of Mohammed." Translated into English from the original Arabic, with explanatory notes taken from the most approved commentators. With a preliminary discourse by Geo. Sale. Price, cloth, $1.00. For sale at this office.

ALL ABOUT DEVILS.

Or, an Inquiry as to whether Modern Spiritualism and other Great Reforms come from His Satanic Majesty and His Subordinates in the Kingdom of Darkness. 50 pages. By MOSES HULL. Price, 15 cents. For sale at this office.

MOSES HULL'S BOOKS.

A List of His Noted Works.

For Sale at the Office of The Progressive Thinker.

Wayside Jottings,

Gathered from the Highways, By-ways and Hedges of Life. By MATTIE E. HULL. This is a marvelously neat book of selections from Mrs. Hulls best poems, sermons and essays, and contains a splendid portrait of the author, also a portrait of Moses Hull. Price, neatly bound in English cloth, $1.

The Spiritual Alps and How We Ascend Them.

Or a few thoughts on how to reach that altitude where spirit is supreme and all things are subject to it. With portrait. By MOSES HULL. Just the book to teach you that you are a spiritual being, and to show you how to educate your spiritual faculties. Price, bound in cloth, 40 cents; in paper cover, 25 cents.

New Thought.

Volume I. Nicely bound in cloth, 579 large, beautifully printed pages. Portraits of several of the best speakers and mediums. The matter all original and presenting in an attractive form the highest phase of the Spiritual Philosophy. Price, only $1.50.

New Thought.

Volume II. 884 pages, beautifully printed and nicely bound. Original matter. Six portraits. Cloth bound, 75 cents.

Joan, the Medium.

Or, the Inspired Heroine of Orleans. Spiritualism as a Leader of Armies. By MOSES HULL. This is at once the most truthful history of Joan of Arc, and one of the most convincing arguments on Spiritualism ever written. No novel was ever more thrillingly interesting; no history more true. Price in cloth, 40 cents; paper cover, 25 cents.

The Real Issue.

By MOSES HULL. A compound of the two pamphlets, "The Irrepressible Conflict," and "Your Answer or Your Life;" with important additions, making a book of 160 pages all for 25 cents. This book contains statistics, facts and documents, on the tendencies of the times, that every one should have.

All About Devils.

Or, an Inquiry as to whether Modern Spiritualism and other Great Reforms come from His Satanic Majesty and His Subordinates in the Kingdom of Darkness. 60 pages. By MOSES HULL. Price, 15 cents.

Jesus and the Mediums, or Christ and Mediumship.

Careful comparison of some of the Spiritualism and Mediumship of the Bible with that of to-day. By MOSES HULL. An invincible argument proving that Jesus was only a medium, subject to all the conditions of modern mediumship. It also shows that all the manifestations throughout the Old and New Testament were under the same conditions that mediums require to-day; and that the coming of Christ is the return of mediumship to the world. 48 pages. Price, 10 cents.

The Spiritual Birth, or Death and Its To-Morrow.

The Spiritual Idea of Death, Heaven and Hell. By MOSES HULL. This pamphlet besides giving the Spiritualistic interpretation of many things in the Bible—interpretations never before given, explains the heavens and hells believed in by Spiritualists. Price, 10 cents.

The Quarantine Raised.

Or the Twenty Years Battle Against a Worker Ended. Price 10 cents.

Spiritual Songster.

By MATTIE E. HULL. Thirty-eight of Mrs. Hull's sweetest songs, adapted to popular music, for the use of congregations, circles and families. Price, 10 cts., or $6 per hundred.

The Mediumistic Experience of John Brown.

The Medium of the Rockies, with introduction by J. S. Loveland. This is the history of one of the most wonderful mediums that ever lived. 167 large pages. Price, 50 cents.

The Devil and the Adventists.

An Adventist attack on Spiritualism repulsed. By MOSES HULL. Price, 5 cents.

Was John Calvin a Murderer?

Price, 5 cents.

NEW THOUGHT.

Volume I. Nicely bound in cloth, 579 large, beautifully printed pages. Portraits of several of the best speakers and mediums. The matter all original and presenting in an attractive form the highest phase of the Spiritual Philosophy. By MOSES HULL. Price only $1.50. For sale at this office.

Volume II. 884 pages, beautifully printed and nicely bound. Original matter. Six portraits. Cloth bound, 75 cents. By MOSES HULL. For sale at this office.

GLEANINGS FROM THE ROSTRUM.

BY A. B. FRENCH.

This work is one that every one should read. It beams throughout with rare gems of thought, practical as well as profound. There is sunshine and beauty in every sentence uttered. The work is dedicated to the author's favorite sister, Sarah French Farr, now passed to Spirit-life. Hudson Tuttle, of Berlin Heights, Ohio, gives an interesting sketch of the author's life.

CONTENTS:
Dedication.
Sketch of the Life of A. B. French.
William Denton.
Legends of the Buddha.
Mohammed, or the Faith and Wars of Islam.
Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon.
Conflicts of Life.
The Power and Permanency of Ideas.
The Unknown.
Probability of a Future Life.
Anniversary Address.
The Egotism of Our Age.
What Is Truth?
Decoration Address.

PRICE, $1.00, POSTPAID.

THE COMING AMERICAN CIVIL WAR.

BY BURTON AMES HUNTINGTON.

This excellent book is written in the interest of humanity, of liberty, and of patriotism—a book written for the purpose of calling attention to the deadly dangers that beset us on every side, and more especially to the hostile attitude and the insidious wiles of an ever-present, though secret, unscrupulous foe—the Catholics. Washington's words of warning, Lincoln's apprehension and the prophecy of General Grant are all included in the volume. Archbishop Ryan, of Philadelphia, in a recent sermon said: "The church tolerates heretics where she is obliged to do so, but she hates them with a deadly hatred, and uses all her power to annihilate them. Our enemies know how she treated heretics in the Middle Ages, and how she treats them to-day where she has the power. We no more think of denying these historic facts than we do of blaming the Holy Ghost and the princes of the church for what they have thought fit to do." Every one should read this work. Paper, 300 pages. It will be sent, postpaid, for fifty cents. For sale at this office.

ENCYCLOPEDIA ... OF ... BIBLICAL SPIRITUALISM ... OR ... A CONCORDANCE

To the principal passages of the Old and New Testament Scriptures which prove or imply Spiritualism;

Together with a brief history of the origin of many of the important books of the Bible.

BY MOSES HULL.

Much that is in this book appeared in an abridged form in a series of nine full pages of THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER. These articles were prepared at the call of hundreds of Spiritualists who felt the need of some kind of document for ready reference. They only seemed to whet the appetite for more; hence the publication of this work.

The author, Moses Hull, has written many volumes on Spiritualistic and other themes and each one is full of careful study on the subject chosen. Mr. Hull, in his introduction of this work says:

"Hoping that this book will serve to lead the people out of the wilderness of doubt and despair; and that when Spiritualism shall have wrested the Bible from its 'sanctified' enemies, it will not 'spike' it, but will use it to batter down the walls of Christian superstition and ignorance, I send it out on its errand of enlightenment with the humble prayer that it will prove a divine benediction to every reader."

THE ENCYCLOPEDIA OF BIBLICAL SPIRITUALISM contains 385 pages, beautifully printed on good paper, contains a full-page portrait of the author and is handsomely bound in cloth. Every Spiritualist should have this work.

PRICE $1. FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

"THE WATSEKA WONDER."

To the student of psychic phenomena, this pamphlet is intensely interesting. It gives detailed accounts of two cases of "double consciousness," namely Mary Lurancy Vennum, of Watseka, Ill., and Mary Reynolds, of Venango county, Pa. For sale at this office. Price 15 cents.

EDITH BRAMLEY'S VISION.

A thrilling appeal to all who are interested in learning how the great forces of the Roman Catholic Church are seeking to control all movements pertaining to human progress that are in opposition to their dogmatic religious teachings. Price 15 cents. For sale at this office.

GOLDEN LAXATIVE COFFEE . .

CURES CONSTIPATION!

And Many Liver and Kidney Troubles. It is a Most Pleasant Drink.

Among thousands of testimonials we receive, the following from W. H. Morse, Therapeutist and Consulting Chemist, of Garwood, N. J., speaks for itself:

"Let me commend to your notice the GOLDEN LAXATIVE COFFEE, manufactured at Ayer, Mass., by the company of that name. It is not only a grateful, refreshing and stimulating beverage, relished by all, but, as well it is mildly laxative, health-promoting and thoroughly scientific in composition; in these essentials altogether unlike any other beverage for this purpose. It is well worthy of being brought before the public. W. H. MORSE."

A small package will be sent to any address for 35 cents, and a larger package containing twice as much, for 50 cents. This package will go as far as four pounds of coffee. All can drink this coffee that pure coffee will not agree with, and it DOES cure constipation. State rights for sale to manufacture and sell this coffee. A great money-maker!

Golden Laxative Coffee Co.,
AYER, MASS.

DEFENDS CONCANNON.

Exposing the Fraud of the Exposers.

A Prominent Boston Spiritualist Gives a Statement of the Affair.

To the Editor:—In consequence of the wide publicity given by the press to the recent act of vandalism at the First Spiritual Temple in Boston, which they have been pleased to call an expose, it seems necessary for me to say a few words in defence of the mediums upon whom this cowardly act was perpetrated. This I should have done at an earlier moment had it not been that I was waiting for definite information in regard to court proceedings now instituted, but, as they are more or less slow, I will state for the benefit of your readers that I consider Mr. Concannon one of the best mediums for full form materialization and physical manifestation in the country, and that the clairvoyant and clairaudient tests or messages given through the mediumship of Mrs. Concannon are almost perfect.

I believe them both to be perfectly reliable in every respect, and would not hesitate a moment in recommending them for public or private work, to all who have a knowledge of spirit manifestations.

A synopsis of the seance on this occasion may be of interest to your readers.

Mrs. Concannon gave from three-quarters of an hour to one hour of tests or messages from spirit friends to different ones in the audience, nine-tenths of them being recognized. Mr. Concannon's seance for full form materialization and physical manifestations follows:

A committee of three was chosen by the audience, one of whom was D. N. Holway, a prominent insurance manager and agent of this city.

Mr. Holway accompanied Mr. Concannon to a room where every particle of clothing was removed. He was then clothed in simply a black coat, pants, vest, and dickey, not even underclothing being allowed. He was then conducted to the cabinet and hardly had the curtains been drawn when a female form clothed entirely in white with light skin and hair, and blue eyes (Mr. Concannon, by the way, having a dark skin, black eyes and heavy black mustache) appeared outside the cabinet. I was bending over, talking to the form, when there was a noise like the snapping of a toy pistol, and before I could turn eight men sprang upon the platform, one of whom rushed into the cabinet and came out waving what seemed to be a piece of cheese cloth from one to two yards long. He did not have any false whiskers, wig or gown—these were trumped up after leaving the building.

After the affair was over, I had from thirty to fifty persons come to me and say they saw this man pull the cloth from under his coat when on the platform entering the cabinet. I also have proof which is satisfactory to me that the scheme was concocted in the office of a Boston paper, and money raised with which to pay the raiders, three weeks before.

I shall prosecute the hoodlums to the fullest extent of the law, on every charge I can bring against them.

I will add that on account of Mrs. Concannon's health, and to fill an engagement later on, they will start for Florida this week, but will be at the Temple for two months the latter part of the season, commencing the first Sunday in April. Respectfully,

Boston, Mass. M. S. AYER.

A THEORY OF MATERIALIZATION.

I look across the hills to-day, and see among the fir-trees slender white spires. And here, I know, lie buried my dear ones.

I used to visit this spot almost daily. It is nineteen years since the first small grave was made there, and now I do not go, except when the sun shines, and the flowers are blossoming. I realize that my loved ones are not there. No voice there speaks to me—no hand touches mine: and I know that in the low graves there can be but the merest handful of dust. And there were the eyes that answered mine, the lips that kissed, and the hearts that loved me, and answered mine in exquisite sympathy!

A handful of dust. The spirit that drew all the tangible particles to it, that composed the body—that made the living, breathing, reasoning entity, let go its hold, and the particles dissolved and disappeared.

The living person that we know is, then, only the spirit clothed upon with particles of earthly, tangible substance; and when the spirit no longer holds these particles together by some attraction we call "life," then they resolve themselves into dust. If the unconscious spirit does this, why, then, may not the conscious spirit call together again, out of the same material world in which he once bore the material form, such particles as are necessary to make his presence visible.

And they punished the philosopher who dared say that the world moved.

MAUDE MEREDITH.

When the last sunshine of expiring day in summer twilight creeps itself away, who hath not felt the softness of the hour sink on the heart—as dew along the flower.—Byron

IMPORTANT!

DR. C. E. WATKINS,

—THE—

FAMOUS CHRONIST,

OF AYER, MASS.

QUICK CURES! SMALL DOSES!

Send age, name in full and two 2-cent stamps and leading symptom, and we will send you a diagnosis of your case FREE, and we will try and make the price of treatment right to you. Remember, please, that we do not wish to take your case unless you are dissatisfied with your present treatment. Do not ask OUR opinion of this doctor or that one, because we never express an opinion, nor have we any one connected with us that is allowed to speak ill of any one or even to express an opinion. We know some doctors do so, but we do not.

The day of shot-gun prescription is past; drastic drugs in large doses will not be given ten years from now. We believe in the certainty of medicine and in specific medication, but specific medication requires specific diagnosis. He who understands the action of drugs, and who is gifted with the power of correctly diagnosing, is the successful physician to-day.

SPECIFIC MEDICINE! NO DRASTIC DRUGS!

A Book on "Chronic Disease" Sent for 2-cent Stamp.

C. E. WATKINS, M. D.,
AYER, MASS.

DR. C. E. WATKINS' GREAT WORK.

A Few Questions Answered by the Famous Physical Physician, Dr. C. E. Watkins.

Doctor, we hear good reports of your success as a physician from all parts of the country. To what do you attribute your success? Have you found the "Elixir of Life" or the "Fountain of Youth?" Well, I am pleased if my patients speak well of me, but perhaps I owe much of my success to them. How so, Doctor? Well, you see, I believe my patients are desirous of regaining their health when they apply to me for treatment; but I find that a majority of them have been deceived by false promises, and they come to me usually with no hope of recovery and very little faith in my power to cure them. In fact, they have no confidence even in themselves or anyone else: so the first I do is to convince them that their case is not a hopeless one, provided they will follow my instructions. If I can get them to promise to follow my advice, I always bid them hope; and I then study their personal character and ascertain their weak points. These I carefully point out to them and teach them how to overcome them, and thereby secure their cooperation.

Yes, doctor, I understand that, but you surely must give medicine. Yes, sir, I do, but not in large doses. I first decide just what kind of medicine they need, then how much their system requires and give just the right quantity and no more.

But, doctor, I read some time ago an article in The Progressive Thinker, which spoke of you having and using some remedies which are wholly unknown to our medical practitioners in producing cures—almost miraculous. Yes, I have some remedies that are entirely new and find them very reliable, but I believe that I owe my success to a power higher than myself. I honestly believe that if it was not my gift of finding out the absolute cause of the disease, I should make many failures, even with my new remedies.

Doctor, is consumption curable? Yes, sir, where there have no cavities formed. Do you believe all chronic diseased can be cured? Yes, sir, for the very fact that a person suffers year after year and continues to live, proves that nature is stronger than disease, and if nature is properly assisted in her efforts to throw off disease, health will return; and in no other way can a sick person be restored to a sound physical condition. Every physician who ignores nature's efforts to overcome disease, and relies wholly upon drugs to perform a cure will fail every time. These are stubborn facts which no one can deny.—Banner of Light.

A PLAIN DENIAL.

To the Editor:—The secular papers, notably the St. Louis Post Dispatch, Kansas City Star and the lesser lights, have been publishing me all over the country as having renounced Spiritualism and joined the Presbyterian church. I deem it but justice to myself and friends to, once for all, denounce the whole thing as a white-livered lie. Renounce the beautiful philosophy of Spiritualism for the fetid rot of the Calvinistic church? That is the "unkindest cut of all," I would rather be a howling Methodist and bump heads at the mourner's bench, or even a street walking Salvationist, than a hell-believing Presbyterian. They have the least sense of the whole caboodle, and why those lecherous, lying penny-liners should stick me in that box is more than I can tell.

Tell the folks it is a lie for me.

G. H. WALSER.

The morning of life is like the dawn of the day, full of purity, of imagery and harmony.—Chateaubriand.

DRS. PEEBLES & BURROUGHS,

SPECIALISTS IN ALL CHRONIC DISEASES.

—Depend for their remarkable cures, not upon the old drastic drug system, but upon the knowledge of diseases and their proper remedies—upon science and the finer psychic forces.

Some of their cures, like Schlatter's, are INSTANTANEOUS; in other cases months are required.

Having carefully studied all the therapeutic agencies in connection with their long medical experience, they use those best adapted to each case with unvarying success.

Hundreds are joyfully writing the Doctors: "I am better," or "I am cured." "God bless you."

THEY TREAT THE FOLLOWING:

Dyspepsia, diarrhœa, dropsy, epilepsy, eczema, erysipelas, falling sickness, rheumatism, scrofula, nervous spasm, gravel, gout, headaches, heart disease, kidney complaint, female weakness, liver difficulty, neuralgia, paralysis, bleeding piles, bronchitis, asthma, bladder affection, cancer, catarrh, pimples upon the face, uterine diseases, weaknesses of men, barrenness, insanity, drunkenness, constipation, la grippe and all chronic diseases. And further, they furnish

FREE TO ALL PATIENTS

Hygenic and Physiological literature, enabling them when cured, to remain healthy.

Correct Diagnosis Free,

By enclosing name, age, sex, leading symptom and stamp for reply.

REMEMBER TO ADDRESS

DRS. PEEBLES & BURROUGHS,
P. O. BOX 177,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND. 35tf

MUSIC.

Some Reflections Thereon.

To the Editor:—Different people have different ideas of music. For instance, I find in Brother Boozer's book the songs of "After the Ball," "Old Black Joe," "Sweet Marie," "Uncle Ned," and others that have been familiar to the devotees of the variety theaters for years, while under the tune of "The Sweet Story of Old" is the song, "I think when I read the sweet story of old; when Buddha was here among men." Now I would as soon sing of Jesus as a savior as Buddha. I can see no difference.

No, Brother Boozer, give us something in the true spirit of Spiritualism, and set it to tunes that we can give out without making ourselves a laughing stock among the people and you will find we will use them. W. H. BACH.

Springfield, Mass.

VIEWS OF H. W. BOOZER.

To the Editor:—All who love Spiritualism will surely be in sympathy with this brother in his desire to elevate it in public estimation, and none more profoundly so than the medium-author criticised. Truly, "Different people have different ideas of music." Here are mine, as given by the great Meyerbeer: "Music is the reproduction of Nature's voices. The voice may be of joy or sadness, triumph or defeat, victory or despair, rapture's outburst or sorrow's wail—each has its own individuality, as much so as the trees of the forest, animal or human life." The Masters in the beyond, by impression cause mediums to recognize this voice in its individual expression and clothe it with words that it may tell its own story. This is fixed; though the lines change ever so much—but where the words of these lines are adapted to this musical expression, the air is in a sense lost in the sentiment, idea or truth so taught.

Now, our good brother thinks that the best results of man's musical genius and inspiration should be shunned if previously used for a not-the-best purpose. I am firmly of the opinion that it is ours to use the best we can avail ourselves of for truth's sake, wherever found. Would someone explain what is "spiritual music," and what are "spiritualistic tunes?" Is it meant airs that have not been used to express humor or sentiment, and is it to denote those which have been used to teach people theological falsehood? Have not the melodies that have lived through generations solely by their excellence been the work of inspiration, and so most truly spiritual? Who can prove they are not?

My brother errs in statement when he says he finds "the songs of 'After the Ball,' 'Old Black Joe,' 'Sweet Marie,' and 'Uncle Ned.'" The songs of which he has correctly stated the airs, are respectively: "Reaping and Sowing," "All Will Know," "Invocation" and "Soul Stains." Could a melody be made more effective to illustrate "Reaping and Sowing"? I am sure his opinion must change could he hear the sweetly dignified denial in the song "All Will Know," of the dreadful doctrine of endless misery, as publicly sung before the Band of Harmony here November 29th. Where will he find appeals for angel presence more exquisitely rendered than is found fitted to the air of "Sweet Marie"? While in perfect simplicity the ethics of all religions is voiced in "Soul Stains," with the solemnly emphatic notes of Stephen Foster's beautiful melody known as "Uncle Ned."

The love of humanity is now acknowledged by all progressive people to be the coming savior of the world. As the embodiment of this doctrine and from whom Christianity has borrowed it, stands "Buddha, our savior." I am glad to sing of all saviors who save through love of their fellow men, in place of those who save through murder and bloodshed.

No, my good brother, my different idea "is not to seek to elevate our truth by pandering to preconceived ideas born in ignorance, and under the domination of theological falsehood" but to find the greatest excellence and the most practicable means of uplifting others to Spiritualism through the magical agency of song. H. W. BOOZER.

Grand Rapids, Mich.

A Good Offer.

If you are sick and have failed to find relief, send your name and address to Dr. J. R. Craig, 1346 Market street, San Francisco, Cal., and he will send you a correct diagnosis. Stamps for reply. 370

Dr. E. J. Worst,

of Ashland, Ohio, will mail any reader of The Progressive Thinker one of his new Aerial Catarrh Inhalers with medicine enough for one year free. He will allow you three days as a trial, then if perfectly satisfied, send him $1; if not, return it to him in the original package. Catarrh, asthma, colds in the head, bronchitis and tuberculosis immediately relieved and speedily cured. Don't pay big prices for worthless inhalers. Address above. 376

His eyes have all the seeming of a demon that is dreaming.—Poe.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson-Barker,

AS A SPIRITUAL HEALER HAS NO EQUAL! . . . .

Rejoice and Be Glad! Herald Forth the Tidings of Good Health!

DR. A. B. DOBSON'S

Healing powers are being repeated over and over again through the mediumship of MRS. DR. DOBSON-BARKER, who, for the past year and a half has

SUCCESSFULLY TREATED OVER ONE THOUSAND PATIENTS

of all diseases that flesh is heir to, and will give you proof of her powers, by sending requirements as per small advertisement for diagnosis of your case. Here is one of her many cures:

St. Louis, June 21, 1896.

MY DEAR MRS. DOBSON:—I herewith enclose $1.15 for another month's remedies for my sister Emma. I can't tell you how much good these medicines do her and how thankful and grateful we are for having applied for them. When she began taking this last medicine, she had considerable distress in the bowels and stomach, but after a week she was relieved and we are convinced if she had not the medicine she would have had a serious sick spell as liver, stomach and bowels were in a bad condition. Now everything seems in good order; still we feel as if more medicine will eventually cure all her ailments. We thank you sincerely for prompt reply, and wish you all the success you so well merit.

With affectionate regards, very truly,
REBECCA LEVY,
8381 Laclede ave., St. Louis Mo

SOCIALISTIC WORK.

Some Suggestions by a Practical Socialist.

To the Editor:—In your issue of November 21, you lament the condition of Spiritualist papers throughout the United States. Of course this is just what a Socialist would expect under the competitive system, for where two or more are competing for the same thing, one is sure to have it all until someone more adroit than he or she succeeds in getting it, and the most worthy does not always come out ahead, either.

But why don't you Spiritualist editors pattern after the Socialists of Ruskin, Tenn., and have a Spiritual paper union and publish all the spiritual papers under one roof, and with one press, and divide the results equally with every one that assists in doing the work, and all eat in one dining-hall, thereby reducing the labor and cost to a minimum? That is the way we do in the Ruskin Co-operative Association; and while banks are breaking, mines and factories closing down and farmers losing their farms, Ruskin flourishes like the daisies of Spring, gaining steadily in wealth, and the members go to bed not to worry over the mortgage, but to sleep.

The Spiritualists could organize a colony if they would, and build a publishing house on a tract of land where they could have their own postoffice (this would amount to hundreds of dollars a year) take 'n farmers to raise the food, mechanics to build the buildings, and machinists to run the machinery. That is the way we do in Ruskin, and are making a success of it, too. I don't wish to trouble you with a long letter, but if anyone should wish to know something of colony life as it is in Ruskin, write me enclosing stamp and I will see that they get their interrogatories answered.

Before closing I will say that we publish twenty-six socialistic labor papers here. The Coming Nation and The Telegraphers' Advocate are national in their character, and twenty-four are State and local. I hope that the Spiritualists and Spiritualist editors will in the near future begin to co-operate, not for the benefit of one or two, but for all. W. P. TUBBS.

Cave Mills, Tenn.

DOES HE STILL LIVE?

At Pierre Keeler's light circle seance, December 16, I secretly placed in the cabinet a folded paper, on which I had written this:

"S. P. Putnam, do you still live?"

Out of more than thirty messages in pencil that came to half that number of attendants, was one from Samuel P. Putnam. Not until the seance ended did I read it as follows:

"Yes, I still live, Samuel P. Putnam."

Having a recent letter from him I have compared the two signatures and find the handwriting apparently the same. Now, who wrote this message five days after Mr. Putnam's death? Not Mr. Keeler, for his two hands clasped the bare arm of the sitter next to him, both in front of the cabinet. I have myself sat next to Mr Keeler, and while his hands clasped my naked arm, I could hear the leaves stripped from the pad behind us before they were thrown over the screen, four and a half feet high, which forms the cabinet in the corner, and once while I thus sat his coat came off, with only slight agitation of his person, and was thrown out over the screen. This performance I have witnessed more than fifty times, and it has occurred not less than two thousand times in the last sixteen years of his mediumship. W. H. BURR.

Washington, D. C. Dec. 17, 1896.

NEW BOOKS.

Biography of Francis Schlatter, the Healer. With His Life, Works and Wanderings. Schlatter Publishing Co., Denver, Colo. Paper, 50 cents.

The work of Schlatter has excited deep interest, and this volume is designed to supply information concerning his life from his birth in Alsace, France (now a German province), up to the present time. As a matter of course, the book is very interesting.

People's Faces and How to Read Them. By John Nils Larson.

The result of years of close observation and patient study, by a practical physiognomist, is here condensed in a pamphlet of 44 pages. It is liberally illustrated with cuts of well-known personages, forming fine object lessons in physiognomy. For sale at this office. Price 25 cents.

The Nature Cure, by Physical and Mental Methods. Illustrated. By Marvin E. Conger. Assisted by Rosamond C. Conger.

Truly, as stated by the author, this volume indicates the dawn of a new day in medical practice. The value of such a mentor in a family, in preventing sickness, in curing disease, and in saving doctor's bills, is incalculable. It would seem that the Drs. Conger must largely forestall their own medical practice by presenting to the public a book embodying the garnered results of their own study and experience in the simplest, best and least expensive methods of curing the ills which flesh is heir to. In this respect they are doing an unselfish, humanitarian work. The volume is one we can heartily commend to all. A few copies are on sale at this office. Price, cloth, $2.

Jesus of Nazareth. A Tragedy. By George Barlow, Author of The Crucifixion of Man, A Lost Mother, The Pageant of Life, Etc.

Realizing that the Gospels and other accounts of Jesus' life have been idealized, the aim of the author has been to set forth that life and character in the form of actual realization. The threads of love, passion and despair are deftly woven into a fabric that seems intensely human as the varying characters and scenes are dramatically presented to view. The author evinces true poetic genius as well as literary skill. The characters are well drawn, the incidents partake largely of the Gospel narratives, and the utterances seem true to the personality of the various individuals represented, with such license, of course, as the laws of poetry ofttimes allow. We judge the author is a believer in the philosophy and phenomena of Spiritualism.

Ancient Civilizations. By George Shelley Hughs. Published by the author. Des Moines, Iowa.

The subject is treated historically, and the manner of its treatment evinces much study and patient research into the history of ancient peoples.

It is compact yet comprehensive; an excellent manual for the study of this very interesting and important subject. The author holds some views that vary from the generally received opinions of scientists and philosophers—but these do not detract from the value of his work as related to the civilizations of ancient peoples, including particularly China, and Western Asia, Egypt and Phenicia, the Israelites, the Jews, Greece, Carthage, and Rome down to the Christian era.

The book is one of true value, worthy of scholarly study and philosophic thought. It comprises 440 pages octavo, finely printed and bound. Price $2. For sale by the author, Des Moines, Iowa.

Gifts for the Holidays!

To those who desire gifts for the season of the "Glad New Year," the following list of books is offered:

NAME.	PRICE.
Studies in the Outlying Fields of Psychic Science	$ 75
Life in Two Spheres; or Scenes in the Summer-land	50
The Secrets of the Convent of the Sacred Heart, 25 cents; bound in blue and gold	50
Heresy, or Led to the Light; a tale of Evangelization, Freethought and Spiritualism	30
Arcana of Nature; the History and Laws of Creation. English edition. 264 pages	1 00
The Philosophy of Spirit and the Spirit-World. English edit'on. 208 pages	1 00
The Origin and Antiquity of Man. English ed'n.	1 00
From Soul to Soul. By Emma Rood Tuttle. A dainty volume including the best poems of the author, with some of her most popular songs with the music by eminent composers	1 00
Elva; a Poem founded on the Johnstown Flood. By Emma Rood Tuttle. A beautiful souvenir	25
The Lyceum Guide. For the Home, the Lyceum and Soc'eties. By Emma Rood Tuttle	50
Angell Prize Contest Recitations. To Advance Humane Education in all Phases. By Emma Rood Tuttle	80

All books sent postpaid. Address

HUDSON TUTTLE,
BERLIN HEIGHTS, O.

SPECIAL READING NOTICES.

Mothers will find "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" the best to use for children while teething. An old and well tried remedy.

SPIRITUALIST BADGES.

EVERY . . . . SPIRITUALIST SHOULD WEAR THE SUNFLOWER JEWELRY.

As the Sunflower turns its face towards the sun, so Spiritualism turns the faces of humanity from darkness and superstition towards the Sunlight of Truth and Progression.

PRICES:

Rolled Plate Bar Pin	$2 25
Solid Gold Bar Pin	3 50
Electro-plate Badge	75
Rolled Plate Badge, Scarf Pin or Lapel Button	1 25
Solid Gold Badge, Scarf Pin or Lapel Button	1 75
Rolled Plate Maltese Watch Charm	3 00
Solid Gold Maltese Watch Charm	5 00
Rolled Plate Maltese Pendant	3 00
Solid Gold Maltese Pendant	5 00

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE,

40 LOOMIS STREET, CHICAGO

Valuable Books and Pamphlets.

We have on hand a limited number of copies of the various writings and lectures of Mrs. Maria M. King, whose name ranks high in the list of Spiritualist authors, for profundity in philosophic thought. Her elucidations of various questions pertaining to the science and philosophy of Spiritualism, as well as the related field of natural science, are truly remarkable for their depth and clearness. These books and pamphlets constitute of themselves a noble Spiritual library, of sufficient intrinsic value to worthily engage the study and thought of the wisest students in spiritual science.

Although slightly shop-worn, they are in good condition, and we offer them at reduced rates, as follows:

The Principles of Nature, as Discovered in the Development and Structure of the Universe. Material and Spiritual Magnetic Forces. Laws of Spiritual Manifestations and Mediumship. Spiritual Planes and Spheres. Given inspirationally, by Mrs. Maria M. King. In three volumes, 8vo. A remarkable work; among the greatest in the literature of Spiritualism. Price reduced from $1.75 to $1.25 per volume. Postage 12 cents.

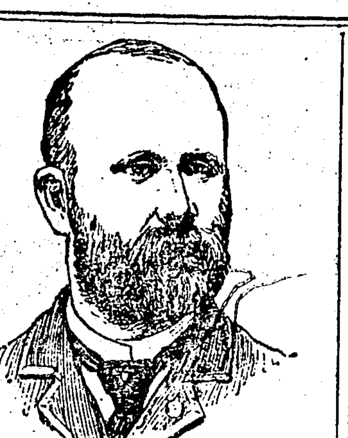
PAMPHLETS.

The Spiritual Philosophy versus Diabolism. Two lectures by Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.

Mediumship. A chapter of Experiences. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price 10 cents.

God the Father, and the Man the Image of God. Two lectures. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.

What Is Spiritualism? and Shall Spiritualists Have a Creed? Two lectures. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.



Social Evils: Their Causes and Cure. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.

The Brotherhood of Man, and What Follows from It. Two lectures. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.

"Social Upbuilding, Including Co-operative Systems and the Happiness and Ennoblement of Humanity." By E. D. Babbitt, LL. D., M. D. This comprises the last part of Human Culture and Cure. Paper cover, 15c. For sale at this office.

"Encyclopedia of Biblical Spiritualism: or a Concordance of the Principal Passages of the Old and New Testament Scriptures which prove or imply Spiritualism; together with a brief history of the origin of many of the important books of the Bible." By Moses Hull. The well-known talented and scholarly author has here embodied the results of his many years' study of the Bible in its relations to Spiritualism. As its title denotes, it is a veritable encyclopedia of information on the subject. Price $1. For sale at this office.

"Talleyrand's Letter to the Pope" will be found especially interesting to all who would desire to make a study of Romanism and the Bible. The historic facts he states, and his keen, scathing review of Romish ideas and practices should be read by all. Sold at this office. Price 25 cents.

FORSTER, DR. W. M.

THE NOTED MEDICAL CLAIRVOYANT OF THE PACIFIC COAST,

Will send a free diagnosis and terms for treatment to all who will send their name and address—in their own handwriting—with postage stamp for reply.

"The Pacific Coast Spiritualist" of Dec. 30, 1893, says of Dr. Forster:—

"Since his coming here he has made himself highly respected and beloved for his benevolent work, his humanitarian ideas and practices, and his straightforward course of integrity and honor."

"Dr. W. M. Forster, California's noted clairvoyant physician, is receiving commendations from far and near over his remarkables success as a healer."—Philosophical Journal.

Address,

DR. W. M. FORSTER,
1059 Market Street. - San Francisco, Cal. 333

A LOCK OF YOUR HAIR.

If SICK OR AILING, send a lock of your hair, name, age, sex, leading symptom, four cents postage, and I will diagnose your case and tell you what will cure your ailments. Address

DR. J. C. BATDORF,
Dept. F., Grand Rapids, Mich. 358tf

ASTONISHING OFFER.

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, name, age, sex, one leading symptom, and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

MRS. DR. DOBSON-BARKER,
SAN JOSE, CAL., Box 132 846tf

DR. J. S. LOUCKS,

Of Shirleyville, Mass., and his band of powerful ancient spirits are effecting the most wonderful cures that have been recorded and are so acknowledged. By his clear knowledge of your diseases, aided by his marvelous spirit forces combined with his magnetic remedies, will convince the most skeptical of his wonderful power to heal the sick. Try him. Send him sex, age, name, lock of hair, and four 2-cent stamps, and he will send a diagnosis of your case free. He doesn't want any leading symptoms. Address DR. J. S. LOUCKS, Shirleyville, Massachusetts. 371

INVALIDS

WHO WILL SEND FOUR CENTS IN stamps, their disease, or symptoms, will receive pamphlet and advice FREE to cure themselves without drugs. The THOMAS BATTERY COMPANY, Cardington, Ohio tf

PSYCHOMETRY, CONSULT WITH Prof. A. B. Severance in all matters pertaining to practical life, and your spirit-friends. Send lock of hair, or handwriting, and one dollar. Will answer three questions free of charge. Send for circulars. Address, 710 Prairie street, Milwaukee, Wis. 360tf

MRS. ELLA M. DOLE.

This medium, who is clairvoyant, clairaudient, psychometric and prophetic, can be consulted at No. 1680 North Clark street. Engagements can be made by letter. 310tf

A HOROSCOPE OF YOUR BIRTH AND ASTRAL reading of your life, with good and evil transits for 1897; also a copy of "Sparks from the Infinite," and one private lesson in occultism. Send date of birth and 25 cents to URIEL BUCHANAN, Ph. D., 337 Chestnut street, Chicago, Ill. 370

MRS. L. PACKER, 750 W. VAN BUREN. CLAIRvoyant, business medium. Three reasonable questions answered by mail, with stamp, 25 cents. 372

E. A. SCHOTT, SEER AND READER OF CLAIRvoyant, clairaudient and psychometric science. 658 West Madison street, Chicago. 370

UP TO DATE CHEMISTRY OF LIFE AND GOOD HEALTH.

A powerful and well-educated intuitional healer, who teaches and cures the sick.

Send address, lock of hair, sex, age, whether married or single, location of two leading pains, and two 3-cent stamps for free diagnosis to

DR. J. H. RANDALL,
Independent Medical College, People's Institute, Chicago, Ill. 372

"LIFE AND HEALTH."

A Monthly Paper Devoted to Life and Health. . . . . .

Only 25 Cents a Year, or Six Subscriptions for $1.

Sample copy 1-cent stamp. Send all subscriptions to

C. E. WATKINS, M. D.,
AYER, MASS. 370tf

MRS. B. HASENCLEVER, 684 MADISON STREET. Test and trumpet circle every Tuesday at 3 and 8 o'clock. 25 cents. Materializing seance Wednesdays and Saturdays at 8. Independent slate-writing daily. 373

OBSESSION.

Obsessing influences removed: earth-bound spirits released; haunted places freed, and the sick healed by MRS. M. BERGEN BROWN, Morgan Hill, Santa Clara county, Cal. Consulting fee, one dollar. Refer to Chas. Betts, Burr Oak, Mich. 373

"Mahomet, the Illustrious." By Godfrey Higgins, Esq. (Library of Liberal Classics.) No author was better qualified to write an impartial and honest life of Mahomet than Godfrey Higgins, and this volume is intensely interesting. It should be read in conjunction with Gibbon's work. For sale at this office. Price, 25 cents.

"The Woman's Bible. Part I. The Pentateuch. Comments on Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy." The contrast between the thoughts of these brave women and the thoughts of the orthodox world during all time past, is very striking. Keen analysis, ripe scholarship and fearless adherence to the right, characterize this very interesting effort of some of the brightest minds of to-day. For sale at this office. Price 50 cents.

"Cosmian Hymn Book." A collection of original and selected hymns, for liberal and ethical societies, for schools and the home; compiled by L. K. Washburn. This volume meets a public want. It comprises 258 choice selections of poetry and music, embodying the highest moral sentiment, and free from all sectarianism. Price, 50c. For sale at this office.

"Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated." Church people are cautioned not to open this book, as its comical pictures, based on Bible texts, tend to induce uncontrollable levity. It is a book for the freethinker who wishes to rest from busy cares, and drive away ennui. Price, in strong board covers, $1; cloth $1.50. For sale at this office.

A new edition of "Three Sevens," by the Phelon's, is just issued. The May Arena says: "The gist of such books as Dr. Phelon's "Three Sevens," and other works descriptive of or alluding to the various occult societies, which seem to have existed for ages, has never, until recently, been said so openly and plainly that 'he who runs may read.'" Cloth $1.25, postpaid. For sale at this office.

"The Great Roman Anaconda." By Prof. Geo. P. Rudolph, Ph.D., ex-priest of the diocese of Cleveland, O. A sharp and pointed letter to Bishop Horstmann. It is good reading, and should be widely distributed, that people may be enlightened concerning the ways and methods of Rome and its priesthood. Price 15c. For sale at this office.

A WONDERFUL OFFER

.. BY ..

DR. W. F. LAY, Clairvoyant,

One of the most successful healers and diagnosticians living. The doctor has letters from all over the United States, Canada, Australia and Europe, telling of the marvelous results, after all hope in other sources have been given up, being speedily cured under his treatment. Nervous and chronic diseases of every character, peculiar to both men and women, are, by the aid of his wonderful and extraordinary power, cured.

The doctor has never failed in a correct diagnosis of any case, many times it being causes that had baffled the most renowned physicians, but was readily explained through his wonderful clairvoyant and clairaudient powers.

Each case receives the attention of himself and band, also remedies for individual case. Send three 2-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, sex, and one symptom, and by return mail you will receive a full and accurate description of your case and any advice regarding it. Through persecution on account of his marvelous success the doctor graduated in a regular school, therefore being an M. D.

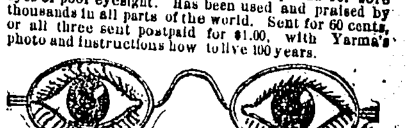
Sufferers, you that have failed to find relief, try once more and be convinced of Dr. Lay's powers and ability. Address

342tf DR. W. F. LAY, Box 918, Chicago, Ill.

HELIOCENTRIC ASTROLOGY.

A book containing instructions for making a heliocentric horoscope, together with a chart which gives the position of the planets from 1825 to 1916. The most complete work on this system ever published. Adapted for beginners or professors. One can cast and read a horoscope in half an hour. For sale by

FREDERICK WHITE, O. O. M.,
502 Fifth Ave., S. - Minneapolis, Minn.



Send the date of your birth and $1 and receive book and chart with your horoscope ready to read. Mention this paper when writing. 344tf

BETTER THAN GOLD.

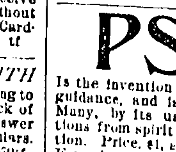
Elixir of Life Nos. One and Two

Cures all forms of stomach, liver and kidney disease; also constipation. A sure cure for that tired, worn-out feeling. Guaranteed to assist your system to health with pure, rich blood. Sufficient quantity for one month sent for $1.00.

One package of our Magnetized Compound for sore eyes or poor eyesight. Has been used and praised by thousands in all parts of the world. Sent for 60 cents, or all three sent postpaid for $1.00, with Yarma's photo and instructions how to live 100 years.

Melted Pebble Spectacles.

Restore lost vision. Write for Illustrated Circulars showing styles and prices and photo of Spirit Yarma, who developed this clairvoyant power in me. I can adjust my Melted Pebble Spectacles as perfectly to your eyes in your own home as if you were in my office, as thousands can testify. Send stamp for photo. B. F. POOLE, Clinton, Iowa.



DR. GARLAND'S

VEGETABLE COUGH DROPS

Are put up in six-ounce tin boxes and are guaranteed to give satisfaction or money will be refunded by the proprietor, Dr. M. H. Garland. Send 25 cents in stamps and receive by return mail a box of this

HOUSEHOLD REMEDY

as you will find it a blood cleanser as well as a Throat and Lung Remedy. Over 200,000 boxes sold and all recommend them. Address all orders to DR. M. H. GARLAND, 332 Sixtieth Place, Station O., Chicago, Illinois. 822tf

ORDER OF THE MAGI.

A New Badge in solid gold with blue and black enamel, with the pyramids, obelisk and sun's rays in gold. Every Mystic should have one of these beautiful emblems. Price $2. For sale at this office.

PSYCHE

Is the invention of a practical medium, under spirit guidance, and is designed to develop mediumship. Many, by its use, have received long communications from spirit friends, and express great satisfaction. Price, $1, and 20 cents extra for expressage. For sale at the office of THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER.

DR. T. WILKINS,

67 33D STREET, CHICAGO,

Treats Magnetically all Chronic Diseases, at office, or home of the patient.

J. C. F. GRUMBINE, SEER,

Is developing sensitives in Psychometry, Clairvoyance, Inspiration and Psychopathy by a series of inspirational teachings through the law of correspondence. For booklet, endorsements, terms, send an addressed and stamped envelope to J. C. F. GRUMBINE, 7820 Hawthorne Street, Station P, Chicago, Illinois. Psychiscopes, including a regular sitting, $2. For list of publications of "White Rose," send an addressed and stamped envelope. 364tf

CHRONIC DISEASES

A SPECIALTY.

Send your age, name in full in your own handwriting, and I will diagnose your disease

FREE OF CHARGE!

Enclose three 2-cent stamps and address

J. S. COOPER, M. D.,
Chillicothe, Mo. 384

DR. MARY E. SELLEN.

CHRONIC AND NERVOUS DISEASES.

Every Case Successfully Treated. Magnetic Treatment Given. Fees Reasonable.

Office, Independent Medical College, People's Institute, Chicago, Ill.
LEAVITT AND VAN BUREN STREETS. 368

OCCULT FORCES.

A wonderful book containing valuable matter of intense interest to all who desire in any way to benefit their condition in life, a marvel of condensed thought and brilliant ideas pointing a new way to success in all undertakings through the mastery of subtile forces.

Develop your latent powers and accomplish what would otherwise be impossible. This knowledge not only increases personal influence but fortifies one against designing and unprincipled persons. Price of book 30c. or sent free for addresses of friends likely to be interested in it and [illegible] in stamps. [illegible]

OCCULT PUB. CO., 3574 Vincennes Avenue, P. T., Chicago, Ill. 410

MADAME MARGARET G. WHITE, SPIRITUAL Medium. 10 West 64th street, New York City. Advice on business of all kinds. Mines and minerals a specialty. 370

The Blind Medium

Will send by letter life reading of past and future, with dates. Mail lock of hair and one dollar. Prof. H. W. Sinclair. 82 Adams avenue, Detroit, Mich. 378

MRS. S. F. DEWOLF—INDEPENDENT SLATE writing. 240 Winchester ave., near Van Buren. Madison street car; take transfer at Robey. Ladies' circle, Thursdays at 2:30. Chicago, Ill. 370

Wonderful, Strange Revelations.

Explaining Daniel's and St. John's prophecies. 48-page pamphlet. Price, 10c.; 15 for $1. Address H. B. BEAR, Preston, Ohio. 359

I HEAL, TEACH AND SPEAK, AND WISH TO BE kept busy I also give private readings. Societies near Chicago wishing assistance—reasonable. Please address with stamp, MRS. M. A. REED, 4002 Ellis avenue, Chicago, Ill. 369

READ WHAT MR. ARROWSMITH, OF LOUISville, Ky., says: I had readings from all noted mediums, but St. Omer Briggs' readings surpasses them all. All her predictions came true." Consult the celebrated psychometrist and seer, MARGUERITE ST. OMER BRIGGS, 783 Richmond St., Cincinnati, O. 371

"LIFE AND HEALTH."

A Monthly Paper Devoted to Life and Health. . . . . .

Only 25 Cents a Year, or Six Subscriptions for $1.

Sample copy 1-cent stamp. Send all subscriptions to

C. E. WATKINS, M. D.,
AYER, MASS. 370tf

HOROSCOPES

★ FREE For Men, Women, Young People and Children.

Send at once. Enclose Stamp. PLANETS AND PEOPLE, 169 Jackson St., Chicago.

Send 25 cents for MAGAZINE OF THE HEAVENS.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRIT

— AND —

THE SPIRIT WORLD.

BY HUDSON TUTTLE.

A most able and interesting presentation of a most important subject. Every Spiritualist and every inquirer into the proofs and philosophy of Spiritualism should have this excellent book. Its value is recognized and acknowledged all over the world. Price, cloth, $1. For sale at this office.

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER.

SCIENCE, MORALITY, LEMENTED BYAN EXALTED THE BIBLE OF THE FUTURE.

Progress, the Universal Law of Nature; Thought, the Solvent of Her Problems.

VOL. 15. CHICAGO, ILL., SATURDAY, JANUARY 2, 1897, NO. 371.

HIS LAST DREAM.

Where Time Ended and Eternity Began for Thomas Archer.

A Strange and Curious Story.

BY LEON LEWIS.

[Copyrighted, 1896, by the Author.]

Thomas Archer, "The Blind Musician," had been blind from his birth. His parents, who were in humble circumstances, had died in his childhood, leaving him poorly provided against life's inexorable trials and struggles. An only brother, James Archer, had wandered in youth to distant lands, and both boys had changed their abode repeatedly, so that they had finally lost track of each other. But Thomas had found friends when he most needed them, and had become in due course a musician of such note that they secured for him the position of teacher in one of the principal seminaries of a northern city.

But what a life was that lived by the poor blind musician, even when his career had reached its culmination! No home, save such as a third-rate hotel afforded! no companionship, save his own thoughts and his music! no books, newspapers, magazines, games, outings or other recreations! It was no wonder that his gloom and melancholy became habitual, or that at times he hardly uttered a word for days together. Some of the most influential and ultra-fashionable patrons of the seminary eventually thought they would prefer the principal's brilliant and handsome brother to their blind teacher, and it was not long before the movement they inaugurated to this end had been accomplished.

A few sighs and tears in the solitude of his own cheerless apartment were very naturally given to this serious change in the affairs of Thomas Archer, and then he tried to take heart again. He busied himself with the composition of a "Grand Funeral March," which he intended to play as a requiem for one of his deceased benefactors, but the heirs fell to squabbling over the dead man's effects, and a dun from his landlord for a month's board reminded Thomas about that time that he was penniless.

He met the claim by disposing of a watch which had belonged to his father, and went on with his compositions without troubling himself particularly about the future, beyond sending an appeal for help to his brother at the latter's newest address.

Again his landlord presented his claim, and again he met it as before, selling a bracelet which had been his mother's. The outcome of these expedients can be foreseen. There came a time—only too soon!—when he found himself without resources for meeting his landlord's claims. A few days of grace were allowed him, and then he was requested to move, his creditor permitting him, as an unexampled favor, to take his trunk with him.

He found a new lodging, but was soon forced to move again, and this time he was obliged to leave his trunk behind him.

And with this event he entered upon a period of his career so full of miseries and privations that it deserves to be called a martyrdom. A few friends of other days who casually heard of his distress—he was too proud to appeal to them—gave him temporary and inadequate aid, but at last he was compelled to take lodgings among beggars and malefactors. His crowning misfortune was to be robbed of most of his wretched apparel in one of these dens while he slept, and to go forth in a pair of ragged jeans in the month of December!

The poor man who still cherished the chimera of his brother's return, now found it difficult to get food enough to keep soul and body together. He wrote several letters to Mexico and elsewhere, hoping to hear from James, but all in vain, and the hour speedily came when he realized that he must beg or perish. It cost him a desperate effort to face this alternative, but hunger and cold vanquished his scruples, and he decided to solicit alms by singing in the streets.

In possession of a violin which had been loaned him by a man nearly as bad off as himself, he took his stand at the entrance of a public square. Such music as he produced could not have failed to attract attention anywhere, and he quickly drew around him such a crowd that circulation became impeded. A gruff voice broke in upon the soul-inspiring notes of La Africana, and a rude hand took him by the arm.

"You must move on, my man," ordered the voice, "and don't be caught at it again."

"But I am doing no harm to anyone," protested Thomas.

"Not a word! You are obstructing the sidewalks. No more of it, or I shall have to run you in!"

The unfortunate man moved on accordingly, and what resource was now left him? If he sang, he would be arrested. If he refrained from singing, he would starve! Yet twice or thrice he ventured again. His idea was that his long absent brother might have returned and be in the crowd of listeners, thus recognizing him! The few nickels he gained by these two or three last desperate efforts afforded him shelter and something to eat for another day or two, and then—where was it all to end?

A heavy snow-storm set in one wintery afternoon raging fiercely, and the poor blind musician wandered on and on therein for hours, until late in the evening, he dropped into a rude seat offered him by a pile of boards at the corner of a lumber yard. His sightless eyes were turned to heaven, and his whole soul cried piteously for assistance, he was so tired! so cold! so hungry!

Suddenly in the midst of his reflections, so vague and confused, a friendly hand touched his arm.

"You—you are not a policeman?" he faltered, in subdued terror.

"No," was the reply. "I merely chanced to be passing. This is no place for you. You should go home!"

"Home?" echoed Thomas, with a voice and mien which revealed at a glance the full measure of his afflictions and sufferings. "I have no home—no friends—not even a shelter!"

"Then let me come to your relief. Permit me."

The stranger took him by the arms and drew him to his feet, adding in the kindest of tones.

"Now lean on me. We'll try to find a carriage. You are not afraid of me?"

"Certainly not. Why should I be? Your voice tells me you are good and kind."

"What a night is before us! We must be moving," said the stranger, hurrying the blind man away as rapidly as his trembling limbs permitted. "I want to take you to my house before the storm gets any worse. You must have dry clothes immediately, and something warm to eat and drink."

"Heaven will reward you, sir," returned Thomas. "I thought I was going to die in that lumber yard!"

"Say no more about dying, my friend," enjoined the stranger. "Ah, did you stumble?"

"A little—against the curb. That is one of the inconveniences of being blind."

"What! you are blind?" cried his rescuer, with an interest as keen as sudden.

"Yes, sir."

"How long have you been so?"

"From my birth!"

Thomas felt the arm of his guide tremble as they continued their way through the night and storm. At the end of a brief interval the unknown questioned him in a voice which had grown singularly tender.

"What is your name?"

"Archer, sir—Thomas Archer."

"Archer!"

The unknown halted abruptly, an incoherent cry escaping him.

"The youngest son of Hiram and Nancy" he demanded.

"The same, sir."

The blind musician suddenly found himself clasped in an embrace that threatened to suffocate him.

"My God! what horror and what gladness!" cried his deliverer, in an anguished voice. "I have been criminally neglectful of you, Thomas, but I am your brother James!"

Clinging to each other in a fond embrace, the brothers sobbed and rejoiced in the midst of the streets a full minute, the snow continuing to descend in great flakes upon them.

Starting at length from his brother's arms, James Archer bent a swift glance around in search of a carriage.

"Ah, there it is, thank heaven!" escaped him. "This way, Thomas."

They hastened to take possession of the vehicle which had arrived so timely.

"And now to see how quickly you can get us home, driver," said James, after giving his address. "Double fare, if you are lively."

The speed with which they were whirled away announced that the driver would earn his money.

"And now to explain, Thomas," resumed James Archer, still holding the hand of his blind brother in a warm clasp. "I left Mexico soon after I arrived there, going to Gautamala, where I have acquired a large coffee estate and a handsome fortune, but I have been absent a great deal in Europe and elsewhere, and that is why there has been such a break in our correspondence. I came back four months ago, and discovered that you had dropped out of your old associations, but I have been unable to get the least trace of you. What joy, to have found you so unexpectedly! How fortunate!"

The carriage came to a halt in front of an elegant and brilliantly-lighted dwelling, and a servant advanced briskly to open the door. The blind musician staggered as the cold gusts of the storm struck him again, but in another minute he had been ushered into a handsomely furnished parlor, where his feet sank into a thick velvet carpet and a warm air began reaching his lungs and dissipating the deadly chill which had assailed him during his long and weary wanderings.

In the course of a few minutes the whole situation had changed for the poor blind musician. He had not only enjoyed a refreshing bath, but he had been clothed from head to foot in the finest of raiment. A sumptuous repast, beginning with a warm and fragrant soup, was duly served to him, his brother and a housemaid vying with each other in anticipating his slightest wants and wishes.

"Oh! what joy!" he at length ejaculated.

"Then you find everything about as it should be, do you, my dear brother?" returned James Archer, embracing him.

"Oh! so nice!"

"You are in every way comfortable?"

"Never so happy before!"

"Is that wine to your taste?"

"Delicious!"

"And how is that roast beef?"

"I never tasted finer!"

"Is there anything else you would like to have?"

"Not the least thing, thank you."

The supper ended, the elder brother conducted Thomas to a luxurious arm-chair in front of the fire, placing under his feet a soft hassock.

"Did my wife say at what hour she would return from her sister's, Mary?" he inquired of the house-maid.

"At eleven o'clock, sir," was the answer.

"And it is eleven now!" pursued her employer, glancing at a clock on the mantlepiece. "She's due therefore. Were all the children with her?"

The house-maid assented, and the elder brother turned again to Thomas.

"Do you play the piano as much as formerly?" he asked.

"Whenever I can get a chance, James!"

"Then why shouldn't we get up a little surprise against the return of my wife and children?" suggested Mr. Archer.

"That's the very thing I'd like to do," responded the musician.

"Good! Let me take you back to the parlor."

Seated before a magnificent instrument, the blind musician ran his fingers over the keys in wondering ecstacy.

"And now strike up, brother," requested James, in joyous accents. "I want to see if your hands have lost their cunning!"

Thomas complied playing a lively martial air which rose grandly louder and louder, filling the whole house.

"Capital! You are the same great musician as of yore, I see," cried James, at the first pause. "Again, and faster!"

The blind man resumed playing, and continued with ever-increasing brilliancy, his face glowing with rapture.

"I foresaw what would be the sequel of our little surprise, brother," remarked James, his gaze turning to the front hall, when the player stopped again. "My wife and children have returned from sister's, and here they come on tip-toe, as full of wonder as delight! Come in Carrie! come in, all of you!"

A rush of footsteps over the yielding carpet succeeded, and a group of radiant and inquiring faces surrounded the musician.

"I see you all realize who this dear one is," resumed James Archer, turning to his wife and children. "Yes, he is that blind brother of mine of whom we have so often spoken! the same I have so long sought! and who has at last come to us, nevermore to leave us!"

The words were not yet finished when the arms of the sister-in-law enclosed Thomas, and a hearty kiss was pressed to his forehead. And then came the fond caresses and greetings of Joseph, Effie and Thomas, all the brightest and best of children, whose ages ranged from ten to fifteen years.

"How good to have you with us, uncle Thomas—after all the trouble and worry we've had to find you!" exclaimed Effie, as great tears of joy and sympathy dimmed her beautiful eyes.

"You shall never, never leave us, uncle," declared Joseph, the eldest boy.

"And you shall sleep with me tonight, Uncle Thomas, and every night," promised his young namesake, again caressing him.

"And you are all right again dear uncle—all cosy and warm?" inquired Effie, when her father had briefly set forth the circumstances under which he had found his brother.

"Yes, dear—all right," replied Thomas, with a sigh of exquisite gladness. "I was never so comfortable—never so happy! Those pains in my head are all gone—that cold and hunger—that terrible fatigue! The only thing I need now is sleep—my eyes are so heavy! they close in spite of me!"

"Then sleep, dear uncle," returned Effie, with another caress. "You see what a nice lounge we have here—papa's favorite resting place! Joseph and I will assist you to it."

One on each side of him, the two eldest children sustained his steps across the floor to the lounge in question, placing him gently upon it and covering him with a soft and fleecy rug.

"And now sleep, dear uncle," whispered Joseph, caressing his hair and cheeks. "We will all watch over you!"

* * * * *

The blind musician slept accordingly—and awoke in heaven! his last glad dream of earth and earthly things have ended at the very gates of the Better Land!

They found him there at daybreak, two passing policemen, at the corner of the lumberyard in which he had sunk down chilled and exhausted. He was so completely enveloped in the snow which had fallen during the night that they came very near not seeing him. The physician of their station reported subsequently that it was a simple case of freezing, favored by inanition.

"Look at his face, Mike!" said one of the policemen to the other as they were removing the rigid body to the patrol wagon waiting to take it to the morgue.

"Yes, Sam—I noticed it," was the reply. "Poor fellow! he seems to be smiling!"

[THE END.]

THE NEXT WORLD INTERVIEWED

Will C. Hodge, who is now filling his third engagement at Rochester, Ind., writes:

"I have been greatly pleased in the perusal of your new book, 'The Next World Interviewed.' It presents in concise form the opinion and experiences of intelligences whose opinions are worth considering, and contains in small space a vast amount of information that thousands are seeking. It is a marvel how you can furnish such a book at so small a price; it should be in the hands of every Spiritualist and every investigator.

"The Progressive Thinker, always good, is now better than ever, and I feel like congratulating every one of your numerous readers that such a paper can be laid before them at a cost of two cents per week. How any professed Spiritualist can afford not to take it, passes my comprehension.

What a royal Christmas present a subscription for The Progressive Thinker for a year, with "The Next World Interviewd' would make."

Philip of Macedon was a drunkard, and transmitted this peculiarity to his son.

Rudolph II. of Germany had but one arm, the left having been cut off in a battle.

John of England had the reputation of being the handsomest man of his age.

It is a great sin to swear unto a sin, but greater sin to keep a sinful oath.—Shakspeare.

Just laws are no restraint upon the freedom of the good, for a good man desires nothing which a just law will interfere with.—Froude.

Those edges soonest turn that are most keen; a sober moderation stands sure, no violent extremes endure.—Aleyn.

In all meanness there is a defect of intellect as well as of heart. And even the cleverness of avarice is but the cunning of imbecility.—Bulwer.

DOUBLE PERSONALITY.

Three Months an Entirely New Man.

A Wonderful Narrative of Changing Mentality.

I.

Stranger and more wonderful than all fiction is the story of Thomas E. O'Shea.

Healthy, wealthy, popular, genial and strong mentally and physically there are yet three months of his manhood that have absolutely dropped from his mind. He cannot remember an act committed or a word spoken during this time. He cannot recall a day or a night or a gleam of sunlight or a song.

And yet during these three months Mr. O'Shea learned many accomplishments that were again forgotten when his mind resumed its normal sway, says the New York Herald. We read of such cases in fiction and regard them as extremely improbable; we hear of them in medical annals and deem them overdrawn.

Thomas E. O'Shea is a real estate dealer at No. 1 Park row, New York City, and his father is the well known publisher of Catholic books in Barclay street. Since his recovery Mr. O'Shea has married and now has a beautiful home in Ninety-second street.

This story of his strange mishap is related by a friend of Mr. O'Shea, and is true to the letter in all particulars. Mr. O'Shea is now 27 years of age. Before his marriage he lived with his parents in Ninety-second street, and was known among his intimates as a jolly, companionable young man. Being engaged to an estimable young woman, he kept regular hours, and was altogether an exemplary man, when this most unexpected experience occurred.

II.

One night in the early spring of 1893, as Mr. O'Shea was retiring, he noticed an odor of gas in his room. He spoke of it on the following morning, but had apparently forgotten it when he went to bed on the succeeding night.

On the next morning Mr. O'Shea did not appear at the breakfast table. A servant was sent to his room to arouse him. A few moments afterward the family was startled by the servant's screams. Getting no answer to repeated knocks, she had opened the door and had found Mr. O'Shea lying senseless on the bed. The room was full of gas.

Physicians were summoned as quickly as possible, and for hours they labored to restore the unconscious young man to life. They rolled him, massaged him and applied every known remedy for such cases. They had almost given up hope when the patient began to gasp slowly and convulsively. The efforts of the physicians were redoubled, and by evening they announced that Mr. O'Shea would live.

The gas pipe passing through the wall of his room had become honeycombed with rust, which had finally eaten through the metal and allowed the gas to escape. On the morning following the accident the parents of Mr. O'Shea were horrified to find that he could not remember his name or any event of his past life. It was as though he were born anew.

III.

His surroundings were strange to him. He knew neither friends nor relatives. The fact that he could remember nothing did not seem to annoy him. He was a man without a past. Neither did he seem to regard a past as of the least necessity. Being told of his condition he did not marvel, but accepted the statements of his parents calmly as the truth.

They told him that he was their son, and he believed them. They told him that his name was Thomas E. O'Shea, and he accepted it without a murmur, simply because no other name was in his mind. He could not remember his sweetheart when she was brought before him, but he showed his good taste by promptly falling in love with her again.

As time passed he could remember the yesterdays back to the day of his recovery, but beyond this was an abyss of darkness into which his mind vainly plunged. Objects he knew perfectly by name, but of events connected with them he knew nothing.

"What is this?" his fiancee would ask, holding up a flower.

"That? Why, that's a rose," he would reply. "Well, do you remember bringing me a beautiful bouquet of roses the last time you called?"

"No. I confess that I do not remember ever giving you a flower in my life."

Then would come the vain struggle to pierce the blank darkness with his memory. He would knit his brows and think as hard as ever he could, but there was always the jumping off place beyond which his tortured mind could not pass. His parents tried for days to coach him back to his old mental condition, but in vain.

IV.

Finally, Mr. O'Shea was sent to a private sanitarium. His disposition seemed to have changed with the loss of his memory. He acquired a decided taste for sports. Previous to his misfortune he knew but little of card playing. At the sanitarium he acquired a fondness for whist, which he learned readily. In fact, his mind seemed to be quicker and more apt if anything than formerly. He also learned wood carving merely for pastime, and became extremely proficient at it.

Another accomplishment which he acquired was that of billiard playing. During the time he was at the sanitarium he became so skillful that he was recognized as the champion player of the institution. His health gradually improved until he was almost as strong as before his loss of memory.

He remained in the sanitarium for six weeks, yet, notwithstanding his general improvement, his mind was as blank as on the day following his semi-asphyxiation. He was visited regularly by his parents and fiancee, and he began to regard them with the affection of former years. Yet he was careless and thoughtless in his methods and manner of life, and on the whole did not seem to care whether school kept or not. All he cared for apparently was a few boon companions, with whom he could play billiards or whist. Upon his return home from the sanitarium the change in Mr. O'Shea's disposition became more apparent than ever. Whenever anybody came up and announced himself as a friend he was heartily welcomed by the young man. The conversations that sometimes took place at these meetings were amusing, and even Mr. O'Shea seemed to enjoy them. They were something on the following order:

"Hello, O'Shea; glad to see you. If you've got nothing better to do, come and play a game of billiards."

"I've got nothing better to do, but I'll be hanged if I know you."

"Oh, that's so; I forgot. Well, I'm one of your old chums. By the way, I met Shepard this afternoon. He sent his regards to you. Didn't we have a fine time at the dance given by the Moreys?"

Then Mr. O'Shea would scratch his head for a moment before falling back on his old resort:

"Well, I don't remember you, and I don't know Shepard, and I never heard of the Moreys, but I'll go and play billiards all the same."

V.

When Mr. O'Shea's father would try and induce him to resume his old business in the real estate office, the young man would refuse upon the plea that he knew nothing about the business. Besides, the business was distasteful to him. In the language of one of his friends: "Tom was feeling too good. He was too strong to work."

So the elder O'Shea gave it up and let the young man have his own way. The physicians who had attended him during his misfortune had said that at some future time memory might return as suddenly as it had vanished. It might come slowly or it might come with a shock.

As for Mr. O'Shea, he did not seem to worry much about it. The thing that worried him most was the presentation of bills which he had contracted for flowers and candy and carriages in former times. One or two of these he paid. Finally, however, his father interfered. To everybody who came with a bill he would say: "Just hold that for a while. Tom will be all right shortly and we'll fix it up."

In the meantime the young man's prowess with the cue had become proverbial among his friends, and wood carving had become a passion with him. In fact, his room—the old room in which he had met with his misfortune—was filled with specimens of his handiwork.

VI.

The confidence that Mr. O'Shea, the father, had evinced in the ultimate recovery of his son was well founded. At the same time he had never ceased in his efforts to jog the young man's memory. Mr. O'Shea probably heard more of his past life than he would have remembered unassisted, even if in his normal condition. All these efforts had been without avail. The story of his ultimate recovery is related as follows:

One evening, about three months after his misfortune, Mr. O'Shea came home, after a billiard battle with his cronies, complaining of a headache.

"Maybe it's your memory trying to return," said his father.

"No such luck," replied the young man, as he walked off to his room.

VII.

The next morning he came down to breakfast, as usual, and began to read the morning paper. The family did not notice anything strange in his demeanor. As he rose from the table he looked at his watch and said:

"It's later than I thought. I'll have to rush to get to the office on time."

"Get where?" asked his father.

"To the office," was the reply.

"What are you going to the office for?"

"Why, for business, of course. It can't very well run itself. I'm not feeling any too well, either."

A great hope sprang up in the father's heart. "Say, Tom," he said, "do you remember that real estate deal you made on the Amsterdam avenue property, six months ago?"

"Yes," was the reply, "that was a lucky thing. I got out of it with a good profit. I wish I had more like it."

Then, to the young man's surprise, his father grabbed him and waltzed around the room with him like a maniac. He called the rest of the family, and there was more waltzing and kissing and a general hullabaloo of gratitude.

When it was all over the dazed and breathless young man sat down in a limp fashion and looked at his delirious relatives as though they were maniacs.

"And now," said he, when he finally got his breath again, "may I feebly inquire whence this overweening joyousness?"

"Why, don't you know? What? Why, Tom, you've been ill for months and have just got over it."

"Oh, I have, have I? Well, now, if this was Bloomingdale I would see some excuse in your conduct. Do I look like a sick man? Pooh! I guess not."

Then the elder Mr. O'Shea was stricken with a sudden inspiration. "Say, Tom," said he, "how was the weather when you came in last night?"

"It was snowing hard. By the way—where is my overcoat?"

"You will not need an overcoat to-day. Come here."

He led the young man to the rear window. It was summer and the trees were in full leaf. "That does not look like snow, does it?"

O'Shea passed his hand over his forehead in a puzzled way, and said:

"I can't understand it at all. Where have I been?"

VIII.

Then he sat down, while his father told him the story of his loss of memory. The wonder of it all did not cease with its restoration. The three months that had elapsed since the misfortune occurred were a blank in Mr. O'Shea's mind. Where formerly he was unable to remember beyond the time of his recovery from the accident, it was now impossible for him to remember anything connected with the succeeding three months.

Then the old ordeal of "Don't you remember this, that or the other?" was begun all over again, and Mr. O'Shea was continually and vainly endeavoring to drive his mind through those three months of darkness. He had bought flowers during this time for his fiancee and remembered it not. He had paid court to her during this interval and knew nothing of it.

Who had he been while in this condition? Thomas O'Shea? Here is a morsel for the believers in metempsychosis. Perhaps another soul had crowded into his body, while his own hovered near, not knowing whether to return or fly off into space. No wonder this new soul could not remember the past. And then, who knows but that his own soul, seeing its old tenement walking the earth, came back and, ousting the unlawful occupant, resumed his old sway?

At any rate, Mr. O'Shea worried more over those missing three months than over his entire past, during the time of his aberration. He had recognized a charming young woman as his fiancee during his illness, simply because he had been told that such was the case. He did not remember this recognition, but, of course, he was glad of it.

IX.

When Mr. O'Shea went to his room on the morning of his recovery he was surprised to see a number of pretty wood carvings about the room.

"What are these arrangements?" he inquired of the servant.

"Why, you carved them yourself," she replied; then she showed him the tools with which he had done the work. Here was another thing that required proof. He would not be convinced until the servant's statement had been confirmed by members of the family. Then he sat down and tried to do some carving. He failed utterly. A novice might have done as well. He was chagrined. Wood carving is a clever thing, and he had forgotten it.

The afternoon of his recovery, in walking along Columbus avenue, he met a friend.

"Hello, Tom," said the latter; "come and let's play some billiards."

"I'd like to oblige you, old chap, but I never play billiards," O'Shea replied.

"Never play billiards? Why, only last week you gave me a discount and a beating. If you can't play I'd like to see somebody that can. Come along."

Then it dawned upon the young man that here was another accomplishment acquired during his period of aberration. He wondered if he had forgotten it. The two friends went to a billiard parlor.

"Well, what shall it be—a discount?" asked Mr. O'Shea's friend.

"Oh, anything you like," was the reply; "but I tell you I can't play."

Neither could he. His efforts were those of a man who had never handled a cue. They were laughable in their awkwardness. Then Mr. O'Shea told of his experience in the wood carving line, and the game was declared off. Here was another fine accomplishment gone wrong. For a while after this Mr. O'Shea almost suspected to hear somebody accuse him of knowing how to speak Sanskrit or Volapuk.

Of course he did not know how to play whist. His failure in this direction followed naturally in the wake of his wood carving retrogressions. In fact, he began life again just where he had left off almost three months before. All his taste for conviviality and frivolity had vanished. In short, he was once more a steady and exemplary young man, keeping regular hours and without any bad habits to speak of.

X.

A few months after his recovery Mr. O'Shea married. Since then he has attended steadily to his real estate business and has shown no signs whatever of an impaired memory, except in the matter of the three months that have dropped out of his life.

But did they drop out of his life? That is a question for psychologists to answer. If they dropped out of his life, who was the other fellow? Who was the man with the three months' life that knew nothing of the twenty-four preceding years? He was made to believe that he was Thomas E. O'Shea. He was told that a charming young woman was his fiancee. He learned to play billiards and whist and to carve wood in intricate patterns.

Then, when the real Thomas O'Shea sprang to life in the same mind, and began business at the old stand, under what corpuscle or convolution of the brain did the other spirit hide? If Mr. O'Shea were again afflicted with aberration would he resume the life he led during his former aberration? Would he know how to play billiards and whist, and would he again understand how to carve wood for his amusement?

Who knows but that a certain kink or twist in an infinitesimal protoplasm of the brain may make a great poet or statesman, and that our identity is arranged according to the manner in which the mind atoms shape themselves.

Be this as it may, Mr. Thomas E. O'Shea is at present a very successful dealer in real estate. All the carriage bills and flower bills have been audited and settled, and he is living a happy and contented life.

It is not worth while to ask whether or not he would have been quite as happy if he were still the "other fellow."

XI.

Readers of The Progressive Thinker will remember an article it contained some weeks ago entitled "A Mental Trinity—Is the Mind of Man Three-fold in Being?" Therein was recounted the experience of Herbert Spencer, a student of Lawrence, Kansas, who, up to the present time is living a life of perfect intelligence but with no memory of his previous existence except such as has transpired since the 6th of last March. The experience of Thomas E. O'Shea would indicate that Herbert Spencer may yet awake some fine morning with a full memory of his previous life up to a certain point—a blank covering that period to the present time.

That article also outlined the cases of Patrick Goggin and Thomas F. Hogan—both young men of excellent reputations; both, like Thomas E. O'Shea, involuntarily inhaled illuminating gas; both, like O'Shea, lost their personalities and became, for a time, raging demons—from which state they recovered to remember nothing of their subnormal, murderous experiences.

Thomas E. O'Shea did not develop into a murderer like Goggin, he did not run a muck like Hogan, he did not become a traveler like Spencer—he became a happy-go-lucky fellow, fond of carving, cards and sports, without business ambitions. He became a gentleman of leisure.

XII.

The New York Herald has asked some very knotty questions in connection with the O'Shea case, the most pertinent of which was: "Who was the man with the three months' life that knew nothing of the twenty-four preceding years?"

Was this inter-conscious ego Thomas E. O'Shea or an obsessing spirit? If an obsessing spirit no motive or mark of obsession for evil purposes is discovered. It was not an obsessing spirit. If a guardian spirit, that fact would have been promptly announced or discovered. A guardian spirit does not "fall in love" and act as this personality did.

Was this personality simply a reflex, or a negative soul, of the positive young business man? Was it a dormant twin-ego waked into active existence by the suppression of the normal O'Shea through the inhaling of illuminating gas?

Was it his astral double—if doubles there be—or was it an entirely new mentality, created by the presence of all the necessary conditions coexistent with intelligence?

If the latter—soul is the result of atomic construction; if the former—man has a varied personality.

WILLIS F. WHITEHEAD.

THE TERRIBLE PROPHYCIES—WILL THEY PROVE TRUE?

To the Editor:—In No. 369 of The Progressive Thinker, I see you have published two of my prophecies. Permit me to give a correction: The special prophecy referring to Rome was given in 1889, and should so have appeared at the head of the prophecy. My second or general prophecy, please correct where it says: "In the year 1896, in the twelfth month from the fifth to the twelfth thereof," Erase the words "from the fifth to the twelfth thereof." I gave it "the twelfth month thereof."

The earthquake will take place nearer the holidays and will be the greatest that this planet has experienced in 26,000 years. Central America will be destroyed, and the two oceans will be united. A mighty island will be raised in the Pacific adjoining the Sandwich Islands. The Peninsula of California will go down, and the Gulf by that name will be extended inland many miles. The S. P. and A. F. & S. F. R. R. will be cut off. The British Isles will disappear; also Italy and the southern peninsula of Europe; in fact, but little of Europe will be left outside of France and Germany. Asia will suffer in the extreme. All our country lying north and east of the great lakes will be swept by the waters of the Atlantic. New York City will disappear forever, and the tidal waves that shall sweep the Atlantic and Pacific coasts shall be without a parallel.

The Second Dispensation, so to speak, is upon us, and yet neither mortals nor spirits seem to be aware of the fact. The knowing are looking for signs, phenomena and wonders. The only sign they shall receive will be the earthquake.

The reign of mammon must come to an end, and Justice must and shall be heard and hold sway. Before you are three weeks older you will realize that some things that I have herein stated are the truth, and the people shall have the truth in the very near future.

The Republic shall be made a true democracy. Here the spirit-world have concentrated their forces, for here they have found the instruments through whom they can accomplish the work they have undertaken. Wickedness must cease, and with it the evil practices of the clergy, politicians and doctor, and the sooner people realize these things and begin the practicing of righteousness the better will it be for them. Spiritualism has been debauched, and she has been made the catspaw in the hand of the monkeys who have been the teachers, instructors and leaders of the people, until forbearance has ceased to be a virtue. Yours most respectfully. G. H. MILLER, M. D.

Mammoth Springs, Arkansas.

OUR TWO BODIES.

Under the above heading, in No. 359 of The Progressive Thinker, H. R. wants proofs filed, if existing, of the possibility of the materializing of a medium's astral body at a distant point.

About thirty years ago Mr. Mumler, the spirit photographer, then residing at 170 West Springfield street, Boston, Mass., gave me a copy—now before me—of a photograph he had just taken of Master Herrod, a trance medium, of North Bridgewater, Mass. Beside the entranced medium stands the medium's double or spirit, and is photographed with his medium. As this picture had a very extensive sale and circulation at the time, H. R. might possibly obtain a copy through the Banner of Light.

Verily, there is very little that is new under the sun. F. VOGL, M. D.

Junction City, Kansas.

If we try to obtain perpetual change, change itself will become monotonous.—Ruskin.

THE GREAT QUESTION.

It Is Philosophically Passed Under Review.

The Question Is: Spiritualism vs. Christianity.

The students of Spiritualism may be of any religious sect or creed; but a Spiritualist cannot be other than a scientist who has facts upon which to base his calculations, and hence his knowledge.

The phenomena of Spiritualism is the effect, and not the cause of the existence of an immortal spirit.

Spiritualism comprehends the natural laws which govern our earthly, as well as our spiritual bodies. To simply believe, or to have a knowledge of the existence of immortal spirits does not constitute a Spiritualist. The Chinese, Hindoos, and American Indians have had such a knowledge for thousands of years; and the barbarians (now called Christians) have believed they might have a spirit, for nearly nineteen centuries.

Spiritualism is founded upon facts and is not therefore a belief or a theory. To admit that a Baptist, Methodist, Catholic, or any other believer in Christianity can be a Spiritualist is a direct contradiction of the fundamental principles which underlie the foundation of Spiritualism.

Spiritualism is a science, for the laws which cause men to have immortal spirits, as well as life, must be as scientific as the laws which cause mathematics.

The mathematicians are not divided into denominations like the Christians, each with a conflicting mathematical creed; but all professors of mathematics accept the laws of arithmetic and teach them alike, the world over.

Spiritualism is not a religion, for all religions are opposed to science and natural morality; and are, without exception, founded upon theories.

The Christian religion must ever remain a faith without reason, and a theory without fact or foundation.

Christianity has made truth sacrilegious and falsehood sacred. Christianity is opposed to reason, and forbids liberty of conscience and investigation. Spiritualism fosters reason, teaches freedom of thought and invites all men to investigate and learn for themselves its truths.

The Spiritualists do not claim to know all things relative to the immortality of the spirit; but they do claim the intellect to discern the difference between that which is a contradiction in itself, and that which is not.

The Christian religion is founded upon a supposed God; and its Bible is supposed to be the exact word of its God. If one-half of the Christians' Bible be true, the other half cannot be true, for one-half contradicts the other half. It is impossible to believe the Christian Bible, if men are to use their intellect and reason.

The immortality of the spirit is known to the scientist of Spiritualism like all other sciences are known; and that is, though it be lacking in completeness, its scientists will continue to search for the facts which are bound to underlie a discovered phenomenon.

Spiritualism includes the fact, that the spirit of man will always find something more to learn; and comprehends the inexhaustible nature of the sources of knowledge. It cannot become complete for its students must through all time continue to discard the false or unreal, and to acquire a knowledge of the true. The Christian Bible teaches that it is the beginning and ending of all that may be known or understood; and yet its followers do not know one thing regarding that which they believe in it, and teach others to believe they know and comprehend.

The Christian teachers answer all questions regarding their Bible with one answer, and that one answer is: "All things relative to the 'Holy Word of God' are mysteries." To illustrate the Christian's mode of teaching, I will here insert ten of the many questions, all of which are answered by the universal Christian answer—mystery:

1. Why were men inspired to write Scripture centuries before Jesus was born, and are not inspired to write Scripture to-day?
2. Did God create himself?
3. Is God something, if so, is He not material?
4. If God is material, and is an intellectual being, did He create material and intellect?
5. If the material of man's body and his intellect always existed in God, did God create man?
6. If intellect and material are parts of God, did God make these parts of Himself?
7. If the material composing God always existed, did not the endless suns and planets always exist?
8. Is God the universe of matter, or a part of the universe of matter?
9. Has space an end, time a beginning and material and its conditions a creator?
10. Has the universe a top, a bottom or sides, and has it a center?

I have only space for a few remarks upon the above questions, but every student of Spiritualism should answer the above questions intelligently, for the answers to these questions form the basis of Spiritualism.

INSPIRATION.

An idiot cannot be inspired, because idiots are unintelligent; and there is no power that can inspire the mind that is void of intellect. Inspiration, like knowledge, must be received through the intellect, and all intelligent beings are therefore inspired. The value and usefulness of inspiration will ever depend upon the moral character, disposition and intellect of the individual who may be inspired; and not upon the source of that which inspires. No sane man can reason for a moment that the men who wrote the Old Testament were inspired by a God, any more so than the novelist of to-day; and regarding the character of the heroes of the Old Testament, the moral character and intellect of the writers of fiction to-day are superior to those who were supposed to have written Scripture, for they can at least imagine what a godly man should be.

CHRISTIAN MYSTERIES.

The ministers of religion from the time of the first Bible to the present Christian Bible have taught that the immortality of the spirit was a mystery. The whole fabrication of mysteries has been invented by the priesthood for two purposes: First, to please crowned heads who gained power through them; and second, to become the rulers of men themselves.

THE CHRISTIAN'S GOD.

The Christian's Almighty God is believed by them to be an uncreated being, who always existed along with chaos until the creation of man and order, some six thousand years ago; which was the beginning of all things excepting God and matter. But every man who dares to reason knows, if a God and matter always existed, eternity will not admit of a beginning. They believe their Christ God is part woman and part God and that their Almighty God betrayed a virgin. If there was a personal identity or intelligent being who ruled the universe, no doctrine of infamy could be more blasphemous than the Christian's doctrine of the immaculate conception. But mystery is their fount of knowledge and faith the cup from which they drink of its mysterious falsehoods.

THE RULERS OF THE UNIVERSE.

The rulers of the universe are the always-existing forces or conditions, which govern all things animate and inanimate. The principal forces are attraction of gravity, life and intellect. The attraction of gravity rules the planets and suns; life rules unconscious bodies, or trees and plants, and intellect rules men. The forces which govern the universe of worlds cause men to have intellect, but those forces are unintellectual, because they cannot feel, think or comprehend. Outside of the fleshy and consequently the spiritual body of a conscious being there cannot be a feeling being called God. Man is his own god—upon his intellect depends all he may know, comprehend and feel.

The unconscious forces of the universe, which cannot feel, think or reason, are the first part of a living being. Intelligence never made or caused one thing to exist, but simply comprehends the things which have always existed. The always-existing and uncreated forces, unlike the forces arranged by men, are perpetual forces, which need no mightier power than their own to do their work in order and harmony.

ALWAYS-EXISTING NATURE.

Man is part of the unmade universe, and everything in the universe points to the fact, that all things of the universe always existed and that their conditions existed with them. Every sun and planet has an unchanging condition, and the spirit who is the real man has also an unchanging condition, which like the always-shining suns will continue to exist throughout eternity. If man can depend upon his intellect to know anything at all he surely knows that the endless universe, with its unchanging conditions, always existed. The Christian teachers have ignored and suppressed this fact, from the beginning of the Christian era to the present time. But truth will ever be mightier than falsehood, and will triumph over superstition, as man journeys on and learns more of facts and less of theories. I will now return to my subject.

SPIRITUALISM VS. CHRISTIANITY.

The Christian doctrines in reality teach that man has no spirit or life hereafter. They tell us that a God first made man's lifeless body, and then put into it life and intellect. If this was true, when man's body became lifeless again through death, the result would be, that there would not be any more of man existing after he died, than there was of him when his first lifeless body was made—or no man at all. Life and intellect would return to the source from whence they came, and the body would return to the elements of which it was composed.

Spiritualism has proven that everything has an identity, and that all conscious beings have an eternal existence of consciousness.

The Christians have ignored all living beings except man, and they have pronounced upon animals the materialist's dictum that when they die there is no more of them. The Christian believes that animals, like their one earth, one sun, one moon and stars, were all made especially for the benefit of the animal called Christian. When a man admits that animals have no immortal existence, he declares he has none himself. The only apparent difference between man and beast is, that man can comprehend more than a beast and hence has more to reason upon; but when men cease to use their reason they must become lower than a beast.

If lack of comprehension, and hence reason, would doom animals to an eternity of nothingness, then all babes and the majority of large children, together with all idiots, would be forced out of existence. Christianity has never advanced one thought or demonstrated one fact to prove that man has an immortal spirit. The cause is apparent, for the Christian Bible teaches materialism pure and simple, and forbids reason and investigation.

Spiritualism does not depend upon bibles, mediums, raps, or materialized forms for its knowledge of a continued existence. The uncreated heavens filled with the uncreated worlds is its chart and the condition of the endless universe is its book of eternal laws. Spiritualism deals in facts, and investigates phenomena. The so-called phenomena of Spiritualism can be true, and can be false, according to the individual or medium who may witness or cause others to witness a phenomenon. But the facts which point to the proof that we will continue to live throughout eternity cannot be falsified or contradicted by pretended mediums, who are the enemies of truth and humanity.

Science has proven that all things, animate and inanimate, have entities which cannot be destroyed. The tree that has lived and died can never become some other tree no matter how it may change in form or composition, it is bound to remain the kind the tiny kernel sprouted.

The tree is forced to realize as much when changed in death as it did in life. It must continue to be an entity and a form to those who may comprehend and observe its existence. Man no less than a tree must also realize as much after death as he did in life, and is forced to exist in a conscious state to maintain his entity. The spirit of man is composed of many conditions and is therefore itself a condition. Condition cannot exist without matter to act upon and therefore the elements which formed our fleshy body will also furnish us with a spiritual body.

All things are eternal, and that which is the germ of identity in the tree, as well as in man, belongs not to the progenitors of either, but to the always-existing conditions of matter. Men are born, not made; but their conscious and intelligent condition was neither born nor made.

The Christian Bible teaches that man was made by a God. This absurdity alone is sufficient evidence that anyone who believes in, or accepts the principles of the Christian Bible cannot be a Spiritualist. A belief in a creator of man, destroys all reasons for an eternal conscious existence for man. The conscious existence of man, to be eternal must be as old as eternity.

If the absurdity of Christianity was all we had to contend with, we might cease our adverse criticism of its name and our hostile attacks upon its doctrines; but such is not the case. Christianity teaches men to hate each other. It separates nations, races, friends and families. Its history is replete with its crimes and ferocious and inhuman deeds. It causes wars, desolation, sorrow and destruction wherever it goes; and to-day it continues to oppress, degrade and enslave its followers. It seeks to ostracize from society, business, and political office, all who openly oppose it, and openly derides and questions the right of franchise of the Infidel, Atheist, Materialist and Spiritualist. No hate can exceed that which one sect of Christians bears for another, as is exemplified in the hatred Catholic and Protestant Christians bear to each other. A faith without reason must ever be a source of evil and a curse to mankind.

Christianity has thrived and spread through persecution, oppression, torture and murder. It has caused millions of men and women to be tortured, then drawn and quartered, flayed, hanged and burned, that the name of its Christ might be glorified, remembered and retained.

No society, at this time, is better acquainted with the persecutions inflicted by Christians, than the society of Spiritualists. And yet, in the face of these facts (which should cause a human being to shudder with horror at the very name—Christian), some of the societies of Spiritualists have prefixed the name Christian to the names of their temples. Can it be possible that men and women so soon forget the wrongs and sufferings of others?

Truth and humanity demand of the Spiritualists that they should condemn the monster that has soaked every Christian country in the blood of martyrs.

Why permit the name Christian to be associated with the truths of Spiritualism? Why should we cling to the name of a religion that teaches that four-fifths of mankind have been going to hell for nineteen centuries, and has cursed the other fifth itself? The Infidel has long ago established beyond a doubt, the falsity of the Christian doctrines, and it now remains for the Spiritualists to spread the truth, and teach the science of eternal life.

Every scientist is forced to be an atheist or Infidel; and no Spiritualist will dare to deride that portion of mankind who think and reason for themselves. If his materialistic brothers do not realize that spirit-life is eternal, it is not the pleasure or in the power of the Spiritualist to curse the ignorant or to damn the heretic; for beneath the science of Spiritualism lies the fact that each being is complete and sufficient unto itself. Spiritualism is anti-Christian in the full sense of the term, because truth can never harmonize with lies, and reason with a faith without a fact to substantiate it.

Every man and woman who desires to work for the good of humanity should brand the Christian religion as a fraud and libel on the sanity of mankind.

Spiritualism, unlike Christianity, does not have to be boxed up like the priest and Bible to be sent to India, China, Turkey, or any other place; for a spirit belongs to every living creature, and Spiritualism is the common property of all, whether they be aware of it or not. Christianity is like a tree. Its trunk is the Pope, its branches his hierarchy, its roots the many Christian sects; and many of the so-called Spiritualists are its tiny roots who suck the vitality from the laws of nature and sustain the larger roots which end at the vatican. To destroy this tree, we must begin to dig at the tiny roots which feed and sustain the trunk.

The civilized condition of a nation will always depend upon the education and scientific attainments of its people, and not upon their art and religion.

Art and music subdue the will, but never convince the mind. Science convinces the mind, and invention has brought men into a closer communion of minds and caused a greater union and fellowship among mankind. Christianity has always opposed science and invention; and has always been a load to be pulled along, by science and invention, and hence civilization.

Spiritualism does not claim to have found a remedy that will wash away men's crimes; and it does not propose to fit liars, thieves, and murderers for heaven. But it does propose to prevent crime by not permitting it to come into existence; and claims that truth will lift men to a higher plane of life, and cause them to practice morality and to strive to be just and humane to every living creature. W. F. WILD.

Baltimore, Md.

THE CAUSE AT SEATTLE, WASH.

To the Editor:—Your valuable paper has been a source of both pleasure and profit to the writer for several years, and we look for it each week as for the coming of an absent friend. We seldom see any correspondence from Seattle, however, and I wish to say a few words about the spiritual cause in this city and vicinity.

There are a great many Spiritualists here and there are three meetings held every Sunday evening; one is under the supervision of Mrs. S. J. Lenout, an inspirational speaker. The First Spiritual Society has been in existence for about two years. It usually has fair audiences.

The Fremont Society holds meetings in the suburb of that name; the attendance is small.

A few weeks ago "The Seattle Spiritual League" was formed, of which the writer is secretary. The management is in the hands of people who are not public mediums, but are earnest investigators of the spiritual philosophy, with a desire to obtain and disseminate the truth, pure and simple as we see it, and we think that by being true to ourand to mankind, we can rely upon the honest assistance of the spirit-world to aid in the work. We have secured the commodious banquet hall in the new Masonic Temple, corner of Pike street and 2nd avenue, where we meet every Sunday at one o'clock for mediums' meeting, and at 7:30 for evening services. We have had fair audiences, and listened to discources from home talent which were most excellent. We hope to have their continued assistance.

As the seats are free we depend upon contributions from the audience to meet expenses. We solicit correspondence from speakers and mediums who may think of coming this way; a visit to our beautiful city might be pleasant as well as profitable. Any inquiries about "The Seattle Spiritual League" or matters in the spiritual field in this city, will receive prompt attention by addressing the president, Mr. H. B. Carter, or Wm. Scourfield, secretary, address either at 49 Maitland Block, Seattle, Wash.

The footprint of the savage in the sand is sufficient to prove the presence of man to the atheist who will not recognize God, though his hand is impressed on the entire universe.—Hugh Miller.

The press was not granted by monarchs; it was not gained for us by aristocracies; but it sprang from the people, and, with an immortal instinct, it has always worked for the people.—Disraeli.

A cruel story runs on wheels, and every hand oils the wheels as they run.—George Eliot.

CONSUMPTION

TO THE EDITOR: I have an absolute Cure for CONSUMPTION and all Bronchial, Throat and Lung Troubles, and all conditions of Wasting Away. By its timely use thousands of apparently hopeless cases have been permanently cured.

So proof-positive am I of its power to cure, I will send FREE to anyone afflicted, THREE BOTTLES of my Newly Discovered Remedies, upon receipt of Express and Postoffice address.

Always sincerely yours,

T. A. SLOCUM, M.C., 181 Pearl St., New York.

When writing the Doctor, please mention this paper.

A SPIRITUAL CHURCH.

The Writer Is Confident It Is a Good Thing.

AND TELLS OF THE LONE IN BUFFALO.

In the December 12 issue of The Progressive Thinker Brother J. W. Dennis has some strictures upon the name of "Church." Perhaps I should apologize to him for calling him "brother," as he does not want anything that is churchified. But he is our brother, nevertheless. Bro. Dennis does not want a spiritual church. He is satisfied with a "society," and yet every kind of a thing can have a society, from a young folks' "debating society" to a "scientific society." Gamblers, thieves, drunkards, stage-struck amateurs, politicians, musicians, mechanics and all who organize for some strictly secular purpose have each a "society." Even the belles and beaux have their "society." It is a common word. Invent a better word, Bro. Dennis, to take the place of "church." This word means something more than a mere society. It has been applied to a building, perhaps, more than to the association of individuals worshiping therein. But, no matter what Webster has defined it as meaning—or how it has been applied! This is an era of creation. Why not create a new definition of the word "church," as we do of some other words?

But, from the Greek, we learn that church means "a sympathizing body of believers." We may have added knowledge to faith, but yet we have that highest form of belief, which is founded upon the possibility to demonstrate by fact. Surely, we desire to be a sympathizing body. One of the cardinal ideas of Spiritualism is the love of humanity. We talk of a coming universal brotherhood and sisterhood. How can we achieve it unless we are a sympathizing body?

It is because we are carping critics and sticklers over petty things that we make not more rapid progress. We are debating as to whether Spiritualism is a "religion." Of course it is a system of ethics, deduced from facts, but cannot it also be something more? Can it not satisfy that spiritual instinct and aspiration we call "religion"? Surely it appeals to the highest faculties of the human mind, and satisfies the soul's strong desires, and teaches of immortality, and proves our destiny and life beyond the grave! What "religion" has ever done that much for the uplifting of struggling humanity into higher ideals of God and Nature? Does it not create reverence? Does it not make the human heart feel a spirit of worship? What other attributes can create a Christian? Is it only essential that a Christian church shall be a blind worshiper of the man called Christ? Or can the Christ-spirit be embodied in each person of earth, and thus lift the church from pagan forms of worship, and into the grandeur of sympathizing fellowship in moral attainment, intellectual desire, and soul aspiration? As Spiritualists, we may be able to create new ideals in religion, church and Christianity.

By a Christian, meaning a person imbued with the Christ-spirit, and striving to all that is good, pure and true, who will deplore being called a Christian Spiritualist? Indeed, it will be very difficult for Bro. Dennis to disprove that Primitive Christianity and Modern Spiritualism are not identical.

Then, if so-called Christianity has been dwarfed from the spiritual tree, why not engraft the grand old trunk with a new and vigorous growth, that its utilities and frutiage may be more beneficial to our needs?

We will not have a "church" that can be described by all the obnoxious adjectives Bro. Dennis employs, but we will re-form it into a Temple for the worship of reason, fact and inspiration.

Our church will be the schoolhouse of the soul! It is more than a "society" of carping, fault-finding, destructive iconoclasts; but is a church for harmonious aspiration and endeavor to grow in wisdom, purity and love.

Stay away, Bro. Dennis, if you cannot co-operate upon the high planes of thought and desire. No one should clog or mar the efforts of anyone, or body of persons, who seek to benefit their fellowmen. If the spiritual church will sooner get the people away from a creedal, bigoted, intolerant and unreasoning church, by all means encourage it. Then, and then only, seek for a higher and broader plane of action. We must make progress as humanity can be led. Force does not avail.

I shall continue to urge on Spiritualists to organize as a church. Mrs. Kates and self have organized several such, and they are prosperous and continuous. Many societies we have helped to feeble life have had only a desultory and inharmonious existence. There is more perpetuity and a greater force in a spiritual church than in a spiritual society. Of course, we will be Spiritualists! It is the name we are proud of! And we love it so much we shall never cease to dignify it by every possible means in our power.

Mrs. Kates and self are now serving the "First Spiritualist Church" of Buffalo, N. Y., and they meet in their own edifice, over the door of which is painted boldly: "Spiritual Temple." We find the "conditions" are better than when the "society" met in a dirty upstairs hall. The working members are struggling hard for growth and usefulness. Really, Bro. Dennis, you do damage by your severe criticism. As a good, true and earnest Spiritualist you should help them to achieve the great good their souls are striving for, and in such endeavors are having able spirit help. There are others here and elsewhere who hold back their help and refuse even their presence perforce of such small differences. Let us each and all have a broad spirit, and fraternize upon the broad basis of "the greatest good for the greatest number." Fraternally,

G. W. KATES.

DAMNED ANY WAY.

Robert G. Ingersoll is damned by the church for attempting to crush the Christian's hope of a future existence. Spiritualists are damned by the church for substituting a certainty for that hope. And so we are damned if we do, and we are damned if we don't.

H. Y. SWERINGEN.

THE FOX HOME.

To the Editor:—I see various opinions expressed in The Progressive Thinker, about "The Fox Home." I believe in "living memorials." I would say, build a home for sick or tired mediums; yes, the aged and homeless ones, a place every Spiritualist might like to stay for a few days to rest and recuperate. If rightly conducted, it would pay its own expenses after being built and furnished nicely. Make it a home for the reunion of the spirits of both worlds, a spot to be remembered by all who should visit it; yes, and sacred to every lover of truth and light.

Let it be dedicated as the home of the mothers of Spiritualism.

MRS. CRIT I. CISM.

The game of life looks cheerful when one carries in one's heart the unalienable treasure.—Coleridge.

NOTABLE SEANCE.

A Quartette of Spirit Voices Joins in Song.

A Special Thanksgiving Service.

To the Editor:—On Thanksgiving Day myself and family were invited by Mr. Elijah Wood, proprietor of Wood's Hotel, at this place, to come and take dinner with himself and family. When dinner was ready, there were seated at the table seven Spiritualists that are outspoken and willing at anytime to climb on the housetop and proclaim to the world their sentiments.

The dinner was excellent, but there was a "vacant chair" at the table that we all regretted could not be occupied at that time by a medium that is very near and dear to us. His name is George W. Runyan, who owns and resides on a farm near Anthony P. O., Deleware County, Indiana.

In introducing Mr. Runyan to the readers of The Progressive Thinker, will say I have the best of reasons to consider him an honest man with honest habits, and therefore an honest medium in every respect. His pure and honest intentions as a man and his charitable disposition, and sympathetic nature, attract to him a band of spirits that gives honest results in his work as a medium.

In some respects his phase of mediumship is different from that of other mediums. When giving a private reading or holding a regular seance he is put in a deep hypnotic sleep or trance by the control.

Communications from spirit friends are generally through the trumpet, and are so regulated and restricted by the controls that deception or vulgarity is not permitted. A few hints from the controls generally settles the question with any member of the circle that tries to make any disturbance or is inclined to play wise or smart. Mr. Runyan has been a medium for over fourteen years, but he would not hold seances for mixed circles or strangers until he felt confident that he had been sufficiently developed to stand the severe tests that are usually exacted by skeptics and a certain class of investigators, more especially a certain class of ignorant persons with gross, immoral habits, that pretend to be Spiritualists:

On the 15th of December, 1892, our only son passed to spirit-life in his 20th year of age. This change caused such a deep gloom over our home that we sought consolation in Spiritualism. Since that sad event we have held over one hundred seances in our home. We have had several good mediums at our home, including Mr. Runyan.

Within the past two years Mr Runyan has held seventy-five seances in our home. During this time two hundred and eighty-six spirit friends came to our circles and through the trumpet talked with us or some member of the circle. Our own relatives in spirit-life are included in this number. About fifty of these seances were private, for my own family only. During our private seances we sought for light and information on this greatest of all subjects. We also asked for instructions how to arrange and conduct the circle on our part so as to prepare the way for our friends in spirit-life to come to us. On doing our part in complying with the instructions, given to us, most wonderful phenomena would occur. The communications through the trumpet would be clear and distinct, and the sentiments and style of the language plainly indicated who was talking to us.

At one time our son came to us and in a clear, distinct voice through the trumpet carried on a lively conversation with us for nearly two hours. Such a visit from our dear ones from their home over there is what gives us solid comfort in this earth life.

I now come to a statement of the most remarkable event in all my experience as a Spiritualist. On the 6th of November Mr. Runyan called on us for the purpose of making us a friendly visit and also to hold a few private seances. On Sunday evening, the 8th while my wife was preparing the room for our circle, Mr. Runyan and I adjourned to our parlor for the purpose of having some music on the piano. We left the door open so there was sufficient light from the adjoining room. After I had played a short time on the piano, we heard picking on a banjo that lay on the piano. This was nothing unusual with us, except it was in the light. As we had over an hour to wait until the usual time for our regular seance, I jokingly proposed to Mr. Runyan to hold a private seance with him and me only, and I would be the medium, I requested Mr. Runyan to close the door and sit leaning against the door so no one could open it. This made the room perfectly dark. As I remained at the piano, it was an easy matter to play a few familiar pieces of church music, even in the dark. In a low, soft tone I began to sing and play a familiar Sunday-school song.

On commencing the second verse, to our surprise a female voice clear and distinct joined in with me. Then an alto, tenor and bass voice followed, and all sang the whole verse with me. I then changed to a church hymn, and the same voices sang with me. I have had some experience as an organist and also teacher of church music. I know the singing was correct. I further know that no living beings either in our house or out of it could produce the same results, or deceive me.

Mr. Runyan was not in a trance. He was a witness and heard it all as I have stated. As an answer or expanation to this statement, some will say it was purely imagination on our part, and we were hypnotized. If such was the case, who hypnotized us both at the same time.

There is a class who pretend to be Christians, both selfish and ignorant, that will declare the whole thing was the work of the Devil. If such was the case as a fact and the Devil or Satan or even both came to me and divided their voices into soprano, alto, tenor and bass, all at the same time and joined with me in a quartette in singing "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and such can be demonstrated as a truth, I would certainly be willing to join the good church people in their belief and explanation of the "Trinity." There is another class of church people, honest and intelligent, secretly believing in the philosophy of Spiritualism and really hoping that our friends in spirit-life can and do return to their friends in earth life and join with them in their songs of praise even if they are not heard. There is another class that pretends not to believe in immortality of any form or description whatever, who sneer at Spiritualism and look upon Spiritualists and the church people as weak minded.

I have no time to spare in trying to convince such of the truth of Spiritualism. I would have more patience in seeing them hang on a barbed wire fence, that is claimed to be between some of the churches, until they could show some inclination to reason and come to the "Mercy Seat." Such persons are generally a bad element in a seance. I hope no one will expect Mr. Runyan to divide his voice and sing a quartette if they should attend one of his seances.

In conclusion I will say, after reading the best and most reliable literature on the subject of Spiritualism, and witnessing phenomena, in their grand and impressive effects equaling some of the statements in the Bible; and while my spirit friends come and join with me in singing, "Nearer, My God to Thee;" I must say and admit that I feel and consider myself at the present time on the plains and only in sight of the foothills of the "Spiritual Alps."

Reynolds, Ind. J. A. BATSON.

THE MONEYLESS MAN.

The following anonymous poem which I read about forty years ago, seems to have a more forcible application to the present time, when there are one million seven hundred thousand men out of employment, than it had at that time.

Is there no secret place on the face of the earth,
Where charity dwelleth, where virtue hath birth;
Where bosoms in mercy and kindness will heave,
And the poor and the wretched shall ask and receive?
Is there no place where a knock from the poor
Will bring a kind angel to open the door?
Ah! search this wide world wherever you can,
There is no open door for the moneyless man.
Go look in your hall, where the chandelier's light
Drives off with its splendor the darkness of night;
Where the rich hanging velvet in shadowy fold
Sweeps gracefully down with its trimmings of gold;
And the mirrors of silver take up and renew
In long-lighted vistas the 'wildering view,
Go there in your patches, and find, if you can,
A welcoming smile for the moneyless man.
Go look in you church, with its cloud-reaching spire,
Which gives back to the sun his same look of red fire;
Where the arches and columns are gorgeous within,
And the walls seem as pure as a soul without sin;
Walk down the aisle, see the rich and the great,
In the pomp and the pride of their worldy estate;
Walk down in your patches, and find, if you can,
Who opens a pew to the moneyless man.
Go to the judge, in his dark flowing gown,
With the scales wherein law weigheth equity down,
Where he frowns on the weak, and smiles on the strong,
And punishes right while he justifies wrong;
Where juries their lips on the Bible have laid
To render a verdict they've already made;
Go there in the court-room, and find, if you can,
Any law for the cause of a moneyless man.
Go to the banks, where mammon has told
His hundreds and thousands of silver and gold,
Where safe from the hands of the starving and poor,
Lies pile upon pile of the glittering ore;
Walk up to the counter, ah! there you may stay
'Till your limbs grow old and your hairs turn gray;
And you'll find at the banks, not one of the clan
With money to lend to a moneyless man.
Then go to your hovel, no raven has fed
The wife who has suffered too long for her bread;
Kneel down by her pallet and kiss the death frost
From the lips of the angel your poverty lost;
Then turn in your agony upward to God,
And bless, while it smites you, the chastening rod,
And you'll find at the end of life's little span,
There's a welcome above for the moneyless man.

And yet we are sending millions of dollars away every year for missionary (?) purposes. What a wicked farce!

H. V. S.

TEXAS NOTES.

Various Interesting Items of the Cause in that State.

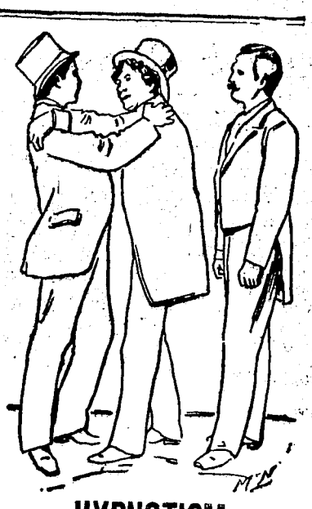
To the Editor:—Dr. E. Hanigan Denslow and wife, of Sturgis, Mich., arrived in our city on November 27. The Doctor comes highly endorsed as a magnetic healer, trance speaker and psychometrist, and his work so far in our city as healer and trance speaker has given general satisfaction, and we trust much good will result from his visit to our State. We hope he will find it to his interest as well as to the cause in Texas, to remain with us during the winter, as the harvest is plenteous, but the laborers are few.

Dr. Denslow and his good wife are enthusiastic Spiritualists, and we welcome them among us, and bespeak for them the love and confidence of our people.

Rev. Allen Franklin Brown, of St. Paul, psychometrist and inspirational speaker, came to us at our camp-meeting at Oak Cliff, and has served our society and Fort Worth, and adjacent towns to include November 30, and his work has been of a high order and has had much to do in harmonizing our forces, and placing our beautiful philosophy on that higher plane where it properly belongs.

Our best wishes go out to worthy speakers and mediums, and our friends in Texas are ever ready to welcome this class.

These two brothers are worthy missionaries of the N. S. A., and we feel sure the National will never have occasion to regret its choice.



Brother Brown goes to San Antonio for December and January.

We are glad to note the organization of a camp-meeting stock company at Fort Worth for 1897, and feel sure it will be a success. Hope others will spring up in South and East Texas—one in each city, and then will begin the Spiritual education of the masses.

J. C. WATKINS.

"Mahomet, His Birth, Character and Doctrin." By Edward Gibbons. This is No. 6 of the Library of Liberal Classics. It is conceded to be historically correct, and so exact and perfect in every detail as to be practically beyond the reach of adverse criticism. Price, 25 cents. For sale at this office.

"Angel Whisperings for the Searcher After Truth." By Hattie J. Ray. A volume of genuine poems, of such fine moral and spiritual tone that all will be pleased and benefited by it. For sale at this office. Price $1

HYPNOTISM;

Its Facts, Theories and Related Phenomena, with Explanatory Anecdotes, Descriptions and Reminiscences.

BY CARL SEXTUS. THE BOOK IS largely a record of the facts and demonstrations which the author has seen, heard of or presented in his own experiments. The history of the various phases of the science is succinctly presented, and the various theories clearly stated. Many of the experiments described occurred in Chicago. The pictorial illustrations add much to the interest and value of the book, which will be found very interesting to the general reader, as well as helpful and instructive to the student. The work is a handsome volume of 300 pages, bound in cloth. Price, $2.00. For sale at the office of THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER.

Researches in Oriental History.

BY G. W. BROWN, M. D.

One Vol. 12mo, 407 Pages, Cloth, $1.50.

GENERAL DIVISION.

1. RESEARCHES IN JEWISH HISTORY.
2. RESEARCHES IN ZOROASTRIANISM.
3. DERIVATION OF CHRISTIANITY.
4. WHENCE OUR ARYAN ANCESTORS?

The whole comprises an earnest but fruitless search for a Historical Jesus.

In this volume the Jews are clearly shown not to have been the holy and favored people they claim to have been. The Messianic idea is traced to the Bactrian Philosopher, 2350 years B. C., and its history is outlined, following the waves of emigration, until it is fully developed into Christianity, with a mythical hero, at Alexandria, in Egypt, soon after the commencement of the Christian era.

The book demonstrates that Christianity and its central hero are mythical; that the whole system is based on fraud, falsehood, forgery, fear and force; and that its rites, ceremonials, dogmas and superstitions are but survivals of so-called paganism. It shows vast research among the records of the past; its facts are mostly gleaned from Christian authority; and no person can read it without instruction and profit, whether he reaches the same conclusions with the author or otherwise. For sale at this office.

THE LYCEUM GUIDE.

For the Home, the Lyceum and Societies.

A Manual of Physical, Intellectual and Spiritual Culture.

COMPILED BY EMMA ROOD TUTTLE.

A COLLECTION OF MUSIC AND Songs, Golden Chain Recitations, Memory Gems, Choral Responses, Funeral Services, Programs for sessions, Parliamentary Rules, Instructions for Organizing and conducting Lyceums, Instructions for Physical Culture, Calisthenics and Marching; Banners, Standards, the Band of Mercy, etc.; a book by the aid of which a Progressive Lyceum, a Spiritual or Liberal Society may be organized and conducted without other assistance. It supplies the wants of Spiritual Societies for fresh Spiritual songs, with music free from the dismal tone of the old hymnology. It furnishes a unique selection of choice readings and responses such as no other selection contains. It gives a practical system of graceful calisthenics, every step of which is made plain by engravings. It gives instructions how to make the Ladges and banners and instructs in marching. It shows how to establish a Band of Mercy as auxiliary to the Lyceum, and has all the most beautiful songs which have been gathered up by that movement.

The author and compiler of this Guide is eminently prepared for the task by years of devoted labor in the Lyceum. The book is the result of practical work and tested by the interest awakened in the actual session of the Lyceum.

While intended for the working Lyceum, the guide is admirably adapted to the needs of the family, supplying 76 pages of new spiritual music and words found nowhere else, except in sheet form at many times the cost. The book has been placed at the remarkably low price of 50 cents, sent postpaid.

For Sale by The Progressive Thinker,
40 Loomis St., Chicago.
Also by Hudson Tuttle,
Berlin Heights, Ohio.

THE TEACHINGS OF JESUS

Not Adapted to Modern Civilization, with the True Character of Mary Magdalene. By Geo. W. Brown, M. D. Price, 15 cents.

Out of the Depths Into the Light.

By Samuel Bowles; Mrs. Carrie E. S. Twing, medium. This little book will be read with intense interest by thousands. Price 25 cents.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRITUAL INTERCOURSE.

This work contains an account of the very wonderful spiritual developments at the house of Rev. Dr. Phelps, Stratford, Conn., and similar cases in all parts of the country. This volume is the first from the author directly upon the subject of "Spiritualism," and has stood the test of many years. Cloth, $1.25. Postage 10 cents. For sale at this office.

The Religion of Spiritualism,

Its Phenomena and Philosophy. By Rev. Samuel Watson. This work was written by a modern Savior, a grand and noble man. Price $1.00.

The Science of Spirit Return.

By Charles Dawbarn. Price 10 cents.

THE RIGHTS OF MAN.

By Thomas Paine. Parts I and II, Being an answer to Mr. Burke's attack upon the French Revolution. Post 8vo., 279 pages. Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Ingersoll's Great Address

On Thomas Paine, at the late Paine celebration in New York City. Price, 6 cents; ten copies for 50 cents.

Outside the Gates, and Other Tales

and sketches. By a band of spirit intelligences, through the mediumship of Mary Theresa Shelhamer. An excellent work. Price $1.25.

Views of Our Heavenly Home.

By Andrew Jackson Davis. A highly interesting work. Price 75 cents. Postage 5 cents.

HISTORY OF THE INQUISITION

Just the book for those seeking information concerning that most damnable institution known in history—the Roman Catholic Inquisition. Every American citizen should become acquainted with the facts so succinctly stated in this valuable record. It shows the methods used by the Romish Church to exterminate those who reject its beliefs and claims. For sale at this office. Price 25 cents.

LIFE OF THOMAS PAINE.

By Editor of the National with Preface and Notes by Peter Eckler. Illustrated with views of the old Paine Homestead and Paine Monument, at New Rochelle, also, portraits of Thomas Clio Rickman, Joe Barlow, Mary Wollstonecraft, Madame Roland, Condorcet, Brissot, and the most prominent of Paine's friends in Europe and America. Cloth, 75 cents.

WHITE MAGIC

Taught in "Three Sevens," a book of 271 pages. It is really a very interesting and suggestive work. Price $1.25. For sale at this office.

THE AGE OF REASON.

By Thomas Paine. Being an investigation of True and Fabulous Theology. A new and complete edition, from new plates and new type; 186 pages, post 8vo. Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 10 cents.

STANDING UP FOR JESUS,

Or what the editor of the Freethinker's Magazine thinks of him. Price, 4 cents; twenty-five copies for 50 cents.

SEERS OF THE AGES.

Embracing Spiritualism, past and present. By J. M. Peebles, M. D. An encyclopedia of interesting and instructive facts. Price $2.00.

God in the Constitution.

By Robert G. Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover, with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents; twelve copies for $1.00.

THE SOUL,

Its Nature, Relations and Expression in Human Embodiments. Given through Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, by her Guides. A book that every one who is interested in re-incarnation should read. Price $1.00.

GIVEN IN COLORS.

An Impressive Object Lesson.

"Man has been taught very falsely indeed, Confounded by doctrines and stunted by creed," said a Maine poet a quarter of a century ago. Yes, man has been taught that two places of extreme conditions awaited him beyond the river Styx, while no location is assigned for those who were neither extremely good nor extremely bad; and for the heathen no provision was made whatever. Such are the teachings which men pay their preachers to proclaim to them in the nineteenth century. Accepting such to be the fact, Justice must be blind indeed, and the grand laws of Nature where certain causes bring about certain effects, must be "unconstitutional" where creeds are concerned. Don't this seem rather childish for men to believe who call themselves intelligent? Such were my thoughts while gleaning over ancient and contemporary creeds among intelligent races; and my mental wanderings brought me face to face with the Syria-Egyptian Sphynx, who said: "Wanderer, I have an object lesson in colors to present to you upon your return; but first go forth amongst the heathens and gentiles to prepare your mind for higher truths."

I searched through the lore of older beliefs, where the great minds of old stood out in bold relief—where a Solon personified Wisdom; Lycurgus, Law; Aristides, Dominancy; Alexander, Emperial Designs, and Demosthenes, cool, convincing Oratory; but through it all I found no teachings wherein any were expected to receive more than what they earned, compared with their worth and valor. The sacred oracles and seers, to whom they paid honors, and from whom they received promises, guidance and chastisement, were never known to regard casts inferior to valor, and all free-born were considered equally entitled to present and future rewards according to their deeds. I saw the Brahmin in my wanderings, who respected a true life higher than form, and who said: "That after a true life here, I can enter a life in physical form if I so desire, for my Nirvana is not nihilistic, but progressive; or I can enter the land of the just, where Honesty and Peace reign supreme."

I mentally admonished him not to go to a Christian heaven if he were in search of those blessings.

I went to the hero-worshiping Buddhists, who said: "Our adherents count one-third of the earth's population; and are not the great, the grand, and the good, who were once our leaders, advisors and rulers, at one with the hand that rules this people because they love them? A" how could they be unjust in their judgment, but deal out the manna of happiness to all according to desert, and according to the promises of Buddha? If our souls need another transmigratory course, we will have it. We do not worship that gilded Gautama, nor the dark figure standing beside him in our houses of prayers and obeysance, for they are but the representations of the different tendencies of man while here, tempted by passions and power."

Passing through the land of the astro-theologians on my return, I met a Magi, who upon inquiry said: "The central source of Light gives Life also. We personify its majesty, power and glory in order that individual man can centralize his thoughts; and if we do not honor Life here, we are no better than an animal, and will be treated as such in the celestial hall when our ego leaves here."

The fire-worshipers, who are considered one of the most superstitious of all clans by enlightened nations, may be the most scientific of all Eastern sects. The priest who presided at the alter said: "Fire is the greatest life-giving principle in the universe; it renews and sustains life, and changes the chemical aspect of things, while it destroyes nothing. The electricity, heat and decay caused by many agencies and causes are renewing elements, and not destroyers; they are the actual fires which consumes all physical things, be it in the inhalation of oxygen and exhalation of carbon in the human respiration, or be it in the decayed forest where it either smoulders in decay or through ignition, leaving its heat and ashes to enrich the soil for future fruitage, while absolutely nothing is lost in substance or in weight; therefore we deem it the grandest substance in the physical universe, and an emblem to our followers, for them to purify their own thoughts in order to reside after death with those purified ones who have passed through the fires of earthly adversities."

Endeavoring to retain the lessons my wanderings had taught me, as they might be of benefit to me. I returned to the Asyrian Sphynx, who had watched the desert since the fourth dynasty; and to compare what I had seen with what he had to say. I hastened towards the Egyptian desert, and upon my arrival he said: "Wanderer, now that you have interviewed men of divers creeds, and have meditated upon their codes regarding worship, did you find in the sea of human life any but your Christian friends who expected peace and happiness without earning it? Did you find that even among those who believe in mediators that such mediators warranted to absolve any of them from the effects of their misdeeds? Why, it is legendary lore, ground up with a few known facts, which makes modern theological teachings dangerous to the thoughtless ones of earth to-day. Follow me in thought, and I will reveal to you a new chapter in colors and shades; but first clear your mind of all belief in long strides of progress, for there are none; nor are the heavenly spheres like separate degrees, but all is in one grand chain, from the lowest darkness to the brightest rays of the grand Eterna. First we find the sea of life opaque and dark at the base, and as we ascend we find mellow rays permeating the lesser darkness and the grey hue of hope, though feeble, makes the condition less unbearable. The blue light of actinism, in which struggling souls are regaining hope, meet us at first with tiny rays, while as we ascend, they become more potent. Light around us is yet dim but above us we behold intensifying rays of the warm, red glow as of coming friends, and as we ascend, our hopes are realized. The blue rays of actinism grow brighter, and the warm fraternal rays, as of a mellow red-tinged sun, cheer the soul in its ascent. Gradually passing through spheres of real life, where ministering angels work for the children of earth, we ascend towards the spheres of the wise and great in council, where the glory emanates from everywhere, and where the pure white light from above is blending with the glory found here. As we ascend through spheres of harmony and purity in our upward flight, the pure white rays have a luster as of burnished silver, and the air seems too sacred for mortal to breathe. Above this grand harmony we find that rays of glory surround the pure ones who dwell here, and many things have lost form—naught but its essence appear. The pure white lights surrounding us breathes purity and grandeur, far grander than the solar spectrum possibly could cast its prismatic rays, while inspiration of love and majesty blend in harmony; and whose waves make music through the spheres."

Wholly abstracted in wonder, my mind soared upward in soul prayers, for words could not give utterance, nor could pen describe the power, grandeur and harmony encompassing the thought of an earth-child. The voice again spoke, awakening me from what to me was the grandest of all conceptions of a heaven, and said: We did not descend to the lowest of conditions in our journey, and we have taken but few steps in to the spheres towards the Central Soul of the Universe, but it is sufficient for our present object; which is, first, to show the planes of development; secondly, for you to remember that men in physical or spiritual form have advanced to some place upon this line described, let it be under the sombre obscurity of rayless gloom, in the grey dawning rays of hope, in the blue actinic rays above it, in the mellow red lustre of love and friendship, in the clear light of wisdom, in the white light of purity, or in the pure astral light of harmony; they live in, and belong somewhere upon this line, and neither the chemical change called death, nor the destruction of our whole solar system could change it one iota. Also, there are myriads of spirits groping yet in the dark and sombre spheres, while thousands of your earth-children are far, far above it, and visa versa, I have one more lesson to impart to you, and then I will cease for the present; it is this: The finite mind must have form in order to grasp the occult, hence personifications have mystified man in his search after absolute truth; nevertheless, I will state that there is neither high nor low spheres as far as distance is concerned—they are simply conditions; and when speaking figuratively of the high or low we act but naturally, for in earth-life every thing grand, ennobling and aspiring is deemed elevating, while the crude, immoral and degrading is deemed low and debasing.

C. J. JOHNSON.

Pocatello, Idaho. December 14th, 1896.

A MOOTED SUBJECT.

Songs for the Spiritualists.

To the Editor and readers of The Progressive Thinker:—I have been much interested—as may well be supposed—by those who know me and my life work in the musical field—in the agitation of the question of procuring music and songs that are adapted to the seance room, social assembly and public meetings of Spiritualists.

For forty years I have stood prominently before the world as a song writer and composer. My work has been entirely for Spiritualism.

I have never catered to the sensational element on the one hand, nor to the theological world on the other. My productions have been of the spirit, and in this instance I may be pardoned, perhaps, in saying that Prof. S. B. Brittan ere he passed to the immortal shores called me through the press, the singer of the New Dispensation.

During my long career, I have published hundreds of spiritual songs in sheet music and book form. Such singers as Frank Baxter, Dr. Phillips and Mr. Maxham have sung them and pronounced them good. At present besides the sheet music, two of my books, each containing over fifty songs with music and chorus, all original, not one patterned after the old orthodox style of hymns, Vol. I. and II. of "Echoes From The World of Song" are in the market, and not only on sale at my office, but at the Banner of Light, The Progressive Thinker, and elsewhere.

True, the books sell for $1.00 each. At the enormous expense for getting them up they could not be placed on sale at a less rate, except in orders of half dozen copies or more. Wherever they are used at camps, meetings, circles and at home, they elicit approval.

The music of these songs has all been given to me by inspiring forces from the world of harmony. Such of them as are not of my words, have the melodious words of some of the most famous poets and songsters of our cause and of the land.

In recent issues of your valuable paper, Brothers Barrett Boozer and Bach have spoken very kindly of my work, and I appreciate their generous words.

Now the question is for songs and music adapted to our spiritual needs, and yet, I know, and many know we have them at our command. But says one: "Longley's songs are too expensive, and they are not easy to learn like 'Hold the Fort,' and 'Sweet By and Bye.'" Well if that is the objection to their universal use, why do not the societies purchase and sing Tucker's Melodies. Mr. Tucker went to the expense of publishing books of music and songs that could be easily learned by those who can sing, but who have had no musical training. His melodies are pretty, simple and spiritual; his books sell at a low figure. But Spiritualists ignore them and cry out for something else.

Several of our prominent lights have undertaken to supply the want by getting out new words that would illustrate our philosophy, and setting them to old tunes familiar to all; but these do not seem to fill the bill.

I for one would like to know what is wanted. I would be glad to co-operate with any of our good friends who are alive to this need and demand and anxious to satisfy it, if I knew what is wanted, but the public must understand that music books cannot be printed for nothing, and to get out a satisfactory book with good paper, clear type and presentable binding costs money.

Every author and publisher knows this, and that no man or company of men can or will undertake to print a large edition of music and song books, unless some guarantee is offered that their work will be sustained and received after it is issued from the press.

The agitation of this subject is a timely one and I trust that it will bring forth some result that will be for the best good of all.

C. PAYSON LONGLEY.

517 S. Olive St., Los Angeles, Cal.

"Poems of Progress." By Lizzie Doten. In this volume, this peerless poet of Spiritualism may be read in her varied moods, "from grave to gay, from lively to severe." It is a book to be treasured and richly enjoyed by all who love genuine poetry, and especially by Spiritualists. The volume is tastily printed and bound. Price $1.

"The Philosophy of Spirit, and the Spirit-World." By Hudson Tuttle. A most able and interesting presentation of a most important subject. Every Spiritualist and every inquirer into the proofs and philosophy of Spiritualism should have this excellent book. Cloth, $1. For sale at this office.

"Voltaire's Romances," translated from the French. With numerous illustrations. These lighter works of the brilliant Frenchman, and invincible enemy of the Catholic Church, are worthy of wide reading. Wit, philosophy and romance are combined, with the skill of a master mind. Price $1.50. For sale at this office.

PROGRESSIVE LYCEUMS

Has the Number of Lyceums Decreased?

Criticism of W. H. Bach, by Hudson Tuttle.

From the beginning I have been deeply—I may say zealously—interested in the progressive lyceum. I have always regarded it as the most vital and practical movement of Spiritualism. I have watched its growth from its inception by A. J. Davis to the the present, and for seven years, with Mrs. Tuttle, conducted a lyceum, where we were taught by practical experience the demands made by the work.

I think those acquainted with the movement from the beginning will agree that in 1871 the greatest interest was manifested, and that after that, not only was there a subsidence, but also in Spiritualism. The cause for this decline was, without question—it is a matter of history—the action of the American Spiritual Asssociation in electing Victoria C. Woodhull as president. It was the death of that organization, and cast such a shadow over Spiritualism that it required many years to recover therefrom. The discussion of the social question was brought into the lyceums; parents withdrew their children, and few cared to bear the scorn and obloquy hurled at them as free-lovers, in the most odious sense of that term.

In 1871, Dr. J. M. Peebles and the writer compiled, and the Banner of Light published a "year-book of Spiritualism." We endeavored to give a complete list of State and local societies, lecturers, mediums, and progressive lyceums, and other matters relating to the momentous subject.

The number of lyceums given is seventy-three. Possibly there might have been a few more, but from the carefulness exercised, and extensive knowledge of Dr. Peebles, there could not have been many. In the face of this undeniable statement that at no time did the number of lyceums exceed seventy-five, or with the most liberal allowance, less than one hundred, in The Progressive Thinker, W. H. Bach makes a statement in criticism of my article in regard to President Barrett, "a writer in another spiritual paper, takes him to task on the question of lyceums," claiming that lyceums are increasing instead of diminishing. Well, perhaps they are; but as statistics show that they have "increased" from nearly 1,200 to between thirty and forty in the last twenty years, the statement of Brother Barrett does not suffer much at the hands of his critics. Where Brother Bach gathered his "statistics" would make interesting reading; they labor under the trifling error—not very much to be sure when you are attempting to prove an assertion—of being just sixteen times greater than the correct number.

The lyceum movement has flourished in England, a fact which has been contrasted with its so-called decay in this country. In the Lyceum Banner of January, 1896, there is given a complete list of English lyceums. There are seventy-four in the British Spiritualist Lyceum Union, and thirteen outside, or eighty-seven in all. During the year a few new lyceums have been organized; the number I have not at hand. Even in England, not one-twelfth of the fabulous 1,200 has been reached!

I have no means of ascertaining the number of lyceums now existing, but during the past year, parcels of the Guide, from six to fifty copies, have been ordered by forty-four lyceums, and during the past month three new organizations have entered the field with every prospect of success.

It may be said that this is not a remarkable showing. True, it is nothing to what it should be, but it is a fair beginning. The cause has been delayed by the idea that only by the assistance of an instructor could a lyceum be organized. It is constantly reiterated that there is urgent need of an organizer to go forth organizing lyceums. Such an agent is entirely unnecessary. In any community where there are a few persons desirous of founding a lyceum, all that there is to do, is to procure the Lyceum Guide, and they will find in its pages ample instruction for them to organize and go forward. If they have not sufficient determination and motives to do this, they would not continue for any length of time in a lyceum forced on them by an agent, who would secure a fee, and the price of the charter of the National Spiritual Association. That association may be very well in itself, but local organizations and lyceums should learn that it has nothing to give them, and that all its strength and power: all its spiritual force and its money must come from them, as surely as the root supplies the sap to the tree.

HUDSON TUTTLE.

BEACON LIGHT CHURCH.

The Beacon Light Spiritual Church, 617 North Clark street, Chicago, closes the year of '96 and commences '97 with good prospects ahead, and feels that its mission is to maintain the principles and beautiful truths of spirituality and mental progression.

Notwithstanding a few of our co-workers in different localities still entertain the old-time prejudices against harmony and union, and insist upon sending the discordant wave of prejudiced opinion among the investigators as well as well grounded Spiritualists, by abusing, sometimes, those who are kindly disposed towards the word "Church," it matters but little, it only hurts for a time, and brings to our minds all the more forcibly the necessity of organization, unanimity of action, co-operation and toleration, to carry on our chosen work while the opposing waves of depression nearly overwhelm us.

To those who have the tender feeling towards the old-time social associations surrounding them when in their church, we have true spiritual sympathy, and we ask them to never mind the occasional outbursts of some disappointed and unbalanced mind—if it is hurt for a time; let it go. The better element among those interested in psychical research is willing to take the true spiritual advice from the spirit-world through instruments who do not still cling to the old, selfish, stale idea that we must fight some one. Growling or barking does not win any one to our cause.

The better class of people connected with all phases of religion and philosophy is fast coming to agree that personalities must be left out of the work of any reformer.

The Beacon Light Spiritual Church has the honor of possessing a charter, the first issued by the Illinois State Spiritualists' Association under the new State charter, Constitution and By-Laws.

It is to be hoped that Spiritualists will awaken from their Rip Van Winkle sleep and take a survey of the field and apply at once to the secretaries of their State societies. D. G. Hill, 46 Walnut street is secretary of the Illinois Association.

G. W. PERKINS.

He is a fool who cannot be angry; but he is a wise man who will not.—Old Proverb.

THE CONTRAST

Between Trinitarian Orthodoxy and Unitarian Views.

The Latter Harmonize with Spiritualism.

Recently I read a newspaper account of a minister's meeting held on this coast at which a learned doctor of divinity whose name I cannot now recall, stated that "a little learning inclined one to Unitarianism while riper scholarship and deeper thinking made the investigator a Trinitarian." Now I do not think so. I lay no claim to ripe scholarship and am far from being a learned theologian, but I have read some and thought earnestly about the fundamental doctrines of orthodoxy, and I believe I am endowed with an average amount of common sense, and have some idea of ordinary justice and some conception of logic and the fitness of things.

I accept Unitarianism because it teaches that there is one God, who is spirit, and is the sum total of all things visible and invisible in the universe; that He is infinite in goodness, in power, in wisdom, in love, in justice and in mercy; and that, being the creator, the preserver and the governor of the universe of matter and of mind, and knowing all things from the beginning, He could not consistently with His own nature, commit the blunders and mistakes attributed to him by Trinitarians—errors that culminated in the defeat of his purposes; that created a necessity for Him to die on the cross in an attempt to mend his broken plans.

I cannot accept Trinitarianism or so-called orthodoxy, because its foundation principle is that Satan upset and frustrated God's designs. God meant well, but the Devil succeed in so thoroughly destroying his work, that God himself found it necessary to be born of a virgin, to be tempted of Satan, and to suffer death, in order to prevent a complete failure of his good purposes; and that, notwithstanding all this suffering and great effort to mend matters and to save his own children, the effort has largely failed; for, contrary to his original designs and his present wishes, the Devil still prevents Him from carrying out his plans and so out-maneuvers Him as to maintain a powerful spiritual kingdom in opposition to God's, which antagonistic power is to exist and oppose God to all eternity.

Trinitarianism teaches that Jesus was and is the Infinite God who created all things. Unitarianism says he was a man, but also the son of God, and that we are all sons of God in different degrees of unfoldment.

Trinitarianism presents us with an idea of a Deity short-sighted, disappointed, limited in both knowledge and power, utterly unable to carry out his plans, changeable, regretting that He had made man, malevolent in spirit, wrathful, jealous, delighting in cruelty and torturing His own erring children to all eternity.

We cannot accept the cardinal doctrine of Trinitarianism, that man by having faith in the blood of Jesus can transfer the penalty of wrong doing from his own soul to that of the innocent Christ. Thus the libertine, the thief, the murderer, the wickedest man, may instantly bound from the lowest depths of depravity to the highest courts of heaven; while he who cannot honestly accept such teaching as wise and good, but may yet be a kind neighbor, a loving husband and father, a noble upright citizen abounding in good works, will be sent to endless torment.

this erPu wasff fficand ehhc htu- ougth

I prefer Unitarianism to Trinitarianism because the former teaches that evil is not an eternal principle, but is the result of ignorance, or of moral and mental infirmity, and will some time have an end. Unitarians believe that God is infinitely wise, infinitely powerful and infinitely good. He made no mistake when He placed man on this earth. No Lucifer or other enemy ever has frustrated or ever can frustrate any of His designs. He has never been outgeneraled, nor will He ever be. God is not three but one; He is all and in all, and every human soul is a part of Him.

Never was there a necessity for Him to be born in a manger, of mortal woman, and to "grow in wisdom," and be tempted of Satan, that He might know how to sympathize with man, and be crucified in order to prevent the Devil from defeating his purposes. Not a single soul in the universe can Satan take away from God. The Devil himself, if there be one, could not exist a moment contrary to His will.

So-called evil is in the world for an infinitely wise purpose, and is necessary to carry out God's great designs. Progress is the law of the universe. Suffering is inflicted because of wrong doing, both in this existence and the next, but it is not to gratify God's wrathful or vindicative spirit, as asserted by theologians, but is for reformative and corrective purposes.

Man is not totaly depraved and prone to do evil as the sparks are to fly upwards, because of Adam's sin, as asserted by Trinitarianism; but he is imperfectly developed—is ignorant. The laws of our being are so framed that we develop both mentally and spiritually by varied experiences. If we persistently violate the law of our existence, suffering is sure to come upon us till we seek out and obey the law.

An infinitely wise being could not allow wrong doing to go unpunished nor right doing unrewarded. "As ye sow, so shall ye reap," is a fundamental law of our being. It must hold good in the next existence as well as this. The justice of this law is self-evident. The whole universe is fashioned on the spiral plan. There are no retrograde movements except those planned to do a work which, later on, will again push man further forward.

Many souls are born into the world deformed physically, mentally and morally. Many have an inherited tendency to commit crime. There are moral idiots as well as mental. Theologians fail to perceive justness and wisdom in this order of things, and attribute the ignorance and wrong doing of man to a personal Devil whom they suppose to be nearly if not quite, equal to God in craftiness and power, but the deeper thinker sees wisdom in the plan.

This world is the starting place of the individualized soul. In this vestibule or first stage of existence, deformed men, weak, short-sighted beings just hatched into being, may and will go wrong. They must suffer in this world and the next, but such punishment is not of a vindicative and unending nature; it is provided by infinite wisdom and goodness for man's good—for his unfoldment.

No water baptism, nor Lord's suppers, nor officiating priests—no poems nor ceremonies—can avert suffering for violated law. No shed blood of animals, or men, or gods, can transfer moral guilt nor just penalty from the transgressor to an innocent one. The innocent may and do suffer because of the sins of the guilty; but never is the guilt transferred to the innocent one, nor the righteousness of the good man conferred upon the sinner.

The theology which teaches that men may live like beasts—aye, like demons—and then repent a moment before death and escape all just punishment through the blood of Jesus, and go to the highest courts of heaven, is not only false, but demoralizing, and encourages bad men to go on sinning, making no effort to live a life of morality and usefulness.

I like Unitarianism because it repudiates this teaching that came down to us from the Dark Ages, and insists that no one can win happiness and heaven except by a life of noble motives and honest deeds.

Unitarianism may be less profound in learning than Trinitarianism, but with my present store of knowledge and my present ideas of justice, I shall still continue to believe that, as a man sows, so shall he reap, either here or hereafter; that there is no malignant Devil in this universe powerful enough to thwart God's plans nor strong enough to stay our progress onward and upward if we want to go.

There are no hells for any of us except those of our own making. There are hells in this world and the next, but they are not endless. Infinite, unerring law, governs everything in heaven, earth and hell, from atom to Sun, from the lisping babe to God Himself.

Man is at the bottom of a ladder that reaches from earth to the highest heavens. Here we are ignorant, weak, prattling children in the infant class of God's great school. God is our creator and teacher. We will be pupils through all eternity! There are glories awaiting us, of inconceivable grandeur!

Death is as natural as birth, and lands us on the second rung of the ladder! There will be lessons to learn there, and after we have learned them, we shall go up higher. Some pupils will be obedient and apt students, some stupid and disobedient: Some will be long delayed and will suffer intensely, but all will in due time learn that there is no way to ascend except by honest work, by true living, by noble aspirations and by loving and doing good to all mankind.

Santa Paula, Cal. R. A. DAGUE.

CRIME

And Its Relation to Spiritualism.

As generally used the word crime means an act committed or omitted in violation of a public law, either forbidding or commanding it to be done or not to be done.

Of course, under this definition can be classed, disregarding legal technicalities, anything less than a crime such as misdemeanors, offences against city ordinances, etc. The definition above given, with little variation, is the legal one which is prescribed by Courts and Legislatures throughout the world.

Spiritually speaking, every thought, act or word which is inconsistent with natural law is a wrong done, and no doubt some sort of penance must be done to purge one's self of it whether it be by natural or human law.

As public men, we see much violation of human law, and sometimes one's blood runs cold, as it were, to sit in trial for a person's life or liberty for a crime such as murder: which is first a crime against the law of nature, for we are taught in one of the Commandments "Thou shalt not kill."

A case was tried not long since where a youth of 19 years of deliberate and premeditated malice proceeded in the darkness of the night to assault, and kill a woman; then set fire to the premises and fled. The fact that he fled is sufficient evidence to me that he could distinguish between right and wrong.

What a depraved being! What a sorry spectacle was that youth in court. Oh! religion, teaching and home training, what have you done for that boy? It is evident his education was sadly neglected.

The question arises, does a legal punishment, such as he will receive, adjust matters? I say, nay! For the neglected, depraved, uneducated soul will be flung into eternity and the human law, or law made for society's benefit will be avenged. The old law, of which the books are overloaded, "that an eye must be left for an eye" or a "tooth for a tooth" has been literally expounded and applied.

But the law of nature has not been avenged or satisfied, and so I might go greater into detail as to the various crimes and offences which are daily committed.

Suffice it to say that I agree with the so-called anti-capital punishment fanatics, that the better way to treat or to punish such grave offenders against all law, whether natural or human, is to incarcerate their bodies in penitentiaries, so that by a long confinement, they may grow in wisdom, grow in spiritual unfoldment, and when their time comes which nature has prescribed for them to be released from their earthly bodies, they may have reached a high state of spiritual unfoldment and knowledge.

I hold that courts which have jurisdiction of criminal matters all over our broad land, will not be needed very much longer. Spiritualism, that grand old truth, under whose banner the word "Success" is always written, will sooner or later come to the front with such a vast multitude of adherents that men will no longer go to see mediums and get into their houses through back doors. Then will men boldly and publicly, when opportunity offers, declare that they, too, have investigated Spiritualism, are convinced of its truth and will not only lend their fellow-Spiritualists a helping hand in that manner, but also open their purse strings.

Modern Spiritualism has, beyond the peradventure of a doubt, done more for the uplifting of humanity than any other religion.

Truth crushed to earth will rise again; and this saying, in my experience, has never proven itself to be incorrect.

Give us more mediums, more public speakers, and thereby enlighten the mass of people who need to be spoken to and argued with, before they would even venture into a seance room.

There never was a religion or science which was more prejudged without a thought and condemned, such as Spiritualism has been. Thank God, our ranks are daily increasing and the intelligence of the world is taking a new hold, and when a person once investigates Spiritualism and is honest with himself, there is no retreat; he must accept it as a fact, that spirits can and do return and not cast it aside with a sneer.

Our opponents would have us believe that we simply believe we speak to our spirit friends. No! We do not believe it; we know it to be a fact.

In conclusion, dear helpers, along the lines indicated, push forward, proclaim boldly that you are Spiritualists, and be missionaries of love and truth.

It is an appalling fact that our penitentiaries, our work-houses and our jails are overcrowded. This is not the condition of things as we should find in our country.

Teach the masses, and then the doors of penal institutions will open and guests at such places will then be few and far between.

HENRY F. SCHMIDT, L. L. B.

OUR PARIS LETTER.

Experiments in the Production of Thought Photographs.

An Interview with Dr. Baraduc, of Paris.

In his previous work, "La Force Vitale," Dr. Baraduc showed that man receives and radiates vitality from and to the cosmos; that this vital mediation usually flows into man at his right side as influx or attraction, after circulation in his organism flows out again at his right side as efflux or repulsion; as entailing an evolutive process from below to above within man; from astral to spirit; from passional to intellectual.

The contrary or involutive process of influx to the left side, and efflux from the right, is accompanied by a circulation which entails a coagulating process from above to below; from intellect to generation.

The modifications which occur in the direction of these circulatory vital currents in man, as also in their dynamic tension, were shown by means of a recording instrument called a biometre, to accompany changes in mood and general tone, in the subject.

In pursuing his researches further, Dr. Baraduc found that if the hand is held over a photographic plate, this vital radiation produces an impression thereon. The inflowing attracted current gives wavelike, curving undulations on the plate. In one or two cases a vortex or whirl was imaged. The outflowing radiation produces spots on the plate. The outflow which accompanies the involutive, coagulating circuit of psyche to matter, that is of the man living in the passional plane of life, produces spots merely; while the radiation accompanying the evolutive circuit of aspiration, flowing from below to above, and producing the sublimation of astral life to soul, gives spots which transpierce the sensitized film.

But Dr. Baraduc claims further that this vital radiation may be directed volitionally and made to impress a thought image onto the sensitized plate.

Thought, he says, models and molds this vital exteriorization. As a glass-blower molds his glass, so does energetic thought-purpose mold the form of its body of auric astral light or coagulative substantial vitality radiated from the organism, and impress its image on the plate by its inherent luminosity.

These images, which he has termed psychi-cones, may be projected by direct thought transference through the radiation from the hand; or by approaching the sensitized plate to the head or to the solar plexus.

Dr. Baraduc considers that many, though not all, so-called spirit photographs are thought-images projected from the medium, or through the medium perhaps, from an invisible operator, to the plate; in which process a camera is unnecessary. His friends, Dr. Istrati and Dr. Adam have been more successful in effecting the impression of distinct images projected by thought transference from a distance, than has Dr. Baraduc himself. The former claims to have produced the transference of a portrait image, which resembles some so-called spirit photographs in character.

The thought impressions obtained up to the present, and of which a number are reproduced in his recent work, "The Human Soul, Its Movements and Light," appear to vary more in texture, if one may so say; that is, in the fineness and arrangement of the lines or spots of which they consist, than in their form. Dr. Baraduc is himself able to distinguish forms therein, which a spectator can scarcely trace. The delicacy or grossness of the lines are qualified by the thought, he affirms. The adjunction of an electric current has been found to add to the clearness of the image.

This discovery is, as yet, in its initial stages, and cumulative evidence is to be desired. Considering the number of people now practicing photography, this should not be difficult to obtain. A definite thought might be impressed on successive days by different operators, in order to verify whether the image produced is really governed in form by the thought. The radiation from a medium in her normal state might be contrasted with that impressed under trance. "Controls" might be invited to project thought images to be compared with those obtained by ordinary operators. Dr. Baraduc states that he would be glad to hear at 191 Rue St. Honore, Paris, from any experimenters who have succeeded in impressing distinct thought images.

His experiments with regard to the impressions produced by the vitality radiated from a pigeon, have just been verified by two representatives of one of the Paris illustrated papers. Negatives were held against the heart of a pigeon (the glass in contact with the feathers). The images impressed will be published shortly. They resemble the spots radiated by man's passional vitality.

In his conclusion Dr. Baraduc says: "I have endeavored to show experimentally that we possess a soul, the fluidic double of our body; that the polarization of our vital soul towards coagulation or matter, and of our psychic soul towards sublimation or spirit, is experimentally verifiable. The force pertaining to the soul radiates beyond the body and registers its luminous vibrations in figures, thus demonstrating the spontaneous movement and luminous vibrations of intelligence."

QUÆSTOR VITÆ.

Paris, France.

"Woman, Church and State." By Matilda Joslyn Gage. A royal volume, of more than common intrinsic value. The subject is treated with masterly ability; showing what the church has and has not done for woman. It is full of information on the subject, and should be read by every one. Price $2, postpaid.

Right Living." By Susan H. Wixon The author shows a wise practicality in her method of teaching the principle of ethics. She illustrates her subject with many brief narratives and anecdotes, which render the book more interesting and more easily comprehended. It is especially adapted for use in Children's Lyceum. In the hands of mothers and teachers it may be made very useful. Young and old will be benefited by it Cloth $1 For sale at this office.

"The Fountain of Life, or The Threefold Power of Sex." By Lois Waisbrooker. One of the author's most useful books. It should be read by every man and woman. Price 50c.

"From Night to Morn, or An Appeal to the Baptist Church." By Abby A. Judson. Gives an account of her experience in passing from the old faith of her parents to the light and knowledge of Spiritualism. It is written in a sweet spirit, and is wel adapted to place in the hands of Chrl istian people. Price 15 cents.

"The Occult Forces of Sex." By Lios Waisbrooker. Three pamphlets are embodied in this volume, in which questions of great importance to the race are discus ed from the standpoint of an advanced social reformer. Price 50c.

JUST PUBLISHED!

AUTOMATIC WRITING

[SO-CALLED] WITH OTHER

PSYCHIC EXPERIENCES

—BY—

SARA A. UNDERWOOD,

With Half-tone Portrait and Specimen Pages of the Writing.

Handsomely bound in Cloth.

Price, $1.50. Postage 10c extra.

JESUS AND THE MEDIUMS,

—OR—

CHRIST AND MEDIUMSHIP.

Careful comparison of some of the Spiritualism and Mediumship of the Bible with that of to-day. By MOSES HULL. An invincible argument proving that Jesus was only a medium, subject to all the conditions of modern mediumship. It also shows that all the manifestations throughout the Old and New Testament were under the same conditions that mediums require to-day; and that the coming of Christ is the return of mediumship to the world. 48 pages. Price, 10 cents. For sale at this office.

RELIGION OF THE STARS

By O. H. RICHMOND,

G. M. of the Order of the Magi, Chicago.

BOUND IN CLOTH WITH GOLD side, and containing 320 pages. This splendid book, just issued, contains nineteen full Temple lectures upon occult subjects, together with other articles from various newspapers, relating to the great work. It contains all the old Temple lectures issued in 1892, and three others on the HUMAN SOUL, which are alone worth the price of the book. This wonderful book is unique as an Evangelist of Science and Truth. Price $1.25, postpaid, to any address. For sale at this office.

Real Life in the Spirit-Land.

Given inspirationally by Mrs. Maria M. King. You will not become weary while reading this excellent book. Price 75 cents.

WHAT WOULD FOLLOW

The Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents; twelve copies for $1.00.

The Myth of the Great Deluge.

By James M. McCann. A complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible story of the Deluge. Price 15 cents.

BIBLE OF BIBLES.

By Kersey Graves. It will well pay perusal. Price $1.[illegible]

THE QUARANTINE RAISED.

Or the Twenty Years Battle Against a Worker Ended. By MOSES HULL. Price 10 cents. For sale at this office.

CHRISTIANITY A FICTION.

The astronomical and astrological origins of all religions. A poem by Dr. J. H. Mendenhall. Price 50 cents.

INGERSOLL'S ADDRESS

Before the New York Unitarian Club. The first time in the history of the world that a Christian Association ever invited a noted infidel to lecture before them. The lecture is a grand one, and was received by the Club with continuous applause from beginning to end. The pamphlet contains 12 pages, beautifully printed. Price 6 cents; ten copies, 50 cents.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA.

Identified as the Christian Jesus.

A wonderful communication, explaining how his life and teachings were utilized to formulate Christianity. Price 15 cents. For sale at this office.

THE GODS.

By Col. R. G. Ingersoll. A pamphlet of 40 pages. Worth its weight in gold Price 20 cents.

A VALUABLE WORK.

Researches in Oriental History,

Embracing the Origin of the Jews, the Rise and Development of Zoroastrianism and the Derivation of Christianity; to which is added: Whence Our Aryan Ancestors? By G. W. Brown, M. D. One of the most valuable works ever published. Price $1.50.

AN EXCELLENT WORK.

DEATH AND THE AFTER-LIFE. The "Stellar Key" is the philosophical introduction to the revelations contained in this book. Some idea of this little volume may be gained from the following table of contents: 1—Death and the After Life; 2—Scenes in the Summer-Land; 3—Society in the Summer-Land; 4—Social Centres in the Summer-Land; 5—Winter-Land and Summer Land; 6—Language and Life in Summer-Land; 7—Material Work for Spiritual Workers; 8—Ultimates in the Summer-Land; 9—Voice from James Victor Wilson. This enlarged edition contains more than double the amount of matter in former editions, and is enriched by a beautiful frontispiece, illustrating the "formation of the Spiritual Body." Cloth 75 cents. Postage 5 cents. For sale at this office.

THE HISTORICAL JESUS

And Mythical Christ. By Gerald Massey. 190 pages, 12mo. Price 50 cents.

POEMS FROM THE INNER LIFE

By Lizzie Doten. These poems are as staple as sugar. Price $1.00.

Children's Progressive Lyceum.

A manual, with directions for the organization and management of Sunday schools. By Andrew Jackson Davis. Something indispensable. Price 50 cents.

E. V. WILSON'S BOOK.

The Truths of Spiritualism

E. V. Wilson was one of the pioneers of Spiritualism, and was noted as a speaker and test medium. He did a grand work for the cause, and this book narrates many of his striking experiences during his labors.

Purchasers will find it intensely interesting, and will render kindly service to his widow who was left in straitened circumstances.

The book contains 400 pages, and is sold for $1. Adress MRS. E. V. WILSON, 91 South Locust street, Valparaiso, Ind.

◆◆◆ THE ◆◆◆

World's Sixteen Saviors,

—OR—

CHRISTIANITY BEFORE CHRIST.

BY KERSEY GRAVES.

New and startling revelations in religious history which disclose the Oriental origin of all the doctrines, principles precepts and miracles of the Christian New Testament, and furnishing a key for unlocking many of its sacred mysteries, besides comprising the History of Sixteen Oriental Crucified Gods. This wonderful and exhaustive volume will, we are certain, take high rank as a book of reference in the field which the author has chosen for it. The amount of mental labor necessary to collate and compile the varied information contained in it must have been severe and arduous indeed, and now that it is in such convenient shape, the student of free thought will not willingly allow it to go out of print. But the book is by no means a mere collation of views or statistics; throughout its entire course the author—as will be seen by his title-page and chapter-heads—follows a definite line of research and argument to the close, and his conclusions go, like sure arrows to the mark. Printed on fine white paper, 380 pages. New edition, revised and corrected, with portrait of author.

Price $1.50. Postage 10 cents. For sale at this office.

The Influence of the Zodiac

UPON HUMAN LIFE.

BY ELEANOR KIRK.

This is the only book which states the simple principles of the Zodiac in simple terms, making the entire matter clear to the averge understanding.

This volume indicates the location, characteristics and influence of each sign of the Zodiac, giving the days which each sign governs, and the gems and astral colors associated with each.

The diseases of the body, how to cure them, and the faults of character incidental to the different domains.

The methods of growth for each human being.

The domains from which companions, husbands and wives be selected.

The characteristics of children born in different domains, and the conditions to be observed in their care and education.

The personal ability and talent of the individual with reference to domestic, social and business success.

This work is the result of profound research, and in its preparation the author has been largely assisted by J. C. Street, A. B. N.

Bound in Special Cloth. - - Price, $1.

For Sale at This Office.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW;

Or Self-Justice.

By Lois Waisbrooker. Many have read this book, many have re-read it, and many others out to read it. It should be read by every man and woman in the land. It shows the Tabitiies rampant in society in matters of moral and social import, and the wrongs that flow therefrom to innocent victims of social ostracism. It contains a fine likeness of the author. Fine cloth, 290 pages. Price $1.[illegible]

The Progressive Thinker.

Published every Saturday at 40 Loomis Street

J. R. FRANCIS, Editor and Publisher.

Entered at Chicago Postoffice as second-class matter.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER will be furnished until further notice, at the following terms, invariably in advance:

One year	$1.00
Clubs of ten (a copy to the one getting up the club)	7.50
Thirteen weeks	25 cts
Single copy	5 cts

REMITTANCES.

Remit by Postoffice Money Order, Registered Letter, or draft on Chicago or New York. It costs from 10 to 15 cents to get checks cashed on local banks, so don't send them unless you wish that amount deducted from the amount sent. Direct all letters to J. R. Francis, No. 40 Loomis Street, Chicago, Ill.

CLUBS! IMPORTANT SUGGESTION!

As there are thousands who will at first venture only twenty-five cents for THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER thirteen weeks, we would suggest to those who receive a sample copy, to solicit several others to unite with them, and thus be able to remit from $1 to $10, or even more than the latter sum. A large number of little amounts will make a large sum total, and thus extend the field of our labor and usefulness. The same suggestion will apply in all cases of renewal of subscriptions—solicit others to aid in the good work. You will experience no difficulty whatever in inducing Spiritualists to subscribe for THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER, for not one of them can afford to be without the valuable information imparted therein each week, and at the price of only about two cents per week.

A Bountiful Harvest for 25 Cents.

Do you want a more bountiful harvest than we can give you for 25 cents? Just pause and think for a moment what an intellectual feast that small investment will furnish you. The subscription price of THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER thirteen weeks is only twenty-five cents! For that amount you obtain one hundred and four pages of solid, substantial, soul-elevating and mind-refreshing reading matter, equivalent to a medium-sized book!

TAKE NOTICE!

☞ At expiration of subscription, if not renewed, the paper is discontinued. No bills will be sent for extra numbers.

☞ If you do not receive your paper promptly, write to us, and errors in address will be promptly corrected, and missing numbers supplied gratis.

☞ Whenever you desire the address of your paper changed, always give the address of the place to which it is then sent, or the change cannot be made.

SATURDAY, JAN. 2, 1897.

SOWING THE SEED AND REAPING THE HARVEST.

Rev. Johnson Myers, of Chicago, addressed the Christian Endeavor Societies, in annual session at the State Street Baptist Church of Rockford, Ill., a few evenings ago. The Republic of that city says the address of the Doctor was "remarkable for great earnestness," and then:

"In the course of his remarks he called attention to the prevalence of Sabbath desecration, and laid great stress upon the progress of the power of evil. 'What this generation wants is an old-time revival—a regular tidal wave of salvation.' The speaker thought the church paid too much attention to its sewing circles and the kindergartens and similar enterprises, which are of trifling importance to the saving of human souls. The doctrines of heaven and hell were freely discussed as great truths which are not sufficiently impressed upon the minds of the people. To save a soul is the greatest achievement, and this should be the chief aim and object of the young people's societies."

Hell should be impressed on the minds of the people, thought the divine. This is the seed he would sow. Let us see the harvest, its psychologized victims filling the insane asylums, flooding the penitentiaries and swinging from the gallows! Almost every newspaper we pick up abounds with recitals like the following, all clipped from the press dispatches of the Chicago Chronicle of the 16th ult.:

"Vineland, N. J., Dec. 15.—A crowd of armed men battered down the door of the home of Luigi Jurio, cut through to the cellar and after a struggle captured Antonio Jurio, who had brutally murdered his father. In the cellar with the murderer were his mother and brother, all insane with religious frenzy. The father, Luigi Jurio, incurred the hatred of Antonio by refusing any longer to indulge in boisterous religious services. In insane rage Antonio seized a club, attacked his father and pounded his head into a shapeless mass."

"Logansport, Ind., Dec. 15.—Jerry Cornell, a prominent farmer, became violently insane while attending services at the Twelve Mile Church. The minister had preached to the middle of his discourse, when Cornell arose from his position in the rear of the church and began to exhort at the top of his voice. People shrank from him, and striding to the pulpit from which the preacher had retreated, the maniac mounted the platform and continued his wild ravings. Women and children, in paroxysms of fear, fought frantically to reach the door, and many leaped through windows. During the panic Cornell maintained his position and added to the confusion by demoniacal shouts.

"He is a powerful man, six feet tall, and he dared anyone to molest him. Twenty strong young farmers took lines from their horses and, surrounding the lunatic, made a concerted rush. A terrible struggle in the pulpit ensued, but in the end Cornell was bound hand and foot and brought to Logansport.

"When his captors reached town at midnight the citizens were badly frightened by the blood-curdling yells. A crowd collected at the jail, but Sheriff Adams sent Cornell to the asylum, where he was confined twice before. Religious mania is responsible for his condition. During his first attack he said he could kill his child and bring it to life again. He was preparing to test the matter when overpowered."

"La Grange, Ind., Dec. 15.—Mr. and Mrs. John Krause, living near the little Michigan village of Blissfield, have become strangely insane, their malady having been pronounced incurable by physicians. Mr. and Mrs. Krause became converts to religion. The couple prayed day and night, and Krause neglected his work in his determination to prove his penitence. Their minds became affected, and they became possessed of the hallucination that they must beat their children, and but for the prompt action of the authorities the lives of their offspring would have been sacrificed. Mrs. Krause tears out and eats her hair in quantities, while Krause raves like a madman. Five children, the eldest 10 years of age, remain under close surveillance in the Kalamazoo asylum."

And such is the fruit of the harvest. If these were isolated cases they could be condoned; but similar ones have been common occurrences in every age of Christian history. Indeed, the first insane asylum, as we have shown on more than one occasion, was built for the reception and detention of Christian monks who were over zealous in their service of the Master.

Is it possible that that system of religion which leads its votaries to lunacy and to crime is of Divine origin? Can a God of infinite wisdom desire his creatures to become mental wrecks and bathe their hands in human blood that they may serve him faithfully? We should judge so were we to admit that the average preacher voices the will of Heaven.

"CONSUMMATION OF CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR."

It is understood that the terms of a treaty have been agreed upon between the United States and Great Britain, wherein it is stipulated that for the period of five years all subjects of difference, present or prospective, between the contracting parties, shall be submitted to a Court of Arbitration, consisting of six members, three of whom are to be drawn from the judiciary of each of the powers. Of course the five years' limitation is not designed as the final termination of this method of settling international disputes; but as the project is an experiment, during which it is probable defects in the system will be discovered, it is perhaps well not to make it perpetual at the beginning. There is no doubt all the great powers will enter into similar arrangements for settling their controversies.

How shameful that for nearly sixteen hundred years since the Christian religion became dominant, and has monopolized the civilized nations, every empire, kingdom and principality over which they held sway have been armed and fortified, and have maintained at enormous cost standing armies, for purposes of attack and resistance to the aggressions of other Christian nations! They have babbled about peace, and predicted an age when nations should cease to war with nations; but they did nothing to make such an era practicable. Even when the Pope was supreme, and his bulls were law, carnage and slaughter between feudatories were almost universal; and this the reason of the great castles scattered over all Europe. They were built for defense against the attacks of their Christian neighbors when on pillaging expeditions. Though the lords of those castles worshiped the same Gods, and bowed at the same shrines, yet each coveted his neighbor's goods, so wars, desolation and destruction followed.

Now, it is not the distinctive Christian element that has led in the movement, and made this treaty possible. The church dignitaries have not been at the front, nor even followed in the rear. Like the anti-slavery and temperance agitators, the original movers in the anti-war crusade, both in Europe and in America, were of that class the church has delighted to designate as infidels. The writer, for more than thirty years, has been in correspondence with many of the active workers in this great reform, and he knows whereof he writes.

The arbitration of international disputes constitutes but a moiety of the purpose of these peace missionaries. They propose the virtual disarmament of all the leading nations, reserving only sufficient force to preserve order at home and a navy to prevent piracy on the high seas. Let the good work go on, but note how soon this event will be hailed and heralded to the world as a grand consummation of Christian endeavor.

HOPE IN THE PULPIT.

The pulpit occasionally shows good sense in its treatment of the "Holy Scriptures," quite in contrast with its expressions of a few years ago. Rev. R. A. White, of this city, is reported to have said in his pulpit on the 13th ult.:

"No two theological parties have interpreted the Bible in the same way. It is a great book, to be sure. It abounds in spiritual truth. But it is not all true. One cannot say that because a thing is stated in the Bible it is therefore true. Yet plenty of people have staked the whole structure of religious truth on this insecure basis. The young man who was asked if he really believed the whale swallowed Jonah said, certainly he did, and if the Bible said that Jonah swallowed the whale he would believe it, is an extreme type of a credulity which has made the Bible a fetich and has done much to bring the grand old book into disrepute with thinking people. The Bible has been injured most by its zealous friends."

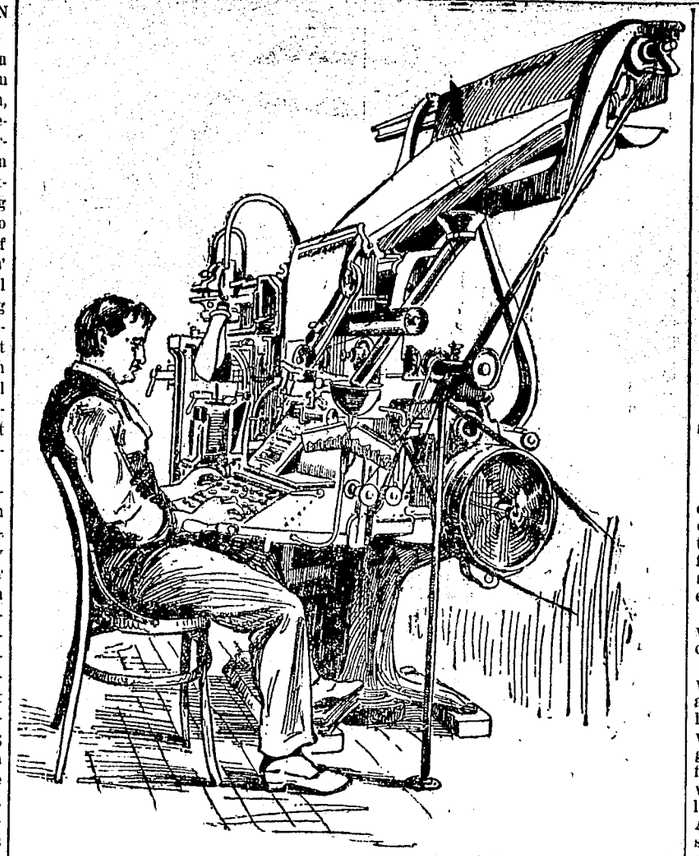
Now there is good, practical common sense. If the clergy and churchmen generally would take that position, and let the book and its statements rest on their merits, instead of antagonizing the book as a whole, war could only be made on its false statements and its crude philosophy. Here is the way it is generally stated:

Bunyan, of Pilgrim's Progress memory: "Every book of it—every chapter of it—every syllable of it—every letter of it—is the direct utterance of the Most High."

Rev. George Cheever: "The Bible does not contain the shadow of a shade of error from Genesis to Revelation."

And here is Rev. Mr. Birks: "Behind the human authors stood the Divine Spirit, controlling, guiding and suggesting every part of their different messages."

These are only a few of the hundreds and the thousands of similar quotations, no less pronounced, which might be made. While the people are being shamefully misled by such false claims it is the duty of the honest journalist to direct attention to the errors and the falsehoods of the book.



THE CHRISTIAN PANACEA.

"It is declared that a Bible Society in the State of Maine has, during the past year, found 955 towns in the State without religious worship, and that half the families visited were found to be without religious influences."—News item.

God in the Constitution is the remedy for such terrible ills! With such an amendment to the organic law of the nation, taxes can be imposed on the people to maintain a priest in every school district. And our public schools will become nurseries of superstition instead of knowledge. The good time coming for the clergy will be here when that amendment is adopted, but Vanderbilt's "the people be damned" will be in vogue at the same time.

TO RESTRICT EMIGRATION.

The Senate has just passed a bill excluding from admission to the United States all persons over sixteen years of age who cannot read and write their native language, else that of some other country. The test is to be made in reading the Constitution of the United States. An amendment was tabled—yeas, 45; nays, 16—excluding from naturalization those who cannot read the ten commandments additional to the Constitution. The bill should become a law. But how ridiculous the proposition of Senator Morgan to make the test of citizenship the reading of the ten commandments. It was clearly a bait for churchmen to nibble at.

THE LINOTYPE MACHINE.

THE LINOTYPE MACHINE.

For several months we have had in active operation in our office a Mergenthaler Linotype machine. This is not paraded before the public as a rented machine, for any impecunious office can hire their work done on one, and then parade a picture of it, slyly trying to convey the idea that it owns the machine. This machine belongs to this office; it cost $3,000, every cent of which has been paid. We take especial pride in it, as it is one of the most complicated machines in existence, yet when rightly managed, moves along with perfect regularity. The Progressive Thinker was the first Spiritualist paper in the world to buy this machine—and pay for it. As usual, it keeps at the head of the procession, and proposes to remain there.

NOW THE CONFUCIAN.

Chicago is a cosmopolitan city. Every nationality is here represented, and here every shade of religious faith is not only freely tolerated, but is openly discussed by its members. Brahmans, Buddhists and Mohammedans have frequently been heard in our public halls, but a few nights ago a representative from the "Flowery Kingdom" addressed a good sized audience in English on Confucianism. The orator, Wong Chin Foo, is the editor of the Chinese News published here. The Chronicle reports his speech:

Wong Chin Foo started out with the declaration that he was an American, that he was acquainted with the civilization of both China and America; that he had been kicked out of the land of his birth and would not be surprised if he were kicked back into China. Wong Chin Foo is the advance agent of Confucianism in Chicago, and it is his purpose to institute a propaganda in this city for the purpose of supplanting the Christian faith. To this end a Chinese temple will be erected in Chicago and Wong Chin Foo will probably be the high priest.

Foo's initiatory lecture last night was rather a critique on American civilization than an exposition of the practical wisdom of Confucius.

"You have taught Christianity for twenty centuries," said the lecturer, "and what has been the result—a race of money grabbers and traders. I admire American genius and thrift, but I deprecate American morals. Your jails are filled with criminals and your courts with divorce cases. Men rob each other in broad daylight on our streets, children knock their parents down and people living in one of the richest countries in the world are committing suicide because they cannot find work. Is it not time to give up the Christian system and try something new, rather something older, for Confucius lived 500 years before Christ? The main object in life with the Christian is to go to heaven. [Applause.] He wants also to go by the shortest route as he has little time to spare and business cares are pressing. The Christian wants to get all the enjoyment he can out of this world, and is then willing to leave the rest to Jesus Christ."

CAN'T SAVE A THIEF ON A CROSS.

The speaker declared that an intelligent conscience was the supreme guide in life and that God was too just and too merciful to leave the great majority of his creatures to the precarious mercy of Christian missionaries. "Every nation has its guide, the Chinese nation has not been without one. Confucius did not claim to have been sent from God; he was merely a philosopher who taught his fellows to live according to the golden rule. A child need not be taught the Christian Bible to distinguish between right and wrong. He knows it is wrong to steal from others, because he knows he does not want others to steal from him. We of the Confucian faith do not believe God sent his son to save men; we believe the Supreme Ruler has given each individual the opportunity and moral insight requisite to self-improvement; we believe the hereafter is a continuation of this life and that men whose characters are evil and perverse in this world will be evil and perverse in the next; we do not believe that a thief on a cross can be saved."

ATTACKS OUR CHARITY.

On the subject of police protection Mr. Foo said there were cities in China containing 250,000 inhabitants in which there was not a policeman. "In Chicago," said he, "there are thousands of them, and yet a man is not safe here in broad daylight."

Nor does American charity fare any better under the critical eye of the Confucian editor, who declared that our alms were so encumbered with red tape that the benefice was of little assistance to the beneficiary. "In China," said the speaker, "each man dispenses his own charity in his own way. We allow a poor, hungry man to eat at our house, but we do not allow him to take anything away. Such cruelty as you perpetrate here is unknown in China. To us the idea of men starving in a country where there is plenty of food is unthinkable, and yet you call China a heathen country."

Wong Chin Foo insisted there was a physical basis for polygamy and that the Supreme Being never intended a man should live with but one wife. The speaker added, however, that no man was permitted to live with two wives in China who was not able to support both of them and who would not recognize both of them in public and private. This, Mr. Foo declared, was not only a just system, but prevented the abuses designated in this country as the social evil.

Wong Chin Foo is an entertaining speaker and is confident that America is ripe for the introduction of Confucianism.

VERILY, WHAT NEXT?

Under the head of "A New Programme," we announced a radical new departure from the general routine of work assumed by the average Spiritualist paper. We do not follow old established usages unless we are thoroughly convinced that they are the best, which is very rarely the case. We established the original dollar Spiritualist paper, and introduced a new era in the line of Spiritualistic journalism. Others have followed after us, but in all candor the only thing in which they have equalled us, is in the price of the paper—one dollar.

We now have three books which we send out at a nominal cost to our subscribers: The two volumes of the Encyclopaedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit-World, and The Next World Interviewed. The three volumes will be sent out to those who remit a year's subscription to The Progressive Thinker. The Encyclopaedia of Death and Life in the Spirit-World, when ordered singly, will be sold at 50 cents per copy. The Next World Interviewed at 35 cts. Those who order the three books at one time will get them as follows:

Vol. I. of the Encyclopaedia	$ .45
Vol. II. of the Encyclopaedia	.45
The Next World Interviewed	.35
Total	$1.25

NO. OF PAGES IN EACH BOOK.

Vol. I. of the Encyclopaedia	400
Vol. II. of the Encyclopaedia	400
The Next World Interviewed	250

Each of these books is neatly and substantially bound in cloth, and printed on fine paper, and as prices go, are well worth one dollar per volume.

Bear in mind that this Library is being formed for the exclusive benefit of our subscribers, and all orders for one or more of these books must be accompanied with a year's subscription to The Progressive Thinker. To all others the price will be one dollar per copy.

Just think of the great good that will be accomplished by this plan which we have outlined. Tell your neighbors about it, and get them to subscribe for The Progressive Thinker.

CHINESE MOTHERS.

"It is curious how little the maternal instinct is developed in the average low-grade Chinese women. It is not at all unusual in China for mothers to turn their girl babies over to hucksters, who hawk them about the streets in a basket, selling them for the price of a spring chicken, perhaps. The babies are bought by mothers of infant sons, who rear them up as their future daughters-in-law."

Who shall say that the germ of a mighty social reform is not concealed in the last sentence of the above-quoted news item? Whence the discord in modern homes, leading to estrangements in families, to lasting feuds, divorces and protracted wretchedness? Does it not come from husbands and wives being reared distant from each other, with different surroundings, coming together in after life ignorant of the other's peculiarities and unwilling to tolerate them? If children were brought in close relation in infancy; were educated and familiarized with the manners and characteristics common to each, each learning to forget and forgive the little faults incidental to humanity, is it not probable they would be better enabled to make the journey of life together to its conclusion, without those heart-rending disruptions common to our Western civilization? Of course the peddling of girl babies would never be tolerated; but could not children before they have learned to reason be placed in contact and taught that their life-lines would run parallel, and that each must learn to make the other happy? These ideas are crude, and only suggestive. Perhaps there are objections not apparent at first glance; but it occurs to us that the subject is worthy of consideration. Possibly with all our traditional repugnance to the customs of the Orient, they have some which may be profitably engrafted on those of the Occident, and is not this one of them?

COOLING OFF.

Josh Billings told it this way:

"I hav known people who were boiling over with religion to cool off in a minnit, when they saw a subskripshun paper for painting the church, or for buying the minister's wife a nu sett ov white krockery ware."

PLANETS AND PEOPLE.

Those who are interested in astrological or occult subjects should subscribe for Planets and People. It has no equal. It is published monthly by F. E. Ormsby, at $2.50 per year, or 25 cents for single copy. Address him at No. 169 Jackson street, Chicago, Ill.

SOLON AND MARY.

A SEQUEL TO "Mary Anne Carew," Wife, Mother, Spirit, Angel.

BY CARLYLE PETERSILEA,

AUTHOR OF "THE DISCOVERED COUNTRY," "MARY ANNE CAREW," "PHILIP CARLISLIE," "OCEANIDES," ETC.

COPYRIGHTED BY CARLYLE PETERSILEA.

CHAPTER II.

PARADISIAN GATES.

SOLON AND MARY VISIT SIR ISAAC NEWTON WITHIN THE HEAVENLY SPHERES.

A short time passed on; we busied ourselves in various ways, beautifying our angelic home, visiting earth, and the loved ones there, visiting our friends and children within the spiritual spheres; but of this we will not now enter into detail.

Our next visit, among the temples of wisdom, was to the one which we had observed, called, "Paradisian Gates."

As we approached this exquisite park, we found that it was enclosed, all around, by a pearly wall some three feet high by one in width. The top of this wall was covered with the finest and greenest of moss, from which sprang fine blue flowers innumerable; so thick were they that they drooped down in lovely sprays against the wall of pearl. At the foot of the wall, all around, sprung up flowers of all kinds, most gorgeous and beautiful to behold. All around the wall, within the enclosure, was a row of trees, perfect in every leaf and limb, from which depended apples of all imaginable kinds, perfectly exquisite in coloring, and they were hanging over the wall so temptingly near that we put forth our hands and plucked a few, eating some of them—and as we ate of the delicious fruit, it seemed that our eyes were opened, that is, the eyes of our understanding, and we were ready to drink in knowledge in a superlative degree.

There were many small gates, but only one main entrance; this was an immense arch of gold, fretted into exquisite symbols of fruit, and depending from the center of the arch was a large, golden apple.

The gate itself was of gold, set with flashing garnets, thousands upon thousands in number.

As we approached this beautiful entrance, the gate opened spontaneously, as it appeared to us, for we had not yet fully solved the power of attraction: we entered. A broad pathway, laid of silver dust, was before us, leading up to a quaint castle whose architecture seemed as old as time itself, yet so beautiful and grand, was it, that it is beyond our power of description.

The park within this enclosure, was a dream of heavenly beauty: spraying fountains, leaping cascades, grand old trees, arches of green foliage, bowers of fragrant vines, statues, great bronze lions, also horses and their riders of the same: such grand, magnificent beauty our eyes had never before beheld, and each figure seemed to tell a story of its own.

This old, old castle was irregular in form, with many wings; some here, some there, disappearing among shrubbery and reappearing at odd and unlooked for places; yet there was a central or main part to the structure, and towering in beauty upon the apex was a magnificent tree, wide spreading, whose branches were bending beneath their load of lucious golden fruit: apples, were they? Yes apples!

We ascended some garnet steps, to a broad terrace of velvety green; the great door of the castle opened and a gentleman descended the three steps of pearl which led to the terrace on which we were standing. He was rather short in stature and of slender habit. His hair was parted in the center of his head, hanging smoothly down on each side of his face to his shoulders, and of snowy whiteness. His head was as round as an apple, the forehead shining like polished marble. His eyes were precisely the color of the bluest of blue summerskies; the nose was straight and delicate with exquisitely cut nostrils; the cheek bones were slightly prominent, just tinged with pink; the lips were full, red and sweet; but for the mouth the face would have appeared almost too severe in its great beauty; not a vestige of beard was visible. He wore a loose robe, the color of a beautiful russet, which shimmered with his every motion. His smile held the sweetness and wisdom of heaven as he approached us with extended hand. The hand was very dainty but firm, and his clasp was quite powerful:

"Welcome! to Paradise Hall, dear friends," he said. "Will you come within? Knowing that you were on your way hither, we spread a banquet for you."

Thereupon he conducted us into a spacious banqueting hall, where was spread a table, and seated at the head, a lady, the very counterpart of himself; small, dainty, sweet and gracious: she bowed and smiled to us. Four others were seated at the table, whom he introduced as his nieces and nephews.

Reader, we suppose you have already surmised the name of the master of Paradise Hall? if not, let us enlighten you: "Sir Isaac Newton!"

A large, silver dish, heaped with golden apples, stood in the center of the table; a little bread, wine and water; this comprised the banquet.

Sir Isaac seated himself oposite his lady, while he motioned us toward two vacant seats at his right hand. Again his magnetic eyes, and smile, rested upon us, drawing our souls to his in wisdom's charm. He took an apple from the dish, raised it, by its stem, between his thumb and finger, in mid-air above the table, let go his hold, and the apple remained stationary, without support.

We gazed at it with much interest.

"Now, observe," he continued, pointing first in one direction, and then another; and, in whatever direction he pointed, the apple slowly, and obediently, followed. At length, when the apple was at a very great distance away, he motioned it to return: it obeyed, and rested on his outstretched palm.

"You see," he observed, "there is a power stronger than that of the attraction of gravitation; and, yet, it is an invisible power, as is, also, the attraction of gravitation; both are invisible powers, that is to say, to man on earth. By watching the fall of an apple, when I was on the earth, I discovered an invisible power, which I named, "The attraction of gravitation." I should have called it, 'Magnetic Attraction.' Since coming to this sphere, I have learned how to govern the magnetic attraction, as you see. This was the one great desire of my last days on earth; the wish being stronger than my hold of the body, it hastened my departure to the spiritual realms; and, even while there, I did not bring about the desired result—no; not until we became an angel," he said, bowing to his wife, "then these 'Paradisian Gates' were opened wide, and I was master of the long desired knowledge."

"When, on earth," he continued, "my ideas of a future life were vague, and indistinct: although, I conformed to the faith of my forefathers: but, I had long secretly thought, that, if there were a future for man, his life must be an invisible power, something like the invisible, secret power, which I had named, 'the attraction of gravitation,' nor, was I very wide of the mark.

"As I left my body, I found myself rising from the earth, instead of falling toward it; and my mind, at once, commenced to work on the much loved problem.

"Ah! by what invisible power was I rising, instead of falling? Certainly, if the attraction of gravitation held my material body to the earth, the same power must be attracting my spirit upward, for I could no more help rising than I could have helped my body falling? Then, certainly—I reasoned—there must be a spiritual earth corresponding with a material earth; for, as I am not in the body, and yet find myself with a spiritual body—as St. Paul truly said—then, I must certainly be gravitating to a world fitted to receive it? This gave me great joy—and I could go on solving the problem of the attraction of gravitation—and, while I was thus thinking, my feet actually touched, and rested, upon spiritual ground; and, of course, my dear Solon, you know all about the spiritual world as well as we do.

"Material things attract material things! Spiritual things attract spiritual things! The magnetic attraction holds the spiritual earths together! The magnetic attraction holds the material earths together! You also know that we have spiritual apples, as the earth has material apples; and, as an apple was the object which first turned my thoughts toward an invisible, but exceedingly potent power, the apple should still continue to serve me: but, the power which had been invisible to me, when on earth, was now visible; for, we all know, that magnetism is the power of attraction, and as pure magnetism is the clothing of the soul, or the spiritual body is composed of magnetism, of course, magnetism was now visible to me, and I found that my mind, or soul, could control magnetism; thus, finding this to be so, I desired to immediately return, that I might see this, heretofore, invisible power, which caused the apple to fall, likewise, held the earth together; and my soul willed, or controlled, my spiritual body back to the earth—and, oh! glorious, rapturous sight! I could now see the power which had attracted the apple to the earth.

"I paused mid-way between the spiritual and material earths, at a point where the great orb of earth was visible, and she appeared a pale amber ball, in form, very much like my favorite apple; it was the animating spirit of the earth which I now saw—a great ball of amber flame, in other words, a great ball of pure magnetism—and this was the secret power of attraction—the power which attracted and held all material atoms together—but, whenever this magnetic flame was liberated from materiality, then was it immediately attracted from the earth to the great magnetic zone, which is called the spiritual. I have always preferred to call it the magnetic world, or world of magnetism devoid of matter. Therefore, my dear Solon, as you well know, this apple, which I now hold on my palm is composed of pure magnetic flame. If once we thoroughly comprehend how to govern the magnetic flame, which is the spirit of all things, then can we make them obey our will; for soul, or will, as the dominating power, and, if strong enough, can accomplish most wonderful things. Those yet in earth life, work in, and with, the material: we, in this life, work in, and with, the spiritual. If those in earth life can build, and furnish houses, in, and with, material substance. We in spirit life can build and furnish houses in and with spiritual substance. All this, you know, my Solon, but all men, on earth, do not. It is high time they should, is it not? If men, and women, could but understand that heaven is illimitable, without beginning or end, and that within it existed all possibilities, they would be getting near a great truth, would they not?

"Man says, 'all things are possible with God,' thereby striking blindly at the truth, without comprehending the fullness of it. Man usually talks about God as though he had seen and measured him—knew all about him;—in fact, somewhat as a child talks about a fairy, telling one, with wide open, interested eyes, just what the fairy does, how it looks, and with what peculiar power it is invested; but, my dear Solon, after being here for all these years, I have discovered nothing higher than soul power! which we may term God power, if we will, or, will power, if we prefer. If I, when in earth life, discovered the power of attraction of gravitation, surely it had always existed previous to my understanding it in part, and if I have made myself acquainted with the higher law of will, or soul power, surely it has existed forever. Man says 'to the end of time,' forgetting that it is endless."

We all, now arose from the table, and went forth: Newton proposed that we visit the earth.

"You will observe," he said, "that we cannot make the slightest effort, or movement, without exerting this will, or soul power: how unreasoning for man to say that souls cannot return to earth after once leaving the material body, when the very act of throwing off the body frees the soul from an immense clog, and yet, the soul, while still dwelling within its prison-house, is able, through will, or soul power, to move the cumbrous weight, and, quite rapidly too, at times. If as much of God, or soul power, resides within us, as we are able to comprehend, what can possibly hinder that God power from moving, or going wherever it wills? Again, when man stands over his dying friends, while their souls are leaving their bodies, and he cannot see their souls, while thus being freed, although he must know those souls are in the room until they pass out from it, if they can thus be in the room without his perceiving them, what hinders them from being present at any other time they choose, without his perceiving them?"

By the time Newton had finished this sentence, we had arrived upon the earth, and all together, we formed quite a band, for some others, in sympathy with us, had joined us.

"Now," said Newton, "we shall be able to witness what God, or concentrated will power, is able to do."

We entered the Senate Chamber, at Washington. We there found a large conclave of souls, invisible to man, yet as real, and more to each other, as men are real to each other.

The question before the house was the signing of the 'Emancipation Proclamation.' Immediately, all invisible souls present, concentrated their united will power, and by this power were able to move and guide the wills of those within the body, in the direction they desired, and yet those within the body thought no power moved them but their own. The Proclamation was signed, and man had no longer power to hold his brother man as a slave, and there was great rejoicing in heaven, another fetter had been loosed, another error trodden under foot, and all the heavens were moved as with one accord, and hosannas were shouted to God—to God did we say? Yes; to God, or soul will power, which is God.

"There!" exclaimed Sir Isaac, "the invisible power has made itself felt to some purpose, and concentrated will power, or force, can accomplish wonderful things!"

Bidding Sir Isaac, and his party, adieu, Mary and I returned to our own beautiful home, in the shining city of angels.

"Solon," said my beautiful Mary, "the prophetic picture, which was shown me when I entered the Educational Hall for Ladies, has, this hour, come to pass. Glory be to God; or, as Sir Isaac truly said, all glory and praise be to Soul Will Power!"

"Then my sweet Mary, your prophetic soul saw this long before it took place?"

"Yes," she answered, "it was shown me, in a picture, impressed upon my soul, by the ladies connected with the Educational Hall.

(To be Continued.)

AT MANCHESTER, VERMONT.

To the Editor:—Our society is holding services of more than usual interest. The attendance is increasing and is greater now than at any time in recent years. This result has been reached through the efforts of an active committee, under the leadership of that veteran in Spiritualism, President David Thayer, ex-president of the New Hampshire Association, aided by the earnest efforts of Mrs. N. E. Burbeck, who conducted the services in September, and Mrs. S. C. Cunningham, who has occupied our platform several times more recently. These ladies in their different lines of work are favorites of a Manchester audience, and are always sure of a warm welcome.

Mrs. Abbie N. Beurcham, of Malden, Mass., was our speaker on the 29th of November. Her address was an able presentation of the claims of Spiritualism, and an eloquent appeal to individual conscience, and showing that the future of our faith will largely depend upon the conduct and character of its adherents.

The one address by Mr. Daniel White of this city caused universal regret that he can be so rarely tempted from the retirement he loves so well. Whether considered as a private consulting medium or as a public lecturer, Mr. White ranks easily first in Northern New England.

Our society is approaching the New Year in very hopeful spirits. We are united and prosperous, and a greater power for good than ever before, and notwithstanding the persecution of our brethren by the hoodlums of Boston, stimulated by a sycophantic press, working for circulation, we believe that people are tiring of merciless creeds and more than ever are turning to the light and hope and cheer of our beautiful faith.

M. F. C.

DUTY OF SPIRITUALIST SOCIETIES

To the Editor:—Can societies of Spiritualists, if wishing to be honest with themselves and the skeptical world, afford to clasp hands with wrong in any degree? This question arises in my mind as the result of hearing during the past few months, so much by way of excuse for the encouragement and support by Spiritualists and Spiritualist societies of mediums, who, in their own lives, show that which is evil.

Our philosophy teaches only the good, and declares that as we sow so shall we reap. Now can a society afford to reap the results coming from the employment (this being a strong recommendation) of a medium, howsoever strong in mediumistic power, whose life is not earnest, honest and temperate?

Can a society's need of funds, which the employment of a certain medium will insure, be the excuse for placing before the public as a teacher, (for are not our mediums, of what-so-ever phase, our teachers?) of our grand philosophy men and women who are not trying to live honest, worthy lives?

Of course charity should be exercised toward all; that is one of the very things Spiritualism teaches most strongly, but shall we let a false idea of charity blind our eys to acts in our teachers which show they are not honest at heart, and are not sincerely trying to show by their lives the result of their teachings?

Justice toward an unsuspecting public, toward all sincere and worthy mediums, and toward ourselves demands that we do not harbor, under the protection of our societies, those mediums who are not trying at least to live right; and the possession of mediumistic power should never be the excuse we give for employing such a person to advance our cause.

Spiritualism will not prosper as it should, while we thus hold any part with dishonesty and lack of integrity.

EVA LYNN CALMERTON.

INSPIRED OR SPIRIT HYMNS.

To the Editor:—Mrs. Van Luvin's idea about inspired or spirit hymns for Spiritualists is all very proper and good, but most of the poetical inspirations we hear are generally about third-class. It seems a common mistake to print them as given when a little touching up by the hand of an expert would be a vast improvement. We seldom read a newspaper poem of any kind we do not think we could improve, and it is our practice to select those which please us and remodel them for our own reading. Two heads are better than one, and so might a dozen accomplish results still nearer perfection. If it takes a commission to revise the Bible, so do most other articles of manufacture go through the hands of specialists, the blocker out (of ideas), the modeller (of form), the finisher (of words), and the polisher (of style). Because a poem already bears a personal signature is no reason why it should not be repolished. The probability is that the writer would not object to the appearance of a French polish over his own signature.

H. RICE.

"Mediumship and Its Development, and How to Mesmerize to Assist Development." By W. H. Bach. Especially useful to learners who seek to know and utilize the laws of mediumship and development, and avoid errors. Price, cloth, 50 cents; paper, 25 cents.

SPIRITUALISM SCIENTIFICALLY DEMONSTRATED.

BY PROF. ROBERT HARE.

HIS REMARKABLE RESEARCHES MADE IN THE EARLY YEARS OF SPIRITUALISM.

Directly Edited and Revised by Him, Now in Spirit-Life.

INTRODUCTORY.

The position taken by Professor Robert Hare, was of deep interest to me, and his unsought coming to me with messages from spirit life, from time to time, have been occasions which I treasure in memory. When he recently came and expressed a desire that his Researches should be prepared for a wider publication than they had ever received, I most willingly consented to do whatever was in my power to further the matter. His great work on "Spiritualism Scientifically Demonstrated," the last edition of which was published in 1855, or more than forty years ago, while the "Rochester Rappings" were a by-word, and the vaguest ideas of spirit were current, has been long out of print and copies rare or impossible to obtain.

That the present will be interested in the work of a past generation; how the new ideas of spirit, which were to completely revolutionize the old methods of thought, were received, there can be no doubt.

The discovery of the law of gravitation did not more completely change the views of physical scientists; the coming of the theory of evolution more completely revolutionize the study of living beings, than the new ideas of spirit swept away the old. Before, spirit was an insolvable enigma. Ghosts stalked in the moonlight of midnight, and houses were haunted. There was not a single word of knowledge from the other side of the grave. With it, and all became clear. There was a continuous evolution, and the supreme reign of law, from which the highest angel found no escape.

In this revision of Professor Hare's Researches there has been no material change. Some unessential passages have been omitted, and transpositions have been made, that the reader might have the full presentation of the subject at once, and not at several different times. The reader will be also interested in the narrative of manifestations gathered from other sources, representing the status of the cause in its early years. These statements have not the value they would have were they surrounded by safeguards, but they are all similar in character, which, by the law of internal evidence, gives a fair warrant of their truthfulness. It may be incidentally mentioned that this unity in the character of the phenomena and the teachings indicates a common and higher source, and could not exist were mediums independent and actuated only by their own impulses.

HUDSON TUTTLE.

PREFATORY—BY PROFESSOR ROBERT HARE.

It is with a peculiar feeling that I again enter the sphere of earth-life and review what I have done in that sphere of existence, almost forty years past. I have been a student these years, and have been well rewarded for the little light I received and dispensed the last years of my mortal life. Those who scoffed at me then I have received into this life, and they have found that seeing has been knowing, and that their materialism was a broken reed, and at the time needed most, failed them altogether.

I am glad to be able to do what I ought to have done at first—publish my researches and facts by themselves, and not mingled with a mass of theological disquisitions. I was, I confess, bewildered by the light of the tremendous revelations made to me. My old beliefs, or want of beliefs, were swept away and like a great flood the new swept me away. Like a pendulum drawn too far on one side, I swung too far on the other, and accepted Spiritualism as an evidence of doctrines I had been obliged to reject but was inclined to because of early educational prejudice.

I desire the more to present these pages at the present time, because the investigators in the same field, which they have, however, renamed "Psychic Science," arrogantly ignore everything previously done, tacitly claiming originality of investigation, and that no one has previously investigated by scientific methods. I wish to show these that in the early years of Spiritualism, before it had become more than a few bewildering manifestations, I had made as careful research as I had ever made in any walk of chemical science, and arrived at favorable conclusions. I might have done better, and been continuously more accurate, but after I had determined the matter I did not demand test conditions to satisfy the incredulous.

My soul throbbed with the light of the new revelation, and standing as I did on the borders of life and death, all the world had little significance compared with the grandeur of the infinite possibilities of the spirit.

ROBT. HARE.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF PROFESSOR ROBERT HARE.

When, in the early days of Spiritualism, Prof. Robert Hare boldly announced that after patient investigation he had arrived at the conclusion that the phenomena were genuine, a great sensation was created among the members of the many scientific associations to which he belonged, and the halting laity, who hoped the new revelation of the future was true, took courage. Living, as we do, at a time when Spiritualism is received by millions as the scientific basis of a future life, we cannot appreciate the heroism required in a scientific man, at that time, to renounce the good will of his fellow members and the opinions he has held life-long, for the scorned and sneered revelations of mediumship.

He had, however, in his scientific researches, stood on the threshold of new realms, and devoted his life to the discovery and heralding of truth, and he was not derelict in this more mysterious field.

The boldness with which he espoused his conclusions, in his advanced age, when like a sheaf of corn, crowned with the golden promise of autumn, ready for the harvester, Death, cast a shadow on his world-renowned name, and it is sad to observe the faint praise and narrow place given his noble life in consequence, by those who previously bowed to his always valuable and original conclusions. He remarks that his real life began with his acquaintance with Spiritualism, for he could not accept the narrow creeds of the churches, nor the miracles as evidence, and was driven to infidelity. The facts of Spiritualism and its philosophy entirely satisfied him as to the existence of man after death. This late-found truth was the joy of his last years, and led him, with a gentle hand,

"Into the land of the Great Departed,
Into the Silent Land."

There is, according to Comte, a regular development of the race through three stages: Theology, metaphysics, and the positive; and every individual passes through these successive stages. The child is naturally a theologian, and if caught in the meshes of a creed, remains such through after life. If allowed normal growth he becomes, in youth, speculative, and, at maturity, a positive thinker.

Prof. Hare reversed this, and if there be a regular order of progress he furnishes a notable exception to the rule. He says: "I am now more than ever a theologian; and my first publications touching that subject date after the attainment of three score and ten."

Robert Hare was born in Philadelphia, January 17, 1781. His father was an Englishman, of gne intellectual powers, and his mother was a member of a noted Philadelphia family. He early evinced an inclination to scientific pursuits, and when only twenty years of age, invented the oxy-hydrogen blowpipe, for which he received the Rumford Medal from the American Academy. In 1806 he received the degree of M. D. from Yale, "honoris causa," and in 1816 from Harvard, in which year he invented his calorimeter, a form of galvanic battery by which intense heat is produced. In 1831 he introduced a new process of sub-aqueous blasting, and subjected it to successful experiments.

In 1818 he was called to the chair of chemistry in William and Mary College and to the same in the University of Pennsylvania, which he filled for twenty-nine years, with distinguished honor when he retired from that university to pursue more uninterruptedly his chemical and editorial studies. His contributions to literature during this long period are almost countless, and cover a wide and diverse field. His "Memoirs on the Blowpipe," which gave him a wide reputation among scientists, had been preceded by a great number of essays on religious and political topics. In 1810 he published "Brief View of the Policy and Resources of the United States," in which was first advanced the theory which has since received great attention, that credit is money. He subsequently made over one hundred publications, mostly on chemistry and electricity, intermingled with political, moral and financial essays.

Among his mechanical inventions may be mentioned the gallows screw and countless modifications in chemical and electrical apparatus. He also originated many new processes in chemical analysis and toxicology. His apparatus he bequeathed to the Smithsonian Institute, in which he had great interest. He was an honorary member of a great number of scientific associations.

In form and features, Professor Hare was the old Roman stamp, a man of unflinching rectitude, with a most powerful physical body, strong and always well trained. He had a large head, with marked development in the regions of perception and reflection. Prominent infidel as he was, and hence conspicuous to criticism, he held an unblemished reputation, and was both revered and loved by all who knew him.

In 1853, Professor Faraday, who was his intimate friend, published a letter in which he attempted to explain rapping and table-tipping as the result of unconscious muscular action on the part of the person with whom the phenomena were associated "and the result of galvanic accumulations which exploded."

Prof. Hare published a letter in which he said: "I entirely concur in the conclusions of that distinguished experimental expounder of nature's riddles." The attention of some prominent Spiritualists having been thus called, they invited him to a circle where he became deeply interested, and determined to test the manifestations in every possible manner, and for this purpose he constructed a great number of expensive and ingenious apparatus.

He saw at the moment the vast consequences involved, and wished to make still stronger test conditions. The circle declared this as an exhibition of an unconquerable skepticism, and a gentleman declared him incapable of conviction. Here the wide difference between ordinary and scientific culture is clearly discernible. This gentleman, from his standpoint, regarded the evidence as overwhelming, while Professor Hare saw in it a single fact, and he wanted a series of still stronger facts to render conviction absolute. A lady said she "should not deem it worth while to sit for him again." A few days afterwards, he, having perfected his apparatus, this lady gave him a seance, with great success.

All scientific men who have honestly investigated Spiritualism have acknowledged its truth, and the more thoughtful and accurate their researches the firmer have been their convictions. Professor Hare was among the first to bring the experience of science to the investigation, and they who have come after have pursued his methods, and added little to the value of his tests. His researches are unique in the annals of Spiritualism, with those of Professor Crookes, who really repeated and extended the same. Facts, surrounded by test conditions, are the only evidence of scientific value. No man was better prepared by scientific training to undertake the task. His experience extended over a long lifetime, and his accuracy and acumen had won him a world-wide fame. If his conclusions are received, as they would be in any other department, it must be admitted that he has fulfilled his promise to give a scientific demonstration.

Accustomed to a courteous hearing and eager attention, he was disappointed by the manner it was received by his compeers. He expected that it would be received with the same candor and interest his other works, in fields, to him less interesting, had been. He says: "Had my conclusions been of an opposite kind, how much fulsome exaggeration had there been founded on my experience as an investigator of science for more than half a century."

The various apparatus employed may be considered as modifications of that first described. The main feature of them all was to so direct the force moving the table as to conceal its manifestations from the circle and medium.

All these instruments were modifications of the dial, the movement of a table being imparted by a cord to an index moving over the alphabet.

The dial planchette, or psychograph, is a condensation of all these contrivances, which are complicated and expensive, and by it the impelling force is imparted to a little revolving table or disc, direct, and this carries the index pointing to the letters.

It was while going over the ground of Professor Hare's experiments that he suggested, in a communication, this improvement or simplification, and the results I obtained were so satisfactory that I had a few manufactured for friends, and the demand became so great that they were placed on sale. It must be, however, held in mind that none of these instruments will give messages as with the certainty of a machine. They require essential conditions, which must be given on this side to enable our spirit friends on the other side to employ them.

The latter instrument conforms to a condition which Professor Hare found to be beneficial, the medium being able to see the index and alphabet, although his devices were nearly all for the purpose of preventing this. If it is thought desirable for the medium not to see the alphabet, a screen can be readily placed between his eyes and the disc.

When tables and objects move without physical contact, and mediums are lifted high in the air, it may be thought unnecessary to resort to any special apparatus to prove the power and identity of the spirit intelligences. It is, however, just as necessary. The objection of hallucination can not be urged against the balance, or rascality deceive with the concealed disc. If Professor Hare had made his index self-registering, so that he could not himself see the communication until finished, every objection would have been removed.

Had his method been rigorously adopted by all investigators, the cause would have been spared the odium and disgrace of a host of frauds and impostures.

The dark circle, unguarded by test conditions, is a hot-bed of trickery, and however startling the phenomena observed, they are useless as evidence.

After almost a half century, we have returned to the method which Professor Hare saw with quick discernment to be necessary, and are preparing to build the science of Spiritualism on a sure basis, by scientific methods. During the last two years of his life he became conscious of mediumistic powers, and his hands were moved by the invisible beings in such a manner as to convey intelligence to him. During the last year and up to the time of his last illness, he was engaged in some very interesting chemical experiments in regard to changes in the metals and their passage from one hermetically sealed glass to another, but death prevented their completion. A few weeks before his death he conceived the idea and set himself to actualizing it, with his usual invincible determination, of bringing together a large group of mediums for the purpose of producing such positive and unmistakable phenomena as not only would startle, but convince the world of the truth of Spiritualism. These and many other great plans he had formed were destined never to be finished by him. His mind remained strong and vigorous, but his body succumbed to the exigencies of old organic forms.

With almost inconceivable prejudice a writer, in the Cyclopedia, made the following statement:

"During the last few years of his life, while most of his faculties retained their original vigor, others, either through the effect of age or long-continued application, appear to have been somewhat weakened."

In what way did this weakening appear? The biographer says: "He was induced to attend one of the exhibitions of what is called a medium; and having received, as he thought, correct replies to questions of which no one knew the answer but himself, he became a believer in spiritual manifestations, and with his characteristic fearlessness in advocating what he considered to be truth, he lectured and published on the subject."

Because he was not afraid to believe and avow what was proved to be true on such a subject, his biographer was biased to say that some of the strong man's faculties appeared to be weakened. We deem it more fair and just to say that "his characteristic fearlessness in advocating what he considered to be truth" was still possessed by him in its full vigor, and that it was this trait which nerved him to push investigation, fearless of consequences, and to proclaim the results openly and boldly. The time will come when his fancied weakness will prove to be his greatest strength—will be seen to have pushed science into a realm where his fellow-scientists were too feeble—morally, at least—to accompany him."

During his last illness he was cheered by the presence of his spirit friends. He retained all his intellectual vigor to the last moment, when his physical body yielded to the approach of age and disease, and his noble spirit was released to go forth into the fields of science and philosophy unfettered by mortal conditions on the 15th of May, 1858.

(To be Continued.)

PRIESTLY ARROGANCE.

Washington, the Capital, has a bishop of the Episcopal church. His name is Satterlee, or, as he is called, the Right Reverend Doctor Satterlee. Being a bishop at the Capital, and his province the surrounding country, he exalts his position as the Pope of the American Episcopal Church, by taking on airs and arraying himself in a manner unheard of in that high stepping church. His robes and vestments and priestly toggery do not satisfy him, and he has invented for himself a coat of arms. He has quartered a shield, with gold, red, white and blue. On the right half he has the coat of arms of George Washington; on the other half the arms of the Protestant Episcopal Church. Above the shield is a mitre and a crown, below is a Latin sentence. He has this coat of arms emblazoned on the regal chariot in which he airs his highness, on the chair in which he sits at church, and on the paper on which he writes. He designs to erect at the Capital one of the most gorgeous cathedrals and keep pace with the magnificence of the Catholics.

If Christ should come to Washington, followed by the outcasts, the tramps and beggars, with the magdalenes of the town surrounding him, what a snubbing he would get from Right Reverend Doctor Satterlee's servants? He would be arrested for "getting on the grass," and lodged in prison.

Almost nineteen centuries since the reform against selfishness, avarice and heartless pride, and the culmination is in the bishops and priests, in magnificent churches, robed in silk, with crowns on their heads, crosses sparkling with diamonds, sumptuously fed, while the people not only hunger and starve for bread, but spiritually starve for the truth, receiving only the husks of dead creeds.

Fifty cents is all we ask for a package of Golden Laxative Coffee. Beautifies your complexion. Golden Laxative Coffee Co., Ayer, Mass. 373

Religion of the Future. By S. Weil. Cloth. $1.25; paper, 50 cents.

SAMUEL P. PUTN

A FEW THOUGHTS

In Reference to Samuel P. Putnam and His Death.

To the Editor:—Observing in your valuable paper the distorted statements of the Chicago Journal about the departure of Samuel P. Putnam, and Miss May Collins, and also noticing that the most of the daily papers, anxious for news, whether true or false, hastened to present the case as cooked up by the fertile imaginations of reporters, I take this opportunity to try, to in part at least, set the matter before your readers as nearly correct as possible. The newspapers working so hard to make a scandal out of the case remind one of the donkey that picked up the courage to kick a lion. The lion was dead. If Mr. Putnam was here in the flesh I think no paper would dare to make some of the charges which have been made.

I became personally acquainted with Mr. Putnam in the seventies, and have never lost sight of him or his work. He was not the man to commit suicide. He was full of life, happy, good natured, jovial almost to a fault.

The last several hours he spent on earth before he accompanied Miss Collins to her room, he spent in my room and the room adjoining me. In fact I carved the meat at the last meal this couple ever ate. Mr. Putnam partook very heartily of roast beef "blood rare," as he called it; Miss Collins ate a hearty supper, but did not taste the meat. Meat was for other people, but not for her to eat, so, she said. Mr. Putnam was what might be called a thoroughly healthy man except that he had lost the sense of smell; this may in part, account for his asphyxiation. He could not smell the escaping gas.

I said I carved the meat. I also passed the food around, but did not eat; I had been to supper. When I refused to partake of the good supper prepared by Miss Louise Minchen, Mr. Putnam took up a bottle of Claret saying, "well, if you won't eat you must drink a toast; this is fine, pure, California Claret." I permitted him to pour out a very little of it and gave him a toast, which did not seem very funny to me, but it made him laugh more heartily than I ever laugh. The toast was:

"Samuel P. Putnam, may every hair of your head turn to a candle to light you through purgatory."

Mr. Putnam had not been out to a meeting, as the papers stated. He had been at our residence, in Stoneham. He and Miss Collins and a young lady from New York, took the 6:15 train to Boston, and I understood that it was their intention to go to the theatre that night. They undoubtedly reached her room not long after seven o'clock. He had not even taken his overcoat off; she had partly changed her wraps, I believe.

There were two gas jets; one for a light and the other for a gas stove. These jets were so close together that one was liable to turn the lower one in turning the upper one. This was done.

Mr. Putnam, being deficient in the sense of smell perhaps never knew what was the matter. Miss Collins evidently discovered the situation, and tried to get to the gas but she was too late; she was overcome and fell on the floor bruising her head. There is evidence that she moved around considerably. Mr. Putnam seems not to have moved until he fell on the floor.

Mr. Washburn, once editor of the Boston Investigator, delivered a fine and very just eulogeum on Mr. Putnam, on the occasion of his funeral. The body was cremated.

I am sorry to record that Mr. Watts and Mr. Foot, of England, refused to accompany the New York friends to the funeral, mainly on the ground that it would compromise them. Such illiberal Liberalism as that will do to accompany some of our unspiritual Spiritualists. I am glad that I have no respectability to lose in paying a farewell tribute to those who have spent their lives in trying to elevate the world out of its superstition and ignorance. The newspapers, under the influence of church power, supposed they had found an opportunity to hit Liberalism a blow, and undertook it; it seemed to me the especial duty for every lover of liberty to be there, and, at least, by their presence try to stamp out any false scandal the enemies of Liberalism might seek to circulate. At the moment when these great Liberals, whom Mr. Putnam had been instrumental in getting to come here to work for liberalism should have placed themselves in the breech they joined forces with the enemy. The more such Liberals as that we have in the country the worse for the cause. This judgment may seem harsh, but it is just.

I was only a little acquainted with Miss Collins. I had often read and heard of her, but I never saw her until a little more than a week before her death. I talked some with her, and I acknowledge she impressed me as an honest, noble, intelligent, modest, sweet Kentucky girl.

I was well acquainted with Mr. Putnam. I have held many meetings with him. While he may not have been what the world calls a saint, he was an honest man; and in my estimation that is better. He hated cant and hypocrisy. He loved his work and did it well. Not six hours before his death he told me his plans for the immediate future.

He was not a Spiritualist, nor was he opposed to Spiritualism. He was what the world calls an Agnostic. He said: "If there is another world, I am glad of it, and shall be there." He attended the Spiritualists' National convention in Washington. There he said to me: "I have really no time to investigate Spiritualism. The church has taken many of the people's liberties from us and will take more unless we fight for them. There is so much to be done here and now, that I have no time to attend to the things of another life until a few more of the wrongs of this life have been righted."

In San Francisco, I held a discussion with Mr. Putnam. We had a very large and greatly delighted audience. In that debate he was, as he was everywhere, a perfect gentleman. In the debate he did not deny Spiritualism. He only claimed that the evidence was not sufficient to prove it to him.

Brother Editor, this letter seems rather long but it seemed my duty to enter my protest against defaming those who can not defend themselves.

Stoneham, Mass. MOSES HULL.

SOME SAD REFLECTIONS.

To the Editor:—I have just returned from the grave where the remains of my one friend and sweet companion was laid to rest last May. As I sat there plucking dead leaves from the geranium vine, with the brightest of all bright skies above me, it was a time for pleasing thought and memories to be in the ascendancy, but such was not altogether the case.

When one has passed through an experience which deprives him, one by one, of all his former friends, and hardship almost unparalleled, made harder by repeated sieges of sickness, running repeated sieges of sickness, running through a course of years, seems to prevent the making of new friends; then it is that the fangs of fate seem fastened into the very vitals of body, soul and spirit, and all our being partakes of the virus in some degree. Even Hope, that bright messenger of promise, flies with languid wing across the threshold, and her messages become few and far between.

Having made up my mind many years ago, that the one abiding consolation when all else failed on earth, should be the purpose to benefit the race of man as best I can, by doing all the good I can, I struggled desperately to key my courage to the proper pitch, about the time that health and friends and all were gone, and my darling angel wife slipping away from me day by day! Of course such an experience knit us all the more closely together, and made us more absolutely indispensable to one another, and the more emphatically this became true, the more dreaded became the inevitable. All these thoughts have passed through my mind many times each day since her second birth has left me so completely alone.

It is my purpose at some future time, to mention a number of events in the unwritten history of her life, particularly incidents of her mediumship which has never been excelled since modern Spiritualism first became known to the world. Her full name is Eliza R. Cotton.

As I sat by her grave, this morning these words came to me, which I placed on the little wooden board which still marks the spot where her body lies:

Your wealth of sweet, unselfish love,
Which found no perfect home on earth,
Triumphant in the second birth,
In dazzling brightness dwells above.
Your blessing with your latest breath,
A radiance shed on all around you,
And from your home where love has crowned you,
Your message comes: "There is no death."

THOMAS H. B. COTTON.
Ventura, Cal.

ABOUT DOLLS.

The National Museum at Washington, D. C., has now practically completed a collection of the dolls of the world.

Dolls in all countries are faithful counterfeits of living human beings.

The little daughter of the hunting Indian will have a boy doll, who is sent off with bow and arrows to get something for the girl doll to eat.

Esquimau girls have dolls carved from the ivory teeth of the walrus.

New Mexican children are taught religion through the medium of dolls—there being no books.

The most elaborately carved dolls are those of the Haida Indians, of the Northwest Coast. These Indians carve whales out of wood. The body of each whale is hollow, and inside of it is a wooden man. The man is Jonah, and the whale is the Scriptural cetacean. It is presumed that the Haidas got the story of Jonah from missionaries. The puzzle is to imagine how the carving was accomplished so as to leave the man inside of the whale without cutting the latter open. Jonah is plainly visible through slits in the sides of the whale.—New York Herald.

"The Molecular Hypothesis of Nature." By Prof. W. M. Lockwood. Prof. Lockwood is recognized as one of the ablest lecturers on the spiritual rostrum. In this little volume he presents an succinct form the substance of his lectures on the Molecular Hypothesis of Nature; and presents his views as demonstrating a scientific basis of Spiritualism. The book is commended to all who love to study and think. For sale at this office. Price 25 cents

HARMONY.

And Its Beneficial Results.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED BY MRS. NORIE LEE CLAMAN, UNDER THR INSPIRATION OF BROTHER JOHN.

There are a great many subjects that we might take up at this time and deliberate upon, but there is one special subject upon which I wish to speak tonight, given in by a dear soul who yet lives in the tabernacle of clay, but who is not present. The subject is "harmony."

"Except a man be born of the spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God." To me this a beautiful subject. To me this has a great bearing.

First of all, in order to become acquainted with the spiritual part of man, let us search well ourselves and find there a solid place and build upon a great foundation, so that as time rolls on the structure built by you of to-day will not crumble to dust. In every age there have been advanced ideas brought forth. There have been schooled theologians; there have been diviner teachers, allow me to say, than the ordinary mind was competent to understand, who have come along, little by little, the great evolutionary plan with you in thought, and brought you to where you stand at the present time.

We go back to the time of Martin Luther. At the time Martin Luther lived here the world was in a disorderly chaos. His work was brought to the front for the betterment of the race, for the education of mankind, and he has left footprints upon the sands of time that will not be wiped out. So with the Jesus of Nazareth. He was born under good conditions on this material plane, and he had a wonderful work to perform. He did not do as human beings of to-day do. He put into practice the principles of harmony for the betterment of the human race. And if the human race upon the material plane is benefited, is helped, what will the condition in the next sphere be? Nature teaches you to-day that all is progression, all is evolution. Nature tells you that everything that moves, that is, is a part of this great divine whole. Nature shows to you the crude condition, and so does it show to you the beautiful, the bright, the lasting. It shows to you all sides of all things, if you only will but seek and pay attention.

Let us see for a moment. There never has been a time when there was so much need of spiritual freedom as at the present time. What has done this? There are various reasons, says one great divine of to-day. The air is full to overflowing with lies. The breath that you breathe is full of licentiousness, is full of injustice. What is the result? The human family has put it into practice. It has made out of this great safety-valve, the human body, an abusive habitation, instead of the helpmeet which should work together with the ego and the soul. Ego, soul and body—three in one—one in three.

The great minds of yesterday are not dead. Shakspeare lives to-day. On all hand is life. The man of to-day and the soul of yesterday, cannot put under foot or trample out of sight the light incarnate in every thing that is. Take the grass from the ground. The hot rays of the sun dry it and wither it up. Trample it under foot, and it turns to chaff. The winds carry it about as dust. "It is gone," you say. "That is all." Ah! no. Every little particle of that crumpled and dried grass which seems to you dead, brings forth new life again. Nothing is lost, all is life.

The condition under which the human family has been laboring for the past ten or twelve years has been a tremendous one. Ignorance has been brought out. Abuse has been distributed abroad. Children of lust have been born, and children of love have been forgotten. In space, just a little step away, only a thin veil intervenes; it has been well said, just a little piece off are the spheres toward which each of you are traveling. Every act, every word that is delivered, every expression of thought given here, pertains to the spiritual part of man just beyond this thin veil. Because of unfoldment, because of education, the intelligences just beyond the veil are bringing to old mother earth that beautiful spiritual light which said: "Let there be light, and there was light." They are displacing the gloom of ages gone by, instituting in the souls of the human family freedom of thought, and placing them at-one-ment with self; driving out skepticism, that foul disease of infidelity; and skepticism is making a great background for the picture of truth that is being unfolded from time to time from this altar to you.

All over this land are those who have been striving in orthodoxy for light, not being satisfied with the conditions of the church, and yet because of popularity, because of a foolish name, because of position, have kept silent. But the windows of truth have been flung open. No longer must the human family be satisfied with theories. Facts which can be proven are all that to-day can bring restfulness to the tired brain of the orthodox mind.

In every one of you is a spiritual understanding. As children the growth began in you of the incarnated conditions given you by the mother before birth, and they creep out and show themselves from day to day. The little children to-day understand that all is joy and happiness. They see no wrong in anything because of being in harmony with self. Man in his great avariciousness, by his planning and drawing to himself individual ownership of property, has trampled under foot the laws of God; has set himself up as master of all things, turning a deaf ear to reason. The air which you breathe is rent with the cries of dissatisfied souls who have passed into spirit life. Some of them are your spirit friends, perhaps, who are breathing back into your nostrils their disappointments. The air is full of anguish because they did not do unto others as they would have them do unto them. Because of individualism, because of selfishness, they have made for themselves a bed of thorns. And yet learned men, after having studied for years in this or that great college and taken out long diplomas, will stand with hands folded so, and say to you: "Live as you will, the blood of Jesus will make you white as snow."

Oh! friends, listen a minute. Pay heed to what I have to say. The murder of any one will never make your sins as white as snow. You are your own savior. You are your own punisher. No blood spilt on Calvary, nor any where else, will wash your sins and make them white as snow.

Two children sit side by side in school. One child places his mind upon his lessons, and the other one whiles away the precious time in idleness. Recitation time comes. They go to class. One child recites, enjoys the lesson, passes his examination and goes on to higher work, while the other child, who has wasted the golden opportunities given by the higher power—not by man—sits in blank stupidity and astonishment. The teacher is not to blame. But I will tell you who is to blame for something very nearly related to the illustration which I have just made. We cannot speak the truth too plainly to each other. It is this: The mother of to-day who has it in her power to bring forth good seed, and idles away her time, incarnates in to the unborn child idleness. I fear that when her times comes in the spheres of immortal life, she will be called upon to account for the stitches she has dropped in the days gone by.

This is one reason for the condition of the human family to-day. Fashion licentiousness, and many other things, too numerous to mention have come uppermost. For because of these things, children have been born of the flesh into the flesh without seeing anything of the spiritual. "As thou hast sown, so shalt thou reap."

Dear friends, you cannot afford to abuse the Christ-like principle living within each one of you. You cannot afford to turn a deaf ear to truth any longer. I hear, I can see, I know that the time is near when through the processes of evolution, through education, souls who have passed to the immortal life will have been redeemed from lower conditions, and they will come bringing peace, love and harmony, as many are already doing to-day, impressing laws of truth upon your brains which you are putting into practice. You cannot stand any longer in the thoughts of the past. You cannot depend any longer upon the creeds made by man to satisfy you. You must wash yourself in truth, and you will be white as snow. You must be of the spirit spiritual. You must seek first the kingdom of heaven. Look within for the light which shall shine. Allow the windows of your soul to be hoisted. Remember all is life in this great boundless universe, and man is the great magnet of the whole. Man is a part and parcel of the whole, working in this to-and-fro current of evolution for his own advancement, for his own upbuilding, for his own enlightenment.

To-day comes the voice from the sphere where the dear little children are playing, living as one family in truth and love, saying: "Become acquainted with the inner man. Put yourselves in harmony, in vibration with the law which the great life eternal has incarnated in you; for the great power which has been, is now and ever will be, the law of attraction, is God over all of you." It brings peace, and the vibrations of harmony and love and freedom of thought are already beginning to be felt all over this material plane. And I want to say that it behooves you who are searching after the truth to become as little children in truthfulness to self. Put yourself in that condition of harmony that as you go upon the street or about in your home, those who meet you may feel the vibrations extended by you to be those of peace and love. You may be unconscious of it, my dear friends, but every minute of your life you are throwing off vibrations. Some one is being either benefited or destroyed by the elements you possess. Can you not see where you are your brother's keeper? Can you not see how necessary it is to be spiritual, to allow the God within you to speak, to allow the vibrations of love to be extended from within you. Let peace, let harmony, let love be your watchword. Get ready for this great change that has already made its appearance.

Well enough it has been said that one educated mind in truth is worth more to a country than an army. The army destroys, but education builds up. The putting of a soul out of the body, the sending of a spirit into space by a rope around the neck to pay a penalty—oh! friends, it does not pay it! It only sends another soul in a cramped undeveloped condition into space for those who have passed into the other life to deal with, to work with, to educate.

You who are mothers to-day see well to it that the seed which is sown is good seed, that it grow not tares, but that the harvest be a golden one. For as you sow, so also shall you reap. Let there be light. This is the light of truth. This is the knowledge of immortal life I come to proclaim to you. And as time rolls on the curtains will be pushed back, and light will displace ignorance, and man will no longer seek to take the reins in his own selfish hands. He will have freedom, he will have love in his soul.

Pray for that light; live for that harmony; put yourselves in tune with self; and ere the 1900 year comes, the education which has already been begun will be put into practice by you. Be you of the spirit spiritual; then so shall it be.

REPORT OF N. S. A. CONVENTION.

To the Editor:—Permit me to state through the columns of your valuable journal, that the report of the National Spiritualists' Convention, October 20, 21 and 22, 1896, S. E. 49, will be out of press about January 10, 1897. Single copies will be sold as heretofore, at twenty-five cents each.

Of all the convention reports thus far issued, that of 1896 is by far the most valuable. It contains the reports of the president, secretary, treasurer, and all of the standing and special committees, communications from friends at home and abroad, as well as a series of valuable reports as to the standing of Spiritualism in foreign countries.

Orders will now be received for one or more of these reports. Societies are urged to purchase them in large quantities for sale or distribution at their meetings. All friends of the cause are respectfully requested to purchase these valuable reports. They will make valuable New Year's presents to your friends, and the small sum they cost you will be of great service to the N. S. A.

Readers do not forget the needs of the N. S. A. in your Christmas and New Year's gifts. Purchase these books, help the N. S. A. to scatter the truths of Spiritualism over the land, and ask your neighbors to join you in the good work. Now is the time to send in your subscription, not only for 1896, but for 1893, 1894 and 1895; all for sale at the same price. Address all orders to Hon. Francis B. Woodbury, Secretary N. S. A., 600 Pennsylvania avenue, S. E., Washington, D. C.

Very truly yours,
H. D. BARRETT.

How is your liver? If torpid, drink Golden Laxattve Coffee. 50 cents by mail. Golden Laxative Coffee Co., Ayer, Mass. 373

"Principles of Light and Color." By E. D. Babbitt, M. D., LL.D. A truly great work of a master mind, and one whom Spiritualists should delight to honor. The result of years of deep thought and patient research into Nature's finer forces are here garnered and made amenable to the well-being of humanity. Medical men especially and scientists, general readers and students of occult forces will find instruction of great value and interest. A large, four-pound book, strongly bound, and containing beautiful illustrative plates. For sale at this office. Price, postpaid, $5. It is a wonderful work and you will be delighted with it.

GENERAL SURVEY

The Spiritualistic Field—Its Workers, Doings, Etc.

Bear in mind, please, that we cannot publish weekly reports of meetings. Whenever a change is made in speakers, or anything of special interest, send us a brief item, please. A great deal can be expressed in a dozen lines; but long reports will not be used. Meetings are of local interest only. We extend a cordial invitation to all speakers to send in their appointments to lecture, and general movements, which will be read by at least 40,000. We go to press early Monday morning, and items must reach us as early as Friday or Saturday in order to have immediate insertion.

Communications must always be accompanied by the full name and address of the writer, or no attention will be paid to them.

Geo. F. Perkins writes: "Would it be a good idea to suggest to the Spiritualists of Chicago and elsewhere, that we are altogether too conservative and unmindful of each other's needs, desires and welfare in general? For an illustration, let us consider that Father Williams, a good, faithful, kind-hearted and loyal Spiritualist, lately passed on, and not forty Spiritualists, among the leading ones we mean, knew of it until after his body had been disposed of, and then only through The Progressive Thinker the following week. I should have been glad to have tendered my services at either his sick-bed or at the last rites of the departed brother. And I suppose there are a thousand more Spiritualists in Chicago of the same opinion. We are settling down into an alarming condition of don't-care-a-tiveness; becoming like the pig which grunts, if disturbed in his sleep. We are ready to grunt out our displeasure, but not willing or thoughtful enough to search for opportunities of bestowing kindly thoughts and deeds upon our fellow-man."

The Truth Seeker of New York, says: "The death of Samuel P. Putnam, president of the American Secular Union and Freethought Federation, removes from organized Freethought in this country its central figure. Almost twenty years of strenuous, faithful labor fitted him for the position he held, placed him in it, and made him secure in its occupancy. Therefore, whatever may be the depth of personal grief due to his untimely removal from among the friends who prized his comradeship so highly, the cause of Freethought suffers still more deeply. There were two Putnams in one—our companion and associate, and our redoubtable champion. Who, in the latter capacity, shall join executive ability with such devotion and intellectual powers as his? All the plans for organized effort of a national character among Freethinkers were Putnam's plans, and he has been looked to as the one to carry them into execution. His death leaves an almost irreparable breach. Still the Liberal ranks are filled with able men; occasions which call for leaders proverbially prove competent to produce them, and it is too soon to be cast down or to doubt that another Putnam may arise to head the forward column. Could the now closed lips of our champion break the voiceless silence which hangs upon them, they would bid us only let his death 'augment the deep and sweeping thoughts' that lead the world to freedom. Let the buoyancy and hope that were his be ours."

The Lincoln (Neb.) New Republic says: "Along the line of spiritual phenomena which has reached Lincoln, the most startling and pleasing phase to believers in psychic research, is the independent voice manifestation as presented through the medium of aluminum trumpets by Mr. Amae Wheeler. These voices, often four and five talking at the same time, are heard as plainly and in as distinct tones as employed by mortals in usual conversations."

We are informed that Mrs. Frances Ruddick is lying very sick with typhoid fever, at her home in Franklin, Ind.

L. M. B. writes that she was not interested in Spiritualism; but when her only child and daughter possed away, she felt as though she must know. She has since seen her daughter and sister, and heard their voices; also her father came to her.

Bishop A. Beals writes from Summerland, Cal.: "Mrs. Lillie speaks here and at Santa Barbara the last two Sundays of this month. The town is growing and the oil industry is on the increase, and Spiritualism here just now has a boom—so we are progressing."

W. W. Hawkins writes from Lima, O.: "Our work in this field is steadily gaining strength. With the efficient aid of good lecturers we are beginning to appreciate the necessity of encouraging only the very best. Doctor Adah Sheehan has been helping us during the month to reflect the light from higher sources into dark places of ignorance, credulity, and their offspring, superstition, and we feel satisfied that her ardent efforts will not only swell our numbers and contributions, but that her advocacy of your valuable paper will swell the representation of our Lima contingent upon your subscription list. Long may she live to stamp out ignorance and let in the light of truth, is the hope of her well-wishers here."

Samuel Slisbee, M. D., writes: "Your notice, mislaid, has delayed my reply, which I hasten to rectify, as there is nothing I would so unwillingly dispense with as The Progressive Thinker. It not only constitutes our most palatable and savory spiritual food but is a source of weekly wonder and admiration at your marvelous ability to collate such an amount of thought and good sense as you do."

Will C. Hodge, who is now occupying the platform of the First Spiritualist Society of Rochester, Ind., is open for engagements with local societies and for the camping season of 1897. As he is contemplating a trip eastward, he solicits correspondence from localities along the line between here and Central New York. Address him at Rochester, Ind., care of Major Bitters.

Virginia Barrett writes from Elmira, N. Y.: "I wish to inform friends interested in missionary work, that this State is a large and hard one in which to labor. After leaving Cortland I labored in Bath, N. Y., then returned to this city, where I found the Spiritualists with no society nor meeting. I made known my intention to the friends—to hold public meetings. The result was that they started one, renting their hall for the winter. Some home mediums will officiate. I go from here to Bath, N. Y. Address me at 12 Purdy street, Bath, N. Y., or 499 7th street, Indianapolis, Ind., for engagements. Let the people keep in mind that the N. S. A. need their help."

Geo. F. Perkins, 587 N. Clark street, Chicago, writes: "My spiritual advisors have requested me to state that the New Year of '97 will be one of 'test' conditions in more ways than one, for Spiritualism and for the individual medium. Therefore we are to set the ball rolling by setting aside the usual lectures previous to the tests at our services, and give through my mediumship 'tests' entirely at each service—2:30 and 7:30—Sunday, at our hall, 617 N. Clark street. The Ladies' Auxiliary also invite all ladies to join them in their successful ladies' meetings, each Wednesday afternoon at appointed residences. 'Circles' are always formed."

Mrs. Francis Ruddick, the medium, is down with typhoid fever, at Franklin, Ind.

Dr. P. S. George, of Lincoln, Neb., writes: "In your issue bearing date of December 19th, our friend and brother, James R. Little, of Oakland, Cal., gave your readers some idea of the struggles I am making at this place to hold the banner of Spiritualism aloft. Now, with a little assistance, I am willing to do more. I would like to do a little work among the poverty stricken of this place. I find that many children are kept from school on account of a lack of clothing to hide their nakedness. Any of the friends who would like to help me do a little missionary work, can do so by gathering a few garments in their neighborhood, putting them in bags and sending to me by freight. Should this meet the approval of any of the friends, please let me hear from you. Remember that I am the secretary of the State Spiritualist Association of Nebraska; also the State Agent of the National Spiritualists' Association."

F. Corden White has returned from a month's very successful work at Milwaukee, Wis., and can be found at 3058 Calumet avenue, flat 9, this city.

Dr. Adah Sheehan is having excellent success in her ministrations at Lima, O. During January she will lecture in Toledo, O., and March in Kansas City, Mo.

Mrs. F. B. Karn writes from S. Berlin, N. Y.: "My thanks are due for the good I have received in The Progressive Thinker. From a child I always said that if I ever became a professor of Christianity, that I should be a Spiritualist. I have a class of Sunday-school scholars. They come to my house to learn that God is a spirit and they who worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth."

James F. Meagher writes from Milwaukee, Wis.: "No better lecture or tests were ever given in Milwaukee than were delivered last night at 216 Grand avenue. Mrs. Carrie Fuller Weatherford lectured upon the subject, 'Spiritualism and Its Message to Humanity.' The guides first gave a brief historical sketch of the great religions of the day, and the real and apparent import of their teachings, followed by an eloquent exposition of the phenomena and philosophy of Spiritualism and the messages which these truths bring to mortals. Edward M. Gilman then followed with his spirit tests, and I must say that better tests I have never heard given."

Sallie B. Higgins writes: "While the wheels of progress are rolling at such a rapid rate, and the sublime purity of spiritual works are scattered throughout the world, let us hope that the ending of another half-century will find us in a still more promising condition, when every human heart will be able to comprehend the grand and noble truths distributed through the columns of your valuable paper, and able to live up to the noble lessons taught by every fresh copy that has come like a ray of sunshine into many hearts as well as homes of this great country. With greetings and many well wishes for prosperity in the grand work before you."

Since the advent of Mr. Geo. W. Walrond, the well known trance speaker and test medium, at the meetings of the Colorado State Association of Spiritualists at Denver, Col., Spiritualism has had a decided boom and the membership and attendance are increasing. His tests of spirit presence are clear-cut and to the point, with names and family details. Professor Gray and Mrs. Wagner are also good test mediums.

Dwight E. Young writes: "Since the organization of our society at Union City, Mich., we have progressed some. Meetings were held for a few weeks each Sunday at the rooms of some member of the society; then a hall was rented for a year, which has been painted, papered and seats for 220 put in. November 15 we occupied it for the first time. An address was read from a copy of The Progressive Thinker, this plan being adopted soon after the society was organized, and followed until the present, except Sunday, December 13th, when Mrs. Emily D. King, of Butler, Mich., entertained us morning and evening with two inspirational lectures, followed by readings, some five or six after each lecture, all of them without exception being recognized as correct. Mrs. King has been engaged in the work a number of years, lecturing and speaking at funerals. She is an earnest speaker, and an ardent advocate of the cause of Spiritualism. Collections were taken up, all of which she gave for the benefit of the society, of which she is a member, although living twelve miles distant."

G. G. W. Van Horn writes: "Wednesday evening, December 23, the rehearsal of the grand prize and surprise party was given at Washington Hall, 490 Washington boulevard. The first act has ended. Two more acts will appear in due time. The entertainment, social and spirit art gallery surprised all the friends of the author of the drama. They were donated by C. H. Horine, the Bangs Sisters and Mrs. Jackman. Photographic views, six in number, size 11x14, reproductions of interior and exterior of art collection, are for sale as souvenirs. Price $1 each; our agents will call on you. We must meet our bills by January 1. We depend upon all our true friends. We thank all friends of the spiritual movement as volunteers. The whole was a grand success."

Wade M. Smith, of Austin, Texas, writes flatteringly of the lectures given there by Miss Lydia Allen, of Summerland, Cal. He cordially recommends her. She can be addressed for engagements at 319 East Sixth street, Austin, Texas.

J. C. F. Grumbine writes as follows to the Spiritualists of Chicago: "I wish personally to request all those who wish to form a society on the South Side in the interest of Spiritualism, in Englewood, to write me their names and address. It is my intent to open or establish a society in Englewood and Auburn Park as soon as I can return to Chicago or find time late in the spring of 1897. Those who are familiar with the work and teachings of the guides, will know that the platform will stand for Spiritualism pure and simple, in its highest, purest and best sense. We hope to begin an organization at once. Address me at Station P., Chicago, Ill."

Geo. H. Brooks writes from Wheaton, Ill.: "I closed my meetings in Ottawa, Ill., last Sunday. I found the work needed my presence there, so I remained longer than I expected. The meetings were well attended, and I trust good was done. I found the people were becoming very much interested, and a good-will grew out of the meetings. I shall remain home for the holidays; the first time I have been able to be at home Christmas and New Year's in a long time."

A. C. Dunn writes: "The light of Spiritualism is shining upon the people of Winnebago City, Minn., through the mediumship of Mrs. Steelman Mitchell of Newport, Ky. We have no organization, but a few of us concluded that we must have some spiritual food for ourselves and neighbors. The result was an invitation to Mrs. Mitchell. She came on the 14th ult. and has lectured and given tests to crowded houses. Her tests (reading photographs) is a new phase to most of us, but her guides are clear, positive and true. Her readings give absolute satisfaction. We regret that she can stay but for two more lectures, being called to other fields of labor. Mrs. Mitchell's work seems eminently fitted to succeed in communities where little is known of the philosophy of Spiritualism, such as is this. She seems to explain our religion so clearly through her guides, and makes it so clear, that it is a religion of reason that the church people go away delighted. They begin to think, and then, when added to that, her tests come to clinch the arguments, spirit communion becomes an established fact where hope and doubts formerly held sway. This community will feel the beneficent effects of her visit for all time, and the doors of the dwellings will swing outward at the approach of mediums hereafter."

E. C. Gray writes: "All of you who accepted our invitation to the Xmas-eve entertainment at Rev. G. V. Cordingley's hall know that expectations were more than realized; but for the benefit of those who were not able to be present, I write just a few lines. Tickets were issued to the lyceum children, and cordial invitation given and taken advantage of to the First Society which holds its meetings at 3120 Forest avenue to join with us, in our hall at Thirty-first street and Indiana avenue, along with their parents, many of whom came and enjoyed the successful efforts of their own former pastor, Mr. Cordingley, who is doing so well on his own responsibility now. The entertainment began with a poem, followed by recitations and gifts to the lyceum children; a ballet dance by six of the little tots, and a beautiful dance by a little girl attired like a Cupid, with bow and arrow. Miss Blossom Chambers, skirt dance, and Mr. Beaton, vocal solo, were well received. Mr. Cordingley gave a few appropriate remarks, and a most interesting Christmas poem in the course of the programme. After the entertainment there was a supper and a dance for a couple of hours, the children going home tired and laden with gifts, but, oh! so contented to be alive. Mr. Cordingley and Mr. Miller received many valuable gifts and sent them home under guard of two strong men before the dance, and after the whole thing was over Mr. Cordingley shouldered the entire pack of curtains himself and was stopped by a policeman on the way who asked him if that was his Christmas pack, but understood the joke and let him go unmolested. At the request of many Mr. Cordingley will give a 25 cent entertainment, consisting of tests, etc., and a social time, at his rooms, 3300 Wabash avenue, New Year's Eve, as last year's appearance was heralded by many of us at his rooms the same way, and we all want to repeat the delightful time then enjoyed."

ITEMS FROM "LIGHT," LONDON, ENGLAND.

The president of The National Spiritualists' Association, U. S., has just sent out his annual report. It occupies nineteen enormous columns in The Progressive Thinker, and seems to cover the whole ground, from half-fares for mediums to the ordination of ministers or platform workers. It is, of course, richly suggestive and highly instructive.

The section with the trumpet-call in it is that which refers to the Jubilee in 1898. After referring to the International Conference to be held in London this year, the president says that as Modern Spiritualism began in America, the Jubilee ought to be adequately celebrated there. He and others have suggested a ten days' celebration at Rochester, N. Y., including a one day's celebration at Hydesville. He anticipates that "thousands upon thousands will be in attendance," and urges the immediate appointment of a competent man of business, with an office and suitable assistants at Rochester, for the purpose of working up and working out the matter on a grand scale.

The following extract will give an idea of the tone of the whole:

"In order to insure success in this movement, the work should be commenced at once. Standing advertisements should be placed in all the Spiritualist papers, circular letters sent to all societies on both continents, inviting them to participate, letters of explanation sent to all workers, and the impression given out that it was to be a meeting for the masses of Spiritualists throughout the world. An interesting feature could be arranged by having all of the old Spiritualists, the survivors among the converts to Spiritualism in the years of '48, '49, '50 and '51, among the many attractions of the hour. This would be rendering honor to whom honor is due, by giving a just recognition to the noble workers of early days. An attractive programme should be made out, with a range of topics for discussion, and all our leading workers invited to take part. Papers upon the live topics of the day should be asked of such of our workers as cannot attend the meeting, and presented in due form to the people in attendance.

"If such a meeting is planned, gigantic as the undertaking seems, it will be a success from the start. Such an undertaking as this would require a large amount of money, but if the right person was selected as a leader, necessary funds could be secured, and the Jubilee made the one great feature in the history of Spiritualism. The Spiritualists from all quarters of the globe will then visit America, become acquainted with us, and help to strengthen the bonds of fellowship amongst the nations of the earth."

This looks like business, and we wish every success to the people who lay hold.

ITEMS FROM TWO WORLDS, LONDON, ENGLAND.

Judge Remy once boasted that he himself had been the means of putting to death in sixteen years 800 witches. Luther states that 7,000 witches were burned at Treves; 600 by a single bishop of Bamburg; 800 in a single year in the bishopric of Wartzburg; 1,000 in the province of Como; 400 at Toulouse at a single execution; 500 at Geneva in three months, and 48 in Sweden.

The following is an interview with a noted medium, W. J. Leeder:

What kind of mediumship is yours?

Well, I must call it trance. I used to hear all that was said when under spirit control, but I hear very little now, sometimes not a word. I have also psychometric and clairvoyant powers.

How do you feel when going under control?

The spirit who controls stands in front and looks into me; his eyes appear to grow into two golden lights, then after a little while these two balls merge into one, which grows larger and larger until it seems to become part of myself; then I feel as if I was six or seven feet in the air, resting on air and inclined backwards. When the speaking is going on, a line of yellow flashes, like telegraphic dots and dashes, goes from me, in the air, down to where my material body is standing. I am sometimes conscious of all this, yet cannot hear a word.

Are your psychometric and clairvoyant powers natural?

Yes. I can see and sense psychically at any time when in good physical condition.

Can you always see or sense with the same amount of success?

O, no. It all depends upon conditions and the ratio of rapport which takes place between myself and client; the aura, temperament, in fact the whole organization has a remarkable effect upon the results obtained. I don't think any medium is infallible—they all depend upon physical, mental and psychological influences.

You believe in auras, then?

Yes, I am compelled to do so, because I see them. I judge the standard of persons mentally, morally and physically, by the color and density of their magnetic aura.

What are the most distinctive colors?

To me they are ruby, golden yellow and green. The shades and combinations are of course very varied.

What kind of person would you judge one with a green aura?

Well, if it was emerald green, and emanated from the head, I should judge him to have a happy combination of intellectual and spiritual powers. In a general way, green, when about the body, is an indication of sorrow or sickness, and the darker and more dense the green the worse the sickness or sorrow. When the brain emanations show a predominance of red the individual is very passionate; if blue, intellectual; yellow, spiritual; varying according to the combinations and grades of color.

You diagnose diseases clairvoyantly, I believe?

Yes; I diagnose nearly every case I get by that power.

Is the diagnosis always correct?

I do not claim to be infallible; and there are some cases that one cannot get at, but I should say ninety per cent. are correct. No person is infallible in these matters.

Do you get prescriptions for patients from your spirit guides?

Well, I have a guide—a North American Indian—who has given me some remarkable remedies; but I usually rely upon my own practical knowledge and experience, but allow my guides to help me when they desire. I cannot cure everybody—I wish I could. I fear the man who is going to cure every ailment has not yet been born.

Have you any testimonials?

Yes; you see here is a big bundle; but I seldom publish any, because the general public are apt to think they are "faked," and very few persons care to have their names published. I try to make every client a living testimonial.

Do you like public work?

Yes; I like it immensely, especially lecturing, and I have lectured more or less for twelve years.

Does the exercise of your mediumship affect your health?

Not in the least. I have grown stronger, both mentally and physically, all the time I have been a Spiritualist. I am sometimes tired out with overwork, but a night's rest always sets me right. I consider Spiritualism teaches knowledge of self, which is the keystone of the arch of a higher manhood.

You must value Spiritualism, then?

I think it the most sacred, glorious, humanizing, spiritualizing power on the face of the earth. And when used and not abused, it carries man to possibilities of spiritual unfoldment he had never dreamed of.

ITEMS FROM THE MYSTICAL WORLD, LONDON, ENG.

It is a remarkable fact that there never was a living saint. Good people have got to die and new generations spring up to discover the good deeds of good people.

Absolute peace exists only within thine own soul, and to this fortress must thou retire from every form of pleasure, dealing with the world in faith, hope and charity.

The true occultist is gentle always because he possesses invincible power. Tyranny is the action of cowardice.

Occult knowledge cannot be exhibited, for the would-be beholder cannot see it.

The possession of knowledge (God) is the proof of its possession. It cannot be found; it must find itself in us.

As a rule, a woman thinks her knowledge consists in what she thinks she knows and is able to tell someone else. What the wise man keeps is not knowledge to her.

Show me the stature of the man, his face, his walk, and let me watch his life, and I will tell you what the man is.

Not by his miracles, teaching, or death, but by living over again the life of the man Christ, must we find our heaven, not only hereafter but here on earth.

When we find a pleasure in remaining silent while others are talking, it is evidence of coming wisdom. Only the ignorant tell what they do not know to those who are curious.

The curse of the present age is in parents educating their children to live on a plane above themselves; thus the parents starve themselves that the child may appear well.

Men whose chief aim in life is the acquisition of money, have no power to judge between the just and the unjust.

The sun symbolizes to the outer senses the divine power of God, only recognized by the spirit or the occult life.

He who can be a curse to another, has not the power to bless. A good man cannot curse another, and a bad man cannot bless.

He who is wrapped up in admiration of his own physical body would be likely to step under an express train or be cheated out of his earnings before he would know it.

I am as nothing; but am like the fiddle, which without the fiddler would give no tune.

If anything unpleasant has happened to you, do not repeat its history to another, for it is enough for one to bear a burden of sorrow.

In your desire to tell others what you have been taught in occult things, you give the external only—the shell—and forget or do not have the spirit of the teaching.

A man may be the worst scoundrel that ever lived in the country, and yet in every act be legal and be a churchman.

A wise man will only talk principles; hence, there can be but little talk. Thus "Silence is Golden" in comparison.

A curious phenomenon was witnessed in the village of Bargad, in the Pilibhit district. There was no rain, no clouds, no storm, and yet the forest house was struck by lightning and reduced to ashes. Such an event has not happened before within living memory.—Arya.

"The Religion of the Future." By S. Weil. This is a work of far more than ordinary power and value, by a bold, untrammeled thinker. Spiritualists who love deep, clear thought, reverent for truth alone, will be pleased with it, and well repaid by its perusal. For sale at this office. Price, cloth, $1.25; paper, 50 cents.

CHURCH PROPERTY.

Should Be Taxed the Same as Other Property.

A Minister's Presentation of the Subject.

The general theory of all just taxation is reciprocal service. Judge Cooley says: "The protection of the Government being the consideration for which taxes are demanded, all parties who receive, or are entitled to, that protection may be called upon to render the equivalent." It costs the community something to enjoy the use of property. If the church paid taxes it would pay its fair and honest share to secure its enjoyment of the use of property.

Church property is not exempt from taxation. The taxes have to be paid, and the property that is exempt, or rather omitted from the tax roll, is simply spread upon the other property. Everybody's tax goes up at least one-tenth. The American people would rise up in rebellion against direct taxation for church support, but what is exemption from taxation but an indirect State support of the church, a virtual subsidy for its support, and at the expense of the general public? The State avoids a deficiency in its revenues by transferring to other property increased taxation, not by the voluntary action of the tax-payers, but by the compulsion of law, all of which is out of consonance with our republican institutions. The founders of our Republic wisely separated church and State. But if we are taxed for the support of churches it can not justly be said that church and State are separated. Benjamin Franklin said: "When a religion is good, I conceive that it will support itself, and when it cannot support itself, and God does not take care to support it, so its professors are obliged to call for help from the civil power, it is a sign, I apprehend, of its being a bad one." The churches enjoy no immunity from the operations of the laws of God. They place roofs upon their buildings to keep out the rain, and put up lightning rods to prevent lightning striking them. If God does not vary his laws for the benefit of churches, why should the State be expected to do so?

It is argued that many churches are not self-sustaining at present, and that to tax them would render them still less so. Thousands are less able to provide for their children because of the tax-collector. Why should the laborer pay taxes upon his humble home, and the religious corporation be exempted?

Make all property bear its just and equal share of taxation and you lessen the laboring man's burden. When the workingman feels that his burden is heavier, because the magnificent possessions of the church are omitted from the tax-roll, do you wonder that the church loses its power over him? Tax churches and only those able to bear taxes will dare to be extravagant. Tax churches and modest buildings will be erected where they are most needed, instead of a few imposing structures in the fashionable quarter.

Every tax-payer in the city, the county, and the State has his percentage of State tax correspondingly increased because of the needlessly expensive church properties of the cities, churches which he may never enter. The church yields no income to the incorporators; neither do many other kinds of property. But the State cannot regulate its action by rule of income. The State may and does tax for local benefits; then why not also for general benefits? The saloon-keeper by force of law is compelled to help pay the taxes on my church, in the use of which I denounce his infernal traffic. If the saloon-keeper is taxed to support my church, in all fairness he ought to have something to say in its management. "No taxation without representation."

In 1850, the church property of the United States, which paid no tax, municipal or State, amounted to $87,000,000. In 1860 the amount had doubled. In 1870 it was $365,483,587. The census of 1890 reported the alleged value of church edifices, the lots on which they stand, and their furnishings, at $680,687,106. This does not include parsonages, lots, monasteries, convents, schools, colleges, etc. A conservative estimate of the value of the church property of all sects in this country is $2,000,000,000. In 1875, President Grant, in his message to Congress on the subject of a total separation of church and State, and the taxation of church property, said:

"In 1900, without a check, it is safe to say that this church property which pays no tax will reach a sum exceeding $3,000,000,000. So vast a sum receiving all the protection of the Government without bearing its proportion of the burdens and expenses of the same, will not be looked upon acquiescently by those who have to pay taxes. In a growing country, where real estate enhances so rapidly with time as in the United States, there is scarcely a limit to the wealth that may be acquired by corporations, religious or otherwise, if allowed to retain real estate without taxation."

History is said to repeat itself, and the United States are on a fair way of reaching a condition which took place in England at one time, and in France, Italy, Spain, South Germany, Mexico, and some of the South and Central American republics. In these countries corporated religious wealth became so great that it crippled their resources, paralyzed industry, and produced political and social ambitions which were only alleviated by wholesale confiscation. The taxation of church property is in the interest of American principles and in harmony with the experience of nations. Exemption is a relic of the principle of church and State, inherited from the Old World, and not yet eliminated from our political system.—Rev. Madison C. Peters, in North American Review.

SAYS B. F. UNDERWOOD.

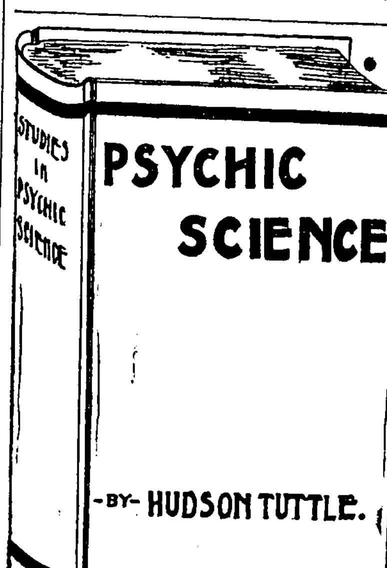
Thinking in herds means a minimum of thought and a maximum of automatism. Individuality is essential to spontaniety, mental flexibility, originality and independence. Its decline is always marked by a tendency to uniformity; its growth to quote from Humbolt by 'human development in its richest diversity. The danger of getting into ruts of thought is an ever present one. Intellectual rigidity is the sin against the Holy Ghost. It makes the assimilation of new thought impossible and is, therefore, a bar to progress. As Emerson observes ceasing from fixed ideas is a great part of civilization. Change is essential to advancement without which higher conditions cannot be reached.

"Cosmian Hymn Book." A collection of original and selected hymns, for liberal and ethical societies, for schools and the home; compiled by L. K. Washburn. This volume meets a public want. It comprises 258 choice selections of poetry and music, embodying the highest moral sentiment, and free from all sectarianism. Price, 50c. For sale at this office.

Passed to Spirit-Life.

Passed to spirit life, November 26, 1896, Mrs. Katherine Tipple, wife of Ezra S. Tipple, of Preston, Kas., aged 53 years. She was one of the best of women, and was loved and respected by all that knew her. She leaves a husband, three daughters and four sons to mourn for a kind wife and mother.

W. E.



Mrs. Mary A. Sheldon, of Mt. Eden, Alameda county, Cal., passed away October 24, 1896, after an illness of several years. She was a helpless invalid from locomotor ataxia. She was a woman of brilliant intellect, noble and kind-hearted, and was especially forbearing and gentle with those in sickness and trouble. She was 70 years of age and leaves two brothers and three sisters to mourn her loss. She was a native of Oxford, Chenango county, N. Y., and her father was Henry Balcom, one of its foremost citizens.

R. DENNIS.

Lillie May Daniels passed to spirit life, at the age of 13, through the accidental kicking of a family horse. She was the daughter of one of the leading Spiritualist families of Gage county, Nebraska. Her death was almost a crushing blow to the fond parents and family. The funeral services were performed by Amae Wheeler, who gave an inspirational discourse full of words of peace and comfort.

Born into the higher life, Bernard F. S. Thordenberg, on November 19th, in the town of Wallace, Ore., at the home of his wife and her people. The young man came into this section of the country some eighteen months ago and stopped here for a day's rest, on account of stormy weather and certain inducements caused him to remain. We found him to be quite industrious and quite ingenious. He was a good reader and The Progressive Thinker was among our literature. He became interested in it and through it and other circumstances he learned that death did not end all. In December of '95 he took a severe cold but seemingly got over it; but failed gradually until he required more attention, and he came to the conclusion that a wife was equal to a mother in care and necessity, so he became connected with the family by marriage. We procured the best of medical skill, but to no avail—the messenger of death had called and he soon became aware of it. He showed no signs of fear, but he got tired, and kissed his wife, and said he would be turned over on his side, and take a good rest—and sleep he did—in ten minutes he was across the river of peace.

JOHN NOWELL.

IMPORTANT WORK.

Studies in the Outlying Fields of Psychic Science.

A WORK BY HUDSON TUTTLE.

WITH FULL DIRECTIONS HOW TO INVESTIGATE SPIRITUALISM, DEVELOP MEDIUMSHIP, AND FOR THE FORMATION OF HOME CIRCLES.

This second edition, with important additions, is the second effort in the New Departure of THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER. It is a book which marked an era in the methods of thought on psychic subjects. It was first to take this hitherto unexplored realm, and its treatment is entirely original. It outlined a plan of study and investigation, which, new as the subject was, appears to be the only one the student can pursue, to arrive at satisfactory results.

A great many psychic clubs and reading circles have adopted it as a guide, and one college has taken it as a text book. In its field it stands alone, and is the student's only helpful manual.

Since the author wrote the "Arcana of Nature," by almost purely automatic controls, his inspiration has made no higher flight than in "Psychic Science."

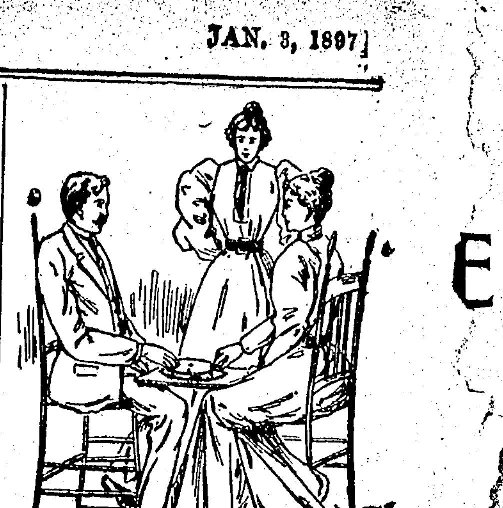
Price Reduced About One-Half.

In our New Departure, determined to give Spiritualists—instead of the dearest, as hitherto—the cheapest literature of any denomination, sect or organization, we have not only enlarged the book by twenty pages, but reduced the price from $1.25 to 75 cents.

A wealthy Spiritualist purchased copies at full price and presented one to every college and academy in the New England States. We have reduced the price until no one will be prevented from possessing it, or deterred, for want of means, from sending it forth on missionary duty.

"Hypnotism Up to Date." By Sydney Flower. In the form of dialogue and story, the author presents very successfully a condensed account of hypnotism its theory and practice up to date. Price, paper, 25 cents. Sold at this office.

"Atlantis: The Antediluvian World. By Ignatius Donnelly. Sums up all information relative to the lost continent of Atlantis. He regards the description of it given by Plato as veritable history. It is intensely interesting. Price $2.



THOMAS PAINE'S

Examination of the Prophecies.

A consideration of the passages in the New Testament, quoted from the Old, and called Prophecies Concerning Jesus Christ. Price 15 cents.

IT IS INTERESTING.

LIFE AND LABOR IN THE SPIRIT-World: Being a description of Localities, Employments, Surroundings, and Conditions in the Spheres. By members of the Spirit-Band of Miss M. T. Shelhamer, medium of the Banner of Light Public Free Circle. Cloth $1.00. Postage 10 cents. For sale at this office.

THE PSYCHOGRAPH

—OR—

DIAL PLANCHETTE.

This instrument is substantially the same as that employed by Prof. Hare in his early investigations. In its improved form it has been before the public for more than seven years, and in the hands of thousands of persons has proved its superiority over the Planchette, and all other instruments which have been brought out in imitation, both in regard to certainty and correctness of the communications received by its aid, and as a means of developing mediumship.

Do you wish to investigate Spiritualism?
Do you wish to develop Mediumship?
Do you desire to receive Communications?

The Psychograph is an invaluable assistant. A pamphlet with full directions for the Formation of Circles and Cultivation of Mediumship

with every instrument. Many who were not aware of their mediumistic gift, have, after a few sittings, been able to receive delightful messages. A volume might be filled with commendatory letters. Many who began with it as an amusing toy, found that the intelligence controlling it knew more than themselves, and became converts to Spiritualism.

Capt. D. B. Edwards, Orient, N. Y., writes: "I had communications (by the Psychograph) from many other friends, even from old settlers whose gravestones are moss-grown in the old yard. They have been highly satisfactory, and proved to me that Spiritualism is indeed true, and the communications have given my heart the greatest comfort in the severest loss I have had of son, daughter, and their mother."

Dr. Eugene Crowell, whose writings have made his name familiar to those interested in psychic matters, writes as follows: "I am much pleased with the Psychograph. It is very simple in principle and construction, and I am sure must be far more sensitive to spiritual power than the one now in use. I believe it will generally supersede the latter when its superior merits become known."

Securely packed, and sent postage paid from the manufacturer, for $1.00. Address:

HUDSON TUTTLE,
Berlin Heights, Ohio.

HERESY,

...OR...

LED TO THE LIGHT.

A Thrilling, Psychological Story of Evangelization and Free Thought. It is to Protestantism what the "Secrets of the Convent" is to Catholicism.

BY HUDSON TUTTLE.

The distinguished author, Hudson Tuttle, requires no introduction to the readers of THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER, but the following headings of chapters will show them what they may expect from the book:

CONTENTS:—An Idyl—Fordham—Building the Church—The Evangelist—Blood—The Saloon—The Lost Daughter—Law—The Harvest of Souls—Jane Grey—The Mother of Cain—Evolution—Stella—The Cell—Death—A Step Forward—The Home Circle—The Double Role—Heresy—Annette—The Bank Robbery—Liberty—All Is Well That Ends Well—The New Church—The New Way; Led to the Light.

Every chapter is devoted to one idea, and the whole presents so many tableaux moving onward to the climax. The fiendish career of the revivalist is contrasted with the character of the honest minister and the thinking agnostic. The steps by which a preacher merges from the church, and the difficulties he meets are graphically presented. The new church and progressive lyceum evolved out of the old, form an interesting study to those seeking new methods.

It is a beautiful volume of 223 pages, and the price in accordance with our new departure, is 30 cents, postpaid, or five copies for $1.25. For sale at the office of THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER.

THE MEDIUMISTIC

Experiences of John Brown,

The Medium of the Rockies, with an introduction by

PROF. J. S. LOVELAND.

This book should be in the hands of every one interested in Spiritualism.

Chapter 1, Notoriety; Early Mediumship. Chapter 2, The Heavenly Mansion. Chapter 3, Removal to California; Return of His Guide. Chapter 4, Remarkable Tests. Chapter 5, His Work as a Healer. Chapter 6, Leaves the Body. Chapter 7, Visit to the Spirit Land. Chapter 8, Methods Used by Spirits to Communicate; How to Conduct a Circle. Chapter 9, Miscellaneous Articles. Chapter 10, A Strange Experience. Chapter 11, Remarkable Manifestation of Spirit Power. Chapter 12, New Experiences—Illustrative of Prophetic Visions. Chapter 13, The First Break in the Atlantic Cable Shown to John Brown. Chapter 14, Unseen Opposition. Chapter 14, Ola-podrida.

For sale at this office. Heavy paper cover, price 50 cents.

THE UNKNOWN LIFE

—OF—

Jesus Christ

—BY—

NICOLAS NOTOVITCH.

TRANSLATED FROM THE FRENCH.

Since the writing of the New Testament no book has appeared of as great importance to Christianity as the UNKNOWN LIFE OF JESUS CHRIST.

This volume, written by the discoverer of the manuscript, contains a thrilling account of the privations and perils encountered in his search for it, a literal translation of the original manuscript, and lastly a critical analysis of what it contains.

This work contains 185 neatly printed pages, and is published on the basis of combining cheapness and excellence. Price, neatly bound, one dollar. Paper cover, price 25 cents, postage 5 cents.

Address this office, 40 Loomis St., Chicago, Ill.

LIFE IN TWO SPHERES.

A Fascinating Work.

The readers of THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER will remember the story under the above title, by Hudson Tuttle, which was published in its columns. At the time, constant inquiries were made as to its appearing in book form. This wish has now been gratified. It makes a volume of 243 pages, in style and form like the "Convent of the Sacred Heart," with a finely-engraved likeness of the author on the cover. The scenes of the story alternately shift from earth to the spirit spheres, and the philosophy of Spiritualism, the occupation and modes of life of spiritual beings, are presented in the pleasing form of narrative.

The following are the chapter-titles: Introduction; The House of the Sage; Home of the Miser; The Low Societies; Hades; Christmastide in the Spheres of Light; Christmastide and the Golden Gate; The Unhappy Marriage; Easter Day in Heaven; A Visit to the Earth; The Change Called Death; Coming to the Knowledge of the Light; The Society Again Visits Earth; The Forsaken and Despised; Discussion; A Visit to a Distant Globe; Reunion in the Spirit-world; Contentedness Not Goodness; Address of the Sage.

It is a book the Spiritualist will be delighted with; a book in which the investigator will find answers to ever-recurring questions; a book which will interest the church member, nor repel the most prejudiced. The price in paper is 50 cents; muslin $1; postpaid.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A New Edition, Profusely Illustrated.

"I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find nothing in it trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all, that under the appearances of fable, there may appear some latent truth, obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observation of the vulgar."—VOLTAIRE.

CONTENTS: "The White Bull," a Satirical Romance; "Zadig, or Fate," an Oriental History; "The Sage and the Atheist;" "The Princess of Babylon;" "The Man of Forty Crowns;" "The Huron, or Pupil of Nature;" "Micromegas," a Satire on Mankind; "The World as it Goes;" "The Black and the White;" "Memnon, the Philosopher;" "Andre Des Touches at Siam;" "Babec;" "The Study of Nature;" "A Conversation With a Chinese;" "Plato's Dream;" "A Pleasure in Having no Pleasure;" "An Adventure in India;" "Jeannot and Colin;" "Travels of Scarmentado;" "The Good Brahmin;" "The Two Comforters;" "Ancient Faith and Fable."

One volume, post 8vo, 480 pages, with portrait and 82 illustrations. Extra vellum cloth, $1.50; postage, 15 cents.

"Voltaire's satire was keen and fine-pointed as a rapier."—Magazine of Am. History.

"A delightful reproduction, unique and refreshing."—Boston Commonwealth.

DEATH AND THE AFTER LIFE.

By Andrew Jackson Davis. Something you should read. Price 75 cents.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

This department is under the management of the distinguished author, speaker and medium,

Hudson Tuttle.

Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio.

A. O. Brown: Q. (1) The molecular theory of life teaches that man's organization is built up of living individualities, or molecules. If so, do they not constitute the individual life of man, and when his body dissolves and the molecules separate, would not that be the end of his individuality? A machine constructed of thousands of different parts, when the parts are separated—would not that be the end of the machine?

(2) Minot J. Savage, in a sermon preached some two years ago in Boston, said that if there were no ears to hear, there would be no sound. This is equivalent to saying that if there were no ears there would be no vibrations, and if no vibrations, no life. Hence, life depends on the ear, and all vibrations the result of life. Would not the vibrations go on if there was no ear to hear?

A. (1) There are zooplytes which are colonies of individuals, uniting into one common life. These are among the lowest forms of living organisms. It would appear that these suggested the theory that the human body was similarly built up of distinct forms, whose blending gave rise to the life of the individual. Before, however, we draw conclusions, and blot out a spiritual future by accepting this theory, we should determine if it be a correct statement of facts. It is true that growth takes place by the formation of cells, and secretion is by means of cell growth and destruction. These processes imitate the reproduction and life of the lowest cellular beings, which must be because the line of evolution is the same. There is but two ways for a cell to multiply—one by division, the other by the growth within of a germ and its expulsion, and one of these takes place in the growth of a single cell, which constitutes the lowest organism, and in the multitude of aggregated cells constituting the complex organism of the highest animal. The red corpuscles of the blood imitate bacillian forms, and the white corpuscles "amoeba," but beyond similarity there is no relation, except in the imagination of the microscopist.

When it is said that the body of man is formed of a colony of molecules, and that his life and intelligence is the result of their combined life, however glossed with the appearance of science, or couched in technical terms, it is only a fancy, without a single fact in its support. To say that the body is formed of elements which, through ages of evolution, have evolved into such living form, is, far more scientific and admissible, for it is a plain statement of the process. Yet, when this, as it usually is, is taken as an ultimate explanation, it stops short of the cause and does not give the final result. It is a new statement of well known facts.

Th embryonic cell that is the beginning of the human body, carries with it a spiritual energy, by which body and spirit carry forward the process of mutual growth to the perfection of the physical, and when that is useless, the spirit evolved retains individuality, and possibilities for a superior existence.

(2) It has been a favorite pastime for philosophers who enjoy intellectual combat and acrobatic performance on a trapeze of words, by the hocus-pocus of stilted phrases and legerdemain of logic to rule the external universe out of existence and leave only consciousness. Hence the conclusion—no ear, no sound; no eye, no light. The absurdity of all this is apparent if nature is directly appealed to.

For countless ages before man came on this earth; before even there were sentient beings, the light and heat of the sun bathed its surface. The remains of plants testify to this. It was because of light that the eye was created. Light was its creating force. When the light is withdrawn the visual organs disappear—as in cave fishes. It would be as pertinent to assert that the presence or absence of light depends on the fishes inhabiting such caves having eyes or being destitute of those organs, as to say that the existence of light in the world depends on men having eyes. The same may be said of the ear and sound.

If every form of life were dead and the earth turned as barren a sphere to the sun as the moon presents, yet would the sun shine and the air would pulsate with sound. Niagara would not cease its roar because there was no one to listen.

R.: Q. I often see newspaper stories relating to fire tests in which the clothing is unharmed—can mind control matter to that extent?

A. If R. means if it be possible by the mere force of the will to prevent fire from burning the clothing or the flesh, the answer is an unequivocal and unqualified no.

Subscriber, Sterling, Ill.: Q. (1) It is said that the coffin of Mohammed was drawn up and held in mid-air by a magnet, placed so as to deceive his followers. Has this ever been proved by experiment?

(2) Does Spiritualism teach life everlasting?

(3) Does any other system outside of Judaism and Christianity teach that there is a God?

A. (1) If reliance can be placed in the most authentic records of history, Mohammed died, surrounded by his family and friends in a manner becoming to his high prophetic character. His last words were: "O, God! Pardon my sins—yes—I come among my fellow citizens on high." He was interred by those who loved him best on the very spot where he expired in the city of Medina.

Greek and Latin writers, filled with hatred and bigotry, invented the story that his iron coffin was suspended in the air by a powerful londstone or magnet, in the city of Mecca.

Millions have visited the tomb of the great prophet at Medina, and testify to the stupidity of his defamers.

So far from proving or disproving by "experiment," any one having the least knowledge of the power of the magnet, so far from considering it necessary, would laugh at the absurdity of the statement. Yet it passes in religious literature without comment, as one of the evidences of the rascality of the "false prophet!"

(2) The existence of man after the death of the body does not absolutely prove immortality. It proves the continuity of the individualized life into the next higher stage of being, but eternity is an expanse no finite mind can compass—yet, by mathematics, we are taught that lines reaching out across space with the slightest inclination to each other, will, however remote the distance, meet, but if they are parallel they will cross the widest abyss the mind can conceive, and go on and on forever. In like manner we know that the bodily organism must perish because it is constructed on converging lines, and the time comes when the forces of decay master those of renovation, yet we discern in the spiritual being an individualization of force connected with a higher order of elements, in which these antagonistic energies are balanced in perfect harmony, and under such conditions that they extend into the eternities. Aside from this reasoning, the highest spirit cannot know from direct knowledge, for the longest life yet lived by the most aged dwellers in the spheres, is only as a single swing of the pendulum of the chronometer of the universe. Such spirits know from experience that during the centuries of their lives, they have grown more and more individualized, and lost in no direction. In other words—the lines which on either side are projected into the future, at least parallel, perchance diverge, and hence can never meet, which would mean extinguishment.

(3) All religious systems have a God. All the races of mankind have gods of their own.

Aside from utterly barbarious peoples the Jewish God, Jehovah, is the most degraded and terrible, and the Godhead of the Christians the most mysterious and utterly incomprehensible.

Ormuzd of the Persians, Brahm of the Hindu, Jupiter of the Grecians, Allah of the Moslems, Jehovah of the Jews, God of the Christians, are only different words to express the God-idea, which dawned when man was yet a savage and has grown through the ages to at last to be absorbed into the divine in man.

All that man knows about God he must evolve out of his own mind, and hence every individual has his or her own God, distinct from all others. The African negro believes that God is a negro, bigger, blacker and stronger than himself, and he knocks out a tooth or cuts off a finger as a sacrifice to gain his good will. The Christian of the nineteenth century builds houses for his God and offers incense and prayer.

Laura C. Ansley: Q. (1) Do the elements—as storms, snow, heat, cold—effect spirits?

(2) How are we to know friends we meet in the spirit home, of whom we have forgotten the looks?

A. (1) Spiritual beings are not directly effected by the material elements. In communicating with us, they may be by our condition, produced by such elementary changes.

(2) How do friends who pass from each others memory by long separation know each other when they meet? It is through mutual communication of thought.

G. A., Conoqunessing: Q. Mediums have told me that I could write automatically. I have been sitting almost two years, with no result but the constant writing of such pages as I send with this. What shall I do to advance?

A. The specimen of writing is identical with hundreds of others from different sources, and which is often mistaken as being a written language. It really is only a somewhat set form of curves and loops, etc., easiest for the hand to make. Beyond this point, there is some obstruction and the medium remains without further advance. To continue seances which only repeat themselves is useless and a waste of time. Organize a circle and make a complete change.

THE CAUSE AT LIMA, OHIO.

The cause of Spiritualism in Lima, Ohio, is growing steadily. Last Spring I filled an engagement in this pretty little city, and found a wide-awake society seeking to place Spiritualism before the people in its proper light.

The best talent has been placed on their rostrum, and many have found the proof of life eternal. There are numerous private circles in the city, and many have been rewarded by securing at their own fireside, and through members of their own families most startling manifestations.

I began the present engagement with the first Sunday in December. Two Sundays have passed and our audiences were not only the largest of the season, but the class of people who attend, are among the very best intellectually and socially.

The Philosophical Society, composed of lawyers, physicians, ministers and representative business men of this community, had for discussion on last Tuesday evening, the subject: "Has Spiritualism a Rational Basis?" The affirmative, taken by Mr. C. H. Taylor, brought forth a very able and carefully prepared paper.

Mr. Adgate prepared a paper on the negative side of the question, in which he asserted that many people were perfectly sane on every subject but one, etc., etc. Of course argument was out of the question so far as he was concerned.

The best paper by far of the evening was written and read by Judge Richie of Lima, and elicited the greatest applause. It was at once logical, philosophical, and beautiful. His conclusion was that Spiritualism had a rational basis. The Berean Baptist minister told of numerous phenomena in his own experience. Several other ministers talked a good deal and said nothing, and two of them took this occasion to exhort a little and implore the audience assembled to let Spiritualism alone, and attend the services of the divinely appointed ministers of Lima.

Your humble servant closed the debate, and modesty forbids that I relate more than this. I received the hearty applause of all present (except the two preachers aforementioned), and the congratulations of any number of the parties present. The debate was held in parties present. The debate was held in the Circuit Court room, which was filled to overflowing.

On the following Sunday our meetings were doubled in attendance. This week we have an expose of Spiritualism by Rev. E. H. Caylor, of Columbus, and I accordingly expect our house to be full on next Sunday.

I must not forget to mention the splendid work of the Ladies' Aid Society, they have a splendid president in Mrs. Martin, and as they have taken hold of the music for the regular services, I for one feel that success is ours in the field.

I shall serve this society all of December. Will be in Toledo, Ohio for January. February is still open. For March, I go to Kansas City. April is still open, also the first three Sundays in June, which I should like to engage in Michigan. The last Sunday of that month I will serve the Old South-West Michigan Society at their annual meeting to be held at Lake Cora.

Correspondence solicited for open dates, week night engagements, also camp-meetings of 1897. Wishing all the readers of The Progressive Thinker a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year, I am, faithfully yours.

DR. ADAH SHEEHAN.

There are many ways of being frivolous; only one way of being intellectually great; that is honest labor.—Sydney Smith.

EARNEST WORDS.

Many Items of Interest from Philadelphia.

Food for Reflection, Furnished by a Worker.

The historic city of Philidelphia is in the midst of a religious revival. Frantic efforts are being made by the leaders of the various Christian churches to obtain new recruits for the "Army of the Lord." Churches of different denominations have combined for the time and revival meetings are held every evening. On special occasions all-day services are held. A house-to-house visitation has been made for the purpose of ascertaining why people are not regular attendants at some church, and it has been discovered that only one in four attend any.

Not content with this, neighborhood prayer-meetings are held. The writer was the recipient of a card of invitation to join with the immediate neighbors and pray for thirty minutes. For the time the city is in a state of superficial holiness, owing to the presence of these evangelists. Over thirty-five hundred people were present at one meeting yesterday.

A parade under the auspices of the revivalists was one of the features of a locality where the people are starving for the necessities of life. Three thousand men and women tramped through the streets in the name of Jesus, under the influence of a hypnotic spell which made them think that the world was well lost for the sake of Christ. Under the circumstances we think that the money collected for the purpose of defraying the expenses of these meetings could have been better expended to help those in need. In one of the smaller churches, a member proudly boasted that at one session they had collected five hundred dollars towards revival expenses. This was in one of the poorer sections of the city. Nearly all the Protestant churches are in the combine.

While the revivalists are preaching the Golden Rule and salvation through the blood of Christ, an attempt is being made to precipitate another attack upon the mediums here. The boast has been made that Philadelphia shall be cleared from all taint of Spiritualism, and the revivalists threaten to help do away with the unholy thing. At the same time one of the prominent leaders of the evangelistic work delivered an eloquent sermon on "Ministering Angels" and illustrated it by referring to the accounts of how in ancient times angels were permitted to hold converse with mortals. It never occurred to his listeners that "ministering angels" still seek to bless mankind through the mediums of to-day, though in these modern times we simply call them the spirits of those who have left the mortal form.

PETITION TO THE LEGISLATURE.

The petition to the Legislature asking for the amendment of the law under which our mediums were arrested, is being quietly circulated for signatures. It is to be hoped that every true Spiritualist will do something to help swell the number of signatures, by sending to the writer for a copy of the petition and securing signers thereto.

The time is drawing near when it ought to be presented, and it should carry the force of numbers with it Every citizen of Pennsylvania, in fact every citizen of the United States who is a true Spiritualist, should be proud to help in this battle for the rights of mediums.

SPIRITUALISM OR CHRISTIAN SPIRITUALISM, WHICH?

The controversy in The Progressive Thinker concerning Christian Spiritualism is worthy of reprinting in pamphlet form. As one reads, it is apparent that there is a vast difference of opinion concerning the question. We can readily understand how those who have been dominated by the mind-enslaving creeds of Christianity, and have not grown away from them entirely, should seek to attach the word Christian to Spiritualism, but how can anyone who reflects upon the past history of Spiritualism, as well as upon the persecution of the Spiritualists by the advocates of the Christian church, seek to limit Spiritualism by attaching to it any qualification whatever?

Surely Spiritualism embraces everything which is needful, without any appendage, especially such an incongruous one. Before we know it, if this tendency continues we shall be discussing the question of Episcopal Spiritualism, Methodist Spiritualism, Presbyterian Spiritualism, etc., etc.

The discussion referred to brings forcibly to mind the anxious investigation which preceded the acceptance of Spiritualism by the writer. First came the doubt of the necessity of Christianity for salvation, as claimed by its teachers. Afterwards came the questions asked the clergy, and their refusal to discuss the matter. Then came the writer's resolution to examine the evidences for herself, and determination to stand by the result, cost what it might.

The result of impartial investigation was first, Materialism, with the dreary thought of an endless sleep as a termination of the struggles of human life. Then Spiritualism came like a ray of light piercing the gloom, since which time there has been no looking back. In all the years since the writer accepted Spiritualism, though at times the way seemed dark, there has never been a moment when it was possible to take a backward step, which would be done should the attempt be made to tincture Spiritualism with the teachings of Christianity.

The important question was, which should be accepted, Spiritualism, Materialism or Christianity? Every instinct of the soul loudly proclaimed Spiritualism, and earnest investigation proved that it needed no qualification whatever, and to attach the word Christian was to stultify reason by attempting to amalgamate truth and error.

CONGRESS OF SPIRITUALIST LECTURERS.

In The Progressive Thinker of October 24, the writer made a suggestion as follows:

"Would it not be well to have a Congress of lecturers and workers in the cause of Spiritualism? I believe in an honest difference of opinion, but feel sure that if the suggestion was carried out in the right spirit great good would be the result of such a Conference. Such a Congress might come in connection with the National Spiritualists' Association Convention. In a measure the Convention is such a Congress. Let some one take up this thought, and express an opinion on it. If the representatives of the world's religions could come together and be benefited, surely a Congress composed of those who are the instruments of the spirit-world might accomplish much more."

The above has found response in the appeal of Mr. G. W. Kates for the formation of an association of lecturers on Spiritualism for their mutual benefit. This is a step in the right direction. Such an association would materially aid in building up the Spiritualistic societies generally. Those who labor in the field view with regret the condition of things. The report of the societies made to the last Convention of the N. S. A. was such as to make one wonder what the Spiritualists are doing. As chairman of the Committee on Delegates' Reports at the last National Convention, the writer was astounded to learn of the apathy which existed in the matter of supporting the local societies. Out of one hundred and fifty chartered societies, about forty reported, and in some instances claimed a membership of seven, and in four instances reported that only two meetings had been held each year. Twenty-three societies reported a membership of from seven to fifty, and but very few of the societies gave encouraging reports. In several instances the society was reported as being practically disbanded, and in some cases had given up in discouragement. The above statement must appeal to the thinker, who will see that the most important work to be done is to plan and carry out some effective measures for changing this state of things.

With the chartered societies in this condition, no wonder the officials of the N. S. A. have to bend every energy to secure money to meet necessary expenses. The fact is that the societies have all they can do, under the present state of affairs, to meet their own expenses, and consequently feel the burden of extra collections for outside purposes. One prominent society through its secretary said that "charity begins at home," though where the charity comes in we fail to see. The N. S. A. must have money if it continues to exist. Last year the expense of running the N. S. A. was five thousand six hundred dollars, and the president said that this year it would require over seven thousand dollars to carry on the work. The chartered societies cannot bear this burden unaided.

The president surely earns his salary, and rent, printing, postage and clerical expenses must be met. The laborer is worthy of his hire, and Spiritualists should be willing to not only give to the N. S. A. but to support the local work as well.

Twenty-five thousand dollars are asked for the purpose of holding a jubilee of Spiritualism, and each society is asked to take up a special collection for this purpose. A Temple fund of 100,000 is being gathered for the purpose of having a temple in Washington. No wonder the officers of the societies complain, and say that the duty of the Spiritualists is to support the local work first, the special work afterwards.

THE SPIRITUALIST PRESS.

Do the Spiritualists do their duty in this direction? How many of them feel called upon to subscribe for at least one paper each year? Those who can afford it ought to subscribe for a friend as a New Year's gift. In this way the light perhaps will be brought to some who otherwise would never know of it. It would be a good plan for the officers of the societies to call attention to this matter at their Sunday meetings, and endeavor to secure subscribers.

THE FIRST ASSOCIATION OF SPIRITUALISTS

of Philadelphia is flourishing, one of the best halls in the city has been secured, and it is the intention of the members to establish the society on a more solid foundation. The speakers have been Mr. A. E. Tisdale, Mr. Mac Elrey, Oscar A. Edgerly, Mrs. Minnie A. Brown, the well known resident medium, and the writer. The hall is Warner Music Hall, and is located at Broad and Wallace streets. The people show their appreciation of our efforts by subscribing liberally to meet the expenses. This month W. J. Colville is the speaker and is attracting large audiences. J. W. Fletcher comes in January, followed by Mrs. A. M. Glading in February. The music is in charge of Mrs. E. Haslam, assisted by a choir, with Prof. J. W. Caume as organist. The seating capacity of the hall is one thousand persons. An orchestrion costing two thousand dollars adorns the rostrum, and is used upon special occasions.

A Helping Hand Society has been organized in connection with the Association. Under its auspices Mr. Colville is giving a course of lessons in Spiritual Science on Monday afternoon and evening of each week. In conclusion the writer appeals to the Spiritualists of Pennsylvania to aid in obtaining signatures to the petition to the Legislature. Only by persistent effort can we succeed in wiping out the obnoxious law, or amending it so that our mediums can be protected. It is well enough to appeal for help from the spirit-world, but Spiritualists have their duty to do. Please send for a petition and help the good cause along.

Always for the defense of genuine mediumship, and unadulterated Spiritualism. M. E. CADWALLADER.

Philadelphia, Pa. Dec. 12, 1896.

THE HOME CIRCLE.

To the Editor:—Permit me to say a few words through your interesting paper. My husband, who is a medium, but has never been under control, is not one to make a show of what he sees and hears from the next world. He is not one of the kind, who imagines a thing, and then tells it for the truth. We held a circle at our home with our little family, an aunt, uncle and neighbor. While we were all sitting around the table, and the room was light enough so that we could see each other, my husband saw a most beautiful bouquet of flowers. A few evenings after, and when he was not holding a circle, he saw a school of about fifteen or twenty young men and ladies, and a teacher explaining something to them, but he could not understand what it was. So, let us bear in mind that when our loved ones leave this earth, they have teachers to guide and instruct them, and to show them a better way to live. He has been told by those from the spirit-land to spread the truth, and he does so whenever he has an opportunity.

We both take great pleasure in reading the grand thoughts brought out in your paper. We are like a good many others. We do not believe in putting the name Christian, to our grand truths which we receive through Spiritualism. We believe in being either one or the other. MRS. ALFRED BAILY.

"Human Culture and Cure. Part First. The Philosophy of Cure. (Including Methods and Instruments)." By E. D. Babbitt, M.D., LL.D. A very instructive and valuable work. It should have a wide circulation, as it well fulfills the promise of its title. For sale at this office. Price, 75 cents.

"Religious and Theological Works of Thomas Paine." Contains his celebrated "Age of Reason," and a number of letters and discourses on religious and theological subjects. Cloth binding, 430 pages. Price $1. For sale at this office.

"Talleyrand's Letters to the Pope" will be found especially interesting to all who would desire to make a study of Romanism and the Bible. The historic facts he states, and his keen, scathing review of Romish ideas and practices should be read by all. Sold at this office. Price 25 cents.

PSYCHIC SURPRISES.

Remarkable Tests Given by Senor de Ovies.

THE X-RAYS OF THE SOUL—LECTURE BEFORE THE SOCIETY OF PSYCHICAL RESEARCH — WHERE THE SOUL IS PLACED—ACTION OF ETHER WAVES ON THE SPIRITUAL EYE.

The Buffalo (N. Y.) Psychical Research Society met on Sunday, December 6th, at Dr. Sarah Morris's home on Franklin Street, to listen to Senor Julian deOvies on "The X-Rays of Psychology a Known Quantity."

Senor de Ovies spoke for over an hour on the fundamental principles of psychology, pointing out the mistake participated in quite generally even by savants, that psychology was the science of the mind as it affected the properties of the five senses, and as their functions are known and observed. It is not in this way that the lecturer treated his subject. He went further than this.

With the physical eye man can see objects. His range of vision can pierce a limited distance in space. All this his mental eye can do, and much more. The mental eye is restricted by no distance limitations. Senor de Ovies taught that the blind man whose sightless orbs stare into vacancy in a physical sense, can yet see by means of his mental eye. He dispelled the terrors of blindness. Not by word of mouth did he prove his assertion, but he essayed to give practical demonstrations of its truth. The audience, which filled all the available space in the parlors, listened with rapt attention to the truly wonderful doctrines voiced by the lecturer, and when it came to demonstrating his beliefs, and expositions of the powers of the mental eye were given, the audience was spell-bound. It is hard to believe that a blind man can read a book. Yet he did it. He gave answers blindfold to written questions which he had never seen. He distinguished colors by the sense of feeling alone. More than this, he distinguished colors without so much as touching them.

But before making these demonstrations he explained the reasons why they were made possible. He said that he was not possessed of any occult gifts peculiar to himself. Any person, excepting a fool or an imbecile, had within him this mind's eye which could be brought under control if a proper knowledge of the workings and possibilities were understood. The student in psychical research educates the god within him, while the physical man only educates the animal within him. The X-Ray can only please that sense called sight, while the X-Ray of the soul is that which sees because it feels. When we see objects with our soul's eye, we need no sense of touch; we need no physical eyes to see, nor ears to hear.

He cited the case of the famous Miss Rellar, who is blind, deaf and dumb, yet reads, and writes on subjects which a person with a physical sight would think were absolutely imperative to see in order to describe. She is enabled to do this by the X-Ray of the soul which every man and woman possesses.

"Jesus Christ never came on earth to mystify us," said Senor de Ovies. "The development of psychical power belongs to every one of us, and can be assisted by proper diet, proper mode of living, charity, love to all, and other aids to a more rapid development. The soul is the real 'us,' the ego. When we speak of the mind of man in the generally accepted sense, we make a mistake. It has nothing to do with the soul, whatsoever. There is an enveloping something which surrounds and is attached to the body of every being by a cord. This is called the ora. This ora may go far from the body, may cross lands and seas, but it is still connected with the body by this inseparable cord which acts as an agent of communication between the two.

"A gland is situated at the base and back part of the brain which is known to psychics as the pineal eye," said the speaker. "I defy any anatomist to explain any physical function for this gland. It is the seat of the soul."

Senor de Ovies then gave very interesting demonstrations of the science. He exhibited several pieces of different colored cloths, and said he would show that a person carefully blindfolded can tell the different colors by sense of touch. Three subjects in the audience volunteered their services. One was blindfolded so as to preclude any possibility of seeing. A disinterested person then gave the subject one of the pieces of cloth to touch with the fingers. Promptly the subject would tell the color. This demonstration was several times repeated. Last of all the lecturer himself showed the remarkable capabilities of the mental eye.

First his eyes were closed and sealed with adhesive plasters. Two napkins were folded over his eyes, and bound on with a black handkerchief. An assistant volunteered to wave the cloths before his face, and he told each seperate color. Members of the audience passed handkerchiefs and different colored articles to test the lecturer. This exhibition was explained as the results of ether waves acting on the soul's eye.

But most surprising was the concluding exhibition. Several notes were written on paper and passed to Senor de Ovies, blindfolded as before. By touching the writing his "soul's eye" read the contents, and he readily wrote correct answers to the notes. Books were given him. He would place his hand over the printing and tell the title of the book.

"Human Culture and Cure. Marriage, Sexual Development, and Social Upbuilding." By E. D. Babbitt, M. D., LL.D. A most excellent and very valuable work, by the Dean of the College of Fine Forces, and author of other important volumes on Health, Social Science, Religion, etc. Price, cloth, 75c. For sale at this office.

"The Priest, the Woman, and the Confessional." This book, by the well-known Father Chiniquy, reveals the degrading, impure influences and results of of the Romish confessional, as poved by the sad experience of many wrecked lives. Price, by mail, $1. For sale at this office.

"Encyclopedia of Biblical Spiritualism: or a Concordance of the Principal Passages of the Old and New Testament Scriptures which prove or imply Spiritualism; together with a brief history of the origin of many of the important books of the Bible." By Moses Hull. The well-known talented and scholarly author has here embodied the results of his many years' study of the Bible in its relations to Spiritualism. As its title denotes, it is a veritable encyclopedia of information on the subject. Price $1. For sale at this office.

"The Gospel of Buddha, According to Old Records," Told by Paul Carus. This book is heartily commended to students of the science of religions, and to all who would gain a fair conception of Buddhism in its spirit and living principles. Spiritualist or Christian can scarcely read it without spiritual profit. Price $1. For sale at this office.

A REMARKABLE DOCTOR BOOK

HAS JUST BEEN ISSUED, ENTITLED

THE NATURE CURE

BY PHYSICAL AND MENTAL METHODS.

A BRIDGE FROM THE OLD TO THE NEW; THE DAWN OF A NEW DAY IN MEDICAL PRACTICE. A CLEAR, SHORT-CUT TREATISE ON THE CAUSE AND CURE OF DISEASE.

By MARVIN E. CONGER, M. D.
Assisted by ROSA C. CONGER, M. D.

The title page is suggestive of important changes in the methods of curing the sick and maintaining health.

THE NATURE CURE is divided into twelve chapters, as follows:

First—Introductory.
Second—Cause of Disease.
Third—Food and Drink.
Fourth—Exercise.
Fifth—Fevers; Cause and Treatment.
Sixth—Disease Inflammatory.
Seventh—Epidemic and Chronic Disease.
Eighth—Baths.
Ninth—Women and Children. (By Rosa C. Conger, M. D.)
Tenth—Useful Recipes.
Eleventh—Object Lessons and Tables.
Twelfth—Miscellaneous Health Suggestions.

Read their definition of medicine: "Any method or remedy that will remove or modify pain without injury, and restore the sick to a normal condition is practical medicine."

The new and better methods of curing the sick and preventing disease have never been so clearly stated in plain English, for the plain people, as in NATURE CURE.

It is claimed for this book that it is the most complete doctor book ever published, and sold at the lowest price. It is claimed that disease is not a technical, mysterious, theoretical condition or subject, but only a fact that all may understand. More experience, study and time have been expended to evade and pervert the truth, and deceive the people for obtaining money, than to teach the truth and save life and health. THE NATURE CURE reaches the case of this important subject.

The book has 370 pages, is strongly and handsomely bound in cloth for $2.00, and will be mailed upon receipt of price.

ADDRESS THIS OFFICE, 40 LOOMIS STREET, CHICAGO, ILL

The Molecular Hypothesis OF NATURE.

BY PROF. W. M. LOCKWOOD.

The only treatise ever offered the reading and thinking public in the interest of modern Spiritualism, that is absolutely free from the theories of superstition, and which

Demonstrates continuity of life and our environment of spiritual influences, from the data of modern physical and physiological science.

To the Spiritualist, an impregnable foundation of scientific data and verified facts.

To the materialist and skeptic, a revelation of the invisible energies operative in Nature's formula of evolution.

To the ecclesiastic, a new heaven and a new earth. A book to read, to study and think about. A condensed volume of scientific information for 25 cents. Address your orders to

The Progressive Thinker, 40 Loomis street,

MAHOMET,

His Birth, Character and Doctrine.

BY EDWARD GIBBON.

This is No. 6 of the Library of Liberal Classics. It is conceded to be historically correct, and so exact and perfect in every detail as to be practically beyond the reach of adverse criticism. This work will be found intensely interesting. Price, 25c. Sold at this office.

THE GOSPEL OF BUDDHA,

According to Old Records.

BY DR. PAUL CARUS.

A translation from Japanese, made under the auspices of the Rev. Shaku Soyen, delegate to the Parliament of Religions. Was lately published in Japan. Price $1. For sale at this office.

IMMORTALITY,

...OR...

FUTURE HOMES AND DWELLING PLACES.

BY DR. J. M. PEEBLES.

AN INVALUABLE WORK!

This admirable work contains what a hundred spirits, good and evil, say of their dwelling-places. Give us details—details and accurate delineations of life in the Spirit-world!—is the constant appeal of thoughtful minds. Death is approaching. Whither—oh, whither! Shall I know my friends beyond the tomb? Will they know me? What is their present condition, and what their occupations? In this volume the spirits, differing as they may, are allowed to speak for themselves. No man is better qualified than Dr. Peebles to place a work of this kind before the people. He treats of the Mysteries of Life; Doubts and Hopes; The Bridging of the River; Foregleams of the Future; Testimony of Saints; The Growth and Perfection of the Spiritual Body; Is it the Soul or Body that Sins?; Clothing in the Spirit-world; Our Little Ones in Heaven; The Personal Experiences of Aaron Knight; The Red Man's Testimony; Evil Spirits; Testimony of Physicians in Spirit-Life; The Homes of Apostles and Divines; The Friends and Shakers in Spirit-Life; Spirit Homes of Bruno and Others; Many Voices from the Spirit-Land. Many other matters are treated, too numerous to mention. Price $1.50; postage, 12 cents. For sale at this office.

TWO IN ONE

A COMBINATION OF

"The Question Settled" and "The Contrast" Into one Volume.

BY MOSES HULL.

This highly instructive and interesting work is a combination into one volume of two of Mr. Hull's splendid works. By this arrangement the cost is such that the reader is enabled to secure the two books combined at the same price as was formerly asked for them separately. This volume contains 462 pages and is handsomely bound in cloth, and contains an excellent portrait of the author.

THE QUESTION SETTLED

is a careful comparison of Biblical and Modern Spiritualism. No book of the century has made so many converts to Modern Spiritualism as this. The author's aim, faithfully to compare the Bible with modern phenomena and philosophy, has been accomplished. The adaptation of Spiritualism to the wants of humanity; its moral tendency; the Bible Doctrine of angel ministry; the spiritual nature of man, and the objections offered to Spiritualism, are all considered in the light of the Bible, nature, history, reason and common sense, and expressed clearly and forcibly.

THE CONTRAST

consists of a critical comparison of Evangelicalism and Spiritualism. It is a most able production, and is a perfect storehouse of facts for those who wish to defend Spiritualism, or find arguments against the assumptions of Orthodoxy.

PRICE $1. FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

THE SPIRITUAL ALPS AND HOW WE ASCEND THEM.

Or a few thoughts on how to reach that altitude where spirit is supreme and all things are subject to it. With portrait. By MOSES HULL. Just the book to teach you that you are a spiritual being, and to show you how to educate your spiritual faculties. Price, bound in cloth, 40 cents; in paper cover, 25 cents. For sale at this office.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRIT — AND — THE SPIRIT WORLD.

BY HUDSON TUTTLE.

A most able and interesting presentation of a most important subject. Every Spiritualist and every inquirer into the proofs and philosophy of Spiritualism should have this excellent book. Its value is recognized and acknowledged all over the world. Price, cloth, $1. For sale at this office.

COSMIAN HYMN BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF

Original and Selected Hymns

For Liberal and Ethical Societies, for Schools and the Home.

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN.

This volume meets a public want. It comprises 258 choice selections of poetry and music, embodying the highest moral sentiment, and free from all sectarianism. Price 50 cents. Sold at this office.

PERFECT MOTHERHOOD

Or Mabel Raymond's Resolve.

BY LOIS WAISBROOKER. THIS IS a novel written with a purpose, and that purpose is not merely to enable an unthinking, idle mind to while away the time in a state of idle blessedness, devoid of earnest thought or care for either self-improvement or the good of humanity. It is a book designed especially, primarily, for mothers and those who are to be mothers; and secondly, through the mothers, to effect the well-being and happiness of the race. It brings strongly and clearly to view the result upon the child of proper surroundings and influences bearing upon the mother previous to maternity. Incidentally the author touches upon various things in modern social and business life, which are unjust and fix unequal burdens upon the individuals composing society as a whole. The book is trenchant, instructive and very interesting, even when regarded merely as a novel, and is especially commended to "women everywhere," to whom it is dedicated. It also thoroughly shows up the Jesuitical spirit of the Catholic Church; advanced ideas relating to the Spiritual philosophy are introduced. It contains a fine likeness of the author. It contains 345 pages, neatly bound in cloth. Price by mail, prepaid, $1.

ANGELL PRIZE CONTEST RECITATIONS.

To Advance Humane Education in All Its Phases.

BY EMMA ROOD TUTTLE.

Lyceums and Societies that wish to get up elevating, interesting and paying entertainments cannot do better than to have a Prize Contest. The entire plan, with full directions, is in the book, and may be easily managed. Nothing kindles enthusiasm more quickly than an Angell Prize Contest! Nothing is needed more. Any individual may organize one in his own town and reap a financial reward.

TRY IT! PRICE, 30 CENTS.

Address

EMMA ROOD TUTTLE,
Berlin Heights, Ohio.

Soul of Things; or Psychometric Researches and Discoveries.

BY WM. AND ELIZABETH M. F. Denton. A marvelous work. Though concise as a text-book, it is as fascinating as a work of fiction. The reader will be amazed to see the curious facts here combined in support of this newly-discovered power of the human mind, which will resolve a thousand doubts and difficulties, make Geology as plain as day, and throw light on all the grand subjects now obscured by time.

Soul or Things—Vol. I.
Cloth.....$1.50
Postage 10 cents.

Soul of Things—Vol II.
Illustrated. 450 pp. Cloth.....$1.50
Postage 10 cents.

Soul of Things—Vol. III.
Illustrated. 862 pp. Cloth.....$1.50
Postage 10 cents.

THE TALMUD.

Selections from the contents of that ancient book; its commentaries, teachings, poetry, and legends. Also brief sketches of the men who made and commented upon it. By H. Polano. 339 pp. Price cloth, $1.00.

WAYSIDE JOTTINGS.

Gathered from the Highways, By-ways and Hedges of Life. By MATTIE E. HULL. This is a marvelously neat book of selections from Mrs. Hulls best poems, sermons and essays, and contains a splendid portrait of the author, also a portrait of Moses Hull. Price neatly bound in English cloth, $1. For sale at this office.

SOCIAL UPBUILDING,

Including Co-operative Systems and the Happiness and Ennoblement of Humanity. By E. D. Babbitt LL.D., M.D. This comprises the last part of Human Culture and Cure. Paper cover, 15c. For sale at this office.

JOAN, THE MEDIUM.

Or, the Inspired Heroine of Orleans. Spiritualism as a Leader of Armies. By MOSES HULL. This is at once the most truthful history of Joan of Arc, and one of the most convincing arguments on Spiritualism ever written. No novel was ever more thrillingly interesting; no history more true. Price in cloth, 40 cents; paper cover, 25 cents. For sale at this office.

SPIRITS IN A PLAY—WRITTEN BY VICTORIEN SARDOU AND TO BE PLAYED BY SARA BERNHART—SOMETHING BRAND NEW.

Theatre goers, says the New York Herald, will be interested to know that M. Victorien Sardou, the eminent French playwright, is writing a play on Spiritualism. The title of the play is "Spiritisme," and it will be performed at the Renaissance Theatre, with Mme. Sara Bernhart as the leading figure. There are three acts in the piece and twelve characters—seven men and five women. The scene during the first two acts is laid at Saint-Jean-de-Luz, and during the third act at Quiberon. A rehearsal has already been held, during which Mme. Bernhart became so affected at one or two pathetic passages that, the story goes, she wept copiously.

The characters are of distinct individuality and full of vigor. Valentin Clavieres, one of the leading characters, is a good fellow, a man of the world, and a general favorite. Robert d'Aubenas is a brave, honest man, and the loyal husband of Simone d'Aubenas. Manoel Clavajal, of Havana, is the Don Juan of the play, a good for nothing fellow, the lover of Simone.

Next comes Dr. Parisot, who represents materialistic science. He is one of those ultra conservative physicians who believe in nothing that they cannot see, and who keep their ears obstinately closed to what they consider new fangled theories. Matter is everything to him, and spirit nothing. The intangible, impalpable, does not exist for him. Spiritualism he does not believe in, and clairvoyance he considers a mere trick, or, perhaps, a malady like somnambulism. Quite a different character is Dr. James Douglas. He is a hard headed, shrewd Scotchman. Very impressionable and an indefatigable investigator, he is a modern scientist in the best sense of the word. He tests all theories and condemns nothing that he cannot prove to be false.

In a word, he is the exact antithesis of Dr. Parisot.

BERNHART'S NEW ROLE.

Among the women characters the principal is Simone, the wife of Robert d'Aubenas. Mme. Bernhart is to play this part, which was written for her. Those who ought to know say that she will make a great success of it. They base their opinion on the fact that Simone is just such a character as the great French actress excels in depicting. No ordinary domestic woman is Simone, but a passionate, high strung creature, whose influence is dominant from beginning to end of this strange play.

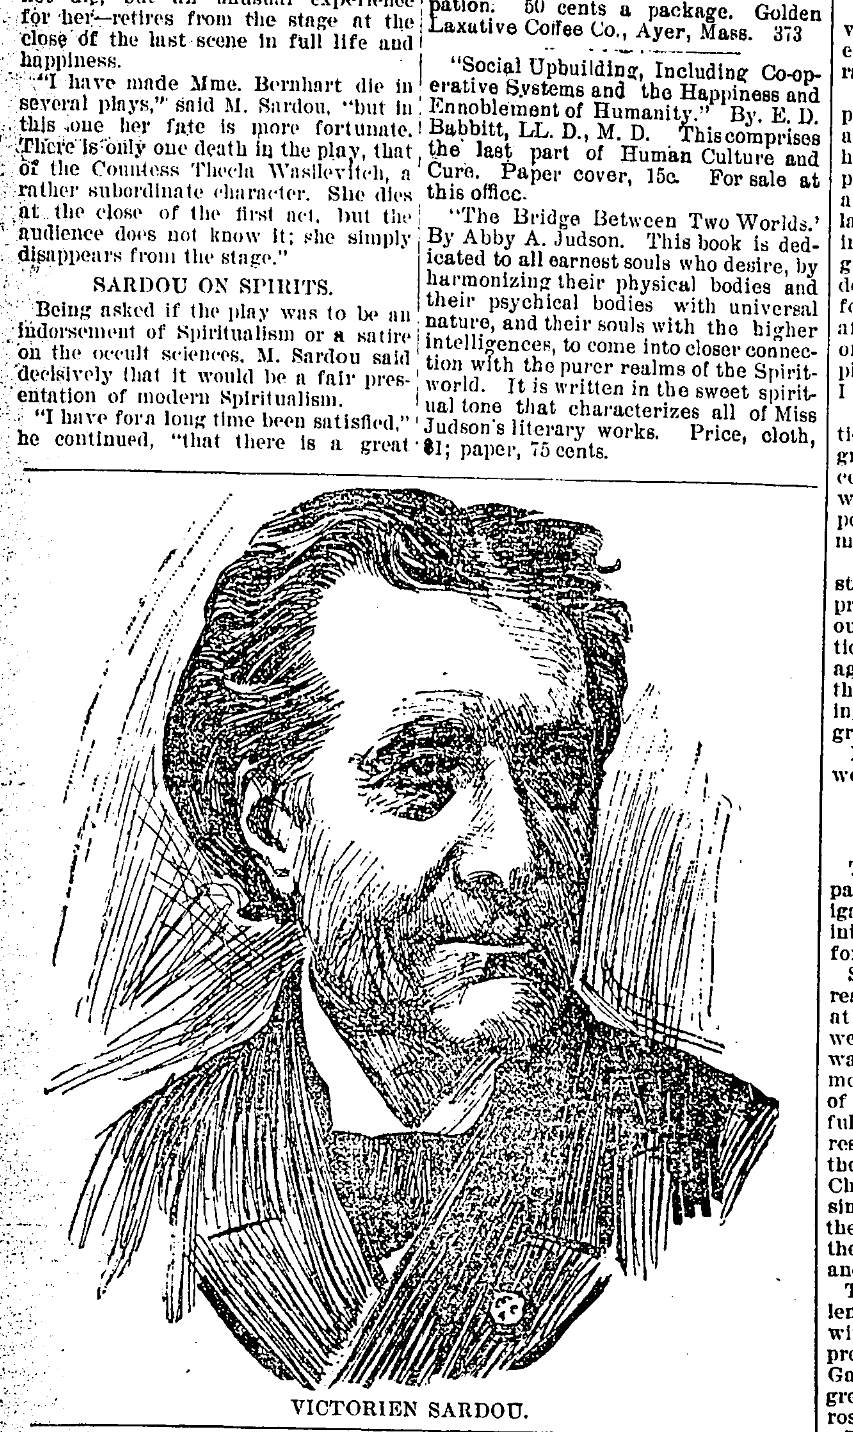
In regard to the plot, very little is known. M. Sardou, being questioned on the subject, said he did not care to divulge it.

"The play will not be performed for some time yet," he explained, "and it would be foolish to publish anything about the plot now."

Being questioned further, however, he admitted that Spiritualism would be the keynote of the play. "Spirits," he continued, "will play a leading part in the performance, and there will be a regular Spiritualistic seance, at which, among other things, tables will be turned and messages will be received from dwellers in the unseen world."

Admirers of Mme. Bernhart will be glad to learn that in this play she does not die, but—an unusual experience for her—retires from the stage at the close of the last scene in full life and happiness.

"I have made Mme. Bernhart die in several plays," said M. Sardou, "but in this one her fate is more fortunate. There is only one death in the play, that of the Countess Thecla Wasilevitch, a rather subordinate character. She dies at the close of the first act, but the audience does not know it; she simply disappears from the stage."



SARDOU ON SPIRITS.

Being asked if the play was to be an indorsement of Spiritualism or a satire on the occult sciences, M. Sardou said decisively that it would be a fair presentation of modern Spiritualism.

"I have for a long time been satisfied," he continued, "that there is a great deal in Spiritualism. For forty years I have been studying the subject, and the result is that there is no phase of Spiritualism which I have not thoroughly investigated. Moreover, I myself am a surprising medium, and I have written some astonishing things on slates. Oh, I could tell you some strange stories! And now, after so many years' study, when I see the greatest scientists in the world, among them the most renowned geologists, chemists and physicians of England, interesting themselves in these inexplicable phenomena for the simple reason that they have seen them, I flatter myself that I am entitled to be considered a forerunner of modern Spiritualists."

A few changes have been made in the dramatis personae of "Spiritisme" within the last few days. M. Guitry, who was scheduled to play the role of Valentin Clavieres, has been obliged to make room for M. Deval. M. Guitry was charmed with the part assigned to him, and the only reason why he withdrew is because he has not been of late in robust health. M. Clerget will play the part of M. Mnoel Clavajal and Darmont will impersonate Dr. James Douglas.

M. Sardou has written many original plays, but it is doubtful if he has ever written anything more original and striking than "Spiritisme."

VICTORIEN SARDOU.

IMPORTANT!

DR. C. E. WATKINS,

—THE—

FAMOUS CHRONIST,

OF AYER, MASS.

QUICK CURES! SMALL DOSES!

Send age, name in full and two 2-cent stamps and leading symptom, and we will send you a diagnosis of your case FREE, and we will try and make the price of treatment right to you. Remember, please, that we do not wish to take your case unless you are dissatisfied with your present treatment. Do not ask OUR opinion of this doctor or that one, because we never express an opinion, nor have we any one connected with us that is allowed to speak ill of any one or even to express an opinion. We know some doctors do so, but we do not.

The day of shot-gun prescription is past: drastic drugs in large doses will not be given ten years from now. We believe in the certainty of medicine and in specific medication, but specific medication requires specific diagnosis. He who understands the action of drugs, and who is gifted with the power of correctly diagnosing, is the successful physician to-day.

SPECIFIC MEDICINE! NO DRASTIC DRUGS!

A Book on "Chronic Disease" Sent for 2-cent Stamp.

C. E. WATKINS, M. D., AYER, MASS.

Golden Laxative Coffee cures constipation. 50 cents a package. Golden Laxative Coffee Co., Ayer, Mass. 373

"Social Upbuilding, Including Co-operative Systems and the Happiness and Ennoblement of Humanity." By E. D. Babbitt, LL. D., M. D. This comprises the last part of Human Culture and Cure. Paper cover, 15c. For sale at this office.

"The Bridge Between Two Worlds." By Abby A. Judson. This book is dedicated to all earnest souls who desire, by harmonizing their physical bodies and their psychical bodies with universal nature, and their souls with the higher intelligences, to come into closer connection with the purer realms of the Spirit-world. It is written in the sweet spiritual tone that characterizes all of Miss Judson's literary works. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 75 cents.

Golden Laxative Coffee cures constipation 50 cents by mail. Golden Laxative Coffee Co., Ayer, Mass. 373

"The Dead Man's Message," an occult romance by Florence Marryat. The author's wide experience in Spiritualism and her study of occult science have prepared her to write this romance, which will be found laden with gems picked up in the course of her investigation and studies. Cloth $1. For sale at this office.

"History of the Inquisition." Every citizen of our country should read this concise history of that Romish churchly institution known as the Inquisition. The animus of Romanism against all institutions, beliefs and parties not in conformity with the ruling powers of the Romish hierarchy is plainly shown in these statements of veritable history. The devilishness and murderous malignity of the "Holy Inquisition" is scarcely paralleled in all the world's records of inhuman atrocities. It is for sale at this office, and will be mailed postpaid for 25c.

"The Great Roman Anaconda." By Prof. Geo. P. Rudolph, Ph.D., ex-priest of the diocese of Cleveland, O. A sharp and pointed letter to Bishop Horstmann. It is good reading, and should be widely distributed, that people may be enlightened concerning the ways and methods of Rome and its priesthood. Price 15c. For sale at this office.

DRS. PEEBLES & BURROUGHS,

SPECIALISTS IN ALL CHRONIC DISEASES.

—Depend for their remarkable cures, not upon the old drastic drug system, but upon the knowledge of diseases and their proper remedies—upon science and the finer psychic forces.

Some of their cures, like Schlatter's, are INSTANTANEOUS; in other cases months are required.

Having carefully studied all the therapeutic agencies in connection with their long medical experience, they use those best adapted to each case with unvarying success. Hundreds are joyfully writing the Doctor: "I am better," or "I am cured." "God bless you."

THEY TREAT THE FOLLOWING: Dyspepsia, diarrhœa, dropsy, epilepsy, eczema, erysipelas, falling sickness, rheumatism, scrofula, nervous spasm, gravel, gout, headaches, heart disease, kindey complaint, female weakness, liver difficulty, neuralgia, paralysis, bleeding piles, bronchitis, asthma, bladder affection, cancer, catarrh, pimples upon the face, uterine diseases, weaknesses of men, barrenness, insanity, drunkenness, constipation la grippe and all chronic diseases. And further, they furnish

FREE TO ALL PATIENTS

Hygenic and Physiological literature, enabling them when cured, to remain healthy.

Correct Diagnosis Free,

By enclosing name, age, sex, leading symptom and stamp for reply.

REMEMBER TO ADDRESS

DRS. PEEBLES & BURROUGHS,

P. O. BOX 177,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND. 353tf

NOTES OF TRAVEL AND WORK.

To the Editor:—Since jotting my last lines to you, time has kept me busy in Buffalo, N. Y., for a fortnight, in Rochester until after Thanksgiving period. In that prosperous town, so energetic an example of early and of modern thrift, a town of all towns in which to enjoy that festive holiday, families throughout the town gather round the laden boards in circles of three and four generations, and tell, mid delights of turkey, cranberry and wine, the thrilling tales of the early settlement privations of ancestors whose graves grow green when rude landmarks were still outlain upon the site of the imposing buildings of to-day, and babbling falls and tumbling waters flowed over the rocky bed of a river which, later, was to become the servant of man's cunning brain, to help amass the wealth and power of that proud and busy center, whose electric cars daily dash busily past that whirling junction primitively known as the Four Corners.

Rchester is necessarily a town of associations, and one enjoys the enjoyment in the air (if one may use the term) afloat, on occasions of time-honored anniversary. No ragamuffin, however friendless, but is feted, feasted, and made to "count one," (generally his stomach may count for three or four) on that great feast-day of the year. Never were city's poor so amply fed, so kindly remembered as in Rochester in the spirit of the hour.

I had great pleasure while there in visiting that grand medium and earnest worker, Mrs. W. H. Gibbs. She is rarely gifted in the clairvoyant power.

A reception was given ere my departure, in Pythian Temple, and pleasant friends and kindly wishes made hours pass quickly, to be lived over in pleasing memories. Mr G. W. Kates and wife, who have been recently laboring bravely and with great success in Rochester, and who will leave legion friends behind reluctant at their departure, were just preparing to leave for other platform duties elsewhere, after stimulating among the large class of unorganized Spiritualists a healthy plan of action for organization, which I hope will bear good fruit.

And right here, speaking of organization, from observation let me say I am greatly enthused over the growing success of the Illinois State Organization which is growing so rapidly in its power and influence in the advancement of our cause.

It is with pride that we bear the standard of State Organizers for so promising a child of progression within our field, as the Illinois State Organization. I would remind those interested, again, that all information concerning the above may be obtained by addressing G. L. S. Jennifer, at No. 358 Congress street, Chicago, Ill.

Doctor and I are at present, busily at work in Indianapolis.

ELLA GIBSON MAGOON.

AN IMPRESSIVE FUNERAL.

The last sad rites, which marked the passing of Walter Offley Leeds at Michigan City, Ind., from earthly existence into the realm of the Infinite, were performed this afternoon.

Services were held at the family residence, on Spring street, beginning at 2 o'clock, which although simple, were very impresive. The address was delivered by Miss Cora L. V. Richmond, of Chicago, pastor of the Church of the Soul. Her remarks were beautiful and very well chosen. The spacious residence was crowded with friends of the deceased and family. A trio from Chicago furnished the music and their singing was especially appropriate to the sad occasion. Those who composed the trio were Mesdames Fallis, Clayson, and Jewell.

The floral offerings were choice and lent a solemn beauty to the sad scene within the home. The Citizens' bank presented a piece emblematic of the Gates Ajar and besides there were a great many smaller pieces, bouquets of roses, etc.

The funeral cortege was one of the largest ever seen in this city. At the grave, a few words were spoken and then the habitation of the spirit of the late Walter O. Leeds was lowered into the bosom of the earth. All unite in a solemn benediction: May his ashes rest in peace!

The following served as pallbearers:

A. S. Nichols	U. Culbert
B. H. Eddy	G. S. VanDusen
J. C. Pitch	W. H. Davis.

A Good Offer.

If you are sick and have failed to find relief, send your name and address to Dr. J. R. Craig, 1346 Market street, San Francisco, Cal., and he will send you a correct diagnosis. Stamps for reply. 370

Dr. E. J. Worst,

of Ashland, Ohio, will mail any reader of The Progressive Thinker one of his new Aerial Catarrh Inhalers with medicine enough for one year free. He will allow you three days as a trial, then if perfectly satisfied, send him $1; if not, return it to him in the original package. Catarrh, asthma, colds in the head, bronchitis and tuberculosis immediately relieved and speedily cured. Don't pay big prices for worthless inhalers. Address above. 376

You will find poetry nowhere unless you bring some with you.—Joubert

Mrs. Dr. Dobson-Barker,

AS A SPIRITUAL HEALER HAS NO EQUAL! . . . . .

Rejoice and Be Glad! Herald Forth the Tidings of Good Health!

DR. A. B. DOBSON'S

Healing powers are being repeated over and over again through the mediumship of MRS. DR. DOBSON-BARKER, who, for the past year and a half has

SUCCESSFULLY TREATED OVER ONE THOUSAND PATIENTS

of all diseases that flesh is heir to, and will give you proof of her powers, by sending requirements as per small advertisement for diagnosis of your case. Here is one of her many cures:

St. Louis, June 21, 1896.

MY DEAR MRS. DOBSON:—I herewith enclose $1.15 for another month's remedies for my sister, Emma. I can't tell you how much good these medicines do her and how thankful and grateful we are for having applied for them. When she began taking this last medicine, she had considerable distress in the bowels and stomach, but after a week she was relieved and we are convinced if she had not the medicine she would have had a serious sick spell as liver, stomach and bowels were in a bad condition. Now everything seems in good order; still we feel as if more medicine will eventually cure all her ailments. We thank you sincerely for prompt reply, and wish you all the success you so well merit.

With affectionate regards, very truly,
REBECCA LEVY.

3381 Laclede ave., St. Louis Mo

A MUSICAL PRODIGY.

He Is Undoubtedly a Marvelous Medium,

And Will Some Day Startle the World.

The New York special correspondent of the Chicago Chronicle states that Mrs. George Gould has discovered a musical prodigy, who will some day probably startle the world. He is only seven years old, yet can play on thirteen different instruments, and play them well. His favorite one is the piano, with the violin and guitar as second best. He is so small, that when he perches himself on a piano stool or on a bench in front of the organ, his feet do not touch the pedals. Both of the child's parents are musically inclined, and the lad demonstrated when four years old that he had talent in the same direction. A caller had been to his home and played some pieces of an ordinary character on the piano, which interested him greatly.

He insisted on being lifted on the piano stool, and when placed there proceeded to pick out the notes of several airs that had just been played. At first he only used one hand, but as soon as he had mastered an air with his right hand the fingers of his left hand would go wandering about the bass notes as if in search of the chords. When he struck a false note his little forehead would pucker itself into a frown, but when he found the proper harmony a smile would replace the frown and he would evince every indication of delight.

Since that occasion he has been allowed free sway at the piano. He sits there for an hour at a time, playing pieces he has heard others play, and then will improvise beautiful harmonies that are simply marvelous for a child of his age. Of course, his ability to strike all the chords is limited by the fact that his fingers are chubby and short. He was given a guitar a short time ago and surprised everyone in the room by picking out the notes of an air that had just been played. Of course, the scale had to be shown to him and explained at first.

His most remarkable work was done on the violin. He had never seen one until a friend of the family brought one to the house and it was decided to play it in his presence and observe the effect on him. He watched the player very carefully and examined the instrument critically. Then the musician showed him the notes. He took the bow in his hands and holding the violin in the proper position played the scale on one string. He became greatly excited at once and then asked the gentleman to tune it for him. This was done, but the length of time seemed to annoy him.

"Now let me have it! Let me have it!" he exclaimed.

The instrument was handed to him and he at once began to reproduce the air the caller had played. He has been encouraged greatly in all sorts of trick playing, and his parents are proud of the fact that he can play the piano blindfolded when the keyboard is covered with a cloth. He has never been allowed to try a wind instrument, for fear it might affect his lungs. The little fellow's name is Walter Billings, and his parents reside on Central avenue.

Mrs. George Gould, who is herself a talented musician, has decided that the boy shall have a thorough musical education if his parents will permit it. She is very enthusiastic over the lad's abilities and has characterized him as the wonder of the age.

Everything indicates unmistakably that this child is a medium whose finely attuned organization is operated upon by invisible spirit forces, without whose influences he would be unable to perform the marvelous musical feats recorded of him. SPIRITUS.

Constipation cured by that pleasant drink, Golden Laxative Coffee. 50 cents by mail. Golden Laxative Coffee Co., Ayer, Mass. 373

"Mahomet, the Illustrious." By Godfrey Higgins, Esq. (Library of Liberal Classics.) No author was better qualified to write an impartial and honest life of Mahomet than Godfrey Higgins, and this volume is intensely interesting. It should be readin conjunction with Gibbon's work. For sale at this office. Price, 25 cents.

"The Woman's Bible. Part I. The Pentateuch. Comments on Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy." The contrast between the thoughts of these brave women and the thoughts of the orthodox world during all time past, is very striking. Keen analysis, ripe scholarship and fearless adherence to the right, characterize this very interesting effort of some of the brightest minds of to-day. For sale at this office. Price 50 cents.

"Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated." Church people are cautioned not to open this book, as its comical pictures, based on Bible texts, tend to induce uncontrollable levity. It is a book for the freethinker who wishes to rest from busy cares, and drive away ennui. Price, in strong board covers, $1: cloth $1.50. For sale at this office.

A new edition of "Three Sevens," by the Phelon's, is just issued. The May Arena says: "The gist of such books as Dr. Phelon's "Three Sevens," and other works descriptive of or alluding to the various occult societies, which seem to have existed for ages, has never, until recently, been said so openly and plainly that 'he who runs may read.'" Cloth $1.25, postpaid. For sale at this office.

SPECIAL READING NOTICES.

Mothers will find "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" the best to use for children while teething. An old and well tried remedy.

SPIRITUALIST BADGES.

EVERY . . . . SPIRITUALIST SHOULD WEAR THE SUNFLOWER JEWELRY.

As the Sunflower turns its face towards the sun, so Spiritualism turns the faces of humanity from darkness and superstition towards the Sunlight of Truth and Progression.

PRICES:

Rolled Plate Bar Pin	$2 25
Solid Gold Bar Pin	3 50
Electro-plate Badge	75
Rolled Plate Badge, Scarf Pin or Lapel Button	1 25
Solid Gold Badge, Scarf Pin or Lapel Button	1 75
Rolled Plate Maltese Watch Charm	3.00
Solid Gold Maltese Watch Charm	5 00
Rolled Plate Maltese Pendant	3 00
Solid Gold Maltese Pendant	5 00

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE,

40 LOOMIS STREET, CHICAGO

Spiritualist Meetings in Chicago

The Church of the Soul, at Schiller Theater, Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, pastor. Services at 10:45 a. m.

The First Spiritual Society of the South Side, New Masonic Temple, 3120 Forest avenue. Services at 2:30 and 7:30. Mrs. Ada Foye lectures and gives tests.

Beacon Light Church 617 North Clark street, near Burton Place. Services at 2:30 and 7:45 p. m., conducted by Mr. and Mrs. Geo. F. Perkins.

German Spiritualist Society, Gartelman's Hall, 13th street and Ashland avenue, Services at 3 and 8 p. m.

The Spiritual Endeavor Society meets at 1 South Hoyne avenue, 7:45 p. m. Mrs. Sarah E. Bromwell, pastor.

Spiritual Gospel Temple, Hygeia Hall, Washington boulevard and Paulina St. Services at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m.

Home Spiritualist Society, 11 Ada street, at 3 and 8. p. m.

The Church of the Spirit, Willis Edwards, pastor, meets at 620 North Clark street, at 3 and 8p. m. Lyceum at 2 p. m.

People's Home Association, Bricklayer's Hall, 93 South Peoria street. Services at 7:30 p. m.

South Side Christian Spiritual Society, Kenwood Hall, 4308 and 4310 Cottage Grove avenue. Conference meeting at 3 p. m. Lecture at 8 p. m.

The Spiritualists Church of the Students of Nature meets every Sunday evening at 7 p. m., at Monsen's Hall, 1052, Milwaukee avenue, corner Lincoln street. Mrs. M. Summers, pastor.

Spiritual Advancement Society, 794 West Van Buren street. Services at 7:45 p. m. Dr. Hasenclever will lecture and give spirit messages, assisted by other prominent mediums.

Brown's Hall, Forty-seventh and State streets. Services at 8 p. m. Lecture and tests by Dr. Harry Abbott of California.

Society of Spiritual Truth, 887 West Monroe street. Services at 8 p. m.

The First Society of Spiritual Unity will meet Sundays at 11 a. m., 3 and 7:30 p. m., in Washington Hall, 490 Washington boulevard, corner of Ogden avenue. Mrs. Mary C. Lyman, speaker.

South Side Christian Spiritualist Society, 4308 Cottage Grove avenue. Services at 3 and 7:30 p. m. Mrs. Lee Norie Claman, pastor.

The Progressive Spiritual Church, Lakeside Hall, southeast corner Indiana avenue and Thirty-first street, G. V. Cordingley, pastor. Services at 3 and 7:30 p. m. Harry W. Miller, soloist. Children's lyceum at 1:30; Bible class at 2:30.

German Spiritual Society, Hanshman's Hall, 384 W. Division street. Services 2:30 p. m. Mrs. Caroline Drews, medium.

Mrs. Caroline Drews, German trance medium, holds services at 2:30 p. m. in Hanschmann's Hall, 384 W. Division street.

The Church of the Star of Truth meets every Sunday evening, at Wicker Park Building, in the large lodge hall, on North avenue, near corner Milwaukee avenue, North avenue and Robey street. Services at 7:30 p. m. Easily reached from all parts of the city. Max Hoffman, pastor.

Spiritual meetings at 77 Thirty-first street, South Side, every Sunday at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m. Lecture and tests by Mrs. Edith E. R. Nickless.

Spiritual Church of Love, Faskin's Hall, 3012 Archer avenue. Mrs. E. J. Hanson. Children's lyceum, 2 p. m., followed by developing circle. Spiritual science at 7:30 p. m. Tests at all meetings.

Divine services in Mystic Temple, 1910 Washington boulevard near W. 40th street, at 10:45 a. m. and 7:45 p. m. Sunday-school of Love at 2 o'clock. Georgina McIntyre.

Valuable Books and Pamphlets.

We have on hand a limited number of copies of the various writings and lectures of Mrs. Maria M. King, whose name ranks high in the list of Spiritualist authors, for profundity in philosophic thought. Her elucidations of various questions pertaining to the science and philosophy of Spiritualism, as well as the related field of natural science, are truly remarkable for their depth and clearness. These books and pamphlets constitute of themselves a noble Spiritual library, of sufficient intrinsic value to worthily engage the study and thought of the wisest students in spiritual science.

Although slightly shop-worn, they are in good condition, and we offer them at reduced rates, as follows:

The Principles of Nature, as Discovered in the Development and Structure of the Universe. Material and Spiritual Magnetic Forces. Laws of Spiritual Manifestations and Mediumship. Spiritual Planes and Spheres. Given inspirationally, by Mrs. Maria M. King. In three volumes, 8vo. A remarkable work; among the greatest in the literature of Spiritualism. Price reduced from $1.75 to $1.25 per volume. Postage 12 cents.

PAMPHLETS.

The Spiritual Philosophy versus Diabolism. Two lectures by Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.

Mediumship. A chapter of Experiences. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price 10 cents.

God the Father, and the Man the Image of God. Two lectures. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.

What Is Spiritualism? and Shall Spiritualists Have a Creed? Two lectures. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.

Social Evils: Their Causes and Cure. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.

The Brotherhood of Man, and What Follows from It. Two lectures. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.

FORSTER, DR. W. M.

THE NOTED

MEDICAL CLAIRVOYANT

OF THE PACIFIC COAST.

Will send a free diagnosis and terms for treatment to all who will send their name and address—in their own handwriting—with postage stamp for reply.

"The Pacific Coast Spiritualist" of Dec. 30, 1893, says of Dr. Forster:—

"Since his coming here he has made himself highly respected and beloved for his benevolent work, his humanitarian ideas and practices, and his straightforward course of integrity and honor."

"Dr. W. M. Forster, California's noted clairvoyant physician, is receiving commendations from far and near over his remarkables success as a healer."—Philosophical Journal.

Address,

DR. W. M. FORSTER,

1059 Market Street. - San Francisco, Cal. 383

A LOCK OF YOUR HAIR.

If SICK OR AILING, send a lock of your hair, name, age, sex, leading symptom, four cents, postage, and I will diagnose your case and tell you what will cure your ailments. Address

DR. J. C. BATDORF,

Dept. F., Grand Rapids, Mich. 358tf

ASTONISHING OFFER.

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, name age, sex, one leading symptom, and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

MRS. DR. DOBSON-BARKER,

SAN JOSE, CAL., Box 132 346tf

DR. J. S. LOUCKS,

Of Shirleyville, Mass., and his band of powerful ancient spirits are effecting the most wonderful cures that have been recorded and are so acknowledged. By his clear knowledge of your diseases, aided by his marvelous spirit forces combined with his magnetic remedies, will convince the most skeptical of his wonderful power to heal the sick. Try him. Send him sex, age, name, lock of hair, and four 2-cent stamps, and he will send a diagnosis of your case free. He doesn't want any leading symptoms. Address DR. J. S. LOUCKS, Shirleyville, Massachusetts. 374

INVALIDS

WHO WILL SEND FOUR CENTS IN stamps, their disease, or symptoms, will receive pamphlet and advice FREE to cure themselves without drugs. The THOMAS BATTERY COMPANY, Cardington, Ohio tf

PSYCHOMETRY, CONSULT WITH Prof. A. B. Severance in all matters pertaining to practical life, and your spirit-friends. Send lock of hair, or handwriting, and one dollar. Will answer three questions free of charge. Send for circulars. Address, 710 Prairie street, Milwaukee, Wis. 374

MRS. ELLA M. DOLE.

This medium, who is clairvoyant, clairaudient, psychometric and prophetic, can be consulted at No. 1680 North Clark street. Engagements can be made by letter. 840tf

MRS. L. PACKER, 750 W. VAN BUREN. CLAIRvoyant, business medium. Three reasonable questions answered by mail, with stamp, 25 cents. 372

UP TO DATE CHEMISTRY OF LIFE AND GOOD HEALTH.

A powerful and well-educated intuitional healer, who teaches and cures the sick.

Send address, lock of hair, sex, age, whether married or single, location of two leading pains, and two 2-cent stamps for free diagnosis to

DR. J. H. RANDALL,

Independent Medical College, People's Institute, Chicago, Ill. 374

"LIFE AND HEALTH."

A Monthly Paper Devoted; Life and Health.

Only 25 Cents Year, or Six Subscriptions for $1.

Sample copy 1-cent stamp. Send all subscriptions to

C. E. WATKINS, M. D.,

AYER, MASS. 370tf

MRS. B. HASENCLEVER, 684 MADISON STREET. Test and trumpet circle every Tuesday at 3 and 8 o'clock. 25 cents. Materializing seance Wednesdays and Saturdays at 8. Independent slate-writing daily. 373

OBSESSION.

Obsessing influences removed: earth-bound spirits released; haunted places freed, and the sick healed by MRS. M. BERGEN BROWN, Morgan Hill, Santa Clara county, Cal. Consulting fee, one dollar. Refer to Chas. Betts, Burr Oak, Mich. 373

F. CORDEN WHITE,

Trance, Test and Business Medium. Sittings daily. 3058 Calumet avenue, corner Thirty-first street. Flat 9. Chicago, Ill. 371tf

I AM A GENTLEMAN OF SWEDISH BIRTH, but a true Spiritualist. I have means and wish to correspond with some refined Spiritualist lady of little means. Address Box 107 Greentop, Mo 371

HEALTH AND POWER.

A handbook of Cure and Human Upbuilding by the aid of new, refined and powerful methods of nature. By E. D. Babbitt, M. D., author of "Principles of Light and Color," "Philosophy of Cure," etc. Price, cloth, 25 cents; Leather, 35 cents.

MISS JUDSON'S BOOKS.

WHY SHE BECAME A SPIRITUALIST.

264 pages. One copy, $1; six copies, $5.

FROM NIGHT TO MORN; Or, An Appeal to the Baptist Church.

32 pages. One copy, 15 cents; ten copies, $1.

THE BRIDGE BETWEEN TWO WORLDS.

209 pages. One copy, bound in cloth, $1; paper, 75 cents.

For Sale at this Office, 40 Loomis Street.

ANTIQUITY UNVEILED.

The Most Important Revelations Concerning the True Origin of Christianity.

Reader, in bringing to your notice ANTIQUITY UNVEILED it is with the sincere hope that you are earnestly looking for the truth, regardless of any other consideration. If such is the case, this advertisement will deeply interest you, and after reading this brief description you will doubtless wish to give the work a careful perusal.

HYPNOTISM UP TO DATE

BY SYDNEY FLOWER.

An entertaining manual of hypnotism, useful to students of the subject. In the form of dialogue and story, the author presents very successfully a condensed account of hypnotism, its theory and practice up to date. Price, paper, 25 cts. Sold at this office.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

One hundred and forty-four propositions, theological, moral, historical and speculative; each proved affirmatively and negatively by quotations from Scripture, without comment. Price 15 cents.

PULPIT, PEW AND CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener. One of her brightest, wittiest and strongest lectures against the Bible. Every woman should read it and know her friends and enemies. Price 10 cents.

Echoes From the World of Song.

A collection of new and beautiful songs, with music and chorus, in book form. By C. P. Longley. Price $1.25. Postage 15 cents.

COLLEGE OF FINE FORCES

AN INSTITUTE OF REFINED THERAPEUTICS, including the Sun Cure, Vital Magnetism, Electricity, Mind Cure, and a higher science of life. Chemical affinity and basic principles developed with their marvelous applications. Students in four continents have taken the course. The college is chartered and confers the degree of D. M., Doctor of Magnetics. By a system of printed questions students can take the course and receive the diplomas at their own homes. Institution removed to 253 So. Broadway, Los Angeles, Cal. Diplomas granted under either the New Jersey or California charter. Send stamp for catalogue to

422 E. D. BABBITT T. M. D. LL.D., Dean

A WONDERFUL OFFER

. . BY . . .

DR. W. F. LAY, Clairvoyant,

One of the most successful healers and diagnosticians living. The doctor has letters from all over the United States, Canada, Australia and Europe, telling of the marvelous results, after all hope in other sources have been given up, being speedily cured under his treatment. Nervous and chronic diseases of every character, peculiar to both men and women, are, by the aid of his wonderful and extraordinary power, cured.

The doctor has never failed in a correct diagnosis of any case, many times it being causes that had baffled the most renowned physicians, but was readily explained through his wonderful clairvoyant and clairaudient powers.

Each case receives the attention of himself and band, also remedies for individual case. Send three 2-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, sex, and one symptom, and by return mail you will receive a full and accurate description of your case and any advice regarding it. Through persecution on account of his marvelous success the doctor graduated in a regular school, therefore being an M. D.

Sufferers, you that have failed to find relief, try once more and be convinced of Dr. Lay's powers and ability. Address

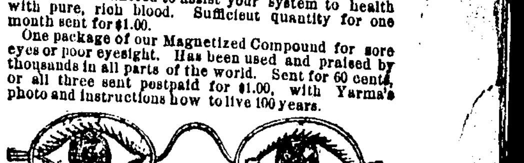
642tf DR. W. F. LAY, Box 916, Chicago, Ill.

HELIOCENTRIC ASTROLOGY.

A book containing instructions for making a heliocentric horoscope, together with a chart which gives the position of the planets from 1825 to 1916. The most complete work on this system ever published. Adapted for beginners or professors. One can cast and read a horoscope in half an hour. For sale by

FREDERICK WHITE, O. O.M.,

502 Fifth Ave., S. - Minneapolis, Minn.



Send the date of your birth and $1 and receive book and chart with your horoscope ready to read. Mention this paper when writing. 344tf

BETTER THAN GOLD.

Elixir of Life Nos. One and Two

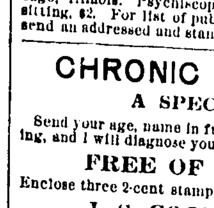
Cures all forms of stomach, liver and kidney disease; also constipation. A sure cure for that tired, worn-out feeling. Guaranteed to assist your system to health with pure, rich blood. Sufficient quantity for one month sent for $1.00.

One package of our Magnetized Compound for sore eyes or poor eyesight. Has been used and praised by thousands in all parts of the world. Sent for 60 cents, or all three sent postpaid for $1.00, with Yarma's photo and instructions how to live 100 years.

Melted Pebble Spectacles.

Restore lost vision. Write for Illustrated Circulars showing styles and prices and photo of Spirit Yarma, who developed this clairvoyant power in me. I can adjust my Melted Pebble Spectacles as perfectly to your eyes in your own home as if you were in my office, as thousands can testify. Send stamp for photo. B. F. POOLE, Clinton, Iowa.

DR. GARLAND'S



VEGETABLE COUGH DROPS

Are put up in six-ounce tin boxes and are guaranteed to give satisfaction or money will be refunded by the proprietor, Dr. M. H. Garland. Send 25 cents in stamps and receive by return mail a box of this

HOUSEHOLD REMEDY

as you will find it a blood cleanser as well as a Throat and Lung Remedy. Over 200,000 boxes sold and all recommend them. Address all orders to DR. M. H. GARLAND, 332 Sixtieth Place, Station O., Chicago, Illinois. 822tf

ORDER OF THE MAGI.

A New Badge in solid gold with blue and black enamel, with the pyramids, obelisk and sun's rays in gold. Every Mystic should have one of these beautiful emblems. Price $2. For sale at this office.

PSYCHE

Is the invention of a practical medium, under spirit guidance, and is designed to develop mediumship. Many, by its use, have received long communications from spirit friends, and express great satisfaction. Price, $1, and 20 cents extra for expressage. For sale at the office of THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER.

DR. T. WILKINS,

67 33D STREET, CHICAGO,

Treats Magnetically all Chronic Diseases, at office, or home of the patient.

J. C. F. GRUMBINE, SEER,

Is developing sensitives in Psychometry, Clairvoyance, Inspiration and Psychopathy by a series of inspirational teachings through the law of correspondence. For booklet, endorsements, terms, send an addressed and stamped envelope to J. C. F. GRUMBINE, 7820 Hawthorne Street, Station P, Chicago, Illinois. Psychiscopes, including a regular sitting, $2. For list of publications of "White Rose," send an addressed and stamped envelope. 361tf

CHRONIC DISEASES

A SPECIALTY.

Send your age, name in full in your own handwriting, and I will diagnose your disease

FREE OF CHARGE!

Enclose three 2-cent stamps and address

J. S. COOPER. M. D

Chillicothe, Mo. 384

OCCULT FORCES.

A wonderful book containing valuable matter of intense interest to all who desire in any way to benefit their condition in life, a marvel of condensed thought and brilliant ideas pointing a new way to success in all undertakings through the mastery of subtile forces.

Develop your latent powers and accomplish what would otherwise be impossible. This knowledge not only increases personal influence but fortifies one against designing and unprincipled persons. Price of [illegible] 30c or sent free to addresses of friends [illegible]

OCCULT PUB. CO., 3574 Vincennes Avenue, P. T., Chicago, Ill. 410

The Blind Medium

Will send by letter life reading of past and future, with dates. Mail lock of hair and one dollar. Prof. H. W. Sinclair. 82 Adams avenue, Detroit, Mich. 378

READ WHAT MR. ARROWSMITH, OF LOUISville, Ky., says: I had readings from all noted mediums, but St. Omer Briggs' reading surpasses them all. All her predictions came true." Consult the celebrated psychometrist and seer, MARGUERITE ST. OMER BRIGGS, 783 Richmond St., Cincinnati, O. 371

"LIFE AND HEALTH."

A Monthly Paper Devoted to Life and Health.

Only 25 Cents a Year, or Six Subscriptions for $1.

Sample copy 1-cent stamp. Send all subscriptions to

C. E. WATKINS, M. D.,

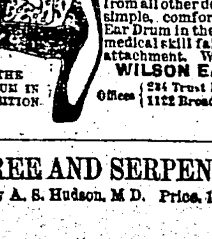
AYER, MASS. 370tf

HOROSCOPES

★ FREE For Men, Women, Young People and Children.

Send at once. PLANETS AND PEOPLE, Enclose Stamp. 169 Jackson St., Chicago.

Send 25 cents for MAGAZINE OF THE HEAVENS.



LADIES, If you have superfluous

HAIR ON THE FACE

send for new information how to remove it easily and effectually without chemicals or instruments. Correspondence confidential in plain sealed envelope. Mrs. M. N. PERRY, B-130, Oak Park, Ill.

RUPTURE SURE CURE at home; book free. Dr. W. S. Rice, box 89, Smithville, N.Y. 367 13teow and Head Noises relieved by using Wilson's Common Sense Ear Drums. New scientific invention; different from all other devices. The only safe, simple, comfortable and invisible Ear Drum in the world. Helps where medical skill fails. No wire or string attachment. Write for pamphlet.

DEAFNESS

WILSON EAR DRUM CO., Offices 224 Trust Bldg., Louisville, ky. 1122 Broadway, Room 250 N. Y.

THE DRUM IN POSITION

TREE AND SERPENT WORSHIP

By A. S. Hudson, M D. Price, 15 cents.

SCIENCE, SUPPLEMENTED BY AN EXALTED MORALITY, THE BIBLE OF THE FUTURE.

The Progressive Thinker

Progress, the Universal Law of Nature; Thought, the Solvent of Her Problems.

VOL. 15. CHICAGO, ILL., SATURDAY, JANUARY 9, 1897, NO. 372.

TALE OF THE PHILIPPINES

BY M'D ALEXANDER R. WEBB,

Formerly United States Consul at Manila.

One morning in June, before the rainy season of the tropics had set in and the sun had reached a point where its heat was uncomfortable, a native girl sat, half reclining on a pile of bamboo poles that had been drawn up on the smooth beach of Manila Bay near Cavite, the naval station of the Philippine Islands. Eight miles across the bay the dim, hazy outline of Manila, the capital city of the archipelago, could be seen when there was no fog. There was little or no breeze, the air was sultry and the water lazily lapped the smooth sand in tiny wavelets. The girl was a fair specimen of the native of to-day in whose blood there runs a strain of the Latin or Anglo-Saxon, turning the skin to a light, glossy brown and producing more symmetrical curves and outlines than are seen in the forms of the pure-blooded descendants of the aborigines. She was decidedly pretty, as she posed upon the bamboos, her long, jet-black hair carelessly draped over her right arm, completely covering the hand which was spread out gracefully to support the arm and bust. In the contour of her features there was a suggestion of her English maternal grandfather; her face was a delicate oval, her cheeks well rounded and tinged with a healthy glow, and her dark eyes were full of life and expression. Her feet and lower limbs bare to the knees, were well-shaped and the former might have been perfect had their owner worn shoes during the seventeen years of her life, instead of the hard, wooden chinelas and suecos which she wore when not barefoot. Her arms and hands were faultless in shape and looked as if they might have been molded by a sculptor. Her only clothing was a short, brightly-colored calico skirt and a low-necked muslin camisetta.

She was almost as wild and free as the sea-gulls that careened gracefully over the bay and, apparently, had no more care; nor was she less pure and innocent in thought than they. Reared from infancy among people to whom the almost nude form was a commonplace and gave no suggestion of sensuality; her mind had developed an interest in nature and her religion, rather than curious thoughts of the sexual relations.

The birds and fishes, plants and fruits were her companions and, as she could not read, they were her worldly teachers. For spiritual instruction she went to the church and the parish priest, for, like all her relatives, she was a devout Roman Catholic and a regular attendent at mass. Her remote Malay-Tagaloc ancestors had followed a system of religion which possessed characteristics of the Islamic and Buddhist, but this had been abolished when the Spaniards took possession of the islands and the Catholic missionaries began an active energetic propaganda there.

Naturally religious, the natives were attracted by the impressive ceremonial and gaudy picture and images of the church and were awed, too, by the manifestations of superior learning and intelligence on the part of their proud conquerers. Thus, in a comparatively short time the Romish church aquired complete control of the minds of this simple people and swept away the last vestige of their equally simple religious worship.

The girl's father was a fisherman who passed the night in his boat out on the bay, returning to the beach about sunrise to dispose of his catch to the market-women. His hours of sleep, therefore, were when the sun was high and his wife was attending to her little lunchstand near the market. Then the little nipa hut was closed to secure coolness and quiet, and the daughter, an only child, was at liberty to amuse herself as she pleased, provided she remained away from the hut until her father awoke.

This morning she had been scampering up and down the beach, chasing the spider-crabs or splattering the little wavelets with her bare feet and scattering them over the smooth sand until the lower hem of her skirt was quite wet. So she sat down on the bamboos to allow it to dry and take breath after her lively run.

It was the golden time of her life and all was freedom and sunshine. And yet she fell into a reverie that was not all unalloyed peace of mind and listless ease, for she began to speculate upon and make a kind of effort to analyze the conditions by which she was surrounded. Among other things it seemed to her strange and incongruous that the beautiful country which God had given to her paternal ancestors should have been boldly taken complete possession of and ruled with an iron hand by white men whose own native land was said to be hundreds of miles away beyond the China Sea. Why did they not return to their own homes and leave her and her people to enjoy their just and rightful inheritance; to fish, hunt, dress and amuse themselves as did the Tagolo of the olden times? There was plenty of food placed by God in the earth, the rivers and bay, and on the trees, and the latter furnished ample material for their huts and all the clothing they required in that hot climate. Then, too there was plenty of clay from which their dishes and cooking utensils were made. God had provided liberally for their simple needs and had made it possible for them to live happily and contentedly in peace and harmony. But the Spaniards came and placed their heels upon the necks of her ancestors and their influence had spread over the archipelago like a dark cloud—a disease-breeding miasma. They brought with them strange and extravagant customs and taught them to her people who were compelled to labor constantly and wearily to obtain the means with which to gratify them and to pay tribute to the invaders, so that the latter might live luxuriously without working. In the olden time freedom and gladness were universal; the present was dull and wearisome with labor, sorrow and oppression; the future—to her the future was a blank and she saw no reason why she should dream of it. At best it could only give her a humble nipa home and a husband who would be compelled to toil and suffer as did her father.

Just then the solemn echoes of the Santa Iglesia cathedral chimes came floating softly and musically across the bay. Camilla, taking up the little crucifix that hung by a hempen cord about her neck, kissed it reverently and whispered an Ave Maria and a prayer to St. Joseph, the patron saint of her family. Then she wondered if she had been faithful enough to the church to merit a place at the feet of Santa Maria when she died. She knew that people died, and she had been taught that their souls passed on to a place of perfect bliss, if they had been very good, had been properly baptized and had been loyal and liberal in support of the church. That was all she thought or believed of the future beyond the grave.

"Ah, Dios!" she exclaimed starting up suddenly as if to throw off the burden of these solemn thoughts, "Life is all a riddle, and it is useless to bother about it."

Then she clasped her hands over one of her knees while she hummed a Spanish air, keeping time with one of her bare feet on the sand. She presented a very pretty picture indeed with her glossy black hair now divided behind and flowing over either shoulder as a frame for her expressive face. Her voice was clear, resonant and musical and the harmony seemed to inspire her as she sang:

"En la calle Magallanes
Alli rive una Senora
Y un Senor valiente
Como—"

Here she paused suddenly, for, in lifting her eyes they met those of a young Spanish officer who was standing within a few feet of her, contemplating her with undisguised admiration. For an instant her heart ceased to pulsate and then it throbbed so violently as to threaten to leap into her throat. She was thoroughly frightened, for she had been taught by her relatives and friends that the Spaniards were cruel, heartless and treacherous; that they had robbed her people of their country and kept them in a condition little better than abject slavery; that they were relentless enemies of the peace and happiness of all who were subject to their rule. Her first impulse was to leap to her feet and fly down the beach to her home, where, she felt, she would be safe from harm; but terror paralyzed her limbs and they refused to serve her

"Buenos dias, pajarita!" said the young officer when he had satisfied himself that she was not going to run away.

His voice was soft and tender, and a pleasant, winning smile illumined his handsome face.

"Don't be afraid, Senorita," he continued persuasively as he advanced a step nearer to her. "I am not going to hurt you. I wouldn't harm you for all the world. You are too beautiful to fear me; it is I who should fear you for you have already captured my heart and hold it enchained by the light that gleams from your eyes and the delicious melody of your voice."

Still she shrank from him and stared at him as if he were a fearful monster threatening to devour her. She had never been flattered, even by her most intimate friends nor had she ever heard a voice that seemed so impressive and yet soothing in its tones. And then, too, his graceful, suppliant manner was something new and not altogether unpleasant to her. This and his words somewhat reassured her, and she dropped her eyes to the sand, blushing deeply.

The intruder repeated his declarations of friendship and admiration, and begged to be permitted to sit near her on the bamboos and talk with her. She did not reply but continued to gaze at the sand while she nervously pulled at her fingers.

He apparently interpreted this as an affirmative reply, and sat down within two or three feet of her. For a time both were silent; she too much embarrassed to speak and he, evidently, giving her what he considered ample time in which to protest against his presumption. Then he told her that he was a Spanish gentleman and soldier—a lieutenant in His Majesty's service; that he had recently come out to the Philippines to serve his country for three years, and that he desired to learn as much as possible concerning the islands and people. But he was free to confess that he had never even dreamed that there could be among the latter, one so beautiful as she Then he fervently petitioned her to forgive him for having startled her and to bless him with a friendly smile.

All this was so new to her, so utterly in contrast with what she had been accustomed to in her sphere of life and, withal, so captivating that she soon began to feel quite at ease. It was not in her simple trusting nature to doubt the truth of what he said; besides, what motive could he have in deceiving such a humble, helpless, unimportant creature as she. As he continued to talk to her, her cheeks flushed with pleasure and her timidity seemed to ooze out at her finger ends. And when he asked her to tell him her name and where she lived, she had regained control of her organs of speech and replied with considerable confidence that she had been christened Camilla Cervantes and that she lived with her father and mother in yonder nipa hut. She also added that this was the first time in all her life that she had ever spoken to a Spaniard.

He, in return, expressed the hope that now, the ice being broken, she would speak with him many times before he left the islands.

Camilla never remembered all that was said to her that day, by the handsome young officer, but for some time she recalled, with a thrill of pleasure, the fact that when they parted he pressed one of her hands tenderly between both his own and begged for the privilege of seeing her again.

As she walked slowly toward her home all her joyous exuberance of manner seemed to have left her, but, in its stead, she felt herself possessed of a kind of happiness she had never before experienced. She did not try to analyze the feeling, nor could she have done so even if the thought had suggested itself; she only knew that she was happy, but how or why she could not tell.

There were other meetings at the pile of bamboos, while Camilla's father was sleeping, and finally there were passionate vows of mutual love and a promise of marriage. Then she communicated to her parents the secret of her heart, and a scene followed which, for the time, seemed to deprive her of all hope and filled her mind with gloomy doubts and forebodings. They told her how many innocent native girls had been lured from their homes by the flattery and blandishments of the wily Europeans; how they had trusted these heartless strangers with all the faithfulness of their pure souls, and how, after a few months, or, perhaps, years, of ease and comfort they had been cruelly deserted by the treacherous betrayers who sailed away to their native lands never to return. They adjured her in the name of everything good and true to avoid her lover and pray for strength to withstand his flattering tongue.

For the first time in her life she doubted the judgment and wisdom of her parents and pursued a course contrary to their direct advice and commands. Surely she thought, they were mistaken in their estimate of her Miguel's character and wronged him cruelly. Other Spaniards might be cruel and heartless, but he could not be; he was too good and gentle and noble to commit a dishonorable act. No, no; a thousand times no; he loved her dearly, for he had told her so, and therefore he would never deceive her.

At their next meeting she told him all her parents had said, and how eloquently he repudiated their unjust suspicions and accusations! He was a personification of virtuous indignation and passionately vowed that so long as Camilla lived and loved him he would be loyal to her and would take her with him, as his wife, wherever he went. His only regret at this time was that he could not go to church with her at once and have their union blessed by the priest so that her mother and father might be assured that they were mistaken; but there were certain reasons why this could not be—certain vague reasons involving family affairs in Spain. But when these were settled the marriage would be properly solemnized and she would go with him to Spain where she would occupy the social position to which her beauty and intelligence entitled her. And, poor, unsophisticated soul, she believed him.

When Lieut. Miguel Terreno's regiment was ordered to active service in the Caroline Islands, for "thirty days, or until they succeeded in subduing (or exterminating) the rebellious natives," and Camilla saw him step on board the steamer that was to carry him thither, it seemed as if the light of her life had gone out. Oh, that she might accompany him and be at his side constantly; yes, even in battle! She felt sure that she could die willingly and happily if it would but bring safety and happiness to him for she was blind to all things save that she loved him with her whole heart.

Three months later Miguel returned to Manila and again the sun shone for Camilla. They took a small house in the suburbs of the city, furnished it plainly and settled down to the comforts of housekeeping, much to the chagrin and bitter disappointment of her parents, who dared not interfere, however, to prevent this unlawful alliance. They knew but too well the unlimited power and influence of the Spaniards and the punishment that would follow either an appeal to the courts or an attempt to take their daughter home by force. Therefore they accepted the situation in silence and remained in the humble home at Cavite awaiting the inevitable result.

As for Camilla, her heart overflowed with joy and thankfulness; for her little home—her's and Miguel's—was a paradise where love reigned supreme. He was kind, generous and affectionate, and all that she had ever believed him to be. What more could she desire in this world? At times she looked forward to her prospective home in Spain, but she was too happy now to devote much thought to that. It would all come in good time, she said, and with it the marriage ceremony which, however, could not bind them any more securely than they were already bound.

When her child was born she felt that her union with Miguel was perfect and complete. If she had had any doubts before as to this fact, they were at rest now, for he took the babe in his arms, kissed it tenderly and called it his precious heir. When she proposed that it should be baptized by the parish priest his face flushed for an instant, it is true, and he hesitated before replying; but did he not consent quite enthusiastically afterward?

However when the day of the baptism came he was stricken with regret because he could not go to church with her, but he had been ordered somewhere on special service and Camilla would have to get some one to go in his stead. This was a grievous disappointment to her, but his excuse appeared valid and she induced one of her cousins to act for him.

The priest who performed the ceremony at the Sampoloc church did not deem it worth while, in cases where only natives were concerned, to ask any more questions than were absolutly necessary, nor to make the service quite as elaborate as it was when Spaniards were the interested parties. This was quite in keeping with all customs and ceremonies in Manila. The child was, therefore, christened Ignacio Terreno, son of Miguel and Camilla Terreno, without the worthy father knowing that the native who stood at Camilla's side was not the child's paternal parent. The fee was paid and Camilla, feeling that it was sufficient that the record showed the babe's name and parentage, returned home full of joy and hope for the little one's future.

The days, weeks and months flew by on wings of love and nothing occurred to disturb the joy and harmony in Camilla's elysium. One day when little Ignacio was not quite a year old, Miguel entered the house wearing an expression of countenance suggestive of the most profound despair. Camilla ran to welcome him, as usual, but he returned her embrace so coldly and mechanically that she was startled and looking at him in alarm she asked:

"What has happened, Miguel, are you ill?"

"No, cara mia;" he replied "not ill, but I have bad news for you."

"What is it? Tell me!" she cried eagerly taking both his hands and drawing one arm around her waist.

"Sit here and I will tell you."

After they were seated on the rattan sofa he continued: "You know I told you, some months ago, that there were certain family affairs that must be settled before we could be married?"

"Yes."

"Well, I have obtained leave to return to Spain, for six months, to attend to this matter and I shall sail by the next steamer."

"Gracias a' Dios! And I shall go with you." cried Camilla joyfully throwing her arms about Miguel's neck and kissing him passionately.

"No, Camilla; not yet," he replied as he gently released himself from her embrace.

Startled beyond measure by this rejoinder, a horrible suspicion began to force itself upon her.

"No?" she moaned, clasping her hands rigidly and gazing eagerly into his eyes. "Not go to Spain with you, my husband! My own love! You are jesting. Surely you will not go and leave me and our child here?"

"Listen, Camilla;" he replied as he took her hands and pressed them with a show of fervor, "You are a brave little woman and you must listen to reason. It would be impossible for me to take you to Spain. It is quite as well that you should know the truth at once; it would ruin me and make you very unhappy."

"But, my darling," she cried eagerly, "I cannot understand you; your words are mysterious. It has not ruined you to live with me here; and how could I be unhappy if you were with me?"

"But, pajarita mia, society is quite differently constituted in Spain from what it is here. There all the people are white and those with whom I associate would not recognize you as my wife nor would they continue to associate with me if they knew I had brought you to Madrid. In fact my father and mother would not allow me to enter their house."

While Miguel was speaking Camilla sat staring at the floor, her hands clasped and her fingers moving nervously. Without raising her eyes she asked with forced calmness:

"And why did you not tell me this before?"

"Because I knew it would make you unhappy; and, besides, it was not necessary."

"Because you knew it would make me unhappy!" she repeated as she rose to her feet and stood looking at him with flashing eyes and clinched hands. All the Malay blood in her veins seemed to rush madly to her cheeks, tinging them with crimson which contrasted most attractively with the rich brown of her complexion. If ever she was beautiful she was so now—grandly beautiful in her righteous indignation. All the fierce passion of her nature was aroused. It was clearly an effort for her to control herself and her voice was cold and rancorous as she asked:

"Your father and mother know you are my husband?"

"Yes," he replied, hesitatingly.

"You lie!"

This was said as if it were an admitted fact and did not call for discussion. Miguel sprang to his feet livid with sudden rage and approached Camilla clinching his fists as if he intended to throttle her. But she stood as motionless as a statue and returned his glarring look without flinching in the slightest degree. Quailing before her aspect of desperate calmness, he paused when within arm's length of her, smiled disdainfully and walked back to the sofa, seating himself with his elbows resting on his knees while he snapped his fingers nervously. Without changing her position or taking her eyes from him she continued:

"Your friends and comrades here know it, and yet are still your friends and cordially welcome you to their house?"

"Yes;" he replied, rising and walking up and down the room, "that is all true enough. But, as I said before, you must remember that Manila and Spain are far apart and we Spaniards may do things here that we may not do at home. There we are required to conform to social laws and prejudices, while here—well, here we are not expected to live strictly within the social code. Now, Camilla, you are a sensible girl; be reasonable and patient and you will not lose anything."

Camilla sank into a chair and rested her forehead on her hand, for a few minutes, while Miguel walked to the window and stood looking out into the street. Suddenly she raised her head and said:

"Miguel."

"Well," he responded quietly, turning toward her and leaning against the window sill.

"Your father and mother are Christians?"

"Why, yes; of course."

"You are a Christian and so are all your friends."

"I hope so."

"And I am a Christian too."

"Yes; and I'll frankly admit that you are a better one than I."

"Why, then, should your parents and friends turn their backs upon you in Spain, and not in Manila, simply because I am your wife and your manmade social rules discriminate against me on account of the accident of my birth? If I am a faithful, devout Christian here I can be a faithful, devout Christian there, and no Spanish wife has ever loved her husband more truly or devotedly than I love you; my life! my soul! my Miguel!"

She had lost all her rigidity of manner and gliding across the room she threw her arms about his neck and nestled her head upon his shoulder as if it was her natural resting place.

"Did the blessed Jesus ever teach that there was a difference in Christians because of color of their skin? Did he not speak, and promise salvation, to people who were no whiter than I? Is there anything in our religion which justifies the belief that the white-faced Christian will occupy a better position in heaven than the Christian of the Orient? Oh, Miguel; you certainly cannot intend to desert me now for the poor reason that you are required to comply with social rules so directly opposed to the spirit of our religion! When you asked me to love you I was a pure and innocent girl with not an evil thought in my mind. I freely gave to you my love, my soul and all that woman holds dear in this world. I have been loyal to you in every thought, in every throb of my heart. Take me with you to Spain and I will not go to your father's house; your parents, your friends shall never know that I am your wife; I will be your faithful slave if you will only let me see you every day. Think of our little Ignacio! Say, Miguel was evidently much affected by her words, and he drew her close to him as his conscience succeeded in impressing him with a passing spasm of honor and justice. He held her thus for several minutes while trying to devise a way out of the difficulty that confronted him. To take her to Spain was absolutely beyond the question; the problem was to get away from her without breaking her heart at once. Such a catastrophe would have comparatively little interest for him when on the steamer and out at sea; but he actually had enough genuine humanity in his heart to shrink from causing her to suffer—while he was present. Or was it merely moral cowardice? He fully realized that the situation was exceedingly unpleasant and he heartily wished he was well out of it. Finally what seemed a solution dawned upon him. His countenance suddenly brightened and, holding her off at arms' length he gazed smilingly into her eyes.

"Pajarita," he said, "do you think I would leave you and Ignacio and never come back to you? Por Dios, no! Come; let us sit down and I will tell you all about my plans."

He led her to the sofa and, holding one of her hands in his, gently stroked it as he said:

"To begin, I must go to Spain."

She sighed resignedly and put her head on his shoulders.

"But I am coming back to you again. You are not to get rid of me so easily as you may think," he continued, making an effort to smile. "Now you must be a dear, patient, confiding little philosopher and trust me fully, as you have always done. I will leave with you fifty pesos; that sum will maintain you and Ignacio nicely for two or three months and then you will receive fifty more from Spain. I will continue to send you money until I return, a year hence. Never fear, pajorita, you will be well taken care of and when I do come back, we will be happy again."

"Yes, I will be well taken care of," she repeated absently staring at the floor, "but I will not have you. For a whole year I will be left alone; alone; alone." She buried her face in her handkerchief and wept and moaned in a manner that really touched Miguel's heart. Suddenly raising her head and hastily drying her eyes she said:

"But suppose you should never return? Suppose I should be left here to starve, as so many poor girls have been left when their Spanish husbands have gone home never to return? What would become of me and little Ignacio?"

"I swear by all I love," he returned earnestly, "that I will return to you if I live; and if I die you will inherit all that I am heir to. You will never want for anything. I will arrange all that before I leave you by writing to my father and telling him of our love and of my obligations to you."

Camilla's countenance changed almost instantly and the look of fierce determination returned to her flashing eyes. She rose and walked quickly to a small table which stood near the window. Taking from it a cheap album she turned the leaves hurriedly until she came to Miguel's photograph which she slipped out and began to tear in pieces while she stared at him wildly as she had done a few minutes previously.

"What are you doing?" he gasped, seizing an arm of the sofa and turning pale.

"I am tearing your portrait as I would tear my love for you from my heart. You have lied to me again and for the last time. I see it all now. You know that you never, intend to return to Manila You know that your father would never give your mistress even one peseta! You know that you never intended to make me your lawful wife! My father and mother told the truth when they warned me to shun you and said that you sought only to make me your plaything to amuse yourself while you were here away from your Spanish sweethearts. Ah, Dios! why did I not listen to them? You coward!" she screamed as she fiercely threw the fragments of the photograph at his feet. Then stepping quickly to the door she drew it open and pointed imperiously to it as she almost hissed the command:

"Go!"

Her face was flushed, her eyes blazed with vindictive fire, and she stood as rigid as a figure of bronze—the personification of an outraged, womanly soul rendered wildly desperate under the burden of its wrongs.

Miguel with pallid feature, stared at her aghast, apparently unable to speak or move. Then, with a manifest effort, he rose to his feet and, in a tremulous, entreating tone, exclaimed:

"Camilla!"

"Go, I say!" she repeated, without changing her position.

He hesitated; but seeing that she manifested no signs of relenting he took up his helmet from the center table, placed it upon his head and walked rapidly out of the house, closing the door behind him. He had walked half the length of the Ull-Ull roadway before he recovered himself sufficiently to say, with a sigh of relief:

"Well, thank God, that is over! But what a fierce temper the creature has!"

Camilla remained motionless for a few seconds and then sank to the floor in a dead faint.

* * * * *

Three months later Camilla, with little Ignacio in her arms, walked slowly and wearily up the lane that led from one of the busy streets of Cavite to her father's hut near the beach. Sad-eyed, care-worn and heart-broken and hardly able to put one foot before the other, she was strikingly unlike the vivacious, happy girl who had walked down that lane, but little more than two years before, to give herself an eager, willing victim to a selfish libertine.

Approaching the hut she pushed open the bamboo door and stood on the threshold gazing with flooded eys at her father and mother as they sat at their evening meal. Her father paused in the act of raising a mouthful of rice to his lips, slowly replaced it on his plate and snapped the fragments of food from his fingers.

"Gracias a' Dios!" he exclaimed fervently, "the end has come at last!"

Her mother sprang to her feet, rushed to the door and clasped the young mother and child passionately in her arms while the tears flowed down her furrowed cheeks.

"My child!" she cried, "Santa Maria, madre de Dios! Thanks to thee, she has come home again."

A mat of woven grass and a pillow were hastily arranged on the floor for Camilla and her babe and when they had been laid upon it, the mother buried her face in the pillow sobbing bitterly.

The father, unable to control his emotion, walked out of the hut and paced up and down the beach. He did not go out that night in his boat to fish, but sat with his chin in his hands and his elbows resting on the rude table, while he gazed out of the window at the rippling bay and the long line of shimmering moonlight that danced and frolicked with the wavelets.

"Jose;" whispered his wife as she seated herself opposite to him, after she had assured herself that Camilla was sleeping. "She will be with us always now; pobre pajarita!"

"Yes," he responded bitterly, "for although there are still many robbers about, there is nothing left in the palace for them to steal."

"Ah, Jose, our Spanish masters will have to account to God for their cruelty to the Tagalo."

"And it is not only the Spaniards, good wife; are the English, Germans and French, who come here, any better? Do not many of them also despoil our homes of all that is good and pure in youth? The white Christians preach to us of 'the fatherhood of God, and the brotherhood of man,' and of the necessity of being just and generous and moral, and then debauch our daughters and pour strong drink down the throats of our sons to stimulate the devils of vice and crime within them. And we dare not ask for justice, for experience has taught us that our petition would be ignored and we might be punished for our impertinence. And yet they proudly call themselves Christians, go to mass and pay for the building of magnificent churches. It cannot be that God looks kindly and lovingly upon them and despises us whom they so cruelly wrong. May He have mercy on them for it is in my heart to hate them though I dare not say so in public."

"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and thy neighbor as thyself!" murmured his wife devoutly.

While this scene was being enacted a wedding ceremony was in progress in the Santa Iglesia Cathedral of Madrid. The officiating priest spoke the final words that made two souls as one, and the happy couple, and their attendants marched slowly down the aisle, thrilled by their mutual love and the inspiring strains of the Mendelssohn wedding march; she a pure young girl, reared amid refinement and luxury and he a handsome lieutenant in the service of the King. She fondly believed that his soul was as pure and spotless as her own and when they were seated in their carriage rolling rapidly to her father's home she felt that now had commenced a long dream of unalloyed happiness.

But as he clasped her gloved hand and pressed it to his lips a depressing suspicion flashed into her mind.

"Miguel," she said sweetly, "have you never loved a woman in you whole life?"

"Never in my whole life."

"Gracias, a' Dios; And I am your wife."

SHORTER CATECHISM.

Sunday School Teacher—Johnnie, what is Spiritualism?

Johnnie—It's the Devil. Ma says it is all the work of the Devil, and our preacher says so too.

Teacher—That's right, Johnnie. Spiritualism is all the work of the Devil and we shouldn't have anything to do with it. Our pastor will not even notice the subject if he can avoid it, but treats it with silent contempt.

Johnnie—Please teacher, isn't it the duty of the preacher to do all he can to destroy the work of the Devil?

Teacher—Certainly, Johnnie. That is the mission of the pulpit in the world.

Johnnie—How then can our pastor destroy Spiritualism by avoiding it and treating it with silent contempt? Why does not the pulpit and the pew join in as great an effort to put down Spiritualism as it does in putting down intemperance and all other work of the Devil?

Teacher (Looking at her watch) Our time is nearly up now and we will select our next Sunday's lesson. H. V. S.

A pale cobbler is better than a sick king.—Bickerstaff.

Honest error is to be pitied, not ridiculed.—Chesterfield.

An ounce of mother is worth a pound of clergy.—Spanish proverb.

SUN-LAND ECHOES.

California's Wonders and Great Blessings.

A Trip to the Great Ocean.

To the Editor:—Is it possible that I am in this great sun-land of California? How many years I have experimented with sun-light, longing for some land where I could get my fill of the precious article, and now at last, in these far Western States my desire has been granted.

An English traveler tells the story of an American who declared that if he was in London he would be afraid to go out at night for fear he might run off into the sea. By the time one goes 900 miles on the Pennsylvania road to reach Chicago, and 2601 miles on the immense Santa Fe road via Kansas City and Los Angeles, to reach San Francisco, one sometimes feels that our country is boundless. A single luxurious sleeping car carries us all the way on this road to the Pacific Ocean, and aided by excellent company within, sublime scenery without, and all facilities for comfort, the journey is not wearisome or unpleasant.

This beautiful Los Angeles to which I have transferred my College of Fine Forces, gives us many conceptions of Paradise as we pass through its spacious avenues, and its exquisite parks and witness its many fine mansions surrounded by the gorgeous semi-tropical foliage and flowers which can never be equaled in our Eastern cities. The city has now over a hundred thousand people, has 130 miles of street railroads, an abundance of fine schools, a fine public library, and so many bookstores and news stands that only a highly intelligent reading public could sustain them. The people are remarkable for their hospitality and kindness, and think of all kinds of things to make their patrons happy or comfortable. My shoe black gives me a luxurious chair and has several pictorial papers to occupy my attention while he is working; barbers will sometimes have reading-rooms; eating-houses will often give you a paper and a glass of distilled water to start with, and will furnish a meal in good style at not much more than half of what it would cost in New York, Boston or Philadelphia. My office in the Byrne Building has a great plate glass windows which flood the room with light, a closet with a marble wash bowl and a mirror, a closet for clothing, three electric lights, besides which I am allowed all the space I want in the store-room, and my room is swept gratis every night by the janitor.

What ever imperfections the people may have, they strike one as being above the average grade of people of most other large cities in both morals and intelligence. So far I have not met a drunken man nor heard an intoxicated person profaning the streets with his senseless yell. I have seen no fighting or noisy brawls. The orchards of oranges or other fruits are often free of all fences, the people not seeming to fear the depredations of unruly boys. The people, though not rich, are sometimes so generous that we have to protest against them and remind them of their own rights.

The people are unusually well versed in the art of life. I have not seen an eating-house or bakery in which Graham bread or entire wheat bread could not be got. Advertisements of rooms or for rooms are constantly speaking of sunny rooms as a great card. Meals are of all prices from 5 cents as furnished by some of the Japanese, upward. A great number of groceries, bakeries or places of delicacies furnish foods already prepared at very low prices, to the great advantage of those who do light house-keeping.

Dr. Sivartha who lives here, thinks the climate is unequaled in the world excepting in Palestine and he is a thorough cosmopolite. It is considered absurd for people to speak of its being a fine day here when they meet, for every day in the year almost is fine. There are no cyclones, no thunder-storms, no blizzards, and generally speaking almost no mosquitoes, poisonous reptiles, malaria or sunstrokes. Even at Yuma, one of the hottest places in the country, there are no sun-strokes, thus showing that sun-strokes are not sun-strokes at all but rather heat-strokes in times of humidity.

Among the many invalids and delicate people who come here, it is quite common to find them taking cold, caused perhaps by the transition from the powerful mid-day sun to the coolness of the nights and early mornings. This could be prevented by taking some sun baths on the bare body, leaving the head in the shadow. A Mr. Robert Clarke, of Cincinnati after taking a series of sun-baths became cured of his feeble, dyspeptic condition and became so hardy that he says he could go nude in a snow storm without taking cold. A bed or lounge before a window would answer if a person is not able to purchase a solar apparatus. I do not make this remark as applicable to California merely but to our Eastern and Northern States. The States east of the Mississippi are more sunny than most of the countries of Europe, while the States west of the Mississippi are quite generally regular sun-lands. Southern California has a thousand miles of mountain desert to the east of it, which sends its dry pure air seaward every night and renders the climate so much more equable and delightful than the States of the Atlantic seaboard. The mountains and the sea stand guard and command the tornado and the over-heated blast to hold off and allow the struggling people that come from so many climes, to build up happy an peaceful homes.

California as a State has adopted the despotic medical code so common in other States, which forbids everybody who has not graduated in certain schools of medicine from practicing the healing art. But Los Angeles, which term means the angels, has adopted a course a little more in harmony with its

CONTINUED ON PAGE 8.

A NEEDED SERMON.

A Timely Exhortation and Appeal.

Addressed to Recipients of the New Dispensation.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:—As recipients of the new dispensation of the gospel of peace on earth—good will to men, known as Modern Spiritualism, as brothers and sisters with you in the one great family we term humanity, we ask you with us to consider our obligations and responsibilities which certainly are and must be in proportion to the light we have received.

The shadow of death has been lifted for us by this knowledge, that our loved ones live—are ministering angels to us. By ministering to others they progress. In like manner must we, if we would occupy with them the spheres to which they are daily growing.

On the other side are our spirit friends, banded together to more effectually serve the great world of spirit, excarnate and incarnate. So should we.

Our philosophy teaches us that a man has got to meet his own soul; and therein lies happiness or misery. What are we preparing for? Condemnation or approval at the bar of our own soul?

Undoubtedly one of the most poignant regrets we will have to suffer, as from a higher and clearer point of view we behold the needs and opportunities we had for uplifting our brothers and sisters, will be the fact that we regarded them not. And in great degradation, under great disadvantages, we will have to make reparation for deeds undone, as well as done in the body.

Our philosophy teaches us that in the present—from day to day we are building our future mansions. What are we expending on our future homes?

Shall we move from our material houses, on which we have expended everything—time, labor, money, to one on which we have expended nothing? The law of cause and effect is inexorable.

The widow casting in her two mites will secure a better home, perhaps, than the rich who have cast in of their abundance. Our philosophy convinces us that the story of "Dives and Lazarus" is no fable.

We unite, we organize, we try to sustain meetings, that we may present our philosophy to the multitude. We see before us weekly, hundreds eagerly drinking in the inspiring truth from our inspired speakers.

We hear their testimony from their own lips, that their burdens have been lifted from their souls, that a light has gleamed in, which can never be put out. In perhaps a month they are gone with their light. We know it is beaming and shedding its light somewhere, but we cannot but ask: Have you no responsibility in helping to sustain the candlestick which held the light for you, that it may light others? Have you no responsibility in sustaining the frail, sensitive caskets of clay who are the mediums of conveying the blessed waters of life to you?

Four thousand years ago the seers were kept in the temples, cared for tenderly, and kept free from material environments or burdens. Less than two thousand years ago the great seer-leader of the Christian dispensation had not where to lay his head. How often have we said, had we been the Jews we would not have crucified the man.

We criticise the Christian churches in that they do not practice all the gospel they preach. They do maintain a place to set forth their principles in, and support the men who devote their time to it.

A dime or a quarter from such as choose to recognize their duty to themselves as they occasionally drop into a meeting when most convenient or agreeable, will not support the rent, heating and light of any hall and common law (or corporations) compels payment.

The law of spirit return demands a place set apart and consecrated to that purpose, for concentration of power.

When your heart is heavy and clouds lower, would you know where you can come near the invisible world, and they to you with their blessed influences? Keep a place open and sacred to angel visitants.

The Angel of Death may snatch your dearest any moment. Would you find a ladder placed on which your loved might ascend and descend to you? Provide it now and sustain it.

Would you be in touch with the needs of humanity, to do your whole duty while you may?

Unite as a society where needs may be presented.

Is there aught in the government or management of the society you disprove?

Examine your own methods, see that they are true, honest, pure and just, then most assuredly your co-operation is needed to make it what it should be—honest, just and true. Join it—stick to it—work in and for it. It is your opportunity to do your duty to yourself. It will enlarge, develop you to work for others in a broadened field.

Do you dislike persons connected with a society?

Remember tastes differ. Were you pleased, others would not be. Of necessity you also must be distasteful to some, no matter where you may go. Exercise the same patience and forbearance you would have granted yourself. You can lose sight of all personalities in devotion to the cause.

Have you money?

"Bring your tithes into the storehouse and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord, and see if I do not open the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing that there will not be room to receive it."

This is a Scripture declaration based on purely scientific, philosophical principles, which can be illustrated and proven.

It is but a tribute you pay yourself—but a recognition of your own highest needs, and a small one at that.

Just think of it! Nine-tenths of your income or possessions spent on your perishable body which turns to corruption in a day, or kept for somebody else to use in a worse manner than you did yourself, and only one-tenth expended on the education and development of yourself; on that spirit which is the man, which lives forever, and must struggle and suffer, or enjoy, according to conditions we make. Nine-tenths on that which turns to corruption, and one on yourself which survives to suffer results of neglect or self-abuse!! Small enough is it not?

But what of us who refuse the tribute of even one-tenth to the recognition of our immortal self?

Dives in torments—modern spirit testimony from some of our merchant princes answers. Alex. Stewart, Jay Gould are pictured as starved skeletons, feebly crying as infants in cold attic or cellar, groping in darkness, begging for light, food, raiment.

The Mormon gives his weekly tithing without solicitation; also the Jew—both trained from birth to responsibility to themselves. The Roman Catholic, as well, either with or without coercion. Their lamps do not lack for oil.

Does our spiritual philosophy teach or allow us neglect in the education of our immortal souls? If so, it is not in advance. Does it teach or allow us to take the exhaustive labor of our sensitives without full compensation or regard for their material necessities?

Does it teach or allow us to receive aught without adequate return? If so, it transgresses a law of Nature.

St. Paul said to the people to whom he ministered: "Let every one of you lay by on the first of the week as God hath prospered you, that there be no gatherings when I come."

Let he or she who has earned but one dollar contribute the dime, and those who earned or obtained the ten dollars through the week, contribute the dollar; those who are not earners of money feel it their duty and privilege to make some effort to bear their share in the provision for their own and others' unfoldment, and he who has neglected this tribute to himself for years, and accumulated a store, contribute while he may the one-tenth of his capital to the recognition of his immortal self, and our struggles for means to pay the expenses of merely the building we occupy—occupy occasionally at our pleasure—perhaps will cease.

Our hearts and hands acting in unison, Spiritualists will occupy their own temples, consecrated to the habitation of angels, and our own soul, by our own voluntary acts, will be fitted to the reception of their loving ministrations; our blessed instruments who bear their loving messages will not as now languish for material support.

At present where free seats are held, collections amounting to not two cents a head represent to a greater degree by far than we could wish the unfoldment and value each may put upon himself and the actual measurement of his soul.

May the ministry of angels and the exercise of our reason open broader paths for our feet.

"If we have sown unto you spiritual things, is it a great matter if we reap your worldly things?" says St. Paul.

Surely human nature was the same in the time of the earlier dispensation, to have needed these injunctions.

Share your success in business enterprises with those who have been largely instrumental in conducting you to it. In strictly material matters your broker is not refused his percentage. Devote at least one-tenth to the acknowledgment of the possession of a soul—recognize your duty and privilege to hold a beacon light to the shipwrecked on every hand, and receive the thanks and blessing of your own soul from day to day; and when you stand on the immortal shore, the "well done" which comes from consciousness of faithfulness in that which was least.

We have audiences of three hundred on an average at our spiritual meetings here and in many places where open doors are held and meetings maintained by contributions. At one nickel each the sum raised would defray the expense of the hall and accessories in many places, but when it amounts to half that sum and even less, what may we think of ourselves? A per capita is never a just tax, for one penny is more for one to raise than ten dollars for another, and it is the recognition of your ability and your devotion to the cause, and your own responsibility to yourself to do all which lies in your power, which should determine the amount of your effort every way—whether in personal effort or money.

A door fee is not just, only so far as it compels those to give a certain amount who are able to but would not, only under compulsion. One who would contribute more voluntarily, under the door fee system, shrinks his contribution to the sum required—and many are kept away, unable to meet even a small sum.

To recognize our duty to do all that lies within our power to maintain a place consecrated and devoted to spirit communion and to compensate those who devote their time and powers to promote our spiritual unfoldment is the one only thing to do—no matter if you yourself never are able to attend a meeting. If you have been unfolded to recognize the light of spirit-life, it is your duty to do all you can to sustain a light for others. It will certainly be yours to do on the spirit side, with regret if not begun before.

Oh, if one-tenth of all our substance—if one-tenth of our weekly incomes were devoted to our work, our temples would arise on every hand, our mediums would be sustained with no anxious care for sustenance, and enthused and encouraged by the zeal and interest manifested would be able to convey such rich dews of blessings as mortals never yet have conceived of. How the spirit-world will rejoice when mortals with unanimous consent and harmony, provide for their reception.

"Bring your tithes into the storehouse and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord, and see if I will not open the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing till there be not room to receive it." SARA L. HARD, M. D.
Secretary First Spiritual Church, Denver, Colo.

ANGELL'S PRIZE-CONTEST RECITATIONS.

A noted English Lyceum worker, Alfred Kitson, speaks as follows of the Angell Prize Contest Recitations by Mrs. Emma Rood Tuttle:

Mrs. Emma Rood Tuttle, my dear and esteemed sister: I write to thank you for the copy of your excellent, "Angell Prize-Contest Recitations," which you so kindly favored me with. It is exactly in line with the teachings of our Lyceum system, and such entertainments as it recommends, and outlines cannot fail to bring out justice, mercy, and that spirit of true kindness which is well calculated to tone down and soften the animal propensities and direct their energies in protecting the weak and helpless.

No one can read the touching, and pathetic incident of "My Horse Mary" without feeling his inner being stirred with indignation at the heartless cruelty practised in the vivisection room.

I hope the work will have a great and extended sale so that its beautiful teachings of kindness, gentleness, and love to all defenceless animals may permeate the hearts of the young, and thereby lay the foundation for the manifestation of that love which teaches of the Fatherhood of God, and the Brotherhood of Man.

Mr. Geo. T. Angell, is an Angel by nature as well as by name, for he proclaims the message of "Peace on earth, good will to all children, and animals," and so seeks to effect the redemption of mankind by working at the very roots of society.

May the Father of All bless your efforts is the prayer of yours fraternally,
ALFRED KITSON.
Yorkshire, England.

The Austrians were originally the Oester-Reichers or inhabitants of the Eastern Empire.

I CURE FITS

When I say I cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a lifelong study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Postoffice address.

Prof. W. H. PEEKE, F. B., 4 Cedar St., New York

WHAT IS HYPNOTISM?

Relation of Hypnotism to Spiritualism.

Existence of a Spiritual Faculty of the Mind.

To the Editor:—In an article published the 12th inst., I said that if the persons whom we essay to instruct in the spiritual philosophy knew what mediumship was, and were hypnotism understood, the light would break out from the rift in the wintery cloud of spiritual doubts, etc. Since the publication of the article in which this language was used, I have received inquiries as to what hypnotism is. In answer to these, I desire to give the following elucidation.

Hypnotism is the dream state. It is the lighting of the taper of the divinity of man, that is to be fed by all the inward and outward life. It is the excitation of one faculty with a tendency to the silencing of all the rest. It is the genius of eternity that comes and looks through the bars of the prison house of clay and whispers to the inmate there, telling him he shall be free. It may be accidental or superinduced. When all the rest of the machinery of the mind are put in subjection to the spiritual principle, then there is established the hypnotic state.

Admitting this to be true, it might be asserted that hypnotism converts from crime to morality; but such could not be the case unless all spirits were pure. The spiritual department of the human brain is located between hope and veneration, and used to be termed marvelousness by the phenologists. The evolutionary forces of nature do not lie. These three expressions of the divine in the soul of man never could have occurred accidently. As they are grouped together, it is positive evidence that there is an all-source to reverence, an all-spirit to inspire and all things to hope for, beyond the visible, chattels. This that is called the weird is the immortal principle that determines the eternal progress of the human species; the automatic lamp that explores the recesses of the unknown labyrinths where the feet of mortals have never trodden, and where angelic wings poise for mightier strength. The susceptibility to become hypnotized may be possessed by one who is neither good nor intelligent. The unusual development of the spiritual faculty may be found as an accidental gift in a person of obscurity. Such a person may have little if any idea of its use. The power to psychologize such a person may consist more in skill of manipulation than in any peculiar hypnotic gift. It is more the aptness to find subjects than the possession of, great magnetic power, that sometimes characterizes the hypnotist.

There are a great many persons who cannot think nor conceive, spiritually. This is because they have but poor development in that department of the mind, as indicated by the narrowness of the brain in a certain region. If you will draw a line, straight from the tip of the middle finger through the hand to the tip of the thumb of the same hand, then place the hand with this finger and thumb extended as widely as possible over the top of the head, directly at the middle, between the crown and the edge of the hair, the length of that line will determine the amount of spiritual capacity, as a general rule, remembering that the points where the line drops over the lateral curves of the head must be the limit of the measure. If these tips in the hand of a man with ordinary size barely drop over the sides of the head, of a given person, that one is possessed of large spirituality. If we have a number of such persons formed into an investigator's club they will all become believers from the phenomena they will witness on their own account, provided they "wait" for the "spirit" for a reasonable length of time, say a few months, sitting regularly, once or twice a week whilst an equal number with an inch less breadth on the top of the head might have the same exercise without the least phenomenon. The case of the first group is hypnotism, as much so as that of the direct, personal effect, where there is a single operator and a single subject. We have not time to elaborate this idea, but the logical mind can at once catch the fact that a so-called hypnotist is only a representative of the great universal mind, to which the willful passive becomes subject. In the establishment of the partial or complete spiritual state. The announcement of this law of human life ought to be a decided comfort to the skeptical investigator of occult science. One who is not able to recognize an unvarying law is in poor shape to declare himself a patron of learning.

No student of human nature will dare deny that there is a law of reproduction that decides the size, quality, and power of susceptibility of the brain, the same determining the character of the individual in all his or her existence. If the mind of the maternal ancestor be vigorously employed in spiritual pursuits, prior to the birth of the offspring, the descendant will, necessarily, be a psyche, a medium. The same would be true of any other faculty of the mind. This fact accounts for the springing up of mediums in the churches. The church's Bible condemns witches, but the witches' tryst, the God of nature, according to the magna charter of the universe, condemns both Bible and church. This Mousike was the charmed myth that bent over the cradle of infant man and wove her breathing notes with the warm zephers of love, as she pointed to the skies and sang of the verdure of an eternal springtime. If the law declared of the spiritual is true, the same may be said of any other division of the mind.

If, then, this spiritual prehension belongs, unvaryingly, to the human character, it is necessarily presupposes that there are spiritual entities to see, hear, feel and know, as that there are stars to count, worlds to weigh, the cattle on a thousand hills to enumerate and multitudes of living things to number by the use of the calculating department of the brain. This is proof positive of spirit life, without an appeal to phenomena, but absolutely presupposes all the phenomena that has been claimed to have been produced in the history of Spiritualism. Many intelligent persons seem to waive the knowledge of what we have stated, the existence of a spiritual faculty of the mind, and whip themselves into a denial of the genuineness of any and all phenomena, claiming that mediums are self deluded, or that they are led and swayed by cupidity, or other selfish motives. When the Wandering Jew went out to enjoy a ride on the famed and placid waters of the sweet Galilee, and, to his astonishment, was asked for five dollars by the boatman, he remarked that he could very easily account for Jesus walking on those waters.

Prima facie evidence cannot be answered by simple denials; it must be rebutted with contradictory facts, proven so as to destroy the former facts presented. This the hyperlogical Ingersoll and the hyper-rhetorical ministers will not do. I don't wonder at nor blame these two kinds of Thomases for their ignorance nor for their tempers. A person often needs help that he never gets until it is too late; but when he won't help himself nor try to, it is hard for any one else to assist him.

When I was a child I was always hearing strange sounds and seeing some kind of wonders, but was afraid of them and also dreaded to speak of the matter to my parents. When I learned to read I fancied I could discern a spiritual meaning to the passages of "scripture" that the preachers did not notice. I remember once getting a rebuke for speaking of something in a particular sentence, to a minister. He took occasion to refer to me as a commentator. But my spiritual gift did not save me from painful doubts. When my mother would tell me that the home of the departed good was up above us, in heaven, I would go out in the cold air and stand and gaze up into the field of the marching stars and wonder how it could be? Then when I found that the stars were millions of miles away, and that the space beyond those, I could catch the twinkling of was as cold and as dark as this, I trembled with fear that I should never reach that heaven.

I experience a sympathy for those who cannot feel a spirit's touch, nor hear the whisperings of loved ones departed who return. I am glad and happy that I do not have to believe without being able to approach the boundaries of the unseen to mark the footfalls of acquaintances formed from the other side, as well as of the ones who left me here, too stunned and shocked by their exit for tears or weeping.

The hypnotist is the bab of the Mohammedan and the Baptist of the Christ. His wand is the touch of a hand that binds for a while, yet cannot hold the awakened soul, except by sinister design. That hand has unrolled a map of a new world, and from the spark of the altar fires of the eternal has, as is the imponderable element materialized in the insulated bulb, set the taper beside it, and the grottos and castles and terraces and spires, the lawns and streams, invite the soul to a continual feast. Let not your hearts be troubled; ye believe in God [spirit], believe also in me, for I teach a spirit existence. In my father's house are many mansions, as if he had said: In the spirit world there are spirit homes for all. Twenty-three years ago they wrote me from Kentucky the words my loved and loving sister sang as she passed through the amber gates, seeing, as I now suppose, the faces and the forms of some who had come to bear her to her spirit home:

"I know I am nearing the holy ranks
Of friends and kindred dear,
I brush the dew from Jordan's banks,
The crossing must be near."

SAMUEL JOSEPH DAILY, M. D.
Joplin, Mo.

UNFORTUNATE.

THE INDEPENDENT PULPIT.

To the friends of "The Independent Pulpit:"—By the fire that destroyed the Ed. S. Stone Printing House last night, my office, with all its contents, including a good miscellaneous library, was totally destroyed. Also, the December issue of The Independent Pulpit, which was late, but nearly completed.

Aside from the loss I have to sustain, there will be a vexatious delay in bringing out The Pulpit, which I hope its friends will be kind enough to excuse.

Considering the fact that I was already greatly embarrassed by reason of the hard times that are upon us, this unexpected freak of fortune is, to say the least, very disheartening; but I will meet it as best I can, and do all in my power to save the dear old Pulpit.

Many to whom this notice will be sent are now in arrears on their subscriptions, and, in such an emergency as I now have to meet, I hope they will make extra efforts to settle up at once.

The amount now overdue is considerable, and if collected at once, will tide me over the breakers that are running high and that threaten my financial ruin.

Those now behind with me have already been notified of their indebtedness, and I will esteem it a great favor if they will settle at once.

This month closes the second year of the Emergency Fund also, and any contributions thereto will be thankfully received. For long, the enemies of the Pulpit have wished to see it go down, but I am determined to stand by it as long as the Liberals will stand by me.

I cannot say now just how long it will take me to bring out the December issue, but sooner or later it will appear, and there will be no issue lost.

Fully determined to remain at my post and hold up the banner of Liberalism as best I can, I ask a continuance of your support in any way you see fit to render it. This is an opportune time of the year for obtaining new recruits, and it will be a great source of pleasure, as well as help, to me if each person to whom this is sent will procure at least one new subscriber between now and the first day of January. What a New Year's gift that would be! Will you not endeavor to do it, friends? I sincerely hope you will. J. D. SHAW.
Waco, Texas.

GOOD WORK IN THE COUNTRY.

To the Editor:—We feel it our duty, to add our little mite, in the spreading of the grand truths of Spiritualism. We received our first copy of The Progressive Thinker three weeks ago, and now wonder how we did without it so long, for we find it such a help and consolation in our spiritual work. We have organized a society and lyceum out here in the country, twelve miles from the city of Fort Wayne, and being five miles from any village where a hall could be obtained to hold our meetings in, we meet at our private houses. We find that the blessings that Spiritualism brings to us, are not confined to large cities or gilded palaces alone, but are showered upon us in our humble homes just the same.

We were timid about organizing, knowing that our number was small, but remembering the scriptural promise that where two or three meet together in the right spirit a blessing would be obtained, we put forth the effort, and to our astonishment our number has reached the magnitude of thirty-three, and still there is more to follow. Next summer we expect to prepare a grove where we can invite our city friends to meet and participate with us. We hope to build up a temple here that shall stand. We do not wish to build it, nor any part of it, from the fragments of another, that we might be accused of tearing down; for we feel that Spiritualism, the grandest truth of all truths, will stand upon its own foundation. We accord to all others any rights and privileges that we would reserve for ourselves. We are very much interested in the articles published in The Progressive Thinker, from the pen of Dr. H. V. Sweringen, for our long acquaintance with that gentleman and scholar, has but added to our appreciation of him. S. A. HEATH.

"Social Upbuilding, Including Co-operative Systems and the Happiness and Ennoblement of Humanity." By. E. D. Babbitt, LL. D., M. D. This comprises the last part of Human Culture and Cure. Paper cover, 15c. For sale at this office.

GANDHI ASKS FOR AID.

Lecturer Appeals for Food for the Starving Hindoos.

They Are Suffering the Horrors of Famine and Plague.

MILLIONS ARE IN WANT—THEIR REPRESENTATIVE THINKS AMERICANS SHOULD AT LEAST SEND ONE SHIPLOAD OF CORN.

To the Editor:—Through the medium of your widely circulated paper I beg to address a personal appeal to my brothers and sisters of America in behalf of the famine and plague-stricken millions of my starving countrymen of India.

I have found in the Americans the capacity to comprehend the real meaning of the brotherhood of man, and this prompts me to make this appeal. I am receiving every week letters and papers from personal friends and others who tell me of the terrible sufferings of the poor. The immediate cause of this condition is, I think, generally understood all over the world to be a failure of crops, due to lack of rain. Failure of crops might occur in any country, but such failure in India is fraught with greater distress than is possible in any other country on the globe.

A country of only 1,500,000 square miles, with a population of 300,000,000 of people, many millions of which number even in the most prosperous times are never able to secure but one meal a day during their entire life, from the birth of the body to its death, and where thousands of the very poor have to subsist habitually on wild flowers, plants, and other vegetation of spontaneous growth in the forests. The suffering in time of famine must of necessity be great and widespreading, and dire results follow in form of disease, plague, and death. These extreme poor have no homes or permanent shelter, and I may say less clothing. The dress of both men and women of this class is usually only a small piece of cloth tied around the waist in the form of an apron. The farmer never owns a foot of ground; he always rents from a quarter of an acre up, according to his ability, etc. He borrows the money to purchase the seeds.

VICTIMS OF TAX GRABBERS AND USURERS.

The small man earns 20 rupees from his crops in the year, 16 of which goes for taxes, the balance to the land-owner and money-lender. The same thing goes on year after year; hence these poor people simply exist on their one scant meal a day. He has to pay 200 per cent even for his salt. In a native state he pays one cent for a bag of salt, but in the British territory he pays 6 cents for the same bag of salt. This rule applies to many other articles of necessary use. Under such conditions what can be the state of these poor people in case of crop failure? During the year of 1877, when £11,000,000 was spent in great pomp proclaiming to the oppressed and downtrodden people that her majesty Queen Victoria was then Empress of India, no less than 5,000,000 people died from starvation. Should any one doubt this statement he may find it recorded in Sir W. W. Hunter's "Brief History of Indian People," page 233. The same fate seems in store again for the millions of poor.

The question may naturally arise in the minds of many why this condition exists in a country whose people claim to have reached a higher civilization in the past than now exists on earth, and whose scholars have evolved some of the grandest and deepest philosophies the world has known. The answer comes to him who has thought and studied on this subject in just two words—foreign rule. For 3,000 years India has attracted by her natural resources men and nations whose only object was to seek wealth. For 3,000 years we have been under foreign rule, and the people, once learned, happy, and prosperous in their non-conventional life, have gone down and down and down.

EDUCATION THE ONLY PANACEA.

Nothing will or can ever elevate these descendants of the noble Aryans, from which you have all sprung, except education—free, non-sectarian education—education based on the grandest system in the world, the American common-school system; and this is my object for coming a second time to America, but for that I shall appear later.

What I desire to accomplish now is to secure immediate help for 10,000,000 suffering poor, who are dying of actual hunger. I beg, therefore, Mr. Editor, that you will assist, and, through the power of the press, which is all powerful, reach the hearts of this justly acknowledged great, good, and generously inclined American people, who are not only great in their generosity, but who are even sympathetic, and who have shown themselves ready to lend a helping hand to all just causes. Can there not be a committee appointed of gentlemen or ladies who have the time to attend to such matters, who may receive gifts of money from donors with which one ship at least, loaded with grain, may be sent from an American port? This would help to save hundreds of perishing poor, and give them an opportunity for better development. I have learned that there is a surplus of corn on the American market which may be bought cheaply, and, as the people of my country (excepting the Mohammedans) are principally non-flesh-eaters, grains, therefore, would be the only food product suitable for their use.

This matter of assisting the famine sufferers of my country is one of deep concern, and lies heavy on my heart. I sincerely hope that some method for immediate and successful action in the matter may be suggested at once.

VIRCHAND R. GANDHI.

PUFFING THE UNWORTHY.

I am informed that Spiritualists in New England—and perhaps also in the west—are expressing the opinion that I have been "hired to write" misleading puffs for unworthy persons and schemes!

For the benefit of all doubters I write now to say that I was never in my life "hired to write" any puff for any body; much less to advocate any scheme that I did not know or believe to be all that I represented. Moreover there is not money enough in all New England, and old England combined, to hire me to advocate a known fraud.

I may be deceived by the testimony of others whom I deem reliable, and they in turn may have been misled by those in whom they trusted. But I endeavor to weigh evidence, and speak within reasonable bounds, when I report any fact, or experience, or the doings of any medium. What may have been in the past life of any man or woman is not for me to judge. The only question is, are they doing a good work now? If so, it is the duty of all who know the facts, to help them in worthy efforts to cover the follies of the past with the virtues and good deeds of the present and future. No man ever did, or ever can, hire me to advocate any swindling scheme, or unworthy enterprise, if I know it. LYMAN C. HOWE.

IMPORTANT MATTERS.

The N. S. A. Becoming Aggressive.

Spiritualists Everywhere Should Awaken

And Contribute Freely to Aid in the Work.

HALF-RATES ON RAILROADS—A TEST CASE—THE SEYBERT COMMISSION—HON. A. B. RICHMOND AND OTHER EMINENT JURISTS TO THE FRONT—LET THE FIGHT FOR OUR RIGHTS GO ON, AND LET YOUR POCKET-BOOKS OPEN WITHOUT DELAY, TO ASSIST IN THE STRUGGLE.

To the Editor:—The recent convention of the National Spiritualists' Association left many important measures to be carried into effect by the Board of Trustees. In reading over the convention report, one cannot fail to be impressed with the fact that these very measures are vital to the best interests of Spiritualism everywhere. Some of them involve individual rights, while others affect the rights and privileges of the Spiritualists as a body. In order that these rights and privileges may be obtained, it is necessary that the N. S. A. should have the hearty support of every Spiritualist in America.

Some of the questions under consideration involve possible law-suits, hence will require cash to enable the Spiritualists through the N. S. A., to ascertain from the courts of the land what their standing really is. All railroads east of Pittsburg decline to grant the courtesy of half-rates to the Spiritualist speakers, on the ground that Spiritualism is not a religion, hence its speakers are not religious teachers, and therefore do not come under the rules granting half-rates to ministers of the gospel. The N. S. A. now is, and always has been, opposed to half-rates for anybody, priest, layman, or legislator, but it holds that while Catholic priests, Presbyterian clergymen, Y. M. C. A. presidents, etc., receive rates, our Spiritualist speakers are entitled to the same courtesy at the hands of the railroad officials.

An opportunity is now offered the N. S. A. to take a test case to the highest court in the land for a final decision in regard to the matter. One of the settled speakers in the East, a resident of the city where her society is located for more than thirty years, a settled speaker for that same length of time, has been refused an annual permit by one of the great trunk roads, on the ground that Spiritualism is not a religion.

The N. S. A. Trustees have been directed to take this case into court as soon as possible. Its officers are anxious to do so, and will carry the will of the delegates into effect as soon as means are at hand with which to do the work. If the Spiritualists of the country, and especially the friends of the N. S. A., wish this matter tested; if they desire to ascertain their rights as a people, now is the time to do it. The N. S. A., has already established a precedent before the Inter-State Commerce Commission, and will receive a fair hearing, and impartial decision from that body in the case at issue. It is principle for which the N. S. A. is working, and a splendid opportunity is now afforded the Spiritualists to assist in the defense of their principle. Spiritualists of the nation, will you not respond to this call? Will you not awaken to your duty and each one give his or her mite that this case may be settled, and the rights of our speakers determined henceforth?

When the railroad officials do away with half rates for all clergymen, then the N. S. A. will applaud the decision. Until then, it stands for the defence of the rights of Spiritualists against every form of oppression, and religious bigotry.

Another matter of great importance was also left to the discretion of the Trustees. It is well known to all classes of people that the conditions of the will of the late Henry Seybert of Philadelphia, who gave $60,000 to the University of Pennsylvania, have been flagrantly violated. Every Spiritualist on the globe has been injured thereby, for under the provisions of that will, every Spiritualist was a Seybert legatee. Had the Pennsylvania University done its duty, the claims of Spiritualism would have had a fair hearing before the world, and each individual Spiritualist would have benefited thereby in the change of public sentiment in regard to his religion.

It is well understood that the Spiritualists of the land have a good case against the University, but it will take cash to secure a decision. The writer has consulted several eminent lawyers, and the general opinion is that the contesting of the case would result favorably to Spiritualism. Several prominent Spiritualists have said they would subscribe to a fund to carry the Seybert will to the Supreme Court also. Now is the time to do so. Time is passing rapidly, and the University is enjoying the Seybert legacy to which it has no legal title. Why cannot this outrage be stopped? It can be, if the Spiritualists will only contribute funds enough to enable the N. S. A. to take the matter up. Let Hon. A. B. Richmond, Judge Thompson, J. H. Wilson and other eminent lawyers who are true Spiritualists, be employed by the N. S. A., and a decision that will be of great value to all Spiritualists will be the result. Then, friends, let us fill the N. S. A. treasury that the good work may be done. Let us stay the hands of its officials with substantial props, and bid them go ahead.

The writer has offered to start a ten dollar subscription to the general fund of the N. S. A. Will not one thousand others do likewise. Let the word "Yes" be spoken in unison by a thousand, or ten thousand throats, and cash sent to the N. S. A. with that "Yes," which will enable its officers to act promptly in these important cases. Treasurer Clendaniel awaits your offerings, and secretary Woodbury is anxious to receipt for the same. Let action be the watchword of every reader of these lines. Send all contributions to Hon. F. B. Woodbury, secretary, N. S. A., 600 Pennsylvania avenue, S. F., Washington, D. C.

H. D. BARRETT, Pres. N. S. A.

How is your liver? If torpid, dribn Golden Laxattve Coffee. 50 cents by mail. Golden Laxative Coffee Co., Ayer Mass. 373

"The Priest, the Woman, and the Confessional." This book, by the well-known Father Chiniqy, reveals the degrading, impure influences and results of of the Romish confessional, as poved by the sad experience of many wrecked lives. Price, by mail, $1. For sale at this office.

"The Occult Forces of Sex." By Lois Waisbrooker. Three pamphlets are embodied in this volume, in which questions of great importance to the race are discussed from the standpoint of an advanced social reformer. Price 50c.

The To-Morrow of Death,

...OR THE...

Future Life According to Science.

BY LOUIS FIGUIER.

TRANSLATED FROM THE FRENCH BY S. R. CROCKEE.

A VERY FASCINATING WORK.

This fine volume might well have been entitled Spiritualism Demonstrated by Science. It is written in that peculiar interesting style in which French writers excel when they would popularize scientific subjects in adaptation to the needs of the general reader. The author is not a Spiritualist—he even mentions Spiritualists as "devotees of a new superstition," etc., etc., in which he manifests the usual animus of the "scientific class," yet he says again: "There is a true and respectable idea in Spiritualism" and regards as proved "the fact of communication between superhumans and the inhabitants of Earth;" and he goes on to relate instances of fact in evidence. There is, to a Spiritualist, a manifest discrepancy in the authors's ideas, but the well-read mind will readily select and arrange the pros and cons, and out of the whole will find not only good mental culture, but much valuable information. The author holds the theory of reincarnation. Price $1.50. For sale at this office.

MAN

—IN THE—

PAST, PRESENT, AND FUTURE.

A POPULAR ACCOUNT OF

Results of recent scientific research regarding the origin, position and prospects of mankind. From the German of

DR. LUDWIG BÜCHNER,

Author of "Force and Matter," Essays on Nature and Science," "Physiological Pictures," "Six Lectures on Darwin," Etc.

"The great mystery of existence consists in perpetual and uninterrupted change. Everything is immortal and indestructible—the smallest atom as well as the most enormous of the celestial bodies,—the same grain or the water drop as well as the highest being in creation, man and his thoughts. Only the forms in which being manifests itself are changing; but being itself remains eternally the same and imperishable. When we die we do not lose ourselves, but only our personal consciousness. We live on in nature, in our race, in our children, in our deeds, in our thoughts. In short, in the entire material and physical contribution which, during our short personal existence, we have furnished to the subsistence of mankind and of nature in general."—Buechner.

One vol., post 8vo., about 320 pages, vellum cloth, $1.

Mahomet, the Illustrious.

BY GODFREY HIGGINS, ESQ.

This work is one of the Library of Liberal Classics No author was better qualified to write an impartial and honest life of Mahomet than Godfrey Higgins and this volume is intensely interesting. It should be read in conjunction with Gibbon's work. For sale at this office. Price, 25 cents.

HISTORY OF ATHAREL.

LIFE IN THE STONE AGE. THE history of Atharel, Chief Priest of a Band of Aryans. This pamphlet, containing 91 pages, was written through the mediumship of U. G. Figley, and is intensely interesting. Price 30 cents. For sale at this office.

THE REAL ISSUE.

By MOSES HULL. A compound of the two pamphlets, "The Irrepressible Conflict," and "Your Answer or Your Life;" with important additions, making a book of 160 pages all for 25 cents. This book contains statistics, facts and documents, on the tendencies of the times, that every one should have. For sale at this office.

Why She Became a Spiritualist.

Twelve lectures. By Abby A. Judson. This book should be read by every Spiritualist. Price $1.00; postage 10 cents.

Origin, Development and Destiny of Man.

A Scientific and Philosophical Treatise, by Thos. P. Fletcher.

CONTENTS: The Beginnings; Fundamental Principles; Formation of Constellations, Systems, Suns Planets and Satellites. The Origin of Meteors and Comets; The Organic Kingdom; The Origin of Man; Man—His Attributes and Powers; The Soul—How It Receives and Imparts Knowledge; How the Soul Receives Its Highest Impressions; The Record Book, or The Heavenly Ether; How to Cultivate the Sixth Sense; The Finer or Spiritual Body; Growth and Degeneration; Morally, Spiritualism Proved by the Bible; The Bible and Christ; The Summary: "What Must We Do to Be Saved." For sale at this office

Price, Cloth, $1.25. Paper, 50c

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE,

—OR—

THREE-FOLD POWER OF SEX.

BY LOIS WAISBROOKER.

This is one of the author's most useful and instructive books. This work should be read by every man and woman. Price, 50 cents. For sale at this office.

THE DIAKKA.

THE DIAKKA AND THEIR EARTH ly Victims, by the Seer, A. J. Davis, is a very interesting and suggestive work. It is an explanation of much that is false and repulsive in Spiritualism, embodying a most important recent interview with James Victor Wilson, a resident of the Summer-Land. Price 50 cents. For sale at this office.

AN EXCELLENT WORK.

The Rationale of Mesmerism

BY A. P. SINNETT.

This excellent work treats of the following subjects:

I. Old and New Theories.
II. The Mesmeric Force.
III. The Real Literature of Mesmerism.
IV. Side-Lights of Mesmeric Phenomena.
V. Curative Mesmerism.
VI. Anæsthetic Effects and Rigidity.
VII. The Nature of Sensitiveness.
VIII. Clairvoyance.
IX. Mesmeric Practice.

The price of this admirable work is $1.25. All books advertised in THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER are

For sale at this office.

ATLANTIS.

The Antediluvian World. Illustrated.

BY IGNATIUS DONNELLY.

*THE QUESTION OF A ONCE-IN-*habited but now submerged part of this globe known as Atlantis, is one of much interest. The data gathered from ancient and modern sources—from classical authors—from traditions, legends and mythologies; from the deep sea investigations of modern scientists and antiquarian researches in the mounds and the ruins of ancient cities found on the American continent—are here arranged in compact, literary form. In this very interesting volume. The book possesses especial interest to Spiritualists because of its affording corroborative evidence of the genuineness and truth of the statements purporting to be given by spirits of ancient Atlantians concerning the fact of an Atlantis and a great people of the name, once existing on this earth. For sale at this office. Price 2.00.

EDITH BRAMLEY'S VISION.

A thrilling appeal to all who are interested in learning how the great forces of the Roman Catholic Church are seeking to control all movements pertaining to human progress that are in opposition to their dogmatic religious teachings. Price 15 cents. For sale at this office.

COMMON SENSE.

By Thomas Paine. A Revolutionary pamphlet, addressed to the inhabitants of America in 1776, with explanatory notice by an English author. Paper, 15 cents.

TREE AND SERPENT WORSHIP

By A. S. Hudson, M. D. Price, 15 cents.

THOMAS PAINE'S

Examination of the Prophecies.

A consideration of the passages in the New Testament, quoted from the Old, and called Prophecies Concerning Jesus Christ. Price 15 cents.

PULPIT, PEW AND CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener. One of her brightest, wittiest and strongest lectures against the Bible. Every woman should read it and know her friends and enemies. Price 10 cents.

REMARKABLE CASES.

Double Consciousness Manifested.

INCIDENTS IN DESPERATE DEEDS BY THE FOUL FIEND—PROPHETIC VISIONS—SOMNAMBULISTIC PAROXYSMS—EPILEPTIC ECCENTRICITIES.

As set forth by the Cincinnati Enquirer:—"The most astonishing things I have seen," said Dr. Harding, "are comprised in two cases of double consciousness which I attempted to treat and in some measure modify. The subjects of both were young women, and the peculiarities which I am about to describe first showed themselves when they were yet girls. At the beginning of the trouble they were not treated by me, but the peculiarities of inception in both were described in my hearing by intelligent observers, and I have adopted their version for the facts not within my own knowledge.

"At the age of 14 Miss C. R. M. was as wide-awake and full of life as the average girl of her years. Intelligent, alert and fun-loving, she was a favorite with friends and acquaintances and gave promise of a happy future. On her return from school one day she complained of a distracting headache, and threw herself upon a bed. At once she became unconscious, but in half an hour she awoke to consciousness of the present. The past had become a blank. She knew not who she was, nor was she able to recognize father, mother, sisters, brothers or friends. Language had gone from her, and the entire results of early education were obliterated from her mind. She made the unmeaning sound by which young babes indicate their presence and wants, and had no more judgment than a mere infant. In a word, it became necessary to give her the same care and attention as would be required for the youngest child.

"It can scarcely be realized that years of painstaking instruction may be expunged from the mind at a single wave of a magic baton, but here was the demonstration, and, more than this, the whole nature of the girl seemed to have been changed in that brief half have been changed in that brief half hour. Sprightly and vivacious before, she was now stupid and dull; where before apt to learn, she was now slow; where once eager for instruction, she now loathed it and destroyed her books as she would rid herself of the enemies of peace. In everything she had to be re-educated, but the training was poor on account of the inaptitude of the pupil. She lived her dull life, conned her tedious lessons and passed through various duties perfunctorily until she again became familiar with old friends and formed some new acquaintances, when —that old headache returned, and once more

SHE FELL INTO A DEEP SLUMBER.

"She awakened to the old original conditions—to her former self! The former disposition, sweet and genial, was her's of old; the previous education yielded its fruits to her apt mind; the tastes and ideas of happy girlhood returned their truant offices, and her heart once more went out to the select associates in school with all its pristine fervor. The events of the intermediate period were as if they had never been, and friends made in that interval were as essentially strangers as if she had not met them at all, to their measureless surprise and chagrin.

"Affairs were especially prosperous with her till that old headache returned once more and she was prostrated as on the previous occasions, when again she awoke in her second state—practically another person. At the very line where her studies had been interrupted when she passed from this condition she resumed her education as if nothing unusual had intervened and went back to the associates she had cultivated when these branches were previously pursued. Through school and in all the following years she lived this double life, now one individuality, now another, each condition a continuation of the previous corresponding state and partaking of no other feature.

"Shortly after her school days were finished I was called into the case under a remarkable state of facts. The girl was very attractive, fond of society and a favorite in her circle, there it was not strange that she had suitors. The embarrassment arose from the incident that she had engaged herself to marry two of them, the promise having been made to one when in her normal condition and the other in her secondary state. Both young men were much in earnest and determined to stand on their rights, but half the time each was unmercifully snubbed and the other half raised to the seventh heaven of bliss. It was a curious problem to submit to the solution of a professional man, and I tried to decline its consideration, but the parents showed much anxiety and I undertook the case with small hope of success.

"The girl was called Carrie by her intimates, and I can give no names but George and William to her lovers, for all these people are yet on earth and would naturally object to being placed on public exhibition. After acquainting myself with all the facts as above related I called the parties and their parents in serious consultation and talked to them freely. I represented that the girl's moral responsibility could not extend beyond those acts which belonged exclusively to her normal state and then pointed out the means for discrimination between that and the abnormal condition, at the same time dwelling upon the undesirability of holding her to a promise which at any time her friends and the law would justify her in repudiating, because made under extraneous influences. Still the matter involved a serious difficulty in the fact that the abnormal state was liable to recur at intervals more or less remote, and this I proposed to ameliorate by returning the lady to her parents' care during its reign. With these points thoroughly agreed upon the marriage might be celebrated whenever the parties were ready.

"This decision ruled William out of the contest, and he submitted as if science had a perfect right to issue and enforce any kind of ukase. Carrie was in her normal state, and therefore rejoicing in her freedom to wed her normal choice, and George was radiant with happiness. The parents were satisfied, but I did not feel easy. Science had nothing to do with my decision, which was merely the result of ordinary judgment, and might end in disaster. It was an opinion which might either end or increase the embarrassment, but I thought the normal state of the lady the only basis for judgment, and trusted that the end would justify the means. It did. Carrie lived with her parents more than a year after marriage, in which time she developed into her secondary state but once. In due time a sweet baby came to arouse a dormant element in her nature, and, although some 15 years have elapsed since that event, she has remained permanently herself from the time the crown of motherhood rested upon her brow. Please note that I do not offer the result of this case in elucidation of a principle, but simply as a statement of fact, which different conditions might have terminated otherwise.

AN INSCRUTABLE OBSESSION.

"The second case which came to my observation, was of a character so different from that of Carrie, and in some features so repulsive to pure minded people, that I recur to it with reluctance. The parents of Miss Elsie Brahmer requested me to treat her for epilepsy, to which she had been a victim for several months. I found her a very patient sufferer, amiable and ready to follow directions in their utmost minutiae, and extremely anxious to recover her health. Her confiding trust in my ministrations aroused all my sympathy and caused me to employ every faculty for the relief of the girl, at which she was unsparing in expressions of gratitude. There was a system of curious periodicity in her fits that has no precedent in any reports on epilepsy I have read, resulting in seven moderate attacks and then a fit of great violence, merging finally into a comatose state lasting 30 or 40 minutes, and then exhaustion. After the first of these most dreadful attacks witnessed by me, I noticed that Elsie did not seem to recover, that she was fractious and threatened to become unmanageable; really, that she did not seem like herself. These peculiarities I mentioned to her mother.

"'Oh, doctor!' exclaimed the tearful parent, "surely she is not herself now, but another person altogether. In a little time she will curse horribly and call you, her father and myself the dirtiest and most insulting names. And she will do things to shame us all. I should have told you before, but I hadn't the heart to say these things about our daughter till the need came, and now it may be too late. What can you do for her?'

"When we returned to the girl she was indulging in language impossible of repetition, in which she imputed to me the vilest motives for my professional visits, accused her mother of nameless crimes against chastity, and her father of atrocities, for which, fortunately, our language supplies few descriptive words. It was the unreasoning and irresponsible outpouring of madness through a means uncontrolled by Elsie Brahmer, and at once I decided that an evil spirit was in possession. Never could there be a more abrupt and puzzling contrast between two individuals than that now manifest between my patient as I have formerly known her and the characteristics at present exhibited. Before she had been all courtesy, gratitude, modesty, complaisance; now her tongue was that of the veriest harlot, all her words from the vocabulary of accusation and her manner the negation of everything seemly. Language was used of which the girl in her normal state would have had no conception, and she was guilty of acts that even long-experienced wickedness might shrink from.

"'Don't you, doctor, please, believe it is her doing these bad things and saying those awful words,' begged the poor mother, and she was grateful, indeed, when I said I did not so believe. But I had a sorrowful message for the woman. Elsie must be taken to a sanitarium, and against this the mother's heart rebelled. It was the only course, however, for no physician in ordinary practice can do justice to a case so complicated, requiring such constant attention. She entered the retreat when about 17, and was discharged as 'cured' in fifteen months, but the remedy was too severe, for she only went home to die. The foul fiend that came in and possessed her at will worked her physical ruin, and to my mind she is one of the most terrible examples on record of a victim of unconscious tragedy."

"There are many tragedies in which the victims are unconscious of the parts they are playing' was remarked.

POWERLESS VICTIMS.

"'True,' replied the doctor, 'and the majority of these victims are powerless to avoid their fate.' What "free agency" had Elsie Brahmer? As little as would be possessed by an infant in the coils of a boa. The records of crime are filled with instances of irresponsible agency, which the majesty of law holds to a strict and unbending accountability, for the law has no regard for psychic phenomena. I have no charity for those parents who profess to obey a command from God in offering up a sacrifice of their children, for God never required such shedding of blood by any parent, not even in the days of Abraham, but parents have killed their children in innocency of heart, as witness the case of Andrew Yellowlees at Edinburgh. He was indicted and tried for the murder of his daughter, yet it came out in proof that he was a model of kindness.

"It also developed that he was the subject of remarkable somnambulistic paroxysms, which had afflicted him from childhood, and that in these early years, when he was living at home with his father on the borders of a stream in the Black Forest, often at night he would rush out of the house screaming the name of a sister to whom he was much attached, go down the bank into the raging torrent groping for his sister, and then with a yell of triumph return to the shore. Sometimes he would stand at the edge of the stream crying for help. All the time he was perfectly unconscious; and even immersion in the cold water failed to awaken him. He would go back to his bed and in the morning remember nothing about it, but was lost in wonder as to the means by which he came so wet.

"He grew up to manhood, was married and had a family, and then the attacks assumed a different form. To his sleeping senses there would come a great light streaming through an opening in the floor. Immediately following there was a vision of the most terrible wild beasts rushing in flocks upon his sleeping family. He would jump out of bed and attempt to drive these beasts away, and it was in such somnambulistic and unconscious condition that he had seized one of his children to drag her away from a fiery dragon, and had hurled her with such force against the opposite wall that she dropped a limp and lifeless mass! When he was awakened and realized what he had done his agony was pitiful enough, but the law saw nothing but crime in the deed, and it was with difficulty and much expenditure of legal talent that Andrew Yellowlees escaped with his life. He suffered four years' imprisonment for an unconscious and wholly irresponsible act.

"As interesting phenomena are developed by children as visit the most intelligent minds. A lady of my acquaintance was greatly astounded one morning by this question from her four-year-old son:

"'Why didn't you go to grandma's funeral?'

"'What do you mean, Frankie? Grandma isn't dead.'

"'I say she is,' responded the boy, 'and I went to the funeral with papa. Ever so many folks asked for you.'

"The lady's mother lived in an Eastern city, and in the afternoon of the day when this conversation occurred, a telegram was received announcing her sudden decease, and it was subsequently learned that her sickness was of only two or three hours' duration. So, in mind, Frank had attended her funeral before she was taken sick. His mother was unable to make the journey to attend the burial, and therefore it was as he pictured it is a vision.

"This was only the beginning of trouble with that boy. As often as twice a week he knew about something of which nobody else was apprised, and, no matter how calamitous its character, it was sure to happen in a few hours subsequent to Frank's revelation. In his relation it was always something he had witnessed, but soon it came to be understood that these visions were prophetic. He had seen a neighbor's house utterly consumed by fire, and in the morning was annoyed to see it standing intact; but in this instance he kept his own counsel until after the event. The handsome residence went up in flames at 4 o'clock p. m., and then the youngster told his story. 'And,' said he, 'the big dog was tied up in the cellar, and burned to death,' a fact which subsequent investigation established.

"When Frank was six years old his father was nominated for a local office, and on the morning of the election the boy said he had been at the polls, and his father had 117 votes. As Frank was but then out of bed, they understood what his visit to the polls meant, and were greatly depressed, as the number of votes reported would do but little toward an election. At night, however, it was found that the father had a majority of 117, and then the riddle was read aright.

"Some people who heard of this boy feared and avoided him, while others took the deepest interest in his phenomenal manifestations. The time came when a pestilence visited his neighborhood. He was then eight years old and the pride of his parents. One morning he said to his mother:

"'I saw a funeral of five persons, and I was in one of the coffins.' On the third day thereafter the obsequies of himself and four schoolmates were held —all victims of scarlet fever."

I am aware that the manifestations above set forth are unusual, and that professional men hold that they are simply exceptional and have nothing to do with extra-natural conditions. What do clergymen, doctors, lawyers or editors know about them? Who can pass judgment upon phenomena they refuse to investigate? And even when we come down to the tribunal of last resort, what investigators can explain the incidents therein without the aid of something superior to mortal intelligence? T. P.

JOSEPH ESTABLISHED A CORNER

Joseph, Pharaoh's Prime Minister, was the first to establish a corner. He secured all the grain (gold) and during a famine scooped all the money, and then the cattle; and then the land of the Nile, and finally the people as slaves. The lesson of Bible history applies to the corner Rothschild holds on gold at this day:

The Bible states that "the rich rule over the poor and that the borrower is servant to the lender," and so oblivious is the lender of every interest except his own, and so reckless is the cornered borrower, that civilization begins when the State curtails the right of the borrower to destroy himself.

There is a strangely instructive tale related in Genesis xlvii. One Joseph, without even a dream of his own, but only a God-given gift of interpretation, forsaw that there were to be seven years of plenty, followed by seven years of famine.

He at once concocted a scheme to run a gigantic corner in grain, and so alluring was it that he was given full charge of the details.

He did not invest his own or the King's money in grain when it was cheap. Not he! He made the people turn over without price or equivalent one-fifth of all they raised, and this he stored away.

When famine came the people struggled along for several years on their own savings, but finally Joseph gathered in all their money, and when the money failed, he said: "Give your cattle;" and after he had taken all their cattle, the famine still lasting, the next year the people came and offered to sell themselves and their lands for bread, and Joseph bought them and their land, paying them with their own grain, which he in the years of plenty had confiscated.

It took fourteen years to run the deal, but when it was ended, all the people except the priests were slaves, without land, without cattle, without money, and then Joseph arranged that forever they should turn over to the King one-fifth part of all they raised. This amounted to more than half of their real profits.

It was probably a keen realization of the possibility of this trick being repeated on themselves that made the Hebrews establish the year of Jubilee, which was instituted to prevent the growth of the few and the impoverishment of the many.

All modern states, according to the degree of their civilization, prohibit pecuniary contracts that will overwhelm the debtor. He may not mortgage his liberty, he may not agree to pay usury, he is given an exemption of personal and real property, his debts outlaw, and it is part and parcel of the same humane and profound policy that makes modern states reserve to themselves the right to determine what shall be legal tender for debt.

We often now have corners engineered by private greed in all the necessaries of life, and they are run that the few may profit by the loss of the many. Without legal tender laws the modern Josephs, far-seeing and astute, would load the creditor with mountains of debt, with an apparently flush currency, and corner it on him when the time came to repay.

Fifty cents is all we ask for a package of Golden Laxative Coffee. Beautifies your complexion. Golden Laxative Coffee Co., Ayer, Mass. 373

THE NEW YEAR

Round and rosy, running lightly,
Comes the long-expected son;
Comes from some long-mystic region,
And from whence (their name is legion),
There has come many a one,
And smiling just as brightly!

Soon, to the right, running fleetly,
Meets a figure, grim and gaunt;
In the breeze his locks are streaming—
Tatters, rags—to outward seeming,
'Tis an effigy of Want,
Passing on, singing sweetly:

"Hold! Pass me not little stranger,
Drop I by the wayside here!
Take the glass—my sands are numbered;
Take the scythe—the flowers that slumbered,
From its glance, will reappear,
Again to bloom in danger."

Took he, then, scythe and hour-glass—
(On them dropped a falling tear),
"Pass, little one, bells are ringing,
And to greet thee, is the singing,
Beautiful and glad New Year!
Leave Old Time, and onward pass!"

—Selected.

"Human Culture and Cure. Marriage, Sexual Development, and Social Upbuilding." By E. D. Babbitt, M. D., LL.D. A most excellent and very valuable work, by the Dean of the College of Fine Forces, and author of other important volumes on Health, Social Science, Religion, etc. Price, cloth, 75c. For sale at this office.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

HONOR THE DEAD.

Washburn's Address at the Funeral of Putnam.

Secular Services Held in Boston.

THE SOLDIER, AUTHOR, POET AND BELOVED LEADER IN FREETHOUGHT ATTENDED BY STANCH COMRADES TO HIS FINAL PLACE OF REST—A SONG, A POEM AND A TRIBUTE—THE REMAINS OF MAY L. COLLINS BORNE TO HER CHILDHOOD'S HOME FOR BURIAL —DISCOURSE BY MOSES KAUFMAN OF LEXINGTON.

It appears from the New York Truth Seeker that the services at the funeral of Samuel P. Putnam, held in Boston, on Tuesday, December 15, were of the simplest character. "No pomp or ceremony, no bell, or book, or candle," as the Boston papers were surprised to observe. It was by his friends and among his friends, and the curious public was rigidly excluded, else they would have made an exhibition of it; such is the morbid streak running through the average thoughtless human being. There was no intention on the part of the Liberals to pander to this feeling.

But the little chapel where the services were held was crowded with his friends—Boston's stanchest Freethinkers, who had come to pay the last honors to the dead. The body lay in a massive casket, draped in black. The features were composed, and he appeared to be asleep, the friends said, when they took the last farewell view. The hall was darkened, and in the corners shadows fell, but one gleam of light was cast upon the coffined face. After a solemn hush a quartette, composed of Mr. Hull, Mrs. Johnson, his daughter, her daughter, and Miss Minchen sang a hymn appropriate to the belief of the dead, and then Mr. Washburn read the short tribute which follows. The whole service was most impressive, though simple, and was in accord, we know, with Mr. Putnam's own sentiments. He wanted no ostentatious display, but desired to be remembered by his friends and the world for the work he attempted.

Mr. Washburn's address was prefaced with the poem, "When I Am Gone," written by Susan H. Wixon:

When I am gone! It seems so strange
That I shall go
Beyond scenes of my vision's range,
And no more know.

I, who, seeming so much a part
Of all in life,
Will cease to feel this beating heart
In joy or strife.

Others will take the work I leave
And bear it on;
In various ways the threads will weave
When I am gone.

Seasons the same will come and go,
With storms and sun;
And rivers, with increasing flow,
Onward will run.

The busy world, with all its care,
Will still speed on;
And flowers will bloom as gay and fair
When I am gone.

But perfect peace and sweetest sleep
I shall have won;
Naught shall disturb my slumber deep
When I am gone.

No fitful change, no voices rude,
No night or dawn,
Upon my rest will e'er intrude
When I am gone.

THE ADDRESS.

My Friends:—We have met together here to pay the last tribute of respect and affection to a friend and brother; to perform the last rites for the dead and to take leave with sad thoughts and tender recollections of what is mortal of Samuel P. Putnam.

It is hard to speak of our friend as dead. It is hard to realize that the bright star has set. There was about him so much life, so much health, so much vigor. His whole being was the foe of every friend of death. He had passed the meridian, but life was a song, and not a dirge, in his heart. The years had been kind to him—they did not bring him the storms of age, but the sunshine of youth. His buoyant nature was not overcome by living, but strengthened and intensified. Experiences that to weaker minds would have brought discouragement, to his acted as incentives to greater effort. His capacity for work was marvelous, and seemed to increase with every added burden. He possessed the happy gift of hope. Through the darkest clouds he could discern its shining light. In his presence doubt disappeared and confidence was born. His enthusiasm was a part of the man. It was not a bonfire, kindled for some special occasion, but a flame lighted by conviction and fed by reflection. And so he made, wherever he went, an atmosphere of cheerfulness, of warmth and glow, of sunshine and flowers, of song and cheer.

Born in New England, Mr. Putnam inherited the varied enchantments of her hills and valleys. His mind had mountain heights and running streams. He could unbind Prometheus—release mankind from suffering and misery—and take from Flora's hands her beauteous gifts for man. He had love of liberty and love of beauty. He was reformer and poet. While he hated with undisguised hatred every enemy of liberty, he loved with generous feeling the friends of man.

Mr. Putnam received from his father the literary instinct. He was a bright pupil in the schools. He entered Dartmouth College in 1858, but, before the time came for him to graduate, the nation called for soldiers to defend her flag, and the name of Samuel P. Putnam was enrolled as a private in the army. For four years he served his country, until the stars on our national banner shone peacefully in their blue sky, and the stains on its crimson ground were fading away. He entered the military service carrying a rifle, but he won a sword, and for two years he was Captain Putnam.

His father was a Congregational clergyman, and he was trained to preach as his father had preached, but his nature was not in harmony with orthodox theology. His thoughts could not be imprisoned by dogma and creed, and his heart would have starved on the husk and straw of Calvinism.

For a few years he found congenial associations among the Unitarians, but no religious denomination gives man his natural liberty. What one has found has been used to bind others, and sect and party merely indicate where progress was arrested and where man was forbidden to think. No religion has allowed freedom, and no priest has encouraged investigation. The soul that would search for the truth must leave the church. Mr. Putnam learned that the experience of others must be his own, and if he would be free he must cut the chains that bound him. To be a free man he must be a free thinker, and so he threw off all allegiance to tradition, and accepted as right and true only that which satisfied his own reason.

In 1884 he commenced his great work for Freethought, and no warrior ever fought more valiantly than has Samuel P. Putnam during the twelve years that he has opposed theological tyranny and ecclesiastical aggrandizement. With voice and pen this tireless man has worked. As lecturer, editor and author he has assailed the wrongs of church and state, and defended the rights of man against the cupidity of priests. His heart and soul were put into his words, and his sentences glowed with a fire that revealed the earnestness of his purpose. He tore down what was in the way of progress, he denounced what hindered human advancement, and threw his whole strength and power with splendid energy against the entrenchments of religious bigotry. With perfect faith in man to govern himself, he resisted the encroachments of priestcraft. He has painted the liberty he loved in all the colors of language. His mind could expand only where the intellectual air was free.

Samuel P. Putnam was honest—honest to himself and to the world. He did not cover his face. Hypocrisy was detestable to him. He was willing the world should know him for what he was. He loved life and enjoyed it. He did not pose for a saint and did not set himself up as a model. Life will bear the noblest men and women when all are true to the truth in their own souls.

The lesson of history warns us against the church. Theology has always murdered the minds of men. The heart cannot bear its sweetest flowers when imprisoned in the cell of a creed. Man is not to be condemned for thinking differently from others. He is rather to be condemned for not thinking at all.

Mr. Putnam did not falter because he had the crowd against him. He only struggled harder. He knew that where thousands assented to a statement there were so many slaves to be freed. Authority is opinion accepted without question. Where men are seeking for the right and true, statute and dogma are not helps, but hindrances. Mr. Putnam gave his thought to the world for what it was worth in itself. He appealed to men to think for themselves, to trust their reason and common sense. He admired manliness, independence, and always respected mental integrity. They who listened to his fervid speech were impressed with the earnestness of the man. His heart, his soul, his whole being spoke through his lips. The blood of conviction colored his words. The wealth of his mind he gave to the world and asked in return only that men and women be honest and true to themselves.

As a friend he was loyal and steadfast. His heart beat warmly for those who stood with him and by him.

But his sun has gone down, and the shadows have closed around him. He has passed into the silent realm where all have gone who have lived and where all must go who are alive.

The loved brother, the true friend, the genial companion, and the brave, earnest worker has gone from mortal eyes. Farewell!

At the conclusion of the service the body was conveyed to Forest Hill crematory. Some fifty or more of the friends accompanied it. There were no services at this place other than the final parting. The casket was placed upon the bier in the lobby, and the people gathered walked in reverent silence around it. It was then committed to the flames, passing from sight. The necessary papers were signed, and the mortal career of Samuel P. Putnam was closed. But his memory will live in the hearts of all who love liberty, of all who are true to their honest convictions, of all who admire independence of life, and earnest work for their highest ideals. He was a brave, true man, a loving comrade, a noble friend, a genial gentleman, large-hearted, magnanimous, without jealousy and without fear. He did the best he could, always and everywhere, and never looked at a dark spot on the horizon when there was a glimpse of sunlight to be had. If the world were peopled with Samuel Putnams we could do without law. Our courts and prisons would be empty, but our temples filled. Injustice and tyranny would be unknown, but liberty would be enthroned everywhere. Good-fellowship would be the universal rule, and truth would never have to struggle to maintain herself among men. He was for all, a real Liberal.

THE FUNERAL OF MISS MAY L. COLLINS.

Concerning the last honors to Miss Collins we have received no direct communication from those who conducted the services. The funeral was held in Lexington, Ky., December 16. Press dispatches of the 17th say:

"Lexington, Ky., Dec. 16.—The burial of Miss May Collins took place here this afternoon. Dr. T. C. Collins, her venerable father, was so prostrated with grief that he could not attend, but her mother, brother, and sister were present. The services were held in the chapel of the cemetery and were conducted by Moses Kaufman, a Freethinker of Lexington, who was a friend of Miss Collins. He said in part:

"'A brighter genius than May Collins never stirred men's souls. She was unlike anybody else. She patterned after none. She was a genius, and put her soul into all she did and wrote. Through all her young years she found pleasure only in storing her mind with useful knowledge, so that she might become of use and benefit to her kind. In this casket are the remains of one who, unlike other great workers in the field of Freethought, passed when her life-work was incomplete; whose career had but begun, but whose genius was felt on two continents. The place of May Collins will never be filled in the sphere she had chosen, nor in the hearts of those who knew her best.'"

Charles C. Moore, editor of the "Blue Grass Blade," says:

"I have just returned from the funeral ceremonies of Miss Collins. They were in every detail exceedingly beautiful, and perfectly fitting and appropriate for the marvelous character and wonderful career of this brilliant young woman who had laid her genius and life as an offering upon the altar of human elevation.

"There was a beautiful funeral address delivered by Hon. Moses Kaufman. The universal expression of regret at the untimely and tragic death of Miss Collins, who was just in the midst of a gathering of the fruits of her hopes, is Lexington's grand tribute to the memory of the greatest thinker for her age that Kentucky, if not the world, has produced. The beautiful chapel of the most beautiful cemetery was comfortably filled with representatives of our best society."

Mr. Moore says that steps will be taken at once to rear a monument to the memory of this gifted young woman.

MUSIC AND MUSIC BOOKS.

To the Editor:—I have carefully read Brother Boozer's criticism of a portion of my article on "Music and Music Books." As yet, I am of the same opinion as I was before I read it. Not only that, but letters that I have received since writing my original article prove to me that I am in the ranks with the best class of workers in our cause.

The criticism of the use of the words "song" and "tune" are scarcely worth consideration, as it is simply a distinction without a difference.

The quotation from Meyerbeer is not apropos. All agree upon the generality of music. It carries its own expression. The question between Brother Boozer and myself is whether songs that have been habitually in use on the boards of variety theatres and dime museums are the proper ones to use on the Spiritual rostrum or not. This simmers itself down to a simple matter or personal opinion and in the end the public will decide it as they have before this.

I do not and never did say that I "thought that the best results of man's musical genius should be shunned if it had previously been used for a not the best purpose," but I do say that the majority of those songs are not suitable for Spiritualistic meetings. Even with the change of words, the same hold good.

But it is not my intention to start a personal controversy. I am interested in getting suitable music books for our use. Up to the present time they have not been produced at a price that the people can afford to pay.

There are two reasons why we should have original music of our own: first, we should have music with the proper ring in it, and that has not been worn threadbare by others. Second, we can not use the tunes now in use without paying the owners of the copyright for the privilege of reproducing the music. The cost of doing this will vary from $10 to $50 for each tune, while intensely popular ones will require from two to three times the last amount. Then take any of these books and see what the cost of securing copyright privileges is and it will be readily seen that words only can be given while the demand of the people is for words and music both.

Since writing my previous article on this subject, I have received a number of letters from people in our ranks who are interested in music and desirous of seeing a truly Spiritualistic book published and contained orders for books and tenders of assistance. Five such orders arrived yesterday. I will say to all these friends that I have no intention of publishing a song book. I am not in a position financially to carry it through, and do not think I have the technical knowledge of music necessary to properly arrange such a work.

A couple of years ago I had an idea of doing it, and with Mr. C. P. Longley made an investigation with the result that we learned that it would cost $1,500 to get an edition of fifteen hundred copies of the work published, without allowing any remuneration for compilation. This included the cost of copyright privileges for a number of desirable songs by James G. Clark and other like writers.

I have no quarrel with any song-book publisher, no interest in any publication of the kind. But I have an interest in placing Spiritualists in a position where they need not be ashamed of the matter placed before the public. I must say that I would be ashamed to sit before an intelligent audience and announce "Sweet Marie" or "After the Ball" even if the words were changed. Others feel exactly the same. Let's have something original.

WM. H. BACH.

"Encyclopedia of Biblical Spiritualism: or a Concordance of the Principal Passages of the Old and New Testament Scriptures which prove or imply Spiritualism; together with a brief history of the origin of many of the important books of the Bible." By Moses Hull. The well-known talented and scholarly author has here embodied the results of his many years' study of the Bible in its relations to Spiritualism. As its title denotes, it is a veritable encyclopedia of information on the subject. Price $1. For sale at this office.

JUST PUBLISHED!

AUTOMATIC WRITING

[SO-CALLED] WITH OTHER

PSYCHIC EXPERIENCES

—BY—

SARA A. UNDERWOOD,

With Half-tone Portrait and Specimen Pages of the Writing.

Handsomely bound in Cloth.
Price, $1.50. Postage 10c extra.

JESUS AND THE MEDIUMS,

—OR—

CHRIST AND MEDIUMSHIP.

Careful comparison of some of the Spiritualism and Mediumship of the Bible with that of to-day. By MOSES HULL. An invincible argument proving that Jesus was only a medium, subject to all the conditions of modern mediumship. It also shows that all the manifestations throughout the O.T. and New Testament were under the same conditions that mediums require to-day; and that the coming of Christ is the return of mediumship to the world. 48 pages. Price, 10 cents. For sale at this office.

RELIGION OF THE STARS

By O. H. RICHMOND,

G. M. of the Order of the Magi, Chicago.

BOUND IN CLOTH WITH GOLD side, and containing 320 pages. This splendid book, just issued, contains nineteen full Temple lectures upon occult subjects, together with other articles from various newspapers, relating to the great work. It contains all the old Temple lectures issued in 1892, and three others on the HUMAN SOUL, which are alone worth the price of the book. This wonderful book is unique as an Evangelist of Science and truth. Price $1.25, postpaid, to any address. For sale at this office.

Real Life in the Spirit-Land.

Given inspirationally by Mrs. Maria M. King. You will not become weary while reading this excellent book. Price 75 cents.

WHAT WOULD FOLLOW

The Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents; twelve copies for $1.00.

The Myth of the Great Deluge.

By James M. McCann. A complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible story of the Deluge. Price 15 cents.

BIBLE OF BIBLES.

By Kersey Graves. It will well pay perusal. Price $1.75

THE QUARANTINE RAISED.

Or the Twenty Years Battle Against a Worker Ended. By MOSES HULL. Price 10 cents. For sale at this office.

CHRISTIANITY A FICTION.

The astronomical and astrological origins of all religions. A poem by Dr. J. H. Mendenhall. Price 50 cents.

INGERSOLL'S ADDRESS

Before the New York Unitarian Club. The first time in the history of the world that a Christian Association ever invited a noted infidel to lecture before them. The lecture is a grand one, and was received by the Club with continuous applause from beginning to end. The pamphlet contains 12 pages, beautifully printed. Price 6 cents; ten copies, 50 cents.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA.

Identified as the Christian Jesus.

A wonderful communication, explaining how his life and teachings were utilized to formulate Christianity. Price 15 cents. For sale at this office.

THE GODS.

By Col. R. G. Ingersoll. A pamphlet of 40 pages. Worth its weight in gold. Price 20 cents.

A VALUABLE WORK.

Researches in Oriental History,

Embracing the Origin of the Jews, the Rise and Development of Zoroastrianism and the Derivation of Christianity; to which is added: Whence Our Aryan Ancestors? By G. W. Brown, M. D. One of the most valuable works ever published. Price $1.50.

AN EXCELLENT WORK.

DEATH AND THE AFTER-LIFE. The "Stellar Key" is the philosophical introduction to the revelations contained in this book. Some idea of this little volume may be gained from the following table of contents: 1—Death and the After-Life; 2—Scenes in the Summer-Land; 3—Society in the Summer-Land; 4—Social Centres in the Summer-Land; 5—Winter-Land and Summer Land; 6—Language and Life in Summer-Land; 7—Material Work for Spiritual Workers; 8—Ultimates in the Summer-Land; 9—Voice from James Victor Wilson. This enlarged edition contains more than double the amount of matter in former editions, and is enriched by a beautiful frontispiece, illustrating the "formation of the Spiritual Body." Cloth 75 cents. Postage 5 cents. For sale at this office.

THE HISTORICAL JESUS

And Mythical Christ. By Gerald Massey. 130 pages, 12mo. Price 50 cents.

POEMS FROM THE INNER LIFE

By Lizzie Doten. These poems are as staple as sugar. Price $1.00.

Children's Progressive Lyceum.

A manual, with directions for the organization and management of Sunday schools. By Andrew Jackson Davis. Something indispensable. Price 50 cents.

E. V. WILSON'S BOOK.

The Truths of Spiritualism

E. V. Wilson was one of the pioneers of Spiritualism, and was noted as a speaker and test medium. He did a grand work for the cause, and this book narrates many of his striking experiences during his labors.

Purchasers will find it intensely interesting, and will render kindly service to his widow who was left in straitened circumstances.

The book contains 400 pages, and is sold for $1. Address MRS. E. V. WILSON, 91 South Locust street, Valparaiso, Ind.

◆◆◆ THE ◆◆◆

World's Sixteen Saviors,

—OR—

CHRISTIANITY BEFORE CHRIST.

BY KERSEY GRAVES.

New and startling revelations in religious history which disclose the Oriental origin of all the doctrines, principles precepts and miracles of the Christian New Testament, and furnishing a key for unlocking many of its sacred mysteries, besides comprising the History of Sixteen Oriental Crucified Gods. This wonderful and exhaustive volume will, we are certain, take high rank as a book of reference in the field which the author has chosen for it. The amount of mental labor necessary to collate and compile the varied information contained in it must have been severe and arduous indeed, and now that it is in such convenient shape, the student of free thought will not willingly allow it to go out of print. But the book is by no means a mere collation of views or statistics; throughout its entire course the author—as will be seen by his title-page and chapter-heads—follows a definite line of research and argument to the close, and his conclusions go, like sure arrows to the mark. Printed on fine white paper, 380 pages. New edition, revised and corrected, with portrait of author.

Price $1.50. Postage 10 cents. For sale at this office.

The Influence of the Zodiac

UPON HUMAN LIFE.

BY ELEANOR KIRK.

This is the only book which states the simple principles of the Zodiac in simple terms, making the entire matter clear to the average understanding.

This volume indicates the location, characteristics and influence of each sign of the Zodiac, giving the days which each sign governs, and the gems and astral colors associated with each.

The diseases of the body, how to cure them, and the faults of character incidental to the different domains.

The methods of growth for each human being.

The domains from which companions, husbands and wives be selected.

The characteristics of children born in different domains, and the conditions to be observed in their care and education.

The personal ability and talent of the individual with reference to domestic, social and business success.

This work is the result of profound research, and in its preparation the author has been largely assisted by J. C. Street, A. B. N.

Bound in Special Cloth. - - Price, $1.

For Sale at This Office.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW;

Or Self-Justice.

By Lois Waisbrooker. Many have read this book, many have re-read it, and many others out to read it. It should be read by every man and woman in the land. It shows the falsities rampant in society in matters of moral and social import, and the wrongs that flow therefrom to innocent victims of social ostracism. It contains a fine likeness of the author. Fine cloth, 280 pages. Price $1.00

The Progressive Thinker.

Published every Saturday at 40 Loomis Street

J. R. FRANCIS, Editor and Publisher.

Entered at Chicago Postoffice as second-class matter.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER will be furnished until further notice, at the following terms, invariably in advance:

One year	$1.00
Clubs of ten (a copy to the one getting up the club)	7.50
Thirteen weeks	25 cts
Single copy	5 cts

REMITTANCES.

Remit by Postoffice Money Order, Registered Letter, or draft on Chicago or New York. It costs from 10 to 15 cents to get checks cashed on local banks, so don't send them unless you wish that amount deducted from the amount sent. Direct all letters to J. R. Francis, No. 40 Loomis Street, Chicago, Ill.

CLUBS! IMPORTANT SUGGESTION!

As there are thousands who will at first venture only twenty-five cents for THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER thirteen weeks, we would suggest to those who receive a sample copy, to solicit several others to unite with them, and thus be able to remit from $1 to $10, or even more than the latter sum. A large number of little amounts will make a large sum total, and thus extend the field of our labor and usefulness. The same suggestion will apply in all cases of renewal of subscriptions—solicit others to aid in the good work. You will experience no difficulty whatever in inducing Spiritualists to subscribe for THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER, for not one of them can afford to be without the valuable information imparted therein each week, and at the price of only about two cents per week.

A Bountiful Harvest for 25 Cents.

Do you want a more bountiful harvest than we can give you for 25 cents? Just pause and think for a moment what an intellectual feast that small investment will furnish you. The subscription price of THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER thirteen weeks is only twenty-five cents! For that amount you obtain one hundred and four pages of solid, substantial, soul-elevating and mind-refreshing reading matter, equivalent to a medium-sized book!

TAKE NOTICE!

☞ At expiration of subscription, if not renewed, the paper is discontinued. No bills will be sent for extra numbers.

☞ If you do not receive your paper promptly, write to us, and errors in address will be promptly corrected, and missing numbers supplied gratis.

☞ Whenever you desire the address of your paper changed, always give the address of the place to which it is then sent, or the change cannot be made.

SATURDAY, JAN. 9, 1897.

A GRAND DISCOVERY.

Elder A. W. Bartlett, of the Seventh Day Adventist Church, of this city, took for the subject of his Sunday discourse the other day, "Spiritualism—Is It of God, Man, or the Devil?"

The pulpiteer announced at the outset that he was convinced of the truth of the phenomena of Modern Spiritualism; that man is a passive agent, often ignorant of the source of his controlling power. Then he told his auditors that there were but two supernatural powers—God and the Devil—that spirits could not return to the earth as ministering spirits to instruct and comfort the living, because:

"The Bible expressly assures us that the dead are wholly inactive and unconscious. They sleep until the resurrection."

And, then, mournful to relate:

"The claim of these spirits to be the shades of our departed friends, in face of incontrovertible proof from Scripture, reason and common sense that 'the dead know not anything,' brands the whole system as a lie."

The soul-sleeper finally reaches his last postulate with the assertion:

"If Spiritualism be not of human imposture, or of God, whence is it? Its nature and fruits prove it to be wholly of the Devil."

The pious divine next tells how it is done:

"Through legions of miracle-working evil angels, which kept not their first estate in heaven, Satan brings before men the appearance of their departed friends. The counterpart is perfect; the familiar looks, words and tone of voice are reproduced with such accuracy as to deceive the very elect, if it were possible. These spirits appeal to our tenderest sympathies by personating our loved dead, and they work astonishing miracles before us to sustain their pretensions. Then, as confidence is gained, they present doctrines of Devils which directly undermine faith in the Scriptures, and lead to violation of the commandments of God and the faith of Jesus.'"

Now that is bad! Poor Devil! Naughty spirits! How can the church get along without them? Hell, the Devil, his ministering servants and an offended God, constitute the capital on which the church built its faith. Neither of these can be surrendered. The Jaspers and Talmages have the hold of maniacs on them, and so long as there is a shred to cling to, backed by Bible authority, they will flutter the tatters to the breeze. While the fetich remains the dunces will flourish.

CHURCH.

The best and fullest definition of the word church which has come under our observation, is found in the Encyclopaedic Dictionary, and is thus given:

"A body of Christian believers, worshiping together in one place, under the same minister, and with the same form of worship."

It is difficult to understand how the name can be correctly applied to a body who are not distinctive Christians, and who have no formal method of worship. Like the term, reverend, would it not be better to allow the opponents of Spiritualism to monopolize it?

THE IRASCIBLE GEORGE.

What had George Washington done to incur divine displeasure? The monument erected to the memory of the "Father of His Country," on South Mountain, Maryland, was struck by lightning on the night of the 19th ult., and was badly shattered. "Our loved General was said to be very irascible at times," reported an old-time author. Possibly some display of his temper was passing in review, when that "bolt of Jove" was sent out on its mission. The preachers can tell how it was.

WANTS NATIONS TO DISARM.

Paris, Dec. 21.—M. de Jeante, in the chamber of deputies Saturday, offered a motion that the government summon an international conference of the powers, with the view of a general disarmament, and demanded urgency for it.

What event in the history of the world, next to the general arbitrament of national disputes, is more desirable than disarmament—the reduction of military and naval forces to a peace-footing?

ANOTHER GREAT REFORM.

Now the religious world propose to close the habit of Sunday evening courting. At Bridgeport, Conn., the club opposed to such abnormal wooing lately visited suspected houses, and abducted the tender swains. God in the Constitution is the thing to break up such wicked habits as courting. The young should get acquainted while at class-meeting, or on the mourner's bench.

THE VOICE OF WISDOM.

It would be well for humanity if every passage in the Bible was as worthy of observance as that often-quoted text—Prov. 23:31—

"Look not upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth its color in the cup, when it moveth itself aright. At the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder."

The quotation gains no additional strength because it is in the Bible, nor because it is claimed to be inspired. It is the voice of wisdom, creditable to any age, or any people, and applicable alike to all forms of intoxicants. Experience and observation teach that drunkenness paralyzes the brain, and makes the victim unconscious of his acts. They teach that the inebriate is a dangerous member of society; that there is no safety while the artificially insane is roaming abroad, or is sleeping off his stupor at home. Person and property are ever hazarded by his presence. He is unfitted for social, domestic, or business life. He is an incubus on the body politic, a wreck on the great sea of life. He cannot appreciate the joys of friendship, the endearments of family, or the felicity of domestic bliss.

He who indulges in the immoderate use of intoxicants is conscious he is an object of distrust to his dearest friends. In his sober moments he deprecates his condition and would gladly break away from it; but he is a slave to appetite; the victim of a debasing habit; an imbecile; like a ship at sea without chart or compass, and the port he would enter is hidden from sight. He would reform, but his craving and depraved thirst ever leads him to greater depths of wretchedness.

Talk about Keely Cures! It is idle to look for hope in that direction. It is a device for money-getting, frequently ending in disappointment, despair and suicide. If a person has lost his manhood and self-respect, can he hope to regain them by the use of drugs?

When the question of returning to specie payment after the war, was agitating Congress and the country, the good Horace Greeley said, "The way to do it is to resume." Is not the way to reformation of the intemperate embraced in that one word, Reform? The slave who broke away from his thralldom, took the North star for his guide, and though suffering the pangs of hunger, the inclemency of the weather, unknown dangers ever before him, and yet with bruised feet, aching limbs, and often a fevered body, he traveled on by night, hiding himself by day, finally gaining his freedom, the world called him brave, and the philanthropist gladly gave him a friendly hand. If a spark of nobility remains in the bosom of the fallen he should fan it into a flame, then bursting the bonds that bind him he should assert his manhood and make himself free. He, too, will find true hearts to cheer him on his way to reformation. Let him eschew his companions of the social glass, keep away from the saloons, look not on the poisoned cup, and if tempted flee from danger as from a poisonous reptile whose sting is death!

If The Progressive Thinker has a single reader who uses any form of intoxicants to excess, these words are for his private ear, in strictest confidence; and we pray him to heed them; and if a Spiritualist or a Liberal we press them on him with the earnestness of a brother.

CULTIVATE THE BREED.

The French novelist and poet, Victor Hugo, who churchmen class with infidels, in his confession of faith, said:

"I am conscious within myself of the certainty of a future life. The nearer I approach my end the clearer do I hear the immortal symphonies of worlds that call me to themselves. For half a century I have been outpouring my volumes of thought in prose and in verse, in history, philosophy, drama, romance, ode and ballad, yet I appear to myself not to have said a thousandth part of what is within me. When I am laid in the tomb I shall not reckon that my life is finished. The grave is not a cul-de-sac; it is an avenue. Death is the sublime promulgation of life, not its dreary finish. It closes in the twilight, it opens in the dawn. My work is only begun. I yearn for it to become brighter and nobler, and this craving for the infinite demonstrates that there is an infinity."

Hugo was not a believer in a virgin-born God; he repudiated the eternity of punishment; vicarious suffering formed no part of his creed; man is not fallen but has ever been rising in the scale of being, and this ascent will go on forever; hence his infidelity. The breed should be cultivated, for the more numerous the better it will be for the race.

A BACKWARD MOVEMENT.

There are fourteen hundred convicts in the penitentiaries of New York. By late act of the Legislature of that State convict labor ceased in all the different shops on the first day of January, 1897. The statement comes that the prisoners are petitioning the warden for employment, and express fear that they will go insane if left confined in their cells.

The labor system in the penitentiaries was a devise, some fifty or more years ago by philanthropists, to give occupation to the hands and brain of convicts, and qualify them to gain an honest support when released from penal servitude. Labor agitators could only see their own side of the story, hence this pretended reform. But is it not a retrograde movement, which will increase crime instead of abridging it? Certainly it looks that way.

A NEW DEPARTURE.

The evangelistic meetings in Philadelphia now imitate the advertising claptrap of the circus, and form large processions of the professedly pious, followed by young people and benevolent societies, who march with banners and music through the streets, singing gospel hymns, to attract the attention of those they would regenerate. Paul said, I. Cor., 9:22, "I am made all things to all men that I might by all means save some." And the Philadelphia Christians are copying his example.

SILENT ON RELIGION.

One of the professors in Harvard University has been studying Shakspeare, with the view of learning the religious opinions of the writer. Strange as it may seem he came to the conclusion that those consulting that monument of learning would hardly understand that man has a religion.

ASHAMED OF HIS TITLE.

Our contemporary that has traveled from Chicago to San Diego, Cal., and found, like all pioneers, "hard sledding," now proposes to help itself down hill by starting a Lyceum monthly. But as its proprietor was ashamed to keep the title of his paper so it would even hint of Spiritualism, he is so ashamed of the lyceum cause, the newspaper is to represent that he calls it The Star of Hope, or expects to so name it should it live to be born. That is a milk-sop name, good for a paper of any persuasion. It tells nothing, and one can advocate the lyceum cause behind it, however ashamed he may be of it.

This same editor has introduced "Lyceum Lessons" in his paper. He is one who thinks the present lyceum books insufficient, and wants something new. He gives the children a lesson in physiology, and among other questions asks them:

"Are there more kinds of blood in the body than one?"

To this the astonishing answer is given:

"Yes; two—Venus and Asterial—one dark, the other red."

Some Mahatma, or Chile must have inspired this answer, which is highly occult as being entirely beyond understanding. Venus blood, and Asterea are unknown to the ordinary physiologist. If this a specimen of the stuff the Star of Hope will give the children of the lyceums, its coming into being will be regretted by every Spiritualist who does not wish to see the cause made the butt of ridicule by those who expect something more than such crass ignorance.

A REFORM DEMANDED.

"There are fifty-two penitentiaries and over 17,000 jails in the United States. They cost $500,000,000 to build them. Over 900,000 persons were incarcerated in the year 1892. The criminal expense of the country is not less than $100,000,000 annually."

Churchmen claim this is a Christian nation, and are very zealous to make it more so. They are expending their wealth and energies to indoctrinate infidels and heretics; while statistics prove that they who have been educated in Sunday-schools, or were members of churches—the preachers forming no inconsiderable part—constitute almost wholly the occupants of such prisons. Verily, there is some radical defect in the religious education of the people, which ought to be reformed.

TWITTING ON FACTS.

During an animated discussion in Congress quite recently, a member waved a letter he held in his hand, and asked it be read in confirmation of a statement he had made. "Do you call that evidence?" inquired a member from Virginia. "I do," was the response. And then: "Yes, it is the kind of evidence on which you used to burn witches in Massachusetts!"

A SURVIVAL.

The oldest university in the world is El Azhar, meaning "the splendid," situated at Cairo, Egypt. It is the greatest Mohammedan school, and has clear records dating back to 975.—News Item.

At that date, outside the provinces situated on the Mediterranean, the entire population of Europe was but slightly removed from barbarism.

PRESIDENT BARRETT.

Thanks, President Barrett for your timely article on our second page. We send you $5 to aid in this matter. Every Spiritualist should respond at once. Send what you can. If every one who reads will "chip" in five cents, $2,000 will be raised at once.

ITEMS FROM BUFFALO, N. Y.

I desire to speak briefly of the cause here. The meetings in the Temple have been well-attended during December—sometimes over-crowded. The labors of Mrs. Kates and self seem to have been effective and appreciated. There are large numbers of Spiritualists in Buffalo—but only a few can be depended upon to do active work. The time for passive Spiritualists should pass away. Surely all can afford to do a little for the cause. Too many wait for others to achieve—saying that when so and so is done, we will help; and others say when the workers are more in harmony and are more representative of the culture and wealth of our city, we will attend and help. How can they better achieve the influential and successful modes than by personally helping now. We cannot wait for anyone. To do now and all the time is the great necessity. The wealthy cannot be depended upon so much as can the poorer classes.

Spiritualism is essentially the religion of all classes. It shall never be taken from the masses.

The "Woman's Union," and the Church officials at the Spiritual Temple in Buffalo, are all active and wholesouled. Their many kindnesses have endeared us to their interests. We hope to be helpers in their progress, and know good spirits will ever bless them for devoted labors. We desire to give public thanks for most excellent home receptions tendered us by Mrs. Atcheson, Mrs. J. H. R. Matterson and Mrs. E. Nugent. These are each working mediums here; and their cordiality has tenderly touched us.

Mrs. Atcheson is devoted to the Temple work and helps there both as an officer and medium. Mrs. Nugent is a good healer and is also an active official at the Temple. Upon Mrs. Matterson the public work largely hinges. She is its main supporter. The spirits have done much for her, and she feels the debt cannot be paid. Through her able guides she has developed a wonderfully successful practice as a physician.

We will be busy in Ohio during January. For February and March, we will return to our duties in Rochester, N. Y., and will hold there last of March an anniversary meeting to be, we hope, preparatory for a great Jubilee in 1898.

It is also suggested that a New York State association be organized this year in ample time to help the Jubilee. Mail at any time will reach us is addressed 55 Comfort street, Rochester, N. Y.

G. W. KATES AND WIFE.

"Human Culture and Cure. Part First. The Philosophy of Cure. (Including Methods and Instruments)." By E. D. Babbitt, M. D., LL.D. A very instructive and valuable work. It should have a wide circulation, as it well fulfills the promise of its title. For sale at this office. Price, 75 cents.

"The Philosophy of Spirit, and the Spirit-World." By Hudson Tuttle. A most able and interesting presentation of a most important subject. Every Spiritualist and every inquirer into the proofs and philosophy of Spiritualism should have this excellent book. Cloth, $1. For sale at this office.

"Angel Whisperings for the Searcher After Truth." By Hattie J. Ray. A volume of genuine poems, of such fine moral and spiritual tone that all will be pleased and benefited by it. For sale at this office. Price $1

PROF. BARRETT'S ADDRESS.

Other Subjects Treated of Especial Interest.

The Progressive Thinker is to be sent three months for 15 cents to all New subscribers.

Spiritualists, keep posted in current Spiritual events. Tell

Why remain in ignorance? Why don't you keep posted in regard to the great Spiritualistic movement? Prof. Barrett delivered an address before the National Association of Spiritualists. It was an important one, and should be read by every Spiritualist in this broad land. We have had his address (which covers three pages of The Progressive Thinker) and five other important lectures and articles embodied in one paper, which we propose to send forth to illuminate the minds of those who have not had an opportunity to read them.

The first page of this paper contains he lecture by Col. Ingersoll, given in a Chicago pulpit. It scintillates throughout.

The second page contains a highly interesting lecture by Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, on the "Dwellings of the Dead."

The third page has a splendid article on "Science versus Theology," in review of Andrew D. White's two superb volumes.

The fourth page has another excellent lecture by Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, on "Spiritual Unfoldment."

The fifth page is very suggestive throughout, and is devoted to the "Hindoo Teachers—They Will Try to Capture the United States."

On the sixth page commences Prof. Barrett's admirable address, occupying three pages. In order that all whom this notice may reach, can secure this address, as well as the other lectures and articles, we have made arrangements to have 10,000 copies printed to be sent out free to new-trial or new yearly subscribers. This paper is well worth 25 cents. Every Spiritualist who wishes to know what has been going on should carefully read it. Our regular subscribers have, of course, had the contents thereof.

We will also, in connection with this paper, send out another equally as valuable. The first page contains an excellent lecture by Virchand R. Gandhi, a learned Hindoo. The remaining seven pages contain the wonderfully thrilling narrative (founded on facts) entitled, "The Night the Light Went Out," exhibiting many of the inside workings of the Catholic Church. Besides the address by Mr. Ghandi and the remarkable narrative, "The Night the Light Went Out," the first page has an excellent communication, obtained through Ouija. The second page has a startling statement in reference to the "Romish Octopus—It Is Winding Its Poisonous Coils Around Washington." The poem on the same page, "The Sad Picture of a Wrecked Human Life," is wonderfully suggestive. The third page has a striking illustration showing how the Romish Church treats heretics. This page and the fourth also have a continuation of the "Romish Octopus." The fifth page has that remarkable poem, "St. Peter At the Gate." Every freethinker should read it. It is full of excellent "points." It also contains interesting facts in reference to the Romish Church and offices. The sixth, seventh and eighth pages have the following: "Monasteries and Convents—Where Those Alive Are Entombed." "Rider Haggard and the Immuring of Nuns." This paper alone is well worth the price of a year's subscription.

Every Spiritualist in this broad land should have these two papers. Our regular subscribers have already read their contents. For Fifteen cents we will send the Progressive Thinker for three months to all New trial subscribers and also send these two valuable papers.

Bear in mind that by New subscriber we mean one who has not been on our list for six months. Those who wish to buy these two papers can have them for five cents each—both for Ten cents.

Send The Progressive Thinker three months to some friend, and thus get him interested in the cause. Stamps taken on small orders.

VERILY, WHAT NEXT?

Under the head of "A New Programme," we announced a radical new departure from the general routine of work assumed by the average Spiritualist paper. We do not follow old established usages unless we are thoroughly convinced that they are the best, which is very rarely the case. We established the original dollar Spiritualist paper, and introduced a new era in the line of Spiritualistic journalism. Others have followed after us, but in all candor the only thing in which they have equalled us, is in the price of the paper—one dollar.

We now have three books which we send out at a nominal cost to our subscribers: The two volumes of the Encyclopaedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit-World, and The Next World Interviewed. The three volumes will be sent out to those who remit a year's subscription to The Progressive Thinker on the following terms:

The Encyclopaedia of Death and Life in the Spirit-World, when ordered singly, will be sold at 50 cents per copy. The Next World Interviewed at 35 cts. Those who order the three books at one time will get them as follows:

Vol. I. of the Encyclopaedia	$ .45
Vol. II. of the Encyclopaedia	.45
The Next World Interviewed	.35
Total	$1.25

NO. OF PAGES IN EACH BOOK.

Vol. I. of the Encyclopaedia	400
Vol. II. of the Encyclopaedia	400
The Next World Interviewed	250

Each of these books is neatly and substantially bound in cloth, and printed on fine paper, and as prices go, are well worth one dollar per volume.

Bear in mind that this Library is being formed for the exclusive benefit of our subscribers, and all orders for one or more of these books must be accompanied with a year's subscription to The Progressive Thinker. To all others the price will be one dollar per copy.

Just think of the great good that will be accomplished by this plan which we have outlined. Tell your neighbors about it, and get them to subscribe for The Progressive Thinker.

Remember, please, that in order to obtain these three books for $1.25, you must send along a year's subscription to The Progressive Thinker; the paper one year, and the three books costing $2.25. It is the subscription to the paper that enables us to send you these three books at cost.

November 28, we announced that we could no longer send out as a premium the paper edition of Vol. I. of the Encyclopaedia of Death.

The Hollanders are descended from the Batavi, whom Caesar tried to conquer, but with whom he afterward made an alliance.

SOLON AND MARY.

A SEQUEL TO

"Mary Anne Carew," Wife, Mother, Spirit, Angel.

BY CARLYLE PETERSILEA,

AUTHOR OF "THE DISCOVERED COUNTRY," "MARY ANNE CAREW," "PHILIP CARLISLIE," "OCEANIDES," ETC.

COPYRIGHTED BY CARLYLE PETERSILEA.

CHAPTER III.

LIONS ON GUARD.

SOLON AND MARY VISIT DANIEL THE PROPHET, WITHIN THE HEAVENLY SPHERES.

We now desired to visit some great prophet who had lived on earth in the years long gone by.

We hesitated, for some time, as to whom it should be, but, at last decided, it should be Daniel, of Biblical lore.

After refreshing ourselves with rest, and the wine of love, we again went forth on our quest for wisdom, and to find the prophet Daniel. We inquired our way, of those whom we thought must know where he might be found; and were told, that we could not miss our way, for it was a broad, shining high-road, with thousands of beautiful dwellings on either side, and was called, Prophetic Avenue.

As it was one of the principal roads, leading out of this beautiful city, we had no difficulty in finding it, and were soon on our way.

We were informed that our journey would be quite a long one, as the avenue led into remote regions; but time was of no consequence to us, for eternity lay wide, and broad before us; wisdom and truth were the all-important things to be attained.

We were surprised at the thousands of grand, and beautiful dwellings which we passed, as we swiftly made our way onward, and God, or Soul Will Power, was the means by which we proceeded. We observed that the occupants of every house, had been prophets when in earth life, and we determined, on our return, to visit many of them. At length, after what in earth life would be many days journey, although we travelled with the speed of light, we came in sight of a great city, the splendor of which awed even our etherealized vision, and if the brightness had not been somewhat subdued by stately palm trees, and giant tropical ferns, we could not have endured it.

Beyond the city lay a great sea, aflame with amber light. On an eminence, near this sea, stood a most beautiful edifice, whose dome appeared to be in the form of a crown of shining gold, set with blazing jewels; this, we were told, by those whom we asked, was the residence of Daniel the prophet. As we passed through the streets of this city, we saw hundreds of enormous elephants—great stately creatures—most of them equipped gorgeously; loved and petted by the shining angels who often poised on their backs as of old; not from necessity, as then, but because they enjoyed the ancient habit and companionship of the creatures; just as the Indians still have their spirit horses and ponies, children their pet dogs, cats, and birds. Luxuriant vines were twining around everthing available; great roses, of all colors, were blooming profusely; stately lilies, and gorgeous flowers of tropical hue, were everywhere; and the inhabitants of this stately, ancient, angelic city, smiled dazzlingly upon us, as we glided on our way toward the abode of Daniel the prophet.

We at length paused before the entrance, and were surprised to find four great lions barring our further progress. Of course, we knew that these lions could not hurt us, still, they would not allow us to pass by them and enter the lofty way. We could not rise above, and glide over them, for they were spiritualized beings, and could rise at will, barring our entrance above or below. For a short time we were in quite a dilemma; for, entrance we could not gain; the lions were resolution itself; swaying their lithe forms backward, and forward, alternately, before the entrance; their eyes fixed upon our own with an expression, which plainly said: "We have a will as well as you. Will power does not belong to mankind alone. Lo! our will is stronger than yours!"

"Yea," we said to each other: "those lions are right. Will power resides with beast and bird, fishes and reptiles; and will power belongs to the soul alone; therefore, all these creatures have souls like unto themselves, and God, soul, or will power, resides within them, or, as much of it as they are capable of comprehending. These lions comprehend our desire to enter this place, and set their will power against it. Now, what is to be done? These four lions have more will power than we have. Just as we were thinking thus, behold! there stood in the doorway a form which we knew at once to be that of Daniel the prophet. He stretched forth his hands. Immediately the great lions crouched at his feet, licking his hands fawningly.

Ah! the mystery was at once solved to us, for the soul power of this Angel was so great that the edifice, and all about us, shook as with an earthquake, and the great lions trembled with fear, for they were in contact with a will power greater than the will of the four combined.

"Be still! ye resolute beasts!" he commanded, in firm, concentrated tones, "and allow the strangers to pass! Enter," he said, with a commanding gesture: and we passed by the lions, their eyes being lowered, their resolute wills being conquered, and overcome, by a greater, more resolute will, than their own.

We entered; the door closed, and and we stood alone with Daniel the prophet. It may please many, in earth life, to know how Daniel looked on earth, and, how he looks here. First, we will describe his appearance, as he stood before us, in all his grandeur, and lofty holiness. He was fully six feet in height, large, and rounded into perfect symmetry: his flowing hair was burnished and tawny, his eyes just the color of a lion's, deeply burning with immense, and terrible, will power which, all understand, is soul power. His robe clung about his majestic figure like fleecy white clouds one sees on a beautiful summer day: a scarf of royal purple and gold was crossed from the left shoulder, around the loins, tied, and left hanging nearly to the feet, which were sandaled with gold. His appearance, here, was an angelized counterpart of the more gross, dense form, he wore on earth.

Let me here say, that all the olden cities, which have long since disappeared from off the face of the earth, are forever perpetuated within the heavens, together with all the souls that ever resided within them. Jerusalem, the ancient is here ever bright and shining, in all her spiritualized glory; so are the Red Sea and the Nile, the Mediterranean and all other seas, lakes, rivers, and oceans; their spiritualized counterparts are all here; but to continue:

Daniel the prophet, gazed on us with a dazzling smile of welcome, and extended his powerful hand:

"We knew you were coming," he said, with reverberating voice. "We received a telegraphic dispatch, to that effect, sometime since; yet, you will observe, there are no wires, nor poles, in this world; we have become wiser than those below, and our telegrams are dispatched on the photographic principle; the transit is as rapid as light; but, come in! My wife awaits us," and we paused a moment before some heavy, gorgeous, oriental drapery, on which were representations of lions, elephants, camels, ostriches, birds of paradise, orioles, apes, Egyptians, embowered temples, mosques, palm trees, luxuriant vines, and beautiful flowers.

The curtains seemed to represent an oriental world of themselves: Slowly they parted, without visible touch; but, we observed it was by the will power, alone, of Daniel, the prophet, and we stood within a large apartment in the presence of the counterpart of Daniel—the womanly half of the grand man. If he was grand, she was sumptious.

Her hair surrounded her like swirling waves of fire; her eyes glowed like the sun; her fleecy, white robe, trailed after her like the train of a comet; she extended one hand to Mary, the other to me, and after, with majestic grace, pointed toward some bright cushions, which were piled up like the gorgeous clouds of an earthly sunset sky; and, in a voice which sounded like the winds through forest trees, she said:

"You must be weary, dear friends; be pleased to rest there, and you shall soon be served with other refreshments."

We were somewhat weary after our long journey, and to lie among those cloudy cushions would be pleasant indeed; we sunk upon them; soft, shadowy veiling fell about us and we rested.

Yes; Angels rest when weary from prolonged research of any kind, either of will or volition.

The soft murmur of the amber sea, not far distant, lulled our repose. Ah! could it be possible that we were within the abode of Daniel, the prophet of olden time, about whom we desired to know so much?

At length the curtains slowly lifted, and we gazed upon a scene so glorious and resplendent, that words fail, and an adequate description cannot be given; but, in the midst of it all stood a table, loaded with the fruits of all nations. Then said Daniel:

"Solon and Mary, arise and eat."

Thereupon we arose and stood by the table, together with the ancient prophet and his wife. To partake of all these fruits, of course, would be impossible, but we tasted until refreshed:

"Come ye," said Daniel, "and sit here with us until your souls are satisfied. What knowledge is required of us? that we may impart it.

"Thou wert, when on earth, a Prophet!" we said, "and, even, when cast into a den of lions, they refused to devour thee. It is to hear from thine own lips, the secret of this power, that we have come. Know thou, O, Daniel! that we desire to write a book, that those in earth life may be benefited and instructed."

"The secret of my power, when on earth," he slowly replied, "was, that instead of living in the outward, I dwelt within, and held communion with my own soul, calling down to my aid the holy of the holies from out the heaven within me; and the more I lived thus, the larger and grander my heaven became, until future events lay spread out within is as well defined as outward objects were to my outward senses. I thus became aware that the outward man was of far less consequence than the inward man; that physical power, although ever so great, could not compare with spiritual power; or, that the interior man was by very many degrees stronger, and more powerful, than the exterior; and the more I execised the spiritual man, the stronger he grew. On discovering these facts, they greatly delighted me, and I commenced to experiment, by exerting this inner power on men and animals, as they came in my way, and I soon found that I could thus overpower man, or beast, whose inner being was weaker than mine; but, this power must be exercised from the inner being, upon the inner being of the one to be overcome.

"A man physically strong can overpower one who is physically weak, and the law holds good with the interior man. The exterior is of little consequence compared with the interior.

"Now, I had not power enough to overcome a body of soldiers, armed with spears and lances, obeying the commands of the King, to thrust my body within the den of lions; but, by soul power I was able to overcome the weaker soul power of the lions, and hold them subject to my will.

"Solon, many others have accomplished the same thing.

"Have there not been many lion tamers, on earth, besides myself, who, by will, or soul power alone, have held those ferocious beasts in subjection?

"If I had been as wise then, as I am now, I could have awed the King to my will—could have rendered powerless the body of soldiers. I was, at that time, but a child in the knowledge of this power. One man alone, if he have soul power enough, can change the destinies of a nation—can lead a multitude where he will; but let the inner man be weak, timid vacillating, not sure of himself, and he falls powerless before those who are stronger, within themselves, than he is. The inner man cannot fight with material weapons; his weapons must be of the soul, and if he allow another soul to overpower him, then is he weak indeed; or, if he turn and flee at the first onslaught, then is he a craven coward and deserves to be beaten.

"Solon," he continued, "men, on earth, called me a prophet. I am, there, still called the prophet Daniel, and as a prophet I will tell you, that it is in your destiny to write a book, which will be handed down to mankind through a medium; and, for your own good, and the enlightenment of men, I wish to tell you (and them) how to become a prophet; for, there is but one way: Become wise; drink in wisdom as thirsty soil drinks in water; let your mind penetrate to the remotest depths of time and space; most earnestly endeavor to understand the laws governing all things; penetrate to the very core and heart of each and every known law, and try to discover laws not known at the present time; for, there are as many laws not known at present as there are known laws; this, it is, which constitutes a prophet; for, if a soul once thoroughly understands any natural law he can tell the past, present, and future results of that law: for instance, a man on earth does not think himself very wise or prophetic when he says, 'I know that I shall die.' I know that all my friends will die.' He well understands that his prophecy will surely be fulfilled—that is, so far as regards his material body—but an animal knows not that it will die. Why? Because it hath not wisdom enough to be a prophet. It comprehends not that it liveth much less that its body will die. Man rises a step higher in wisdom. He comprehends that his body will die, and trembles on the confines of anothe great law, which, he as yet, does not fully understand; and, that law is, shall he live again, after the death of the body, together with his friends? Now, if he had wisdom enough to be a true prophet, he would as surely know that he would live again, as he now knows that his body will surely become disintegrated. When he can once comprehend, that, there is no death—as he understands it—of any kind; that what he now looks upon as death is merely the changing of the lower to the higher as one might climb a ladder, or a spiral stairway; then he will become a true prophet, indeed, for he will be wise.

"I said, that his wisdom stood trembling on the confines of this knowledge, for his mind dimly grasps at the truth, as forshadowed in all the regions of mankind, but in all his past, and even at present, his knowledge of his future estate is dim and uncertain; he often wavers between hope and despair, not really knowing which to choose. If the minds of mankind could once be forever settled on the point of life and death, and they could know as surely that they lived on forever as they know that their material forms will surely be disintegrated, then would they be prophets indeed.

"My dear Solon, we know that we live, for we are passed the change called death; even have we passed on beyond the spiritual state, and are already into angelhood, but man does not yet comprehend all this. Let us help him, that his soul may sing for joy, knowing that he can never die!

"Why does a man's body appear to grow old? Inert material substance cannot be either young or old, and if the substance composing his body is completely changed once in seven years, how can his body be either old or young?

"Ah! my Solon! it is not his body which grows old, but his spirit, or inner man which is becoming developed, or ripe, getting ready to shake off the husk which he no longer needs. An ear of corn gradually ripens, it bursts through its husk, the husk withers and drops away, and, lo! the golden grain appears! Thus it is with man. The eternal law holds good. It is the same. Man's material eye grows dim with age. Why? The oldest atom within its composition is but seven years old, or, at least, has not been a part of that eye but seven years, and, surely, seven years cannot render one old; the oldest atom within his body has not resided there but seven years, all the others are much younger; thus, you will perceive it is not his body which is old. What is it then? Let us tell him.

"When he finds his material eye dimmed with age, it is because his spiritual eye has developed, and ripened, holds fewer material atoms; that is, the husk is withering, getting ready to drop away, and, lo! the bright and beautiful spiritual eye appears, and is as much more useful as the golden grain is more useful than the husk. Naturally one throws a husk to the ground, but sheaves and garners the golden grain; by the same great law the souls of men are sheaved and garnered within the spiritual and angelic spheres, which are the storehouses of all forms, whatever their kind. The material husk has answered its purpose, that of protecting and shielding the spiritual form of man while yet ignorant, tender, and undeveloped; then the husk rots, or disintegrates, which is only the separating of the atoms composing it; its life, spirit, and soul, have left it, its mission in that direction is done, and it hastens on, obedient to other laws, which take up its separated atoms, as they have taken up the countless millions of atoms which the spirit of man has been throwing off since he entered the material sphere of life.

"Why should man grieve for the atoms composing a husk at one time more than another? He has been throwing off these atoms since he was born, without a thought of this comfort or grief; why, then, should he mourn when the residue is thrown down in one withered mass? He should be glad, rather, that he is at length able to do this, and make one grand escape instead of being obliged to remain until the last atom has at length been thrown off; this last grand escape is all that death means, for death of any kind there is none."

"But, man says," we interposed, "that he cannot see a spirit, therefore many think that death ends man's life."

(To be Continued.)

MRS. ADA FOYE'S GOOD WORK.

I arrived in Chicago December 24th. I am visiting friends on the beautiful South Side. Last Sunday evening I went to the Church of the First Spiritual Society of Chicago, 3120 Forrest ave, Mrs. Ada Foye, pastor. She has been before the Chicago public for over two years. I was both surprised and pleased with the tests she gave my friend from California, who had never heard of Mrs. Foye till Sunday when I proposed that she should accompany me there. She reluctantly did so, not being a believer in spiritual phenomena. She did not send up a name, but watched the fun (as she called it) until her father's name came in full, and then her mother's came through the medium's lips in pronounced accents. Then followed written messages of such a nature that so precluded all doubt of collusion, that my friend has begun to investigate. Mental questions were answered by raps, which came very close to her, it seemed. Her own name was called by her father in his advice on business and every day life. They were the most perfect public tests that has ever come under my notice.

There should be encouragement given to mediums and their guides who work so hard against prejudice and doubt when one heart is even reached and made glad and happy as my friend is to-day. Her words were to me: "O, my beloved parents, I can hardly think, I am so rejoiced to hear from you. O, what tests they gave me. It must be so. No one knew about what they told me. I am more than happy!"

ROSE L. BUSHNELL.

"Mahomet, the Illustrious." By Godfrey Higgins, Esq. (Library of Liberal Classics.) No author was better qualified to write an impartial and honest life of Mahomet than Godfrey Higgins, and this volume is intensely interesting. It should be read in conjunction with Gibbon's work. For sale at this office. Price, 25 cents.

Religion of the Future. By S. Weil. Cloth, $1.25; paper, 50 cents.

SPIRITUALISM SCIENTIFICALLY DEMONSTRATED.

BY PROF. ROBERT HARE.

His Remarkable Researches Made in the Early Years of Spiritualism.

Directly Edited and Revised by Him, Now in Spirit-Life.

NARRATIVE OF THE AUTHOR'S EXPERIMENTAL INVESTIGATION OF SPIRITUALISM.

The first fruit of my attention to the phenomena of table-turning, was the following letter. I trust I shall not be considered as self-complacent, when I allege it to be an exemplification of wise ignorance, which is about equivalent to folly. The wisest man who speaks in ignorance, speaks foolishly to the ears of those who perceive his ignorance. The great mass of men of science appear in this light to Spiritualists when they argue against Spiritualism. Men who are only nominally know-nothings have proved a formidable party in politics; unfortunately, Spiritualism has, in its most active opponents, real know-nothings, who will not admit any fact of a spiritual origin, unless such as they have been educated to believe. In that case, many have powers of intellectual deglutition rivaling those of the anaconda in the physical way.

LETTER IN REPLY TO AN INQUIRY RESPECTING THE INFLUENCE OF ELECTRICITY IN TABLE TURNING.

"Philadelphia, July 27, 1853.

"Dear Sir:—I am of opinion that it is utterly impossible for six or eight, or any number of persons, seated around a table, to produce an electric current. Moreover, I am confident that if by any adequate means an electrical current were created, however forcible, it could not be productive of table turning. A dry wooden table is almost a non-conductor, but if forming a link necessary to complete a circuit between the sky and earth, it might possibly be shattered by a stroke of lightning; but if the power of all the galvanic apparatus ever made was to be collected in one current, there would be no power to move or otherwise affect such a table.

"Frictional electricity, such as produced by electric machines, must first be accumulated and then discharged, in order to produce any striking effect. It is in transitu that its power is seen and felt.

"Insulated conductors, whether inanimate, or in the form of animals, may be electrified by the most powerful means, without being injured or seriously incommoded. Before a spark of lightning passes, every object on the terrestrial surface, for a great distance around, is subjected to a portion of the requisite previous accumulation. Yet it is only those objects which are made the medium of discharge that are sensibly affected.

"Powerful galvanic accumulation can only be produced by those appropriate arrangements which concentrate upon a comparatively small filament of particles their peculiar polarizing power; but nothing seems to me more inconsistent with experience than to suppose a table moved by any possible form or mode of galvanic reaction. It was ascertained by Gaziot that one of the most powerful galvanic batteries ever made could not given spark before contact to a conductor presented to it, at the smallest distance which could be made by a delicate micrometer. If there is any law which is pre-eminent for its invariability, it is, that inanimate matter cannot, per se, change its state as respects motion or rest. Were this law liable to any variation, we should be proportionably liable to perish; since in that case the revolutions and rotations of our planet and its satellite might undergo perturbations by which the ocean might inundate the land, or the too great proximity or remoteness of the sun cause us to be scorched or frozen. If the globe did not carry the Pacific more steadily than the most competent person could carry a basin of water, we should be drowned by the overflow of the land. I recommend to your attention, and that of others interested in this hallucination, Faraday's observations and experiments, recently published in some of our respectable newspapers. I entirely concur in the conclusions of that distinguished experimental expounder of Nature's riddles.

"ROBERT HARE."

This letter drew forth the following remonstrance in the subjoined letter, which does great credit to the correctness of the author's observation and sagacity. It contributed, together with a personal invitation from Dr. Comstock to attend a circle, to induce the investigation upon which I entered immediately afterward.

"Southwick, Mass., Nov. 17, 1853.

"Dear Sir:—I had the pleasure of a slight acquaintance with you, something less than twenty years ago, when I exhibited telescopes in Philadelphia. You will, I trust, excuse the liberty I take in writing to you now. I have seen your letter in the Philadelphia Inquirer upon table moving. I never believed it was caused by electricity or galvanism, but is it not as likely to be these, as muscular force? You agree with Professor Faraday that the table is moved by the hands that are on it. Now I know, as certainly as I know anything, that this is not true in general, if it is in any instance. There is as much evidence that tables sometimes move without any person near them, as that they sometimes move with hands on them. I cannot in this case doubt the evidence of my senses. I have seen tables move, and heard tunes beat on them, when no person was within several feet of them. This fact is proof positive that the force or power is not muscular.

"If any further evidence was necessary to set aside Professor Faraday's explanation, it is found in abundance in the great variety of other facts taking place through the country, such as musical instruments being played upon without any hands touching them, and a great variety of other heavy articles being moved without visible cause. If tables never moved except when hands were on them, the case would be different; but as they do move, both with and without hands, it is plain that the true cause remains yet to be discovered.

"I wish, sir, that you had leisure and opportunity to witness some other phases of this matter, which seem not yet to have fallen under your notice, and I think you would be satisfied that there is less 'hallucination' and 'self-deception' about it, than you have imagined. The intelligence connected with these movements has not been accounted for.

"If these things can be accounted for on scientific principles, would it not be a great acquisition to science, to discover what those principles are? If, however, science cannot discover them, the public are deeply interested in knowing the fact. It is certainly of great importance that these strange things that are taking place everywhere should be explained. It is affecting the churches seriously; whether for good or for evil is uncertain until the truth is known. No cause has yet been assigned that does not imply a greater absurdity than even to believe, as many do, that it is caused by spirits either good or bad, or both.

"I have examined this matter for the last three years with as much carefulness as possible, and am not satisfied. If the force is not muscular, as it is certain it is not, I wish science to try again. Yours, respectfully,

"AMASA HOLCOMBE."

It will be perceived that the letter alluded to by Mr. Holcombe, written in reply to some inquiries respecting my opinion of the cause of table turning, was published in the Philadelphia Inquirer, in July, 1853. This letter will show that I was at that time utterly incredulous of any cause of the phenomena excepting unconscious muscular action on the part of the persons with whom the phenomena were associated. The inferences of Faraday, tending to the same conclusion, I thoroughly sanctioned.

As no allusion to spirits as the cause had been made by this Herculean investigator in the letter which drew forth mine, they were not contemplated in my view of the subject. Had I ever heard spiritual agency assigned as a cause, so great was my disbelief of any such agency, that it would have made no impression on my memory.

Though present on several occasions when table turning was the subject of discussion, it was not, within my hearing, attributed to spiritual agency. In common with almost all educated persons of the nineteenth century, I had been brought up deaf to any testimony which claimed assistance from supernatural causes, such as ghosts, magic, or witchcraft.

Subsequently to my publication corroborating the inferences of Faraday, having, in obedience to solicitations already cited, consented to visit circles in which spiritual manifestations were alleged to be made, I was conducted to a private house at which meetings for spiritual inquiry were occasionally held.

Seated at a table with half a dozen persons, a hymn was sung with religious zeal and solemnity. Soon afterward tappings were distinctly heard as if made beneath and against the table, which, from the perfect stillness of every one of the party, could not be attributed to any one among them. Apparently, the sounds were such as could only be made with some hard instrument, or with the ends of fingers aided by the nails.

I learned that simple queries were answered by means of these manifestations; one tap being considered as equivalent to a negative; two, to doubtful; and three, to an affirmative. With the greatest apparent sincerity, questions were put and answers taken and recorded, as if all concerned considered them as coming from a rational though invisible agent.

Subsequently, two media sat down at a small table (drawer removed), which, upon careful examination, I found to present to my inspection nothing but the surface of a bare board, on the under side as well as upon the upper. Yet the taps were heard as before, seemingly against the table. Even assuming the people by whom I was surrounded, to be capable of deception, and the feat to be due to jugglery, it was still inexplicable. But manifestly I was in a company of worthy people, who were themselves under a deception if these sounds did not proceed from spiritual agency.

On a subsequent occasion, at the same house, I heard similar tapping on a partition between two parlors. I opened the door between the parlors, and passed to that adjoining the one in which I had been sitting. Nothing could be seen which could account for the sounds.

The medium to whose presence these manifestations were due, then held a flute against the panel of the door, and invited me to listen. On putting my ear near the flute, tapping was quite audible. On the ensuing evening, I carried with me a sealed glass tube, a hollow tube of the same material, and a brass rod. These being successively held against the door panel, similarly to the holding of the flute, the rapping was again heard.

I have much reason to confide in the disinterestedness of the medium through whose assistance these facts were observed. She would not allow me even to make a present to her child; and her sitting for me was deemed prejudicial to her comfort and health, so that by the advice of her physician it was finally discontinued. Her parents believed the manifestations obtained through her influence to be caused by spirits.

Sitting at another mansion, in company with an able lawyer (an unbeliever in Spiritualism), as well as an accomplished female medium and two other persons, sounds were heard like those above mentioned. The lawyer alluded to, though from his profession accustomed to distrust and to scrutinize evidence, admitted that he found it utterly impossible to account for these sounds by any visible agency.

In order to make my narrative of the evidence upon the subject of rapping continuous, I would state that during the evening of my first visit to the circle of Spiritualists, as above mentioned, while grasping with my utmost energy a table at which I was seated, two female media, by merely placing their hands upon the surface of the table on the opposite side, caused it to move to and fro, in despite of my utmost exertions.

Visiting another circle under the influence of another medium, I found that tilting a table was substituted for the sounds as a means of manifestation. As one rap signifies no; two, doubtful; and three, affirmative, so it is with the motions, or tippings, as they are usually called.

Passing the fingers over the letters upon an alphabetic pasteboard, like those to assist children in learning their letters, when it comes over the required letter, its selection is indicated, either by a tapping or tilting. By this process, when the medium's eyes were directed to the ceiling, as independently observed by the legal friend above mentioned, as well as myself, the following communication was given:

"Light is dawning on the mind of your friend; soon he will speak trumpet-tongued to the scientific world, and add a new link to that chain of evidence on which our hope of man's salvation is founded."

The lawyer declared that he was utterly unable to conceive how, by the human means apparently employed, such sentences could be elaborated. Legerdemain on the part of the person who took down the manifestation was the only way to get rid of this evidence without resorting to the agency of some invisible intelligent being, who, by operating upon the tables, at once exercised physical force and mental power.

But assigning the result to legerdemain was altogether opposed to my knowledge of his character. This gentleman, and the circle to which he belonged, spent about three hours, twice or thrice a week, in getting communications through the alphabet, by the process to which the lines above mentioned were due. This would not have taken place, had they not had implicit confidence that the information thus obtained proceeded from spirits.

Subsequently, I contrived an apparatus which, if spirits were actually concerned in the phenomena, would enable them to manifest their physical and intellectual power independently of control by any medium.

Upon a pasteboard disk, more than a foot in diameter, the letters cut out from an alphabet card were nailed around the circumference, as much as possible deranged from the usual alphabetic order. About the center a small pulley was secured of two and a half inches diameter, fitting on an axletree, which passed through the legs of the table, about six inches from the top. Two weights were provided—one of about eight pounds, the other about two pounds. These were attached, one to each end of a cord wound about the pulley, and placed upon the floor immediately under it. Upon the table a screen of sheet zinc was fastened, behind which the medium was to be seated, so that she could not see the letters on the disk. A stationary vertical wire, attached to the axle, served for an index.

On tilting the table, the cord would be unwound from the pulley on the side of the larger weight, being wound up simultaneously to an equivalent extent on the side of the small weight, causing the pulley and disk to rotate about the axle. Restoring the table to its normal position, the smaller weight being allowed to act unresisted upon the cord and pulley, the rotation would be reversed. Of course, any person actuating the table and seeing the letters, could cause the disk so to rotate as to bring any letter under the index; but should the letters be concealed from the operator, no letter required could be brought under the index at will.

It was so contrived that neither the medium seated at the table behind the screen, nor any other person so seated, could, by tilting the table, bring any letter of the alphabet under the index, nor spell out any word requested.

(To be Continued.)

CONFRONTED ON THE STREET BY A SPIRIT.

F. Corden White, the spiritualistic medium, describes as remarkable an experience he had last evening. When in this city he is a guest at the residence of Capt. Mason Jackson, Milwaukee street. He returned to the house last evening shortly before 9 o'clock, greatly agitated. He had had a great fright. He said:

"When within two blocks of the house I noticed a man walking toward me. By his manner he especially attracted my attention. He did not turn aside but came directly in front of me, so close that I jumped aside to avoid a collision. Then he entirely disappeared. He seemed simply to fade away. At first I was frightened, as I thought I was about to be sand-bagged. Then I was startled by the total disappearance of a man who had been so near me that I could have touched him. It was certainly extraordinary."

Then turning to Capt. Jackson, Mr. White explained that the mysterious man he had met was a gentleman he had seen in Capt. Jackson's parlor two or three weeks ago. He did not know this visitor or his name, but from the description Capt. Jackson concluded he referred to Mr. Bostwick, the lecturer of the Ethical society.

"Then he is no longer living" said Mr. White. "That is the only explanation possible. I have undoubtedly seen his materialized spirit to-night."

Capt. Jackson, who knew Mr Bostwick had been ill went to a telephone station near by to enquire at the hospital as to Mr. Bostwick's condition. He learned that he had died a few hours before. "Some people," he said, "would call Mr. White's experience to-night supernatural. Spiritualists know it was only natural."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

"Principles of Light and Color." By E. D. Babbitt, M. D., LL.D. A truly great work of a master mind, and one whom Spiritualists should delight to honor. The result of years of deep thought and patient research into Nature's finer forces are here garnered and made amenable to the well-being of humanity. Medical men especially and scientists, general readers and students of occult forces will find instruction of great value and interest. A large, four-pound book, strongly bound, and containing beautiful illustrative plates. For sale at this office. Price, postpaid, $5. It is a wonderful work and you will be delighted with it.

A NOTABLE ARTICLE.

Seventeen Centuries of Paganism,

Ending in the Triumph of Modern Spiritualism.

By Prof. J. R. BUCHANAN.

In the immortal words of Bryant, "Truth crushed to earth will rise again—the eternal years of God are her's." The grandest demonstration of this is the history of religion—or what has been called religion.

The truth is now coming forth, though it seems still to be unknown or overlooked in all our colleges, churches, periodicals and productions of our fashionable literature, that the religion which has ruled the world seventeen centuries under the name of Christianity is in its creeds, ceremonies, emblems and institutions, substantially the same old Pagan religion which ruled the world a thousand years before Christ, and which in the first century, when its existence was threatened by the Christian church, at Jerusalem, roused and reorganized itself as a lion at Rome, with political power, swallowed the innocent lamb of Jerusalem, the church of democratic brotherhood, and seizing the name and reputation of the murdered church, presented itself before the world as the church of Christianity.

All this is now so well established by historical research, that it is the duty of every Spiritualist to study the subject and make it known, for the pulpit would ignore it for centuries, and conceal it as far as possible, and I have done my duty by embodying sufficient evidence in "Primitive Christianity," to enable every Spiritualist to paralyze his orthodox opponents. The contest will probably be fierce, for it will be the life or death battle of the most calamitory superstition that has ever afflicted mankind.

DESTRUCTION OF CHRISTIANITY.

Every radical reformer knows that when he urges any radical reformation he is opposed by the entire power of society—by the colleges, the churches, the literati, the government, fashion and wealth.

Spiritualism is still struggling in this battle, but the Spiritualists of to-day do not realize the strength of the opposition which confronted the first introduction of religious Spiritualism in Palestine. That opposition resulted in the murder of Jesus and his apostles, for it was the unanimous opposition of the ancient world.

In the first century the entire world was unanimously Pagan, and no apostles of Christianity could encounter the Pagan opposition without loss of life, except by pursuing the very quiet and gentle methods adopted by St. John and St. Jude.

Rome was the headquarters of the world's Paganism, a city unequaled in its iniquities, where, as Tacitus said, "Everything vile and atrocious was welcomed, and where the slaughter of the best citizens was a familiar occurrence."

The pure democratic Christianity of Jesus was intolerable to that corrupt city, in which Nero and Caligula were worshiped as gods with their statues in the temples. Nevertheless Christianity, with its intense Spiritualism and active support from the spirit world, had gone widely through the Roman Empire, but only among the humbler classes. Wealth and power are never on the side of true religion.

There was no propagation of Christianity in Rome after the death of St. Paul and St. Peter. Rome was intensely Pagan, and its priesthood rallied to the defense of their ancient Paganism, but they saw in the moral warmth and spiritual earnestness of the religion of the apostles, a new element of strength, which they determined to incorporate with Paganism. The leaders in this plan professed to enter the infant Christian church and assumed its control. Their first step was to seize the Epistles of St. Paul and convert them by forgery into the basis of a Roman Church, with supreme power over all the world.

Paul's epistles expressed nothing but his earnest devotion to the principles of Jesus. These epistles were interpolated and three times as much added to them, making the basis of a Papal Church in which every essential principle of Christianity was destroyed and the foundation laid for a new Roman Church in harmony with all the principles of ancient Paganism. Every principle of primitive Christianity was crushed and merged into the doctrines of Paganism through the Pauline forgeries.

Though Jesus had often expressly disclaimed all pretensions to Divine power and presented himself as only a passive medium for the expression of heavenly doctrines that were conveyed to him, the Pauline epistles made him not only a God, but the Creator of the entire universe. Though he taught that God was the benevolent parent of humanity, the new doctrine gave to God the most demoniac and malignant character that had ever been created by the human imagination—a conception worthy of a lunatic asylum. This chimerical monster was determined to roast all mankind forever because the woman he had created had eaten an apple without permission, and the only way to appease his infinite wrath against unborn millions was for his companion God to come to earth and be put to death.

But, according to this puerile story, when his companion God came he was seized as an imposter, soundly thrashed and nailed up until he died. Could there be anything more disgusting to common sense? The Creator of the universe cowhided by a Jew as an imposter. If there be any such thing as blasphemy, surely this is a perfect specimen. But the foundation of the whole story is annihilated by modern research.

The whole ridiculous Garden of Eden fable, which in the first three centuries was universally regarded as an allegory, is nothing but a literary theft from Paganism, stolen by the Jews in their Babylonian captivity. The Garden of Eden, with the tree of knowledge, the four rivers running forth, the tempting Devil, the talking serpent, the seduced woman and the expulsion from Paradise, is an old Pagan myth current among the Persians, Chinese and Hindoos a thousand years before Christ.

This was made the foundation of the Roman Church, and every other feature of the church was, in the same manner, borrowed or stolen from the ancient Pagans. The sacred word, the only begotten son of God, the redeemer and savior of mankind, the crucified savior of the New Testament, is substantially the same doctrine (with the name Christ substituted for Pagan deities) as prevailed in Egypt, Persia, China and India. Sociasch and Horus were the models for the Roman Christ. The crucified saviors of the Pagans were all virgin-born deities. They had the same experience in coming to earth to redeem mankind—descending into hell three days and nights, resurrecting from death and coming back to judge all mankind, sending them to heaven or hell, after which the world was to be burned up.

The Roman theology is an exact copy of the essential theologies of India, Egypt, Persia and China. There is nothing in it but Paganism, but the hell of the Romans was the worst hell ever invented and the God of Roman theology was the most horrible monster ever conceived by man. If a human being of similar characteristics were caught on earth by the police, he would be sent to a lunatic asylum as quickly as possible. What strikes me as most remarkable in this review of ancient history is the facility with which this gigantic imposture has been consummated, and the passive credulity with which the white race has received this re-hash of ancient Paganism under the name of Christianity.

The plan was artfully laid, the Pauline Epistles pledged the Roman Church to the most invariable fidelity to every criminal tyrant in the world; and by that pledge it secured the support of one of the most infamous murderers on the Roman throne—the Emperor Constantine, by whom the Roman Church was established and armed with a sword to conquer mankind. Before this conspiracy the world had one peaceful Pagan church. It had several varieties in different countries as the church has to-day among its sects; but there was no warfare about their religion, and no attempt to enforce it upon mankind by the sword. The Pagan fables were amusing and harmless, having very little influence upon society, and Rome was the common center of the ancient forms of Paganism.

But the Roman conspiracy was a new and daring enterprise. Its plan was to concentrate all the popular doctrines of Paganism in a new church, incorporate into it a recognition of the Jewish religion and the teachings of the apostles of Christianity, distorted and crammed with forgeries to make them fit the heterogeneous mass of Paganism.

The new church claimed apostolic power to govern the world, derived from Christ as a God, and its purpose was to break up the ancient tranquillity of religion, conquer all other forms of Paganism, and by the aid of the Roman Emperors, subdue the entire world at the feet of the Pope, as the vicegerant of God—an official for whom there was no room in the harmless old forms of Paganism, and whose existence was a practical destruction of Christianity, which was the only democratic religion the world has ever known.

To accomplish this, it was necessary to enslave the human mind, to suppress all literature and science incompatible with this gigantic fraud, and though the age of printing had not arrived, more than a hundred thousand volumes of ancient manuscripts were destroyed, to obliterate histories that would expose the Apostate Church.

This warfare against knowledge produced what are called the Dark Ages, in which the empire of the church was far inferior to the Saracens in intelligence and literature. This warfare against liberty and science has never ceased from the time when it brought forth its fabricated Bible in the second century, and in burning alive the profound philosopher Bruno, and the inspired maiden, Joan of Arc, as in the earlier ages by the brutal murder of Hypatia, it proved itself the common enemy of mankind. It has never repented or apologized for its crime in the burning of Bruno, but manifested furious rage when, a few years ago, the statue of Bruno was erected in Rome.

In taking a firm stand against this enemy of mankind, The Progressive Thinker has earned the gratitude of the lovers of liberty. This gigantic crusade against humanity, by the Roman hierarchy, of which our Catholic fellow citizens are helpless dupes, committed its first great crime in the destruction of democratic Christianity, which was the pure religion of Spiritualism. Anyone who will read the descriptions of Christian meetings by St. Paul and St. Luke, will see that they were the meetings of earnest Spiritualists whose Spiritualism was practically carried out in fraternity with each other and with the spirit world.

The first and grandest materialization in the world was seen in the five materializations of Jesus, in which he spoke to his disciples with the same earnest impressiveness as in life.

His was the noblest inspiration mankind have ever known. He was the only man who ever taught a pure and rational religion in the midst of a hostile superstition without yielding a single footstep to the superstitions of his age, although he knew it was at the peril of his life.

All other great men have risen to power by yielding to the spirit of the age. But Jesus and Buddha, Moses and Mohammed, were exceptions to the rule. They impressed their own individuality upon the age; but the ages were coldly superstitious and have surrounded these four illustrious names with the fogs and rainbows of the Oriental imagination.

The other three were surrounded by rosy clouds, but Jesus was surrounded with fabrications so basely libelous and ridiculous that it became difficult for many to believe his real existence, not being able to see through the Roman forgeries which have deceived the world. But I know his real history as thoroughly as it can be known now, and I know he taught a spiritual religion, two thousand years in advance of his age, which cannot be surpassed by the ethical progress and the psychic science of the nineteenth century—a religion which Spiritualism and democratic socialism are restoring to the world. It was a religion of perfect simplicity, of perfect democracy, perfect motherhood and perfect Spiritualism, but it did not long survive his death.

This was the religion suppressed by the Papal church, and after the destruction of Jerusalem, there existed only a few feeble churches in Palestine which adhered to the primitive teachings of the apostles.

They never called Jesus a God; they believed in no trinity; they did not pretend to eat his flesh and drink his blood; they enforced no Sunday Sabbath; they knew nothing of purgatory and prayers for the dead; they believed in no eternal hell and raging devil nor did they expect Jesus to come to enforce a day of judgment and set the world on fire—hence they were denounced as wicked heretics.

The opposition of the Jews and the power of the Roman government, although the Roman Popery had not then fully attained the despotic power given it by Constantine, nearly exterminated Christianity in the second century, and by suppressing the Christian Gospels, it deprived those churches of their necessary literature; nevertheless, these poor and persecuted Christians, adhering to the teachings of the apostles as well as they could recollect them, preserved their religion for at least three centuries longer—their last surviving church being at the little city of Pella, on the Jordan, near where Jesus began his public career.

When these churches ceased to exist, Christianity was extinct, and though some attempts have been made to revive it in Europe, they were always crushed in blood. It may be said that for the last 1500 years Christianity has been entirely unknown, and there has not been a single Christian church in existence. That which is called the Christian Church to-day is only a survival of the world-wide Paganism coming down from barbarian ages of ignorance in the form in which it was reorganized at Rome, with an ambition and ferocity before unknown.

There is not a single doctrine to-day called Christian, from the Nicene and Apostles' creeds to the Westminster confession, which is not an expression of the ancient Paganism, which ruled the world a thousand years before the time of Christ. Modern Europe and America are as truly Pagan countries, though disguised by fragments of the Gospels, as ancient Asia, and if any clergyman is inclined to doubt this assertion, he can be supplied with ample proof, and it can be easily shown that the Roman church of to-day is baser by far than any ancient form of Paganism.

The Spiritualism of Jerusalem is one with Modern Spiritualism, and the Paganism of Asia is one with the modern Roman Church and its younger brother, which is called Protestant, but which never protested against the forged and fabricated Bible which made its clandestine appearance a hundred years after the apostles were dead. Spiritual and psychometric science enable us to hold close communion with the ancient Spiritualists of Jerusalem and "Primitive Christianity" will reveal their history; but I regret to say that it may not appear before February, for I have much additional interesting matter since I first proposed its publication, of which I would not deprive its readers.

In my present exhausted condition, unable to go out of the house, and with the limited facilities of this city, I cannot push the work as rapidly as I would some years ago. It is now about one third in type and progressing as fast as circumstances will permit.

The half-rate subscriptions received were not quite sufficient to meet the cost of edition, but it has been my fate to serve the world at my own expense, and so I expect to continue until I reach the happy land where all expenses cease. There I shall escape from that mighty tyranny—the mass of mankind—whose ancient habit of slaughtering his best teachers is so far changed that he impatiently tolerates their existence. If life had been prolonged a few years I would have established a revolutionary medical college; but now it is impossible. If the leaders in progress look to me, I will help them from the other side of life as my predecessors have assisted me.

A NIGHT WITH SPIRIT FRIENDS.

On Christmas night eighteen or twenty Spiritualists held a seance at the home of C. M. and Josie Folsom, in this city. They are the mediums that have been engaged by the Hovey Society of this city for six months.

The circle was formed at 8 o'clock and lasted two hours. The first that came was a little child that said in a low whisper, it wanted to go to its papa and mamma who were in the circle, but it could not gain strength enough to reach them.

Then the circle prepared for a trumpet seance and a control came announcing himself as Tom Varley, and in a very jolly mood gave all a Merry Christmas greeting, and recognized my wife and daughter who had never been in a circle before. After going around and greeting all in the circle, he came to my wife and said: "Your sister is here and wants to talk to you; so I will go, and let her come in." Her sister had been in spirit for years.

She came and said to my wife: "Sister Lizzie, I am so glad that you came tonight; I want to talk to you, and have a great deal to tell you, if I can get strength to do so. I am always with you. I want to talk to my niece," and turning to our daughter, said: "My dear niece, this is a truth; we do not die but live right on; I am always with you."

Then turning to me, she said: "Brother John, I thank you for bringing my sister and niece so I can talk to them," then said, "My strength is exhausted and I must say good night.

Then my wife's brother, who passed out when only eighteen months old, came and gave his name, and said he had been in spirit-life fifty four years, which is correct. Then another control came, and introduced himself as John Williams, and gave the circle a kindly greeting with a good word for all, then taking the guitar that was on a table in the center of the circle, played a tune and told us if we would sing he would play an accompaniment. We sang several pieces and he performed his part nicely. While the guitar was being played it was passing around the circle, sometimes up near the ceiling, then down again near the floor. And so it was a very pleasant ending of the Christmas day to all present. Mr. and Mrs. Folsom are the best mediums I ever sat in a circle with.

JOHN T. SHANK.

IS INTERESTED IN "CHURCH."

To the Editor:—It has often been said that if Spiritualism could have been killed, its friends would have killed it long ago; and the saying is a true one. So, in spite of the load put upon our society here, in putting the musty, dead old name of "church," upon it, it is in a moderately good condition.

Brother G. W. Kates, and his accomplished and lady-like wife, Mrs. Zadie Brown Kates, have made the situation much brighter and better in the past month that they have occupied the platform, and in a manner have raised the standard of the said "church" up a trifle higher in the estimation of the people. Brother Kates is an educated gentleman and is very entertaining upon the rostrum, and Mrs. Kates, is an excellent medium as well as a good and entertaining speaker. The two of them make a very good combination, and have drawn very full houses at all their meetings. More of such workers are needed in our ranks, and I would heartily recommend them to any society that needs good workers and true ones. May they live long to teach and demonstrate the truths, beauties, and the religion of Spiritualism to our earth-bound brethren. J. W. DENNIS.

Buffalo, N. Y.

LOOKING FOR TRUTH.

To the Editor:—Having been in communication with a relative of mine, living at Flint, Mich., I naturally asked if there was any Spiritualist Society there. In the next letter received from my Christian relative, I was hauled over the coals, and ridiculed without mercy. Among the many statements made, one pleased me; that was, that Flint, Mich., has a Spiritualist Society, and it holds a meeting every Sunday evening. But, says my informant, using her own language, "I should be ashamed to be counted in with such a society. We have lots of them here, a meeting every Sunday night, but we don't notice them."

I was not hurt at the above remark, but I would like to know the truth of the following: A Dr. Putman, Spiritualist, of Flint, being taken very ill, and when it was found his case was serious, sent for a minister of the gospel to come and talk with him—the same minister officiating at the funeral. Would be pleased if any of the readers of The Progressive Thinker could throw a little light on the subject.

Nanaimo, B. C. J. L. PRATT.

THE PROPHECY FULFILLED.

A short time ago we puplished the following in The Progressive Thinker:

"Cyntheena, the Celestial Messenger (an ancient Egyptian who lived in prehistoric times), to the people of Earth:

"As ye sow, so shall ye reap. The measure of your conduct has been taken. Greed, avarice and vanity sit in high places. Wickedness dominates the earth. Love, mercy and righteousness have been banished, while liberty and justice are trampled in the dust. The mother and her child cry for bread. The many are ruled by the few. Through ignorance and superstition have the masses been held in slavery. Your creeds and religions are false. Your Bibles are the works of men. You have insulted the spirit of divinity and put to death the lovers of truth.

"Spiritualism has been presented to you by the Messenger in charge of your planet. You have blasphemed and ridiculed its science and its philosophy. You have upheld evil and cursed the good. You have permitted Pharisees and hypocrites to degrade and debauch the gift of a loving mother. False media and prophets revel in the garb of Spiritualism and thereby degrade its holy mission.

"As ye have sown, so shall ye reap. In the year 1896, in the twelfth month, from the fifth to the twelfth thereof, the Messenger shall impign the ether currents upon those places were the evils were first propagated, and your earth will be shaken as a tent is shaken by the wind. Parts of Asia and Europe will first receive the outpouring of Justice, and great will be the earthquake in those parts.

"Woe unto the people of earth if they will not turn from evil and seek for truth. Natural law is the law of Divinity. Knock at the door of the library of Nature and it shall be opened unto you. Banish evil and enthrone righteousness, or this shall be but the beginning of the end. 'Whosoever is my disciple shall do the things that I do, and even greater things shall he do.'"

"Jesus Malathel."

I give the above as it was given to me by the good Doctor Miller. Yours for truth. CHARLES HOWELL.

Grand Rapids, Mich.

WHERE THE PROPHECY WAS REALIZED.

London, Dec. 17.—Great Britain is in the throes of a genuine and unprecedented sensation. An earthquake, the most violent ever experienced in this country, has shaken every spire from Durham to Surrey and from London to Welsh coast. Subterraneous disturbances were first noticed at about 5:30 o'clock this morning and lasted from four to thirty seconds. At many points two distinct shocks were experienced. More severe shocks were felt at Shelton, Leadbury and Dean Forest. The earthquake was accompanied by a loud rushing sound. Buildings were violently shaken, furniture shifted, doors thrown open and pictures and other ornaments upset. The inhabitants were panic stricken and fled from their homes. The earthquake also visited Birmingham and other various points in Shropshire and was very violent in Worcester and the country surrounding that city. Houses and furniture were overturned.

The shocks were followed by a tremor of the earth and were accompanied by a rumbling sound. The greatest alarm prevailed everywhere. Chimneys were overthrown and widows, etc., smashed. At some points, persons on country roads were thrown down and a number of people were thrown out of their beds. Hereford cathedral was injured.

There was a dull rumbling beneath the earth's surface followed by two loud crashes and a terrific lifting and rocking.

The panic at Hereford was so great that one woman died of fright. People rushed wildly into the streets. Many chimneys fell, crashing into thoroughfares and all pinnacles of St. Nicholas church toppled over and part of the pinnacle of the Cathedral fell to the ground.

At Liverpool the earthquake was preceded by heavy thunder and a fearful hail storm. In London the earthquake was only slightly felt. A singular phenomena occurred at Bridgen-north, near Shrewsbury, previous to the disturbance. The streets suddenly seemed to be on fire and there were violent reports accompanied by a shaking of the earth. The people who were going in that vicinity say they were for a time unable to walk owing to the vibrations.

Sarsaparilla Sense.

Any sarsaparilla is sarsaparilla. True. So any tea is tea. So any flour is flour. But grades differ. You want the best. It's so with sarsaparilla. There are grades. You want the best. If you understood sarsaparilla as well as you do tea and flour it would be easy to determine. But you don't. How should you? When you are going to buy a commodity whose value you don't know, you pick out an old established house to trade with, and trust their experience and reputation. Do so when buying sarsaparilla.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla has been on the market 50 years. Your grandfather used Ayer's. It is a reputable medicine. There are many Sarsaparillas—but only one Ayer's. It cures.

MARGUERITE HUNTER.

A Narrative Descriptive of Life in the Material and Spiritual Spheres,

Transcribed by a Co-operative Spirit Band, combined with chosen media of earth. It was given through independent slate-writing. The illustrations were given in oil paintings on porcelain plate by Spirit artists. It is not a fiction, but a narrative of real life, without a parallel in the literature of Spiritualism, being a clear and succinct exposition of the philosophy, religion and science of Spiritualism. The book contains 380 pages with six illustrations in half-tone, and twelve pages in original independent writing. It is beautifully bound in blue silk cloth, stamped in silver. Price, $1.25. For sale at this office.

GENERAL SURVEY

The Spiritualistic Field—Its Workers, Doings, Etc.

Bear in mind, please, that we cannot publish weekly reports of meetings. Whenever a change is made in speakers, or anything of special interest, send us a brief item, please. A great deal can be expressed in a dozen lines; but long reports will not be used. Meetings are of local interest only. We extend a cordial invitation to all speakers to send in their appointments to lecture, and general movements, which will be read by at least 40,000. We go to press early Monday morning, and items must reach us as early as Friday or Saturday in order to have immediate insertion.

Communications must always be accompanied by the full name and address of the writer, or no attention will be paid to them.

Aus. M. Soukup writes: "I tried to form a Spiritualist society in the Bohemian settlement in this city, but all are in an uproar against me and the Bohemian newspapers ask why dare I introduce such a bad and despised thing as Spiritualism is. I will have to postpone it for some time. But I am doing good work in spite of all these obstacles. A Bohemian progressive weekly, 'Svit,' (Dawn) in Cedar Rapids, Ia., takes my articles on Spiritualism, about two columns every week. It has already published five such articles, and there will be about fifteen or twenty more of them. The editor of that weekly is a very intelligent and progressive man, and in an editorial last week he said that he was thankful for the opportunity—for which he had longed for such a long time—that he could learn what Spiritualism really was."

Addie R. Smith, corresponding secretary, writes from Portland, Ore.: "The First Spiritual Society held the third celebration of the National Association, December 20. The attendance was large. The programme was gotten up by the executive board, and was one of interest. The choir opened with song; invocation by Col. Reed, an old pioneer Spiritualist. Mr. G. C. Love then with a few well-chosen remarks explained the workings of the N. S. A., the objects and aims, showing the charter which had some time ago been presented to the society by Mr. Francis B. Woodbury, secretary of the N. S. A. Miss Campbell sang very sweetly, after which Mr. H. Addis made some few comparisons of the jubilee days of the world. At 2 p. m. the choir again entertained with song; Mr. Thomas read in interesting prose, Mr. S. Caukins and Albert Marshall made short addresses. The evening was devoted to recitation, lecture, music, etc."

Emma J. Huff, who is at Lake Helen, Fla., writes: "None should become so absorbed in the realm of spirit as to lose hold upon the practical things of life, nor vice versa, but unite spiritual thought and purpose with every day life. This is the 'happy medium' that the leaders in Spiritualistic movements are seeking."

The temple of the Spiritualists in Boston has been pronounced by the city assessors not to be a "house of worship," and they have therefore proceeded to set it in the assessment list. It is entered at $240,000. We can't understand this. The temple has been used for years as a place of worship.

Dr. T. A. Bland writes that at a seance given by Mrs. C. B. Bliss, in Boston, recently—the doors being locked—soon after the gas was turned off the air was filled with most delicious perfume, and each lady present received a magnificent pink or other flower, with stems and leaves all as fresh as if just cut from the parent stem.

Mrs. Wilton Rathbun, of New York, sends resolutions endorsing Mrs. Maggie Waite. We have only space for a brief abstract. The society expresses its deep regrets at parting with Mrs. Waite, and recommending her to all Spiritualist societies. "Her tests are accurate, pleasantly enunciated, and thrill her audiences with astonishment, wonder, joy, and emotion. In parting with Mrs. Waite, we say good-bye not only to an efficient, loyal co-worker, but to a friend who will carry with her our best wishes for continued success in her blessed life work."

Goff A. Hall, secretary, of Washington, D. C., writes approvingly of the good work done there by Mrs. Glading. Resolutions were unanimously passed by the society endorsing her in all respects, as follows: "While regretting her departure from among us, we yet wish her every success in her work wherever she goes, trusting that the richest of all blessings—good health—may be with her throughout the year and that she may return to us another season with yet higher teachings than any heretofore given by her. The thanks of this association be and the same hereby are tendered to Mrs. Glading for her instructive discourses, and to her guides who have endeavored to faithfully minister unto our spiritual needs during the present month."

C. H. H. writes from Port Huron, Mich.: "The Christmas entertainment was given on the afternoon of December 24, as that was the only time Santa Claus' services could be procured, and in order to fully accommodate him, a chimney with a large fire-place and mantel shelf was built at the back of the stage. This was in addition to the usual stage decorations, and it made a very pretty picture, with a bright fire in the grate, and rows of stockings, big and little, hanging from the mantel shelf, the shelf filled with appropriate ornaments, and the whole trimmed with holly and evergreens. Over a hundred children were promptly on hand at the appointed time, and an hour was devoted to songs and recitations. The opening song was 'Christmas Tide,' and all showed the careful training of their leader—Mrs. Robinson. With the closing song came the jingling of Santa Claus' sleigh-bells. The fire was extinguished and down the chimney he came with 'sugar plums' enough for every child in the hall. Then followed the distribution of books, china and toys. Soon trees, tables, harp and arch were empty, and children's arms full, and hearts happy."

P. H. McDonald writes from Red Key, Ind., of a seance held by Geo. White, medium. Two trumpets were used at the same time, in different languages; materialized forms and hands appeared, and many other manifestations enlivened the seance.

Amae Wheeler, materializing, trumpet, and independent slate-writing medium, will soon start for the Southern Cassadaga Camp at Lake Helen, Fla. He would like to negotiate with parties en route, in Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas, Tennessee and Alabama. Address with stamp at Brainerd, Minn., General Delivery.

Geo. Dawson writes: "I would gladly correspond with any medium or lecturer who would think of coming this way at any time in the near future. The harvest is ripe and the laborers are few; in fact, there is no one here at present doing anything at all in public work. There is a fine opening here now for a good lecturer or test medium who would not be too exacting as regards financial matters. A slate-writing medium, with well-developed powers, would also find Montreal a good field for the exercise of that phase of mediumship. Address Geo. Dawson, 265 W. Urban street, Montreal, Canada."

Herschel Henry writes from Hamilton, Ohio, that several mediums are being developed in home circles, and a number of good tests have been given. The cause of Spiritualism is agitating the minds of many people. The Third Branch of the People's Religious Spiritual Society recently enjoyed a week's visit from Mrs. Mary Garrett Sharon, organizer, who gave afternoon and evening seances and proved by many manifestations of spirit friends that spirit return is a fact. Mrs. Sharon is a good trumpet medium, also produces slate-writing and flowers.

Dr. Williams, of Southwest City, Mo., says that since his railroad invention he hears the loud hiss of the air-brake; and wishes to know if anyone knows if Mr. Westinghouse has passed over, and if so, to write him. He supposes if he has passed over, that he is attracted to him from the fact of his railroad invention. He says the hiss like the air-brake is very natural and loud, and anyone can hear it, and occurs in his presence in the evening, in the walls of the house.

Emma B. Fennimore writes: "The Society of Spiritual Truth, this city, held one of the most beautiful and impressive ceremonies on last Sunday night, December 27, ever held here. It was the ordination, installation and baptism of our beloved pastor, Mrs. Lee Norie Claman. The services were conducted by Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond. Our society to-day stands as one of the foremost in the West. Our pastor has worked hard for the upbuilding of this great cause. Long may she live."

"Church of the Star of Truth," Wicker Park Building, 501 North avenue, near Milwaukee avenue, Sunday evening, January 10. Discourse at 7:30 by W. J. Blair. Subject: "The Power of Mind Over Matter." Max Hoffman, medium.

Goff A. Hall writes from Washington, D. C.: "Mrs. A. M. Glading, of Doylestown, Pa., has just closed her engagement with our society and goes to New York for January, February to Philadelphia, March to Brooklyn, having engagements to June, 1897. She can be addressed at her home in Doylestown for engagements from June on for season of 1897--8. Mrs. Glading is an eminent trance speaker, her lectures being followed by tests and psychometric readings."

Lyman C. Howe writes from Fredonia, N. Y.: "I go to Toronto, Canada, next week, to speak there during January. I am to officiate at a wedding at Nashville, N. Y., this week—Thursday. Merry Christmas and Happy New Year to you and yours."

W. W. Ball writes from Wallisville, Texas: "Spiritualism is new in this county, but it is making good progress. Every one that investigates becomes a believer sooner or later. I will do all I can for your valuable paper. Every Spiritualist should take it, for it is worth more than any other three papers that I have seen."

Mrs. J. W. Voorhees writes: "A seance will be given at 47 Campbell Park, on the evening of January 9, for the benefit of Mrs. A. White, late of California. The following mediums will be present and officiate: Mrs. Maud L. Gillett, Mrs. Judge Ivy, Mrs. Henry and Mrs. Celia B. Hughes. Admission 50 cents."

Albert DeGolier writes from Bradford, Pa.: "Time has rolled another year into eternity, and reminds me that the time has arrived to remember a few of my relatives and friends with my yearly New Year's gift of a year's subscription to your most valuable paper, The Progressive Thinker. Herewith please find New York draft for five dollars, for which you will please send five copies of The Progressive Thinker to the enclosed addresses for one year from January 1, 1897. I have been a subscriber for your paper nearly from its first inception, and now it has become a fixture in our household, and as necessary for spiritual food, as the food on our table is for our temporal wants. May you and The Progressive Thinker live long to promulgate the beautiful and eternal truths of Spiritualism, is my earnest desire, and wishing you a very happy New Year."

Joseph E. Baldwin writes from Topeka, Kansas: "The First Society of Spiritualists here has just been favored by the work of Dr. and Mrs. Noyes, of California. The Doctor delivers some very fine lectures, and Mrs. Noyes gives true psychometric readings. They were well received by our people, and we hope they will stop here again sometime. They have gone to Lawrence, and will probably keep on to Michigan and New York."

G. H. Walser writes from Lincoln, Neb.: "In all my experience in the great and glorious cause of Spiritualism have I never witnessed such an interest as there is in this city at this time among the people. I came here a short time ago and found a most excellent lady and test medium, Mrs. Johns, holding Sunday evening meetings in the G. A. R. hall. Three weeks ago I joined my forces with her's in the great work, by preceding her tests with a lecture, and now the hall is entirely too small to accommodate the anxious souls who are earnestly seeking light from realms unseen and tidings from the loved and gone. We have secured the Conservatory of Music hall, with a larger seating capacity, where we will hold our future meetings. I find that the people are without spiritual papers here as a rule, and as The Progressive Thinker is the only 'spiritual' paper that is accessible to the thousands of longing hearts of the West, I will be glad to extend its circulation whenever and wherever I can do so; and besides, I know if a person pays in advance for the paper the money will not be fobbed and the paper not sent."

Mary Kazeska writes, that she had the pleasure of attending a Christmas seance given by Mrs. Hasenclever, 684 Madison street, this city. Before the medium went into the cabinet, the little control, "Pearl," came out and took a look at the Christmas tree. Other forms came and spoke to their friends. A pair of slates, laid on the floor, in sight of everybody, in five minutes had a portrait and a number of messages in different languages.

Cynthia Bullock, guardian of the Lyceum of the Spiritual Church of Love, Faskins' hall, 3012 Archer avenue, this city, writes that a special Christmas entertainment was held on Sunday, December 27. They had a wigwam instead of a Christmas tree. After a good literary entertainment, with concert singing, declamations, etc., the wigwam was opened and presents were distributed, also a lunch and apples to each one. The children and older people as well, enjoyed the occasion greatly.

Dr. Albert Sawin, the magnetic healer, is located for the present at Hotel Metropole, Chicago, Room 534.

L. W. Banks writes: "I read in The Progressive Thinker a few months ago an account of the exact location of the lost ship Chicora, which was located by a medium through a spirit guide. I have since read each issue of the paper carefully but have never see this statement verified. Will you please state in the next issue of your paper the facts bearing on the case." The whole story, which was taken from one of the daily papers, was undoubtedly a fake.

Wm. B. Morrison, secretary, writes from Grand Rapids, Mich.: "The Band of Harmony holds services every Sunday at Lincoln hall, Pearl street. Our lecturer for the past month has been Mr. Samuel Smith, of 87 North avenue, Grand Rapids. He is a veteran trance medium, and his addresses were very much appreciated. An interesting phase of his mediumship is that at times he finds spirit faces printed on his handkerchiefs and collars: A short time ago he received the picture of his sister who had been over to the spirit-side twenty-five years. Some few years ago he often received direct spirit writing, but was obliged to discontinue the sittings on account of his health. Among his guides are two Anglo-Saxons, a German, a Spaniard and an African. The music is furnished by a quartette of male voices, and the selections sung are from 'Old Melodies Spiritualized.' The old familiar tunes are very much appreciated by the audience. Next Sunday the lecturer will be our president, Mrs. W. C. Coffman, of this city, and at the close of the discourse clairvoyant tests will be furnished by Mrs. F. V. Jackson, of Grand Rapids, the noted test medium."

Mrs. H. Harper writes of a seance with Dr. W. A. Mansfield, in Cleveland, O.: "No sooner were the lights out, than spirit lights were seen in different places, voices distinctly heard, raps plainly heard on the chairs, and raps as plainly felt on the head, by the trumpet; each one felt the presence of at least something more than could be accounted for."

J. Kelly writes: "On the evening of December 14, members of the Church of the Spirit had a most enjoyable time. An immense tree loaded with presents for the little ones (there were seventy-five children present) gave a most festive appearance to the hall, which was profusely decorated with Chinese lanterns. After the gifts were distributed by Santa Claus, and the children made exceedingly happy, the older members whiled away the time to the strains of sweet music furnished by Elchrodt's celebrated orchestra. Dr. and Mrs. Willis Edwards were presented with a beautiful silver tea service, given by the ladies of the congregation. After the Doctor had thanked the donors for the pleasant surprise, all adjourned for refreshments, which were served by the well-known caterer, Mr. Dan Clemens."

H. A. Bradbury, of Vermont, writes: "The Progressive Thinker grows more and more interesting. I think every number is the best one yet. Every week it is full of food for thought and spiritual enlightenment. The amount of labor that you are putting into it is a marvel."

In one of his lectures B. F. Underwood says: "Let us by all means encourage every movement that will remove obstacles to progress, but we must not delude ourselves with the thought that there can be any permanent reform of the people without reform of the individuals that constitute the people. It would be an amusing, were it not a melancholy sight, to see a man under the influence of whiskey exhorting an audience to support temperance and prohibition, or to hear one who is given to habitual deceitfulness and lying talking about love of truth and honor. One is reminded of the lines:

"'He drank, chewed, an' smoked, an' was likewise profane;
He got angry on small provocation;
So he gave up the job of reformin' hisself,
And went in for reformin' the nation.'"

Ella Gibson Magoon writes from Louisville, Ky.: "Dr. Magoon and myself arrived in this hospitable city at the gate of the great South last week, and are meeting many pleasant friends. The Doctor delivered his first lecture here in Music Hall, Sunday evening, to a crowded house. Conditions were good, the audience being an intelligent and attentive one, and the flowing inspiration directed toward a strong and subtle question, as suggested by one in the audience, for the subject held the listeners in rapt and eager spell. After the lecture came others of the band, who gave convincing psychometric test work through the instrumentality of the Doctor. We think there is a field for a great work among the liberal minded class of the city of Louisville, and to that end we are combining forces in the hope that great can be the work outwrought."

W. F. Palmer, secretary, writes from Brooklyn, N. Y.: "It gives me great pleasure to write you that we have organized a new spiritual society in Brooklyn for mutual help and the extension of the cause. Mr. E. W. Barber, our president, conducted meetings at Fraternity Hall, with the assistance of the 'Star' medium of Brooklyn—Mrs. L. A. Olmstead—their united work dating from February 16th last. A few weeks ago interested friends united with them and formed what we call the 'Fraternal Society of Spiritualists,' and hold our meetings every Sunday evening at Fraternity Hall, 869 Bedford avenue. We have not only the best and most comfortable hall in the city, but also the best medium, and a better place to pass a Sunday evening cannot be found. Mrs. L. A. Olmstead is engaged for the month of January, 1897. We have opened a Sunday-school, which is constantly enlarging and promises large results. An entertainment and social was held last Monday evening at the hall, and was very much enjoyed by a large number. It concluded with refreshments and a dance, and is to be repeated once a month. We have a Sunday-school in operation whose membership is steadily increasing. The children were remembered by 'Santa Claus.'"

Geo. H. Brooks writes from Wheaton, Ill.: "I closed my meetings in Ottawa, Ill., last Sunday. I found the work needed my presence there, so remained longer than I expected. The meetings were well attended, and I trust good was done. I found the people were becoming very much interested, and a good will grew out of the meetings. I shall remain home for the holidays; the first time I have been able to be at home Christmas and New Year's in a long time."

Wm. E. Hurst writes a queer account of happenings to his friend, Dr. Williams, with whom, on invitation, he went for a half-day's recreation in Hanover Park, Meriden, Ct. On their way to the park the Doctor received in change from the conductor, 50 cents, 25 cents, 10 cents, and 5 cents. After a time, wishing to use some change, he found it had disappeared from his pocket. Later he again received in change, 50 cents, 25 cents, 10 cents, and 5 cents. Walking to a retired spot, he emptied all his pockets, without finding the first 50 cents, etc. Soon afterward Mr. Hurst himself searched the Doctor's pockets—with the same results. Still later, wishing to pay for some ice-cream, the Doctor on putting his hand into his pocket was surprised to find two 50 cents, two 25 cents, two 10 cents, and two 5 cent pieces. It would seem that some tricky spirit friends had been having a little recreation too, on the side.

Dr. S. C. Burland is now located at Ludington, Mich. His wife is an excellent speaker and medium, and they will be able to do an excellent work there.

Mrs. J. Storfer, speaking of the Encyclopaedia of Death, "It is priceless. Every time you pick it up there is a lesson, some new instruction, and will be for a lifetime. It can never grow old." Mrs. Louise Mahan says: "To the Spiritualist, between every line there is even more than the type expresses. I would not be without it."

Mrs. Mary Lindsay writes from Grand Rapids, Mich.: "I am enjoying my work at home. We have a very interesting meeting every Sunday afternoon, and a circle in the evening. Both services are well attended. Besides giving my services to these, I am doing missionary work in other parts of our city, and I am pleased to say all my meetings are well attended."

Orin Merritt writes from Genoa, Ill.: "There are but a few outspoken Spiritualists in Genoa, but they are alive and in earnest. We had Mrs. N. S. Aspinwall with us three days on her return from Washington, D. C. She gave us one lecture, to nearly two hundred people. All were delighted. I will say that we expect the Doctor and Mrs. Aspinwall here some time in January."

Lyman C. Howe has an engagement at Toronto, Canada, for a month.

The following executive officers have been elected by the First Spiritualists' Church of Rochester, N. Y.: President, A. K. Sisson; first vice-president, Mrs. M. H. Joslyn; second vice-president, Mr. Dustin; secretary, J. L. Hall; treasurer, J. W. Moore; trustees—H. W. Annis, H. L. Suydam, Geo. U. Pringle, Dr. R. E. Phillips, and Mrs. Farnsworth. The following committee, with G. W. Kates as president, has also been elected to take charge of the arrangements for the semi-centennial celebration to be held in Rochester, in 1898—J. W. Moore, R. D. Jones, Dr. F. H. Willis, A. K. Sisson, N. H. Eddy, Mrs. G. W. Kates, Mrs. Joslyn, Mrs. Flemming, Mrs. Farnsworth, Messrs. Clackner, Tubbs, Aldridge and Galusha, Mr. and Mrs. Hammond, and Mr. and Mrs. Hall. Arrangements have also been made by the above committee for a celebration in honor of the forty-ninth anniversary of Modern Spiritualism to be held next March.

Mrs. Minnie Clark writes: "The lovers of truth in Sterling, Kas., have reason to rejoice and be glad and bless the world of thought for having sent us such a person as Mrs. Emma F. Jay Bullene, of Denver, Col. She certainly is one of the shining lights of the age. We do feel so thankful for having her in our midst. We have been aided by the visits of several mediums, among them the noble worker, M. Theresa Allen. We have organized a Psychical Research Society, and expect to go forward in the study of truth, gleaning knowledge here and there by the help of the noble workers we may call to our aid as they pass through on our line of road."

Dr. Adah Sheehan, of Cincinnati, O., was in the city last week. She has only lately resumed her labors in the reform field, but is getting calls to lecture from various quarters. During January she will be at Toledo, Ohio, and during the month will lecture twice at Lima. During March she will be in Kansas City, Mo. April and May are open. Address her at Elsinore Gate and Russell streets, Cincinnati, O.

Mrs. Steelman-Mitchell, inspirational speaker and test medium, had good audiences at Winnebago City, Minn., during December. She can be engaged for January or February. Address for January, 2027 Hartval street, North Evanston, Chicago, Ill.

Dr. R. Greer has returned from his trip to the Gulf of Mexico. While there he visited many of the most delightful winter and summer resorts along the Mexican Gulf Coast, known as the Mississippi Sound, inhaling the refreshing and vitalizing air which comes in the soft, balmy breezes over the beautiful blue waters of the great Gulf. With its salubrious climate, its dense forests, its tropical plants and flowers, its feathered warblers, as well as other beauties of nature in sea and land, the Gulf Coast of Mexico, the Doctor says, is a veritable paradise, for here in this land of sunshine is an ideal resort for recreation in fishing, hunting, boating and bathing. Many come here in winter, as coming to a great sanitarium seeking health and warmth which the severe cold of a northern winter would deny. Malaria is unknown here. Along the sunny beach are many popular hotels, most notably the beautiful time-honored Montross at Biloxi, and the charming, home-like Anniston, at Mississippi City. Along the sunny beach, too, are many pronounced Spiritualists, and readers of The Progressive Thinker. The doctor adds that along the beach there are a great many lovely building sites, waiting for purchasers, and which can now be had cheap, but when the new electric railroad as contemplated, runs through, these unimproved properties will double in value. Now would be the time to buy.

ITEMS FROM LIGHT, LONDON, ENGLAND.

A committee, comprising M. Sully Prudhomme, of the Academie Francaise; M. Desbaux, Director of the Odeon; Professor Richet; M. de Rochas and Dr. Dariex, invited Eusapia Paladino to Paris to hold some further experimental sittings.

The committee, decided to take the phenomena as presented, and to concentrate their attention upon the observation of the process by which movements of objects at a distance were effected without contact.

While both of Eusapia's hands were held by M. de Rochas, his face was held and squeezed with considerable force by an 'astral' hand. Hands were inserted under his arms, and he was lifted up off his chair, it being placed over his head, upon his shoulders. Other members of the committee were touched in a similar way, one of them seeing the fingers that were held over his face and eyes.

As to whether the hands thus materialized and projected to a distance from the medium were those of Eusapia's own 'astral' form or not, M. de Rochas could express no opinion.

It is most improbable that the astral or psychical vitality pertaining to Eusapia's hands could be extracted from their physical molecular cells and externalised. Such a procedure would imply the disintegration of her physical hands, as occurred in the case of Madame d'Esperance, described by M. Aksakow, when the lower part of her organism was apparently dissolved.

We may conclude, therefore, that the astral hands which were projected to a distance from the medium were those of the invisible operator, temporarily materialized by the use of the exteriorised vitality of the subject.

The possibility remains, however, that such hands may perhaps be constituted by the invisible operator's thought-determination acting through and by means of the subject's exteriorised vitality; in other words, that they may be the objectivised and materialized thoughts of hands, carrying motive energy through the medium of the subject's exteriorised vitality.

It is now recognized that hypnotic suggestion may entail the objectivisation of the suggested idea in the subject's mind; the visualised idea becoming more vivid and real to the subject's perception than his normal surroundings.

It is well known that Occultists claim to effect the projection of thought-forms, which are constituted of their auric emanation or vital radiation.

Eusapia, at the request of M. de Rochas, held her hands some inches above the table, which was then levitated. While so suspended in the air, M. de Rochas pinched the intervening space between the table and the medium's hands. The sensation of the pinch repercated to Eusapia, who uttered a cry of pain; showing thereby that an invisible connecting medium passed from her hands to the table, carrying sensation and dynamic energy.

It is, therefore, possible that these astral hands are materialized thought-forms, projected through the medium by means of an invisible vital circuit which is known to carry dynamic energy and sensation.

This, it is admitted, comes in support of the claim previously made that 'materializations' are not the original spirits themselves, but materialized doubles, representing them; i. e., doubles clothed with matter by a process of coagulation.

There remains the further question as to whether these 'astral' hands are produced by auto-suggestion on the part of the medium, as most mediumistic phenomena are supposed by Ochorowics and Professor Richet and other psychical researchers to be produced, or by the suggestion of an invisible determining operator.

The presence of an operator external to Eusapia was, indeed, verified several times during these experiments, when his face and beard were partly seen.

One of the committee entered the cabinet behind the medium on one occasion, and was "handled" to a very palpable degree. This intra-normal operator assumed the name of "John King," and informed the investigators, through his subject, that he was an ex-Egyptian.

M. de Rochas pursued further his researches into the identity of process existing between electricity and the vital emanation radiated from the medium. It was found that the passing of an electric current from a Wimhorst machine by means of a chain, one end of which was fastened to the subject's shoulder and the other to the table, gave considerable additional strength to the phenomena. Eusapia in her normal state objected to the use of electricity, but when in intra-normal or "secondary" state, her control asked that it should be used.

M. de Rochas also produced the phenomenon of the "exteriorization of sensibility" with her, which formed into a column at her right side. He was, however, unable to proceed through the process of developing this into the "double," because the invisible operator seized upon this vital emanation and used it for his own purposes in the production of the phenomena already referred to.

Eusapia was as susceptible to "suggestion" when entranced by her invisible operator as when mesmerically induced by M. de Rochas. Suggestions made to her by M. de Rochas, when entranced, were evidently executed with entire conviction, as much so as were the "suggestions" from her invisible operator, which fact in itself constitutes strong evidence as to the identity of process in the production of mesmeric and mediumistic phenomena.

If a considerable number of experimenters in different places form the reality of certain phenomena they have observed, while a few others fail to obtain them, the probability is that the latter did not know how to establish the conditions necessary to obtain the phenomena in question.

ITEMS FROM THE TWO WORLDS, LONDON, ENG.

"Under all circumstances keep an even mind" is the magic staff of the Harmonical Philosopher.

Happiness comes alone from conscious rectitude—pure purpose, wise endeavor, and loving helpfulness.

Then let us be happy, wish each other to be happy, and do our best to make one another happy, and, if we all do that, happiness will reign supreme.

Surely, since "brief life is here our portion," and the "life that knows no ending" follows immediately we emerge through the dark of death into the sunlight of life beyond the tomb, to find ourselves welcomed by and giving greetings to the loved ones gone before, we may well be happy.

What a glorious patrimony is ours! What a prospect of progress; possession and unfoldment of powers, and expression of divine possibilities in services of love and sympathy and growth in understanding of, and unison with, the Divine purposes of the All-wise and All-loving!

To us there are no dead.

Good-bye, comrades. You are only lost to us in the mists. We know you are there. Sometimes there are rifts in the shadows and your faces gleam through. Sometimes your whispers touch our poor dull ears, and your outpoured love warms our hearts. We dry our tears. You are happy; You stand in the light of love, and for you and with you, we rejoice and are glad; though sometimes our hearts fail us, when the shadows close around and we are prisoners once more in the house of mourning and the cell of sense.

Let us be happy; turn we our faces towards the coming day.

We know the spring will come, and the summer's gladness and autumn's bounty, ere, once again, the darkness envelopes the earth, and winter's chill creeps like a poison upon us; so do we know that we cannot work in vain.

Our dreams of a perfect social order, of a perfected humanity, of human brotherhood and divine loveliness, cannot move us only to taunt us—they must, they will be realized, though we have to pass over the rainbow bridge of glory into real life. There we shall meet them all—the world's mothers, heroes, martyrs, teachers, and spiritual leaders.

Earth is a beautiful place.

This is God's world as much as any other. We are his. His life is ours. We the children of His Love and Goodness move and have our being in Him! Think of it, and then dare to be unhappy!

Dare we repine or be rebellious? Only want of knowledge, only want of trust, can make us that. Those to whom the spiritual light has been revealed, who have gone up into oneness with the Infinite, can move calm and serene through life "without haste and without rest," "without complaint and without pride," conscious that within the Life and Love Divine are perfect freedom and perfect power.

Life is too short for hatred, bitterness, envyings, and uncharity; for self-seekings or scornings; for strifes, feuds, but weeds in the garden of the mind; reptiles in the thought-realms; jarring notes in the oratories of life; irritants in the spheres of consciousness and poison-blights in the spiritual states where otherwise beauty might reign?

It is not death that makes us unhappy so much as the fear of it.

It is not life that is to be dreaded so much as the misuse of it.

Let us learn of the Spirit gentleness, compassion, sobriety, wisdom, fidelity, service, helpfulness, forgiveness, and sweet loving kindness, and then self-centered, spiritually-illumined, harmonial, and faithful to the best, purest, and highest, we shall be happy in administering happiness.

Why should we call Death cruel? rather say
Good Death and kind, who comes to take away
The load we cannot bear,
Who leads the wounded from the battle fray
With tender, loving care.
Magical Death, who claims the wildest heart,
Who calls the mourner from his bitter part,
And gives the toiler rest;
We must await his hand in patience, and not start
When it invades our breast.
Wonderful Death; strong arm to bear us on,
Far beyond planet and glad shining sun,
Where soft white clouds are riven,
Whither our loved ones are already gone
To the fair Courts of Heaven.
Pitiful Death; more pitiful than life,
Who leads us into paths where thorns are rife
To tear tender feet;
Thou guid'st us from the tumult and the strife
To peace and rest complete.
And if we rise not—to a solemn sleep,
Unutterably motionless and deep,
Which nought can ever break,
From which if wild storms rave, or soft winds sweep,
We shall no more awake.
Full many pass, in all their early prime,
In youth's glad spring to that fair clime,
Released from earthly woes,
Whilst others must grow grey and sere with time,
Ere they may find repose.
Strange mystery; yet still the round world rolls,
Guarded and guided, it is God controls,
Who gives us life and breath;
May we so live that we may yield pure souls
To the strong arms of Death.
Parted asunder, we shall meet again
Suffering, yet shall we live untouched by pain
On yonder love lit shore,
Where Death comes not, but perfect life will reign
For aye and evermore.

ITEMS FROM THE MYSTICAL WORLD, LONDON, ENG.

On the eve of the Christian Era, some twenty-seven years, B. C. one of the Great Colossi, still to be seen amongst the ruins on the plain at Thebes, and known as the Vocal Memnon, began to give out at the dawn or at sun-rise a prolonged musical sound.

This sound, deemed so inexplicable and mysterious, which scientific theorists have in vain tried to account for on material grounds, may be more satisfactorily accounted for by all persons conversant with the facts and phenomena of Modern Spiritualism.

To the Spiritualist now, and even then to those who could understand such modes of "revelation," it was none other than a wonderful and appropriate intimation from the Spirit-World, that the old Osirian religion, then in its decadence, was about to be superseded, or, rather, reformulated on a new basis and on a wider scale as regarded the extent of its influence.

Horus, the Son of Isis and Osiris, the Christ of Egypt, is about to go forth into the world, embodied anew as the Nazerene—thus called out of Egypt in a double sense—with the old message of love and immortality restated for the nations at large.

We need hardly pause to enquire what was the immediate object, say of Shufu or Cheops, in erecting the greatest of these monuments.

It is the same to us, whether in exposition of his religion and "belief," he labored to build himself a tomb in the great pyramid, to hold his mummied remains with, as in all cases, the accompanying scrolls for the enlightenment of the world in later times; or, as has been argued by the distinguished astronomer for Scotland, that he wished to leave a system of measurement for all time to the Anglo-Saxon race, his great successors, that were to be in after ages.

It is at least conceivable that the great King, knowing or divining that the sarcophagus placed in the so-called King's Chamber would, in all likelihood, be prematurely discovered, may have had the empty, inscriptionless one placed there as a blind to prevent further search for his remains, while he had another receptable constructed for himself in the rock far under the foundations of the mighty mass, where he may yet undisturbed lie in state; while in the meantime we may look upon the pyramid and its chambers as a standard of measure, a measure of time to note the great cycle, a place for initiation into the "mysteries," or a tomb, or all these combined if it please us.

But whatever the secondary objects, if any, in the construction of the pyramids, their first primary one is at least clear.

As tombs they are the embodiment of the ancient Osirian religion; and in this capacity, combined with their magnitude, as the mightiest monuments of the same, overawing as they do the mind, they have never ceased to preach to the world the old "creed" of man's immortality during the ages that have elapsed since their construction.

Herein lies the secret of the pyramids and their chief use and importance to the world.

Further, their enormous masses add to and emphasize more than aught else could the "thought" and "feeling" compelling sermons of the piled-up stones, halls, palaces and temples of the Nile valley, as a whole from those of Philae to the Great Sphinx at their base.

The Sphinx, a fitting companion, in perfect keeping with them as regards magnitude of scale, seated here appropriately, as it were, on guard at the entrance of this great Egyptian valley of wonders!

The Sphinx, concerning which Kingslake has said, in words now seen to have been prophetic: "Laugh and mock if ye will at the worship of stone idols, but mark ye this, ye breakers of images, that in one regard the stone idol bears awful resemblance to Deity—unchangefulness in the midst of change!—the same seeming will and intent, for ever and ever inexorable!

"Upon ancient dynasties of Ethiopian and Egyptian kings; upon Greek and Roman and Arab and Ottoman conquerors; upon battle and pestilence; upon the ceaseless misery of the Egyptian Race; upon keen-eyed travellers, Herodotus of yesterday and Warburton today; upon all and more this unwordly Sphinx has watched, like a Providence, with the same earnest eyes and tranquil mien!"

"Atlantis: The Antediluvian World. By Ignatius Donnelly Sums up all information relative to the lost continent of Atlantis. He regards the description of it given by Plato as veritable history It is intensely interesting. Price $2.

THE PSYCHOGRAPH
—OR—
DIAL PLANCHETTE.

This instrument is substantially the same as that employed by Prof. Hare in his early investigations. In its improved form it has been before the public for more than seven years, and in the hands of thousands of persons has proved its superiority over the Planchette, and all other instruments which have been brought out in imitation, both in regard to certainty and correctness of the communications received by its aid, and as a means or developing mediumship.

Do you wish to investigate Spiritualism?
Do you wish to develop Mediumship?
Do you desire to receive Communications?

The Psychograph is an invaluable assistant. A pamphlet with full directions for the Formation of Circles and Cultivation of Mediumship

with every instrument. Many who were not aware of their mediumistic gift, have, after a few sittings, been able to receive delightful messages. A volume might be filled with commendatory letters. Many who began with it as an amusing toy, found that the intelligence controlling it knew more than themselves, and became converts to Spiritualism.

Capt. D. B. Edwards, Orient, N. Y., writes: "I had communications (by the Psychograph) from many other friends, even from old settlers whose grave stones are moss-grown in the old yard. They have been highly satisfactory, and proved to me that Spiritualism is indeed true, and the communications have given my heart the greatest comfort in the severest loss I have had of son, daughter, and their mother."

Dr. Eugene Crowell, whose writings have made his name familiar to those interested in psychic matters, writes as follows: "I am much pleased with the Psychograph. It is very simple in principle and construction, and I am sure must be far more sensitive to spiritual power than the one now in use. I believe it will generally supersede the latter when its superior merits become known."

Securely packed, and sent postage paid from the manufacturer, for $1.00. Address:

HUDSON TUTTLE,
Berlin Heights, Ohio.

HERESY,
... OR ...
LED TO THE LIGHT.

A Thrilling, Psychological Story of Evangelization and Free Thought. It is to Protestantism what the "Secrets of the Convent" is to Catholicism.

BY HUDSON TUTTLE.

The distinguished author, Hudson Tuttle, requires no introduction to the readers of The Progressive Thinker, but the following headings of chapters will show them what they may expect from the book:

Contents:—An Idyl—Fordham—Building the Church—The Evangelist—Blood—The Saloon—The Lost Daughter—Law—The Harvest of Souls—Jane Grey—The Mother of Cain—Evolution—Stella—The Cell—Death—A Step Forward—The Home Circle—The Double Role—Heresy—Annette—The Bank Robbery—Liberty—All is Well That Ends Well—The New Church—The New Way; Led to the Light.

Every chapter is devoted to one idea, and the whole presents so many tableaux moving onward to the climax. The fiendish career of the revivalist is contrasted with the character of the honest minister and the thinking agnostic. The steps by which a preacher emerges from the church, and the difficulties he meets are graphically presented. The new church and progressive lyceum evolved out of the old, form an interesting study to those seeking new methods.

It is a beautiful volume of 223 pages, and the price in accordance with our new departure, is 30 cents, postpaid, or five copies for $1.25. For sale at the office of The Progressive Thinker.

THE MEDIUMISTIC
Experiences of John Brown,
The Medium of the Rockies, with an introduction by
PROF. J. S. LOVELAND.

This book should be in the hands of every one interested in Spiritualism.

Chapter 1, Notoriety; Early Mediumship. Chapter 2, The Heavenly Mansion. Chapter 3, Removal to California; Return of His Guide. Chapter 4, Remarkable Tests. Chapter 5, His Work as a Healer. Chapter 6, Leaves the Body. Chapter 7, Visit to the Spirit Land. Chapter 8, Methods Used by Spirits to Communicate: How to Conduct a Circle. Chapter 9, Miscellaneous Articles. Chapter 10, A Strange Experience. Chapter 11, Remarkable Manifestation of Spirit Power. Chapter 12, New Experiences—Illustrative of Prophetic Visions. Chapter 13, The First Break in the Atlantic Cable Shown to John Brown. Chapter 14, Unseen Opposition. Chapter 14. Ola-podrida.

For sale at this office. Heavy paper cover, price 50 cents.

THE UNKNOWN LIFE
—OF—
Jesus Christ
—BY—
NICOLAS NOTOVITCH.

TRANSLATED FROM THE FRENCH.

Since the writing of the New Testament no book has appeared of as great importance to Christianity as the Unknown Life of Jesus Christ.

This volume, written by the discoverer of the manuscript, contains a thrilling account of the privations and perils encountered in his search for it, a literal translation of the original manuscript, and lastly a critical analysis of what it contains.

This work contains 185 neatly printed pages, and is published on the basis of combining cheapness and excellence. Price, neatly bound, one dollar. Paper cover, price 25 cents, postage 5 cents.

Address this office, 40 Loomis St., Chicago, Ill.

LIFE IN TWO SPHERES.
A Fascinating Work.

The readers of The Progressive Thinker will remember the story under the above title, by Hudson Tuttle, which was published in its columns. At the time, constant inquiries were made as to its appearing in book form. This wish has now been gratified. It makes a volume of 243 pages, in style and form like the "Convent of the Sacred Heart," with a finely-engraved likeness of the author on the cover. The scenes of the story alternately shift from earth to the spirit spheres, and the philosophy of Spiritualism, the occupation and modes of life of spiritual beings, are presented in the pleasing form of narrative.

The following are the chapter-titles: Introduction; The House of the Sage; Home of the Miser; The Low Societies; Hades; Christmastide in the Spheres of Light; Christmastide and the Golden Gate; The Unhappy Marriage; Easter Day in Heaven; A Visit to the Earth; The Change Called Death; Coming to the Knowledge of the Light; The Society Again Visits Earth; The Forsaken and Despised; Discussion; A Visit to a Distant Globe; Reunion in the Spirit-world; Contentedness Not Goodness; Address of the Sage.

It is a book the Spiritualist will be delighted with; a book in which the investigator will find answers to ever-recurring questions; a book which will interest the church member, nor repel the most prejudiced. The price in paper is 50 cents; muslin $1; postpaid.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A New Edition, Profusely Illustrated.

"I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find nothing in it trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all, that under the appearances of fable, there may appear some latent truth, obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observation of the vulgar."—Voltaire.

Contents: "The White Bull," a Satirical Romance; "Zadig, or Fate," an Oriental History; "The Sage and the Atheist;" "The Princess of Babylon;" "The Man of Forty Crowns;" "The Huron, or Pupil of Nature;" "Micromegas," a Satire on Mankind; "The World as it Goes;" "The Black and the White;" "Memnon, the Philosopher;" "Andre Des Touches at Siam;" "Bababec;" "The Study of Nature;" "A Conversation With a Chinese;" "Plato's Dream;" "A Pleasure in Having no Pleasure;" "An Adventure in India;" "Jeannot and Colin;" "Travels of Scarmentado;" "The Good Brahmin;" "The Two Comforters;" "Ancient Faith and Fable."

One volume, post 8vo, 480 pages, with portrait and 82 illustrations. Extra vellum cloth, $1.50; postage, 15 cents.

"Voltaire's satire was keen and fine-pointed as a rapier."—Magazine of Am. History.

"A delightful reproduction, unique and refreshing."—Boston Commonwealth.

DEATH AND THE AFTER LIFE.

By Andrew Jackson Davis. Something you should read. Price 75 cents.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

This department is under the management of the distinguished author, speaker and medium,

Hudson Tuttle.

Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio.

Esmeralda, New York: Q. How shall We account for the controls of many public mediums, who act and talk like little children and yet claim to have been many years in the spirit world? The "Quina" of Mrs. Richmond is a notable example. She is identically the same as many years ago when she began communicating, and has made no advance. Does not this disprove the idea that there is growth in the spirit world? How else can we account for the childish prattle of those who claim to have been in the spirit world long enough to have reached maturity had they remained here?

A. "Esmeralda" voices queries which have arisen in the minds of many, and been made the groundwork of arguments against Spiritualism. It is said in explanation that a spirit coming in contact with earth through a medium, takes on more or less of the conditions of that life before it left it. Possibly this may be so to a slight degree, but it is contrary to my own observation. Again it is explained: Such spirits are acting a part. That may be true. That a spirit of three score years' experience in the beatitudes of the spirit world returns to play little child, yet it is scarcely credible. I confess to the difficulty of satisfactory explanation, and refer the subject to those mediums who have such controls. That a child just entered the spirit life should on its return speak as a child is exactly what we should expect, but surely it is a mystery why they should continue for long years to speak in a childish prattle, and although growing older by all these years, change not in the least. It would seem that if the coming into the earth-sphere so retards advancement, the spirit is unjust to itself by such sacrifice, which so greatly exceeds the benefit conferred.

U. G. Figley: Q. What is the difference between ativism and heredity?

A. Heredity is the impress which impresses the germ with the character of all its ancestors. Thus the child blends the characters of its ancestors to remotest generations, and not only that, but begins its life when life began on the earth, countless millions of years ago, and rapidly passes through every ascending grade, from the plasmic cell to man. It sets out to become a mollusk, then a fish, with gill arches, and its two-chambered heart divides into three, like the reptiles, and at last takes the fourth, which raises it from a cold-blooded reptile to a warm-blooded mammal. This is heredity. It is a force which accumulates and by such accumulation urges forward.

Ativism means reversion, or taking back. It is the sudden and strong development of heredity opposed to the modifications wrought by surroundings. Thus the single wild rose, by cultivation, sports countless forms, departing widely from their ancestor. The seeds of these rose will not breed true, but a majority of the seedlings will be reversions to the wild rose. This is ativism, again. Breeders of blooded stock may exercise the greatest care in selection, and for generations the points they strive for will be true, and the strain appears fixed; yet, perhaps the next generation will take back to the original stock, as the horse, after thousands of years, will take the black stripe along the back, of the quagga, or similar species from which it descended.

In the best educated and upright families one child will appear with the instincts of a savage, the avarice of a great-grandfather, the pride of a great-great-grandmother, or the love of drink of a still remoter grandsire. There is a "black sheep" in the family. This is ativism. It is most apparent in domesticated animals, which are comparatively of recent origin, and direct results of man's selective agency.

In the wild species the steady pressure of environment for vast durations of time, has so fixed the type, that all the individuals are alike, and if there was reversion to many generations back, it would be indistinguishable, for all these ancestors were so alike as to be indistinguishable.

H. E. B.: Q. Is the Romish Church an outgrowth of the Apostolic Church? If so, was it the only one at the beginning of the sixteenth century?

A. The Roman Catholic Church claims an unbroken succession from St. Peter to the present; yet, if a choice of the main line of descent were chosen, the Greek Church must be given the preference. For the first five centuries the glories of the Christian faith was in the East, among people who spoke the Greek language, as the apostles themselves, and the books that went to form the New Testament were written in Greek. The most celebrated of the early fathers, claimed by the Catholics, were Greeks, as Origen, Eusebius, Athanasius, Chrysostom, etc.

Constantine the Great belonged to the Greek Church, and it was this church that formulated the Trinity. The Roman Church was a branch—the final separation of which from the parent stem occurred when the Roman Empire, torn and distracted by the contentions of these religious factions, was divided into the East and the West—Constantinople being the capital of the former and also the seat of the spiritual ruler, and Rome of the latter and the temporal seat of the ruler of the Catholic.

The Greek Church has never had a reformation or awakened from the lethargy into which it fell under the influence of dogmatic creeds.

Roman Catholicism allied itself with the progressive nations, and has been carried forward by their advance. These two great churches at the beginning of the sixteenth century held very much the relation to each other that they do at present. Gibbon's "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire" exhaustively presents the crimes, follies and wars, which led to the ruin of the Roman world. The Northern barbarians would not have conquered had not the wealth and strength of the people been wasted in contention over the vagaries of religious beliefs. To the devotee, the belief in the unity or trinity; the conversion of bread into the flesh of God, by the muttering of a priest, was of more consequence than the honor of the Empire. Philosophy died in that blighting atmosphere; poetry died; honor, integrity, patriotism died; learning gave place to superstition, the desire for knowledge to bigoted zeal; the statesman to the ignorant priest, and the barbarians of the North possessed themselves of an Empire from which manhood had perished.

L. J. C.: Q. I am always troubled with the thought that it may be imagination or the sub-conscious self—some say it is—or the entities Theosophists say could simulate the presence of friends, I am, or have been, a Unitarian. Through a great number of mediums I have had more or less satisfactory communications. By myself am able to converse at times by means of Ouija, and the psychograph, and, following Mr. Stead's directions, am able to write by what claims to be spirit control. By difficulty I have gotten a good deal of information. My sister tells me that she and my husband are with me most of the time on account of the danger from evil spirits. It is wearing on me, it is so intensely interesting. I am surrounded by those who are prejudiced. What I desire to know is whether I had best go on?

A. This correspondent apprehends danger to herself and regrets, if it be true, that her two dearest ones are forced to be constantly with her when perhaps they may wish to be elsewhere. When the flood of light of the spiritual breaks on the mind that has been clouded with doubts, and the grand assurance of the future life; the beautiful, loving presence of those mourned as dead are realized, it is not strange that there is intense interest. The old heaven and the old earth pass away, and a new heaven, beyond words to describe, fills the joyful soul. There is danger, but the danger is in stopping, not in going on.

There is no danger in full development of the powers of the spirit, the full sensitiveness which receives perfect control. The danger is with the half-way, partial capability, which misconstrues, misunderstands and mingles itself with the communications it receives. This correspondent has not reached the great and resistless current. Her mind is yet disturbed by doubts, conjecturing and the disbelief of those around her. She has devoted a great deal of time to her mediumship, yet has missed the best methods of its cultivation, which have been constantly stated and restated in these columns. She has held her seances at any and all times when convenient or the fancy has moved her. Hence those watchful spirits, desirous of protecting her, have constantly held her in their presence. If she will appoint a time for her seances, and strictly keep the engagement, not oftener than twice a week, and during the intervals keep the subject out of mind, she will find that she will not be "worn" by the subject, and the results will be more satisfactory in every way. She will then realize that spiritual communications constitute the one great fact, which overwhelms all theories and conjectures. The sub-conscious-self; the shells, astral bodies and entities of the Theosophists, are as baseless fancies as the fairy tales of childhood.

R. Hunt: Q. We have a circle and hold regular sittings, but have been troubled by the violence with which the medium is treated. In early life she readily conversed with spirits, but her people told her she was crazy and that the Devil was after her, and she prayed for them not to come. One night in her room a hand reached out to her, and as it shook her hand she heard a voice say, "Good bye," and since that night they have never come to her as before. Now she desires to have them and we wish to know how she can induce them to restore her gift?

A. If the medium really desires the return of her spirit friends, with the earnestness she prayed for their departure, they will come. They understand her thoughts better than she does herself.

J. G.: Q. While at Grand Ledge camp I was advised by two spirit friends to sit alone in my room, and that I would not be long before having manifestations. I have done so, but with no marked results. My sittings have not been under good conditions, but the best I could do. Were they mistaken, knowing the inharmonious conditions which would surround me?

A. There is no advantage in sitting surrounded by inharmonious conditions which often open the way for the approach of those inharmonious; and if there are manifestations they are often of a disagreeable character.

THE BEST NEW YEAR'S PRESENT.

I know of no better Christmas present than The Progressive Thinker; that will reach my son once a week, and remind him of the old folks at home, who wish him a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

I know of no way that a dollar will furnish the same amount of real, substantial, elevating merriment, that will grow brighter as the weeks and months come and go; and when the year is done, who can say that The Progressive Thinker has failed to do its fair share to make one happy in progressive thought, that makes life worth living?

Who can estimate the worth of the truths it contains?

Or who can estimate the value of an error exposed?

Read and reflect, and appreciate if you can the value of progressive thought for the year about to step from the stage of action. Who can say that a dollar spent in any other way has paid them a larger per cent of real worth—providing, always, that The Progressive Thinker's highest aims and best wishes have been understood and appreciated? One is greeted on every page with freedom of thought from the best thinkers of the age that demands truth.

Thankful for its good in the past—with best wishes for future success—and to all its patrons. Fraternal friendship. W. W. RICE.

"History of the Inquisition." Every citizen of our country should read this concise history of that Romish churchly institution known as the Inquisition. The animus of Romanism against all institutions, beliefs and parties not in conformity with the ruling powers of the Romish hierarchy is plainly shown in these statements of veritable history. The devilishness and murderous malignity of the "Holy Inquisition" is scarcely paralleled in all the world's records of inhuman atrocities. It is for sale at this office, and will be mailed postpaid for 25c.

"The Great Roman Anaconda." By Prof. Geo. P. Rudolph, Ph.D., ex-priest of the diocese of Cleveland, O. A sharp and pointed letter to Bishop Horstmann. It is good reading, and should be widely distributed, that people may be enlightened concerning the ways and methods of Rome and its priesthood. Price 15c. For sale at this office.

"The Bridge Between Two Worlds.' By Abby A. Judson. This book is dedicated to all earnest souls who desire, by harmonizing their physical bodies and their psychical bodies with universal nature, and their souls with the higher intelligences, to come into closer connection with the purer realms of the Spirit-world. It is written in the sweet spiritual tone that characterizes all of Miss Judson's literary works. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 75 cents.

"Religious and Theological Works of Thomas Paine." Contains his celebrated "Age of Reason," and a number of letters and discourses on religious and theological subjects. Cloth binding, 430 pages. Price $1. For sale at this office.

WHAT HAS IT DONE?

Carpenter Spiritualism and Genuine Spiritualism.

The Old Idea of Death Has Been Banished.

To the Editor:—In dramatic parlance there is what is called "a carpenter's scene." By means of this "scene" audiences are transported from New York to Paris without leaving their seats. The dying father curses his erring, absent son in the parlor, falls back dead, and the stage carpenter slides in front of this parlor a scene representing "a dark and lonely wood" wherein the dead father, having risen hurriedly from his deathbed, having pulled off his white wig and beard and substituted a black wig beard, frockcoat, and a rakish air, comes on as the son with the "forged check" and meets his "sneaky pal." While they are trying to explain something that the audience never clearly comprehend, the carpenter sets up the "ruined grange," which the erring son is to rob, at back. The "sneaky pal" sees the sheriff approaching, and the son rushes off while the "pal" is monologueing and dons a pair of horse pistols, top boots, overcoat and slouch hat, and when the "dark wood" is drawn off, shows himself as the bold sheriff in persuit of himself, as it were. A "fill in" scene which has usually little bearing on the play is called "a carpenter's scene."

There are lots of "carpenter's scenes" in the daily press, where too much space, or too little news, is filled up by the funny paragraphist.

The song that, by its noise, enables the spirit to come up through the trap in the floor or through the folding doors at the back, or permits the medium (?) to put on a semblance of King Solomon or Marie Antoinette and show him or herself to the circle as a materialization from (?) is a "carpenter's song." This last is not a dig at the genuine, but at the fraudulent manifestation. I know of no "carpenter's scenes" in The Progressive Thinker, for all it contains, (save possibly when I have the honor to appear in it, an honor I appreciate, as one must be careful when one talks to forty thousand critical listeners,) bears directly on the play "Spiritualism."

I use the stage as a simile, as the stage will do an immense deal for Spiritualism in the near future.

Victorien Sardou, the eminent French dramatist, is at work on a play for the "divine" Sarah Bernhart, the plot of which will revolve around Spiritisme. He will be followed by other capable writers, and the subject in which we are so deeply interested will receive an impetus, otherwise impossible. You that know Bartley Campbell was alleged to have tried to voice a play through the instrumentality of an inexperienced medium, which died a natural death in a most natural manner. This was a proof of what I have asserted time and again, that the instrument must be fit for the player. When a medium is a master of the technique of the drama; master of emotion and knows what the people as well as the spirits want, then, and not till then can Bartley Campbell or any other dramatist from the clearer side of life use that medium through which to write a successful play.

Well, as I was saying, Mr. Editor, when we write to forty thousand people we ought to avoid "carpenter's scenes." It was mentioned in the paper the other day as "a splendid charity" that Grover Cleveland had given an old man whose hut had been burned, permission to build another on his land at Buzzard's Bay. It also mentioned that Mr. Cleveland, moved to pity by the misfortune of a poor widow in Buffalo, had bought a bit of land from her at a slight advance in price. I don't suppose that Mr. Cleveland thought he was performing an act before high heaven to make the angels weep in either case; but it was mentioned by one of our papers as a marvelous evidence of a sublimely charitable man. How little we know of charity, Mr. Editor, and how we abuse the word. If my brother is hungry and I feed him, I am not charitable—I am just. If I give him food, shelter and help, I am only just. Mark me, the time will come when any man that does not minister to a suffering and needy fellow will be execrated! Charity is an attribute of Divinity, and belongs to the soul, not to the body—if I have means and to spare, and I keep back food from a hungry, deserving fellow, one of God's poor, I ought to be put in jail!

Charity? to feed the hungry, clothe the naked, nurse the sick? Bah! its justice. Right! not charity. When it was said of old that "the greatest of all is charity," the sayer did not think it would take us more than two thousand years to find out the meaning of the word.

As Spiritualists, who are supposed to be nearer the throne than orthodox humanity, why do we do what we do? Why do we advertise something we cannot produce? The circus man advertises: "Come one, come all and see the amphibious, amthropoid bicephalous." We go, but we don't expect to see it: we know the tricks. "Come one, come all!" advertises the Spiritual meeting manager, backed up of course by the medium who is to preside. "Come and hear from your spirit friends. Full names and particulars given." We go and pay our money at the door. After a lecture we hear the medium, upon being introduced to her audience say. "I don't know if I can get anything tonight or not. I'll do the best I can, I can't always count on tests, etc."

Then why do they advertise to do what they usually fall utterly in doing? What would that same medium think of a merchant who beguiled her to his store to buy rose buds at ten cents a dozen and when she got there the cupboard was bare and he tried to satisfy her demand with turnips? Wherein lies the difference? Its not the money, its the principle involved! We expect truth, not equivocation, from Spiritualists. "I see so many things of a private nature, come to my house," etc.—You know it, and so do I. These things do not mislead us, they mislead and disgust those that attend who are not of us but who long to be. These things may be incurable, like the bite of a mad dog.

There are too few Mrs. Whitneys and too many Mrs. So-an-sos. To mislead in an advertisement is fraud, just as much as bogus materialization—which is a paradox—is fraud: both are obtaining money and expectation under false pretence.

A great thought can never be an impure thought. Great deeds can never be deeds of injustice. An infinitisimal lie can never be a gigantic truth. We cannot become perfect in a moment; it takes time. The eternity that is to come is not longer than the eternity that is past.

No doubt there are spirits that passed on from some remote mortality millions of ages before the nebulous gases which finally became the solids and fluids of earth were thrown from their center, and who have not yet become perfect. Let us not despair. Let us grasp all the truth we can while here; for its Great Source lies far beyond the constellation of the Hunting Dogs.

When we become perfect; when we have outgrown self, when we have passed beyond greed and creed, we shall not be annihilated, we shall be absorbed. We shall become infinity and occupy immensity.

There are persecuted and prosecuted mediums who deserve pity materialized: while those who, through misleading advertisements, etc., deserve persecution and prosecution and bring us into disrepute should be held up as examples, not of Spiritualism, but of fraud. We encourage what we should condemn.

Spiritualism should be dear and sacred to us. We are brought to seek it out in many devious ways. Some out of idle curiosity, some as scoffers, some as skeptics, some as unbelievers, some as investigators; but all, consciously or unconsciously, because somewhere in the great invisible Republic of Immortality there is some dear one we hope to hear from; as one that waits at the shore for tidings of some vessel reported lost, while something, they know not what, whispers, "she reached port in safety."

There are few of us who have not through blinding tears that welled up from the flood-gates of our affection, looked down upon some dear one on whose lips the cold fingers of death had set the seal of silence which we feared might be eternal—which orthodoxy had not proved was not eternal.

How we have knelt over the very coffin of our hopes till love seemed wedded only to a memory. Then Spiritualism came to us, and, soft as the footfall of an angel on the tufted fields of paradise we felt the loved approach: we heard a voice that said, "I am he that was dead, and lo, I am alive forevermore.

I have passed through all gradations Mr. Editor, necesary to make a Spiritualist; from hope, fear, doubt and distrust, to hope, fear, doubt and conviction. If there are any backsliders in the faith, they are those that have reached "conviction" at one great stride. He who goes round the mountain to reach its summit is used to the height by the time he reaches it; while he that climbs direct, is apt to be dizzy at the top.

I am often asked, "What has Spiritualism done for humanity?" I answer: "So many things I cannot enumerate them." Some say it has driven Hell out of the churches. It has done so many things aside from that, that we can afford to give the credit of that to the Devil.

By-the-way, there is a person who has stood a lot of abuse patiently; and somehow I have more respect for the orthodox Devil than for the orthodox Jehovah. Without Satan the whole plan of salvation would fall flat. Think of it! Satan, a glorious angel, when he wanted to tempt that still more glorious evidence of God's handiwork, Eve, turning himself into a hideous snake to do it. Eve's first act at sight of him would have been to scream, pick up her skirts and faint. I give Satan credit for more sense.

Calling him Satan and Beelzebub does not alter his personality. Names do not make people.

"Underneath these crumbling stones,
Lies the body of 'Manda Jones.
Her name was Smith, we've called her Jones,
As Smith would never rhyme with stones."— reads the old epitaph. And God? God is too far off; too enigmatical as understood by orthodoxy.

"What is God?" asked a little child not long since. "A spirit that you can't see, nor feel nor hear, yet is near you always," was the answer. "I don't want my God to have skin on its face."

Spiritualism, by a wonderful metamorphosis has transformed the grinning figure of rattling bones and clanking scythe, into a beautiful angel of light; his poison dart into a golden wand of peace; the horrid grin into a bewitching smile; the bony hands into fingers as soft and delicate as the lips we love; the fearful skull into the glorious head of a woman, whose eyes bear such a look of tenderness and hope, that children, who were wont to be frightened at a shadow, go into her open arms as trustingly as they ever sank to sleep on the bosom of a mother.

Spiritualism has banished that grim boatman Charon that set with inexorable visage by the sultry Styx and sent a band of angels with a flowered transport to bear the released soul to the confines of Elysium.

"Yes," they ask, "what has Spiritualism done of practical benefit? What has it done to advance art or further science?" I answer thus: If spirits told us all there was to be known of astronomy we'd break our telescopes; if they painted our pictures we'd throw away our brushes; if they taught us all that was to be known of the arts and sciences we'd throw away our brains and become as complete a race of nonentities as ever disgraced humanity.

Spiritualism has taught, has demonstrated to us that we shall live, and live and live! Shall live when those twin luminaries of the heavens, Procyon and Sirius, shall be a memory—shall live when the great constelation of Orion shall have been scattered to the uttermost parts of the universe; and when the earth, robbed of its light and heat, swings "blind and blackening in the moonless air," and on her lofty mountain peaks solitude shall sit.

Spiritualism has done away with faith and put knowledge in its stead. It has healed the wounds of broken hearts with the balm of peace. Those that longed for "the touch of a vanished hand,

The sound of a voice that was still,"

have had that longing satisfied by the touch of angel fingers; the sound of a voice that was still.

Spiritualism has brought to us with potent force the full meaning of those words: "I am he that was dead; and lo, I am alive forevermore."

CHAS. NEVINS.

New York City, N. Y.

Constipation cured by that pleasant drink, Golden Laxative Coffee. 50 cents by mail. Golden Laxative Coffee Co., Ayer, Mass. 373

"The Molecular Hypothesis of Nature." By Prof. W. M. Lockwood. Prof. Lockwood is recognized as one of the ablest lecturers on the spiritual rostrum. In this little volume he presents an succinct form the substance of his lectures on the Molecular Hypothesis of Nature; and presents his views as demonstrating a scientific basis of Spiritualism. The book is commended to all who love to study and think. For sale at this office. Price 25 cents

"Mediumship and Its Development, and How to Mesmerize to Assist Development." By W. H. Bach. Especially useful to learners who seek to know and utilize the laws of mediumship and development, and avoid errors. Price, cloth, 50 cents; paper, 25 cents.

"The Woman's Bible. Part I. The Pentateuch. Comments on Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy." The contrast between the thoughts of these brave women and the thoughts of the orthodox world during all time past, is very striking. Keen analysis, ripe scholarship and fearless adherence to the right, characterize this very interesting effort of some of the brightest minds of to-day. For sale at this office. Price 50 cents.

A NEW TEMPLE.

The Modern College of Old Occultism To Be Built on Ancient Ruins.

TO TEACH MYSTERIES — TIME AND SPACE TO BE ELIMINATED AND ALL KNOWLEDGE ACQUIRED—POWER OF INNER CIRCLE.

Now that the crusade of the theosophists is about to come to an end by their return to America in the near future, the fact that the College of Occult Science is to be erected in California on the site of an ancient temple has been announced, and it is expected that work on the edifice will begin within a few weeks, says the New York Herald. The building will at first be an unpretentious tower, in which a light will be kept continually burning, but around this will soon cluster an imposing group of fine structures, which will be befitting the dignity of the creed to which they are dedicated. It will be without doubt the most interesting and unique spot on the American continent.

Amid the balmy groves of the Golden State, in the vine clad hills which listen alike to the soft wash of the waves of the Pacific and the shrill whistle of the locomotive, there will be taught a science which is not on the catalogue of our modern colleges, but which was learned by men before the days of Confucius, before Christ came on earth or the earth had dreamed of the new creeds which distract our globe to-day.

WHAT WILL BE TAUGHT.

The students at this school for the revival of ancient mysteries will be instructed in the wisdom religion of old, initiated in the secrets which have come down through countless ages locked in the breasts of sages who were loath to impart their knowledge to an unappreciative world. The student's minds will be trained in the hidden wonders of the inner consciousness and in the psychic force with which every being is endowed. The knowledge of the occult truths of nature which were known to the priests in the ancient temples will be brought before their minds, and they will become acquainted with the science of the Magi of old, with the white magic of the Egyptians, while the gorgeous ceremonials which delighted the people of the Nile in the time of the beautiful Cleopatra, in which the Greeks revelled in the time of the imperial Pericles, will be performed before their eyes.

The secrets which the learned Brahmins have kept, which have been hidden in the secret caves of mountainous Thibet, which are but faintly outlined to material minds, will be but the A, B, C of their alphabet, for they will progress into an infinite field of psychic phenomena which will lift the soul into another plane of existence.

FOR THE INNER CIRCLE.

In theosophy there are two circles, or what we may term grades, of knowledge, the largest class being formed of those who are merely believers in the tenets, while the inner circle is composed of those who desire to dive deeply into mysteries of truth and to become adepts, or wielders of psychic forces. It is the latter which will be trained at the new occult school. There will be no expense attendant on studying at this institution, and any who desire honestly to perfect themselves in the study of theosophy will be welcomed. But the initiates, or those who have entered the college, are bound by the strictest vow of secrecy, and one violating this solemn pledge would likely meet with some uncomfortable experiences. The reason for this is that an adept in occult knowledge possesses so many wonderful powers which may be used for ill that these powers are restricted to those only whose rectitude of character renders them worthy to be trusted with such secrets.

Among the many powers which will be developed in these occult students will be that of thought transference, or the art of projecting the mind's ideas through space into the mind of another. Between the mind of man and his body there must be a connecting link, and this link is solved by theosophy as the astral body, which is the seat of most of the power of the soul. As the mind acts on a body through the intervention of the electricity of the astral body, so it can act on another mind in the same manner. With this power one may send messages to friends at any distance, for space is annihilated and two minds can communicate in any part of the world with perfect ease.

SOME STRANGE POWERS.

Another remarkable attribute of the psychologically developed soul will be the art of acquiring knowledge by what might be termed interior penetration; that is, the nature of the thing resolves itself into one's inner consciousness without any apparent effort of the mind. Thus a letter may be held unopened in the hand or laid on the breast and yet read with perfect clearness by the mental vision of an adept.

Even more strange is the art of transferring the body, yet it is asserted that those who have delved deeply into the secrets of nature can and do project their astral bodies to any point they wish. A person in Madrid wishing to communicate with a friend in New York can thus throw not only his mind, but his astral body, which can be seen as one would perceive a magnetic aura. This, it is said, is done by the adepts of the East at any time, and from the interior of Thibet—a land in which no white man has penetrated—there come wonderful stories of the science of the Mahatmas, or men learned in Brahminical lore.

CONTROL OF MIND.

Perhaps the most dangerous attribute which will be developed will be the strengnth of will power, which will enable one to so direct the mind that its force will be enlarged to a stupendous degree. Thought is a force, a vibration, as are all forms of energy, and it sets in motion currents of ethereal matter of which the grosser senses have no ken.

A strongly developed will can, even in ordinary persons, control the mind and will of another, and in the adepts the exertion of the will is so vastly improved upon that it is a force which can shatter material objects even at a distance. This power can be carried to such an extent that death can be brought by a simple act of the will, and this most dangerous knowledge becomes a weapon in the hands of the unscupulous.

The depth to which the mind may descend or the height to which it may climb in occult mysteries is almost limitless. A fragment of stone will have about it a magnetic atmosphere pregnant with the history through which it has passed, and a chip from a prostrate column in the ruined Colosseum would tell to the adept mind the story of ancient Rome in its pictures of the past.

Let the good work go on, from whatever source, the only object being to elevate the world to a higher plane.

New York. LUCRETIUS.

The Assyrians became a nation at the founding of Nineveh, 2245 B. C.

"THE LIGHT OF EGYPT,"

OR THE SCIENCE OF THE SOUL AND THE STARS.

Finely Illustrated With Eight Full-Page Engravings.

BY AN INITIATE IN ESOTERIC MASONRY.

It is claimed that this book is not a mere compilation, but thoroughly original.

It is believed to contain information upon the most vital points of Occultism and Theosophy that cannot be obtained elsewhere.

It claims to fully reveal the most recondite mysteries of man upon every plane of his existence, both here and hereafter, in such plain, simple language that a child can almost understand it.

The secret and Occult mysteries of Astrology are revealed and explained for the first time, it is affirmed, since the days of Egyptian Hieroglyphics.

An effort is made to show that the Science of the Soul and the Science of the Stars are the twin mysteries which comprise THE ONE GRAND SCIENCE OF LIFE.

The following are among the claims made for the work by its friends:

To the Spiritual investigator this book is indispensable.

To the medium it reveals knowledge beyond all earthly price, and will prove in real truth "a guide, philosopher and friend."

To the Occult it will supply the mystic key for which he has been so long earnestly seeking.

To the Astrologer it will become a "divine revelation of Science."

OPINIONS OF PRESS AND PEOPLE.

"A noble, philosophical and instructive work."—Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten.

"A work of remarkable ability and interest."—Dr. J. R. Buchanan.

"A remarkably concise, clear and forcibly interesting work, * * * It is more clear and intelligible than any other work on like subjects."—Mr. J. J. Morse.

"A careful reading of THE LIGHT OF EGYPT discovers the beginning of a new sect in Occultism, which will oppose the grafting on Western Occultists the subtile delusive dogmas of Karma and Re-incarnation."—New York Times.

"It is a volume likely to attract wide attention from that class of scholars interested in mystical science and occult forces. But it is written in such plain and simple style as to be within the easy comprehension * * * of any cultivated, scholarly reader."—The Chicago Daily Inter Ocean.

"However recondite his book, the author certainly presents a theory of first causes which is well fitted to challenge the thoughtful readers' attention and to excite much reflection."—Hartford Daily Times.

"Considered as an exposition of Occultism, or the philosophy of the Orient from a Western standpoint, this is a remarkable production."—The Daily Tribune (Salt Lake City).

"This work, the result of years of research and study, will undoubtedly create a profound sensation throughout the philosophic world."—The Detroit Commercial Advertiser.

"It is an Occult work but not a Theosophical one. * * * It is a book entirely new in its scope and must excite wide attention."—The Kansas City Journal.

Beautifully printed and illustrated on paper manufactured for this special purpose, with illuminated and extra heavy cloth binding.

Price, Three Dollars. For Sale at This Office.

"THE LANGUAGE OF THE STARS."

A Primary Course of Lessons in Celestial Dynamics.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "THE LIGHT OF EGYPT."

This important primary work is the first practical exposition of the Astro-Magnetic forces of Nature—in their relation to man—that has yet been issued by the American press. It contains fourteen special lessons, embracing each department of human life, in such plain, simple language that a child can understand the elementary principles laid down. And in addition to these lessons is an Appendix, containing a full explanation of all technical and scientific terms in general use upon the subject, thus forming a brief, yet practical Astro Dictionary. This work is illustrated with special plates.

For Sale at This Office. Price, Fifty Cents.

CELESTIAL DYNAMICS,

Being a Normal Course of Study in the Astro-Magnetic Forces of Nature.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "THE LIGHT OF EGYPT," "THE LANGUAGE OF THE STARS," ETC.

A magnificent and complete course of Astro-metaphysical study, embodying Vital Principles of Life, Mental Force, Sickness and Disease. With the only true and really Scientific method of treating the sick successfully.

Mental Healers, Meta-physicians, and all who practice the Healing Art Divine should give "Celestial Dynamics" a thorough and impartial study, and thus learn the real cause of their frequent failures.

No Astro-Student can afford to be without this work, if he would understand the Meta-physics of Astrology.

This work was specially prepared for publication to meet the demands of a large and very earnest class of people who cannot afford to pay for a regular course of instruction under a qualified teacher. And those who can afford this privilege will find the work an invaluable text-book to their studies.

The Price is One Dollar Only, and is within reach of all who seek light. For sale at this office.

"The A. P. A. MANUAL contains much interesting and instructive matter and a wide circulation of the same will no doubt prove highly beneficial as a literary agent and will assist greatly in arousing sleeping Protestants to the true conditions that surround them. I should like to see it given a wide circulation."

C. P. JOHNSON, State President A. P. A. of Illinois.

PRICE 15 CENTS

A.P.A. MANUAL

"I have examined the Manual and find a 'multum in parvo' volume of most important and entertaining matter—interesting as the average novel. I recommend it to every member of the A. P. A. and to every lover of our country. Its mission among our members and among the people at large will be a useful one." J. A. BEARDSLEE, State President of Missouri.

"Your A. P. A. Manual received, read and reread, and am happy to say that you have made a success. It ought to be in every American home." W. F. HOUGHTON, M. D.

"I have examined the Manual for the A. P. A. I think it is a valuable document in its references, history and light shedding information upon the dark recesses of the Roman Hierarchy. I think it will have a tendency to lift the nation from their minds so that they can perceive the acts and actors upon the stage of this republic. "Your A. P. A. Manual received, read and reread, and I can freely say it is one of the best collections of printed matter that I ever read, and I hope that the same will be freely distributed by our Councils." WILL B. NEWTON, State Secretary A. P. A. of Illinois.

and Complete EXPOSE OF THE PRINCIPLES & OBJECTS OF THE AMERICAN PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION

(COPYRIGHTED.)

Illustrated Edition contains 80 pages. Sent on receipt of 15 cents 2 copies for 25 cents postpaid. The MANUAL sells at sight.

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

INTERVIEWS WITH SPIRITS, MIND READING AND BEYOND. By Carrie E. S. Twing, medium. Price 50 cents. By Wm. A. Hovey. 200 pages, with illustrations of the subjects treated upon. Price $1.25.

GOLDEN LAXATIVE COFFEE.

SOMETHING NEW,
BUT OH, SO NICE!

CURES CONSTIPATION!

Ask your druggist for it, and if they don't have it, ask them to order some of us, and they will do it.

GOES AS FAR AS 4 POUNDS OF PURE COFFEE.

A Package by Mail, 50 Cents.

Golden Laxative Coffee Co.,
AYER, MASS.

MOTHER EVE'S LAMENT.

I stand before you straight and tall
As mortals were before the fall;
No hooked nose nor massive jaw,
But a creature perfect without flaw,

The "Good Book" calls me Mother Eve,
And says I caused you all to grieve;
But I contend it is not true—
I won't bear all the blame; would you?

The apples did look awful nice,
And all but one were without price;
Of course, that was the best there were—
Or so the serpent told me, sir.

And then I had a generous heart,
So to my husband gave a part,
And he did eat and grew so wise,
So like the Father in the skies,
That God came down to fix things right,
And found us in an awful plight.
No dainty ribbons tied my hair,
My hands, and—yes, my feet were bare.
I'm modest, so I'll not relate
The horrors of my awful state.

My husband, he was quite as bad,
But he was all the one I had,
And I'd no chance to get another,
For you see he hadn't any mother!
We hid ourselves behind a tree,
Hoping there God could not see,
But he raised his voice and called aloud.
We kept quite still, for we were proud.
Again he called out: "Where art thou?"
We thrust our heads from out the bough,
And told him we were afraid,
For our garments had been mislaid;
But we found that God knew what we'd done,
And that 'twould be no use to run:
So I told him what the serpent said,
And heaped the blame all on his head.
The serpent he'd been strutting around,
But God then felled him to the ground,
And straightway drove us from the place—
He sent us forth in deep disgrace.

'Tis said for man a pardon came;
But we have suffered just the same,
And ever since that time, you see,
The blame has rested on us three;
But I have had the most to bear,
More a great deal than my share.
How did I know? How could I guess
That men would make a cider press,
And use the juice of that fine fruit,
Their share in crime to contribute,
Then trace the whole thing back to me,
Because I got fruit off the tree?

This simple tale, for centuries told,
I think a lesson may unfold:
We are controlled by Nature's laws,
And that without a saving clause:
And if a law by Nature made
Is ever by us disobeyed,
We have to suffer to atone—
We pay the debt, and we alone.

FRANTZ.

WILL C. HODGE AT ROCHESTER, IND.

The First Spiritualist Church of Rochester is still living and the friends of free thought and Spiritualism are more than holding their own against the combined influences of ignorance and superstition and the depressing influences caused by the times. By persistent effort on the part of the faithful, our philosophy is bearing fruit, as witnessed by the uniformly good audiences and the number of new faces which are to be seen in Temple Hall on any Sunday evening.

As this is my fifth annual engagement here, I am in a position to know whereof I speak concerning the progress made.

Spiritualism is no longer an experiment, but a recognized fact, and as evidence I will state that in a call for a union meeting of all the Churches, the First Spiritualist Church was recognized and respectfully invited to be one of the number.

What has been done in Rochester can be done in other places, if the friends will organize with a determination to carry on the work.

The problem of singing seems to have been solved by this society, for in no place that I have been, not even at our camp-meetings, is there such singing, and this of itself furnishes a genuine inspiration. Here as elsewhere the friends keenly feel the financial stringency, and it is necessary for the workers to be quite largely imbued with a missionary spirit to insure success. My time expired with the last Sunday of December, but I have been re-engaged for January, and all correspondence will reach me here until the first of February. Am open for engagements, and realizing the effect of the present depression in all kinds of business, will arrange compensation to suit the times. WILL C. HODGE.

"The Gospel of Buddha, According to Old Records," Told by Paul Carus. This book is heartily commended to students of the science of religions, and to all who would gain a fair conception of Buddhism in its spirit and living principles. Spiritualist or Christian can scarcely read it without spiritual profit. Price $1. For sale at this office.

"Talleyrand's Letter to the Pope" will be found especially interesting to all who would desire to make a study of Romanism and the Bible. The historic facts he states, and his keen, scathing review of Romish ideas and practices should be read by all. Sold at this office. Price 25 cents

"The Religion of the Future." By S. Weil. This is a work of far more than ordinary power and value, by a bold, untrammeled thinker. Spiritualists who love deep, clear thought, reverent for truth alone, will be pleased with it, and well repaid by its perusal. For sale at this office. Price, cloth, $1.25; paper, 50 cents.

IMPORTANT!

DR. C. E. WATKINS,

—THE—
FAMOUS CHRONIST,
OF AYER, MASS.

QUICK CURES! SMALL DOSES!

Send age, name in full and two 2-cent stamps and leading symptom, and we will send you a diagnosis of your case FREE, and we will try and make the price of treatment right to you. Remember, please, that we do not wish to take your case unless you are dissatisfied with your present treatment. Do not ask OUR opinion of this doctor or that one, because we never express an opinion, nor have we any one connected with us that is allowed to speak ill of any one or even to express an opinion. We know some doctors do so, but we do not.

The day of shot-gun prescription is past; drastic drugs in large doses will not be given ten years from now. We believe in the certainty of medicine and in specific medication, but specific medication requires specific diagnosis. He who understands the action of drugs, and who is gifted with the power of correctly diagnosing, is the successful physician to-day.

SPECIFIC MEDICINE! NO DRASTIC DRUGS!

A Book on "Chronic Disease" Sent for 2-cent Stamp.

C. E. WATKINS, M. D.,
AYER, MASS.

HERE IS PROOF

That a Psychical Physician Is the Best.

11,061 patients treated during the past four years; 8,091 cured, 16 died, 600 failed to cure, rest not heard from, having discontinued treatment at end of first or second month's treatment.

Such is Dr. C. E. Watkins' record. Dr. Watkins discharged 72 patients cured the last month. Remember, the above patients are all patients who were given up by other doctors as incurable, or at least they failed to cure, before they came to Dr. Watkins; yet the old allopath schools are still asking that laws might be made to allow them only to treat the sick. The homeopaths and other "paths" are just as bad—all want the dear public protected. We could furnish thousands of letters from patients that have been cured by spiritual doctors, and yet this would not be considered proof by our legislators, but the doctors who failed to cure their patients—why their word would be taken without question. Is it not time that the public should think of these things when voting, and vote for the man who will see that truth is protected? Spiritualists in all of the States, let this article help you to see your duty. Vote for no man for any office who does not recognize Spiritualism and spiritual doctors.

Boston, Mass. JOHN STRONG.

SUN-LAND ECHOES.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 1.

name than that which San Francisco and some cities farther east practice upon, namely, it has given liberty to the people. Here the masseur and the masseuse, the electrician, the mental curist, the hydropath and other followers of nature's methods, are represented in numbers and work in peace and safety, curing numerous cases which other methods cannot reach. Two of my graduates of whom I am quite proud, greeted me here, one of whom, Dr. Doble, is treating with an admirable success, and the other, Wm. C. Bowman is an eloquent speaker and a grand worker for every humanitarian cause. Several other excellent workers are carrying out our methods, and we hope to make this a center of luminous and refined forces.

This is a land of wonders of new and startling things, great mountains and valleys, immense trees, marvelous vegetation and 1200 miles of seaboard on the greatest of oceans. We visited the Chamber of Commerce and had to laugh outright to find a sweet potato weighing 25 pounds, a beet weighing 50 pounds and a pumpkin weighing 250 pounds. The tomatoes, strawberries, blackberries, oranges and flowers of all kinds keep on growing and ripening and don't know when to stop. The muscat grapes, out of which raisins are made, are exceedingly delicious, the finest fruit in fact I ever tasted, are now as high as five cents a pound being nearly gone for the season. There price has been as low as a cent a pound or sometimes even less. They are much superior to the Malaga grape which sells in New York at 15 or 20 cents a pound.

It is to hoped that the men and women produced in this favored clime shall be as wonderful for high achievements as the growths of the vegetable world. E. D. BABBITT, M. D.

College of Fine Forces, 253 S. Broadway, Los Angeles, Cal.

"Cosmian Hymn Book." A collection of original and selected hymns, for liberal and ethical societies, for schools and the home; compiled by L. K. Washburn. This volume meets a public want. It comprises 258 choice selections of poetry and music, embodying the highest moral sentiment, and free from all sectarianism. Price, 50c. For sale at this office.

DRS. PEEBLES & BURROUGHS,

SPECIALISTS IN ALL CHRONIC DISEASES.

—Depend for their remarkable cures, not upon the old drastic drug system, but upon the knowledge of diseases and their proper remedies—upon science and the finer psychic forces.

Some of their cures, like Schlatter's, are INSTANTANEOUS; in other cases months are required.

Having carefully studied all the therapeutic agencies in connection with their long medical experience, they use those best adapted to each case with unvarying success.

Hundreds are joyfully writing the Doctor: "I am better," or "I am cured." "God bless you."

THEY TREAT THE FOLLOWING:

Dyspepsia, diarrhœa, dropsy, epilepsy, eczema, erysipelas, falling sickness, rheumatism, scrofula, nervous spasm, gravel, gout, headaches, heart disease, kidney complaint, female weakness, liver difficulty, neuralgia, paralysis, bleeding piles, bronchitis, asthma, bladder affection, cancer, catarrh, pimples upon the face, uterine diseases, weaknesses of men, barrenness, insanity, drunkenness, constipation, la grippe and all chronic diseases. And further, they furnish

FREE TO ALL PATIENTS

Hygenic and Physiological literature, enabling them when cured, to remain healthy.

Correct Diagnosis Free,

By enclosing name, age, sex, leading symptom and stamp for reply.

REMEMBER TO ADDRESS
DRS. PEEBLES & BURROUGHS,
P. O. BOX 177,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
853tf

WHO ARE THESE

Wonder Workers Who Cure Those Whom the Best Physicians Fail to Relieve?

Dr. Peebles is too well known to require any introduction or endorsement. J. A. Burroughs, M. D., his adopted son, has an education in the work, to which he gives his entire time, that fits him peculiarly for his chosen profession. He has been with Dr. Peebles since early boyhood, thus growing up in his magnetism and learning his methods. He has graduated with honor from three medical and one literary college. He has traveled abroad with Dr. Peebles and with and under him studied the best and most scientific methods used in curing chronic diseases, and has been his valued assistant for many years in his great sanitarium, and there demonstrated the value of the education received. Added to these he brings the best of psychic gifts to his work, and while he has never posed as a public medium, yet many have known and tested his powers.

But what interests more especially the suffering public is the results of their work, and this is what they point to with pride, for every mail brings letters like the following:

When I sat for psychic treatment on Thursday evening I had great pains in my side and back. After sitting a while my whole body trembled and the pains all left me and I felt like a new person.
EMMA A. BARRON.
San Miguel, Cal., Dec. 6, 1896.

I have taken your medicines one week. I feel better. Will say that it has helped me more than all the other doctors I have tried.
ALHANAN PERRY.
West Bolton, Vermont, Dec. 13, 1896.

And now I will just state that Charles is just getting along splendidly, 'Tis perfectly wonderful what you have done for him. He has been sick for years, almost an invalid, and now after three weeks' treatment with you he feels as though he had a new lease on life.
MRS. L. BRYANT.
McKeesport, Pa., Dec. 10, 1896.

I am much pleased at the result of your treatment and wish to express my gratitude for your close attention and care. Although my case may not seem as wonderful as some, yet I do not think it a very common thing for rheumatism to be cured, especially for one of my age; indeed, one of our most popular physicians is quite lame with the disease, and so is evidently unable to rid himself of it. M. F. WYMAN.
34 Walter street, Salem, Mass., Dec. 14, 1896.

I am feeling better than I have felt for years. Your treatment has done wonders for me. I am surprised at the great change that has taken place in me in the short time under your treatment. I am doing all my house work now and feel well and happy; in fact my whole body seems to have new strength and vigor. I think you will remember that I wrote you that I did not have strength to walk around or do anything.
MRS. ANNIE F. SMITH.
East Rochester, N. H., Dec. 6, 1896.

If you or your friends are suffering with any chronic disease which others have failed to reach, do not longer suffer, but write them, giving, name, age, sex and a leading symptom, and receive a correct diagnosis and valuable printed matter free. Address, DRS. PEEBLES & BURROUGHS, Indianapolis, Ind.

A Good Offer.

If you are sick and have failed to find relief, send your name and address to Dr. J. R. Craig, 1346 Market street, San Francisco, Cal., and he will send you a correct diagnosis. Stamps for reply. 370

Dr. E. J. Worst,

of Ashland, Ohio, will mail any reader of The Progressive Thinker one of his new Aerial Catarrh Inhalers with medicine enough for one year free. He will allow you three days as a trial, then if perfectly satisfied, send him $1; if not, return it to him in the original package. Catarrh, asthma, colds in the head, bronchitis and tuberculosis immediately relieved and speedily cured. Don't pay big prices for worthless inhalers. Address above. 376

Golden Laxative Coffee cures constipation - 50 cents by mail. Golden Laxative Coffee Co., Ayer, Mass. 373

"Woman, Church and State." By Matilda Joslyn Gage. A royal volume, of more than common intrinsic value. The subject is treated with masterly ability; showing what the church has and has not done for woman. It is full of information on the subject, and should be read by every one. Price $2, postpaid.

"The Fountain of Life, or The Threefold Power of Sex." By Lois Waisbrooker. One of the author's most useful books. It should be read by every man and woman. Price 50c.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson-Barker,

AS A SPIRITUAL HEALER HAS NO EQUAL! . . . . .

Rejoice and Be Glad! Herald Forth the Tidings of Good Health!

DR. A. B. DOBSON'S

Healing powers are being repeated over and over again through the mediumship of MRS. DR. DOBSON-BARKER, who, for the past year and a half has

SUCCESSFULLY TREATED OVER ONE THOUSAND PATIENTS

of all diseases that flesh is heir to, and will give you proof of her powers, by sending requirements as per small advertisement for diagnosis of your case. Here is one of her many cures:

St. Louis, June 21, 1896.

MY DEAR MRS. DOBSON:—I herewith enclose $1.15 for another month's remedies for my sister Emma. I can't tell you how much good these medicines do her and how thankful and grateful we are for having applied for them. When she began taking this last medicine, she had considerable distress in the bowels and stomach, but after a week she was relieved and we are convinced if she had not the medicine she would have had a serious sick spell as liver, stomach and bowels were in a bad condition. Now everything seems in good order; still we feel as if more medicine will eventually cure all her ailments. We thank you sincerely for prompt reply, and wish you all the success you so well merit.

With affectionate regards, very truly,
REBECCA LEVY.
8331 Laclede ave., St. Louis Mo

ONLY 2 CENTS A MONTH.

Times Are Hard, But Anyone Can Afford 2 Cents a Month for

"LIFE AND HEALTH."

24 cents a year, or 5 subscriptions for $1. Subscribe now or send us a 2 cent stamp and we will send you a sample, and then if you like it you can send us 22 cents more. This monthly is worth $1 a year to anyone. Stamps taken.

DR. C. E. WATKINS,
AYER, . . . MASSACHUSETTS.
872tf

THE LADY.

'Twas in a cheerless street-car, on a cheerless, cheerless night.
The biting wind held on behind with bitter sort o' might.
'Twas rain, and sleet and snow that fell,
and each was mean and chill,
A mother sat and held her child—the little one was ill.

Her clothes were only patched up rags;
she had a sieve-like shawl,
Which she had thrown about her babe,
that clothes had scarce at all.
One of the poor! Her face was pinched, her bosom nearly bared;
Her eyes were sunken in her head, and from them famine stared.

And as each person left the car, in rushed the eager blast
To greet the shivering mother as she held her baby fast.
The very tears she shed were cold, and froze them as they fell.
How live they thus from day to day?
But God and they can tell.

A lady watched the shivering form, a lady clad in furs;
Her glance was one of haughtiness—I wished the child were hers.
For she was haughty, she was warm, she had no need to think,
While she had plenty, of the poor that had scarce food nor drink.

This lady bore an extra wrap—'twas thrown across her arm;
And held in readiness to don when she should face the storm.
A mass of furs from head to heel—could defy the blast, the rain;
Could feel some satisfaction at the mother's look of pain.

She glanced across, as 'twere with scorn
to where the mother sat;
Then turned away her haughty face,
this proud aristocrat.
Then rose, and with a haughty air, she reached and pulled the bell.
I looked around to see where so much haughtiness did dwell.

The light from her most sumptuous home streamed forth from every pane;
"I thought as much," and then I turned to look at her again.
If what I saw was accident, it was a strange mishap!
Her well-filled purse I saw her drop right in the mother's lap.

The wrap she held, she placed it 'bout
the mother and her child.
Her face, I thought so haughty, had grown wond'rous sweet and mild;
Her voice was like an angel's as she said:
"You keep it all,"
Then left the car, but I could see her tears of pity fall.

And God could see, and angels saw, and paused them in their flight
And wept for very gladness at the deed was done that night.
So, blessed be the merciful! and may the poor be blessed,
And may such haughty beings be by angel hands caressed.

CHAS. NEVINS.

PASSED TO SPIRIT LIFE.

Passed to spirit life from Providence, R. I., November 28, 1896, Mr. Charles M. Jones, aged 51 years, leaving a widow and brother. He was a very genial and even-tempered man in his nature, and gained many friends and always kept them. He was an earnest and outspoken Spiritualist, and always ready to give a reason for the hope within, and he exemplified his faith in his daily life. He was a member of several fraternal orders, many members being present at the funeral.

At the same home, on Friday, November 27, Mrs. Jennett Mooney, aged 76 years, mother-in-law of Mr. Jones, was taken ill and passed on the following Monday, leaving a son and daughter. Here came a double loss to the home, as they had lived together many years. Mother Mooney, as everybody called her, was one of the oldest Spiritualists in the county, having accepted the faith in the days of the Rochester knockings, and has been a faithful worker all her life. Everyone had a loving word for her, as she was always doing something to make someone's life happy.

The writer was called to officiate, as it was the wish of the departed, and voiced what comfort mortal could under the trying hour. The dear wife and daughter was sustained in her great affliction by the faith that there was a future life. The home was filled to overflowing by loving friends.

MRS. SARAH A. BYRNES.

Golden Laxative Coffee cures constipation. 50 cents a package. Golden Laxative Coffee Co., Ayer, Mass. 373

"Right Living." By Susan H. Wixon The author shows a wise practicality in her method of teaching the principle of ethics. She illustrates her subject with many brief narratives and anecdotes, which render the book more interesting and more easily comprehended. It is especially adapted for use in Children's Lyceum. In the hands of mothers and teachers it may be made very useful. Young and old will be benefited by it Cloth $1 For sale at this office.

SPECIAL READING NOTICES.

Mothers will find "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" the best to use for children while teething. An old and well tried remedy.

SPIRITUALIST BADGES.

EVERY . . . .
SPIRITUALIST SHOULD WEAR THE SUNFLOWER
JEWELRY.

As the Sunflower turns its face towards the sun, so Spiritualism turns the faces of humanity from darkness and superstition towards the Sunlight of Truth and Progression.

PRICES:

Rolled Plate Bar Pin	$2 25
Solid Gold Bar Pin	3 50
Electro-plate Badge	.75
Rolled Plate Badge, Scarf Pin or Lapel Button	1 25
Solid Gold Badge, Scarf Pin or Lapel Button	1 75
Rolled Plate Maltese Watch Charm	3 00
Solid Gold Maltese Watch Charm	5 00
Rolled Plate Maltese Pendant	3 00
Solid Gold Maltese Pendant	5 00

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE,
40 LOOMIS STREET, CHICAGO

Spiritualist Meetings in Chicago

The Church of the Soul, at Schiller Theater. Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, pastor. Services at 10:45 a. m.

The First Spiritual Society of the South Side, New Masonic Temple, 3120 Forest avenue. Services at 2:30 and 7:30. Mrs. Ada Foye lectures and gives tests.

Beacon Light Church 617 North Clark street, near Burton Place. Services at 2:30 and 7:45 p. m., conducted by Mr. and Mrs. Geo. F. Perkins.

German Spiritualist Society, Gartelman's Hall, 13th street and Ashland avenue. Services at 3 and 8 p. m.

The Spiritual Endeavor Society meets at 1 South Hoyne avenue, 7:45 p. m. Mrs. Sarah E. Bromwell, pastor.

Spiritual Gospel Temple, Hygeia Hall, Washington boulevard and Paulina St. Services at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m.

Home Spiritualist Society, 11 Ada street, at 3 and 8. p. m.

The Church of the Spirit, Willis Edwards, pastor, meets at 620 North Clark street, at 3 and 8p. m. Lyceum at 2 p. m.

People's Home Association, Bricklayer's Hall, 93 South Peoria street. Services at 7:30 p. m.

South Side Christian Spiritual Society, Kenwood Hall, 4308 and 4310 Cottage Grove avenue. Conference meeting at 3 p. m. Lecture at 8 p. m.

The Spiritualists Church of the Students of Nature meets every Sunday evening at 7 p. m., at Monsen's Hall, 1052, Milwaukee avenue, corner Lincoln street. Mrs. M. Summers, pastor.

Spiritual Advancement Society, 794 West Van Buren street. Services at 7:45 p. m. Dr. Hasenclever will lecture and give spirit messages, assisted by other prominent mediums.

Brown's Hall, Forty-seventh and State streets. Services at 8 p. m. Lecture and tests by Dr. Harry Abbott of California.

Society of Spiritual Truth, 887 West Monroe street. Services at 8 p. m.

The First Society of Spiritual Unity will meet Sundays at 11 a. m., 3 and 7:30 p. m., in Washington Hall, 400 Washington boulevard, corner of Ogden avenue. Mrs. Mary C. Lyman, speaker.

South Side Christian Spiritualist Society, 4308 Cottage Grove avenue. Services at 3 and 7:30 p. m. Mrs. Lee Norie Claman, pastor.

The Progressive Spiritual Church, Lakeside Hall, southeast corner Indiana avenue and Thirty-first street, G. V. Cordingley, pastor. Services at 3 and 7:30 p. m. Harry W. Miller, soloist. Children's lyceum at 1:30; Bible class at 2:30.

German Spiritual Society, Hanshman's Hall, 384 W. Division street. Services 2:30 p. m. Mrs. Caroline Drews, medium.

Mrs. Caroline Drews, German trance medium, holds services at 2:30 p. m. in Hanschmann's Hall, 384 W. Division street.

The Church of the Star of Truth meets every Sunday evening, at Wicker Park Building, in the large lodge hall, on North avenue, near corner Milwaukee avenue, North avenue and Robey street. Services at 7:30 p. m. Easily reached from all parts of the city. Max Hoffman, pastor.

Spiritual meetings at 77 Thirty-first street, South Side, every Sunday at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m. Lecture and tests by Mrs. Edith E. R. Nickless.

Spiritual Church of Love, Faskin's Hall, 3012 Archer avenue. Mrs. E. J. Hanson. Children's lyceum, 2 p. m., followed by developing circle. Spiritual science at 7:30 p. m. Tests at all meetings.

Divine services in Mystic Temple, 1910 Washington boulevard near W. 40th street, at 10:45 a. m. and 7:45 p. m. Sunday-school of Love at 2 o'clock. Georgina McIntyre.

Valuable Books and Pamphlets.

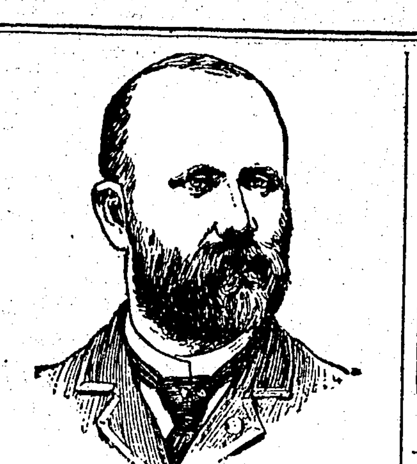
We have on hand a limited number of copies of the various writings and lectures of Mrs. Maria M. King, whose name ranks high in the list of Spiritualist authors, for profundity in philosophic thought. Her elucidations of various questions pertaining to the science and philosophy of Spiritualism, as well as the related field of natural science, are truly remarkable for their depth and clearness. These books and pamphlets constitute of themselves a noble Spiritual library, of sufficient intrinsic value to worthily engage the study and thought of the wisest students in spiritual science.

Although slightly shop-worn, they are in good condition, and we offer them at reduced rates, as follows:

The Principles of Nature, as Discovered in the Development and Structure of the Universe. Material and Spiritual Magnetic Forces. Laws of Spiritual Manifestations and Mediumship. Spiritual Planes and Spheres. Given inspirationally, by Mrs. Maria M. King. In three volumes, 8vo. A remarkable work; among the greatest in the literature of Spiritualism. Price reduced from $1.75 to $1.25 per volume. Postage 12 cents.

PAMPHLETS.

The Spiritual Philosophy versus Diabolism. Two lectures by Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.



Mediumship. A chapter of Experiences. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price 10 cents.

God the Father, and the Man the Image of God. Two lectures. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.

What Is Spiritualism? and Shall Spiritualists Have a Creed? Two lectures. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.

Social Evils: Their Causes and Cure. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.

The Brotherhood of Man, and What Follows from It. Two lectures. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.

FORSTER, DR. W. M,

THE NOTED
MEDICAL CLAIRVOYANT
OF THE PACIFIC COAST,

Will send a free diagnosis and terms for treatment to all who will send their name and address—in their own handwriting—with postage stamp for reply.

"The Pacific Coast Spiritualist" of Dec. 30, 1893, says of Dr. Forster:—

"Since his coming here he has made himself highly respected and beloved for his benevolent work, his humanitarian ideas and practices, and his straightforward course of integrity and honor."

"Dr. W. M. Forster, California's noted clairvoyant physician, is receiving commendations from far and near over his remarkables success as a healer."—Philosophical Journal.

Address,
DR. W. M. FORSTER,
1059 Market Street. - San Francisco, Cal.
383

A LOCK OF YOUR HAIR.

If SICK OR AILING, send a lock of your hair, name, age, sex, leading symptom, four cents postage, and I will diagnose your case and tell you what will cure your ailments. Address

DR. J. C. BATDORF,
Dept. F., Grand Rapids, Mich.
358tf

ASTONISHING OFFER.

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, name age, sex, one leading symptom, and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

MRS. DR. DOBSON-BARKER,
SAN JOSE, CAL., Box 132 346tf

DR. J. S. LOUCKS,

Of Shirleyville, Mass., and his band of powerful ancient spirits are effecting the most wonderful cures that have been recorded and are so acknowledged. By his clear knowledge of your diseases, aided by his marvelous spirit forces combined with his magnetic remedies, will convince the most skeptical of his wonderful power to heal the sick. Try him. Send him sex, age, name, lock of hair, and four 2-cent stamps, and he will send a diagnosis of your case free. He doesn't want any leading symptoms. Address DR. J. S. LOUCKS, Shirleyville, Massachusetts. 374

INVALIDS

WHO WILL SEND FOUR CENTS IN stamps, their disease, or symptoms, will receive pamphlet and advice FREE to cure themselves without drugs. The THOMAS BATTERY COMPANY, Cardington, Ohio tf

PSYCHOMETRY, CONSULT WITH Prof. A. B. Severance in all matters pertaining to practical life, and your spirit-friends. Send lock of hair, or handwriting, and one dollar. Will answer three questions free of charge. Send for circulars. Address, 710 Prairie street, Milwaukee, Wis. 374tf

MRS. ELLA M. DOLE.

This medium, who is clairvoyant, clairaudient, psychometric and prophetic, can be consulted at No. 1680 North Clark street. Engagements can be made by letter. 840tf

MRS. L. PACKER, 750 W. VAN BUREN. Clairvoyant, business medium. Three reasonable questions answered by mail, with stamp, 25 cents. 372

UP TO DATE CHEMISTRY OF LIFE AND GOOD HEALTH.

A powerful and well-educated intuitional healer, who teaches and cures the sick.

Send address, lock of hair, sex, age, whether married or single, location of two leading pains, and two 3-cent stamps for free diagnosis to

DR. J. H. RANDALL,
Independent Medical College, People's Institute, Chicago, Ill.
374

"LIFE AND HEALTH."

A Monthly Paper Devoted Life and Health.

Only 25 Cents a Year, or Six Subscriptions for $1.

Sample copy 1-cent stamp. Send all subscriptions to

C. E. WATKINS, M. D.,
AYER, MASS. 370tf

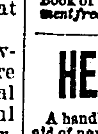
MRS. B. HASENCLEVER, 681 MADISON STREET. Test and trumpet circle every Tuesday at 3 and 8 o'clock. 25 cents. Materializing seance Wednesdays and Saturdays at 8. Independent slate-writing daily. 373

OBSESSION.

Obsessing influences removed: earth-bound spirits released; haunted places freed, and the sick healed by MRS. M. BERGEN BROWN, Morgan Hill, Santa Clara county, Cal. Consulting fee, one dollar. Refer to Chas. Betts, Burr Oak, Mich. 373

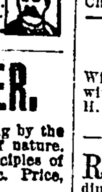
F. CORDEN WHITE,

Trance, Test and Business Medium. Sittings daily, 3058 Calumet avenue, corner Thirty-first street. Flat 9. Chicago, Ill. 871tf



I AM A GENTLEMAN OF SWEDISH BIRTH, but a true Spiritualist. I have means and wish to correspond with some refined Spiritualist lady of little means. Address Box 107 Greentop, Mo. 371

MRS. S. E. TRIPP,



Formerly Mrs. Gilman, of Houston, Texas, will hold seances for materialization on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings, at 3017 Wabash avenue, Chicago. Other circles by appointment. 375

A HOROSCOPE OF YOUR BIRTH AND ASTRAL reading of your life, with numerous suggestions as to line of business or profession suited to your nature; also a copy of "Sparks from the Infinite," and one private lesson in occultism. H. K. writes: "Your astral reading told everything of my life better than I could express it myself." Send date of birth and 25 cents to URIEL BUCHANAN, PH. D., 34 Walton Place, Chicago, Ill. 372

MRS. S. F. DEWOLF—INDEPENDENT SLATE writing. 240 Winchester ave., near Van Buren. Madison street car; take transfer at Robey. Ladies' circle, Thursdays at 2:30. Chicago, Ill. 372

DROPSY TREATED FREE

Cured with Vegetable Remedies. Have cured many thousand cases called hopeless. In 10 days at least ⅔ of all symptoms are removed. Book of testimonials of cures and 10 days treatment free by mail. Drs. Green & Sons, Atlanta, Ga.

HEALTH AND POWER.

A handbook of Cure and Human Upbuilding by the aid of new, refined and powerful methods of nature. By E. D. Babbitt, M. D., author of "Principles of Light and Color," "Philosophy of Cure," etc. Price, cloth, 25 cents; Leather, 35 cents.

ANGELL PRIZE CONTEST RECITATIONS.

To Advance Humane Education in All Its Phases.

BY EMMA ROOD TUTTLE.

Lyceums and Societies that wish to get up elevating, interesting and paying entertainments cannot do better than to have a Prize Contest. The entire plan, with full directions, is in the book, and may be easily managed. Nothing kindles enthusiasm more quickly than an Angell Prize Contest! Nothing is needed more. Any individual may organize one in his own town and reap a financial reward.

TRY IT! PRICE, 30 CENTS.

Address
EMMA ROOD TUTTLE,
Berlin Heights, Ohio.

Echoes From the World of Song.

A collection of new and beautiful songs, with music and chorus, in book form. By C. P. Longley. Price $1.25. Postage 15 cents.

ASTROPATHY

THE ART OF HEALING UNDER PLANETARY LAW.

Something new and startling. This knowledge is from a higher source and is fully explained in the "ASTRAL GUIDE," which will be sent FREE to any address upon receipt of a two cent stamp for postage. Astrological students, Physicians, Healers, Nurses, Everybody MUST have the "Guide."

L. J. SHAFER, Chemist,
31 Calkins Ave.,
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

COLLEGE OF FINE FORCES

AN INSTITUTE OF REFINED THERAPEUTICS, including the Sun Cure, Vital Magnetism, Electricity, Mind Cure, and a higher science of life, Chemical affinity and basic principles developed with their marvelous applications. Students in four continents have taken the course. The college is chartered and confers the degree of D. M., Doctor of Magnetics. By a system of printed questions students can take the course and receive the diplomas at their own homes. Institution removed to 253 So. Broadway, Los Angeles, Cal. Diplomas granted under either the New Jersey or California charter. Send stamp for catalogue to 422 E. D. BABBIT T. M. D. LL.D., Dean

A WONDERFUL OFFER

.. BY ...

DR. W. F. LAY, Clairvoyant,

One of the most successful healers and diagnosticians living. The doctor has letters from all over the United States, Canada, Australia and Europe, telling of the marvelous results, after all hope in other sources have been given up, being speedily cured under his treatment. Nervous and chronic diseases of every character, peculiar to both men and women, are, by the aid of his wonderful and extraordinary power, cured.

The doctor has never failed in a correct diagnosis of any case, many times it being causes that had baffled the most renowned physicians, but was readily explained through his wonderful clairvoyant and clairaudient powers.

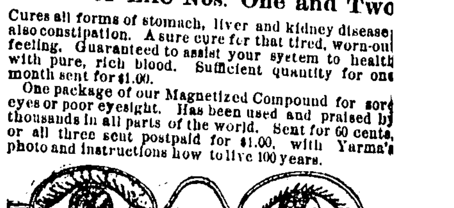
Each case receives the attention of himself and band, also remedies for individual case. Send three 2-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, sex, and one symptom, and by return mail you will receive a full and accurate description of your case and any advice regarding it. Through persecution on account of his marvelous success the doctor graduated in a regular school, therefore being an M. D.

Sufferers, you that have failed to find relief, try once more and be convinced of Dr. Lay's powers and ability. Address
842tf DR. W. F. LAY, Box 916, Chicago, Ill.

HELIOCENTRIC ASTROLOGY.

A book containing instructions for making a heliocentric horoscope, together with a chart which gives the position of the planets from 1825 to 1916. The most complete work on this system ever published. Adapted for beginners or professors. One can cast and read a horoscope in half an hour. For sale by

FREDERICK WHITE, O. O.M.,
502 Fifth Ave., S. - Minneapolis, Minn.



Send the date of your birth and $1 and receive book and chart with your horoscope ready to read. Mention this paper when writing. 344tf

BETTER THAN GOLD.

Elixir of Life Nos. One and Two

Cures all forms of stomach, liver and kidney disease; also constipation. A sure cure for that tired, worn-out feeling. Guaranteed to assist your system to health with pure, rich blood. Sufficient quantity for one month sent for $1.00.

One package of our Magnetized Compound for sore eyes or poor eyesight. Has been used and praised by thousands in all parts of the world. Sent for 60 cents, or all three sent postpaid for $1.00, with Yarma's photo and instructions how to live 100 years.

Melted Pebble Spectacles.

Restore lost vision. Write for Illustrated Circulars showing styles and prices and photo of Spirit Yarma who developed this clairvoyant power in me. I can adjust my Melted Pebble Spectacles as perfectly to your eyes in your own home as if you were in my office, as thousands can testify. Send stamp for photo. B. F. POOLE, Clinton, Iowa.

DR. GARLAND'S

VEGETABLE COUGH DROPS

Are put up in six-ounce tin boxes and are guaranteed to give satisfaction or money will be refunded by the proprietor, Dr. M. H. Garland. Send 25 cents in stamps and receive by return mail a box of this

HOUSEHOLD REMEDY

as you will find it a blood cleanser as well as a Throat and Lung Remedy. Over 200,000 boxes sold and all recommend them. Address all orders to DR. M. H. GARLAND, 332 Sixtieth Place, Station O., Chicago, Illinois. 322tf

ORDER OF THE MAGI.

A New Badge in solid gold with blue and black enamel, with the pyramids, obelisk and sun's rays in gold. Every Mystic should have one of these beautiful emblems. Price $2. For sale at this office.

PSYCHE

Is the invention of a practical medium, under spirit guidance, and is designed to develop mediumship. Many, by its use, have received long communications from spirit friends, and express great satisfaction. Price, $1, and 20 cents extra for expressage. For sale at the office of THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER.

DR. T. WILKINS,

67 33D STREET, CHICAGO,
Treats Magnetically all Chronic Diseases, at office, or home of the patient.

J. C. F. GRUMBINE, SEER,

Is developing sensitives in Psychometry, Clairvoyance, Inspiration and Psychopathy by a series of inspirational teachings through the law of correspondence. For booklet, endorsements, terms, send an addressed and stamped envelope to J. C. F. GRUMBINE, 7820 Hawthorne Street, Station P, Chicago, Illinois. Psychiscopes, including a regular sitting, $2. For list of publications of "White Rose," send an addressed and stamped envelope. 364tf

CHRONIC DISEASES

A SPECIALTY.

Send your age, name in full in your own handwriting, and I will diagnose your disease

FREE OF CHARGE!

Enclose three 2-cent stamps and address
J. S. COOPER, M. D
Chillicothe, Mo. 384

OCCULT FORCES!

A wonderful book containing valuable matter of intense interest to all who desire in any way to benefit their condition in life, a marvel of condensed thought and brilliant ideas pointing a new way to success in all undertakings through the mastery of subtile forces.

Develop your latent powers and accomplish what would otherwise be impossible. This knowledge not only increases personal influence but fortifies one against designing and unprincipled persons. Price of book 30c. or sent free for addresses of friends likely to be interested in it and 12c. in stamps. Circulars free. OCCULT PUB. CO., 3574 Vincennes Avenue, P. T., Chicago, Ill. 410.

The Blind Medium

Will send by letter life reading of past and future, with dates. Mail lock of hair and one dollar. Prof. H. W. Sinclair. 82 Adams avenue, Detroit, Mich. 378

READ WHAT MR. ARROWSMITH, OF LOUISville, Ky., says: I had readings from all noted mediums, but St. Omer Briggs' readings surpasses them all. All her predictions came true." Consult the celebrated psychometrist and seer, MARGUERITE ST. OMER BRIGGS, 789 Richmond St., Cincinnati, O. 371

HOROSCOPES

★ FREE For Men, Women, Young People and Children.

Send at once. PLANETS AND PEOPLE,
Enclose Stamp. 169 Jackson St., Chicago.
Send 25 cents for MAGAZINE OF THE HEAVENS.

LADIES, If you have superfluous

HAIR ON THE FACE

send for new information how to remove it easily and effectually without chemicals or instruments. Correspondence confidential in plain sealed envelope. Mrs. M. N. PERRY, B-130, Oak Park, Ill.

HYPNOTISM UP TO DATE

BY SYDNEY FLOWER.

An entertaining manual of hypnotism, useful to students of the subject. In the form of dialogue and story, the author presents very successfully a condensed account of hypnotism, its theory and practice up to date. Price, paper, 25 cts. Sold at this office.

SCIENCE, SUPPLEMENTED BY AN EXALTED MORALITY, THE BIBLE OF THE FUTURE.

The Progressive Thinker

Progress, the Universal Law of Nature; Thought, the Solvent of Her Problems.

VOL. 15. CHICAGO, ILL., SATURDAY, JANUARY 16, 1897, NO. 373.

THE CHRIST SPIRIT.

A Lesson in Spiritual Experience.

What One Soul Has Suffered and Enjoyed.

"And a new name shall be given unto you," yes, but I was not looking for it in this manner; still here it is, and I am pleased to add it to a string of them, as long as the name of a Spanish Princess. Since I embraced Spiritualism, forty-three years the coming spring, I have been called Atheist, Deist, Infidel, Skeptic, besides all sorts of denominational names, a Spiritualist, a fanatic, fool and crazy, a Christian, and a theosophist.

Enter on, when I had become interested in electricity and spirit, I was called a crank. I then felt that I had reached the great center of all things. However, I was willing to share the honors with all humanity, since every individual standing out by himself, and looking around him may well exclaim, "I am the center of the universe." "Hence all are cranks."

I began to think that I had reached the very acme of names, when, lo! a new name is thrust upon me:

"Idocrat." Thanks, Dr. Hudson, I return to you, for it.

Let me show you how ably I wear it—how greatly I deserve it, and how proud I am to own it.

If I begin to defend my new name, with my experience in Spiritualism, some one more highly enlightened may say, "Oh, yes, she is controlled by some orthodox, or perhaps Catholic, ancestors." But, dear friend, I never had any, that I ever heard of, and I have a geneology of many generations back.

I remember reading, some few years ago, a remark of Gen. Neal Dow, in which he says that, "He descended from a long line of liberal Quakers." Well, friends, I am pleased to say that his ancestors, were my ancestors; we are not far distantly related. My grandfather, of the line, passed away before reaching the age of forty; my grandmother, his wife, was a friend and advocate of all liberalism at that time; she was a staunch friend of Thos. Paine. I think she told me, some sixty years ago, that his book was secreted in her house, a few miles from Portland, Me. Certain am I that she said "Her house would have gone down had it been known that it was a hiding-place for one other manuscript before taking it to England for publication." She was very radical for the day in which she lived and a Liberal reasoner. My father was as liberal, drawing his higher Man," which was familiar to him, from beginning to end.

On my mother's side, she, as well as her parents before her, were pronounced Universalists—she lived, and died, strong in the faith of Universal Salvation.

Now let me speak a word of myself. My memory extends back to my cradle days. The old, and then familiar hymn of Dr. Watts:

"Hush, my dear, lie still in slumber:
Holy Angels guard thy bed;"

sang to me then in my infancy, has been a welcome song from spirit life in my mature years when in a tornado I was awakened, in terror at the raging elements without. My mother's voice was just as real to me as in the days of my childhood and I was quieted from all fear. I have heard her many and many a time, and know that she has never left me alone, for any length of time—she tells me so; and though 'tis long past a half century since she passed over the river called death, her last words are in my ears today as forceful as when she uttered them shortly before her last breath. They remain my guiding star.

In her strong faith, she longer for "rest with Jesus"—I think of her great suffering and have no wonder to express at her wish. I only know now that He in spirit had been beside her all those months of pain.

I became a liberal reascher at a very early age, but pass over the many experiences that are certainly interesting to me.

In the early spring of 1855, I went one evening, to witness, for the first time, a manifestation of the phenomena of Spiritualism. What I saw convinced me that it was something past the power of mortals to do. It might seem simple to enquirers of the present day, but to me it was effective indeed.

Perhaps it would not be out of place to tell you how simple it was, yet the seed fell on ground especially prepared for it.

The medium was a girl of some fifteen years of age, and very mirthful. She for the first time was promised a message in writing. She took her pencil in hand holding it on the paper until in about forty minutes her hand was magnetized. She then began to scrawl on the paper, soon with a rapidity that seemed impossible to be anything legible. Her head at this time was nearly on my shoulder, while she was laughing as if in convulsions. When finished, I picked up the paper and found written in a very pretty hand these words: "Be a good girl; your father is a good man, and so is your mother."

I said, 'And so is your mother a good man.' The paper was quickly taken from me by the invisible and placed again under the pencil, and rewritten. "Your mother is a good woman." I felt the words, rather than heard them say. "My child, you have much to learn."

That was the only circle or seance I attended for more than twenty-five years.

The seed was sown, and immediately began to germinate; the very "Kingdom of Heaven," I found was, "at hand."

After a few days, in the fullness of my soul, I cried aloud, "oh, what is this power that fills my whole being with such a 'weight of Glory?' When for the first time a strong voice said audibly "Spiritualism."

I then and there embraced the wonderful stranger "Spiritualism," forever. Of Spiritualists I know but little. "Primitive Christianity" and "Modern Spiritualism" are one and the same, in my experience of forty-three years.

The Christ Principle, or spirit, came with the "Holy Angels," in the clouds of Heaven, as was already promised. He came unto his own, but, his own received him not, and why? I have asked numbers of persons if they would have accepted Spiritualism if it had been first accepted by those who professed to worship Him. They have invariably said "no." Then I reply, 'tis a wise provision in God's economy, in order to bring them all into the one fold of universal harmony. There is no limit to spirit, more than to the sunshine, the air or the dew. "He that will not come, shall come."

Let me use a little comparison right here. My husband witnessed the same phenomena that I did, but the seed fell on other ground. He received it favorably for three days, he heard it ridiculed, and rejected it. Not only for himself, but he forbade me ever to speak, or even think of it. I was living under the law, and did in no manner intrude it upon him, for all those twenty-five years, and more; but to think, or not to think, was not his to control. My brain was never idle. (Sometime I hope to give you the benefit of a few of the thoughts, and experiences of those years, at present I have another object in view.)

My only child that lived, married. His wife, my daughter-in-law was more opposed to Spiritualism, if possible. Hence I know what Jesus meant when he said "I came not to bring peace, but a sword, and a man's foes shall be they of his own household." (When I say man, I regard my first lesson, that all are, "man," at maturity.)

My "daughter-in-law" worked me all the injury possible, even to prejudice my son falsely against me (when in ill health). He died with heart-failure, and I said, "now he will know that his mother was never untruthful in word, thought, or deed. It reconciled me, even to the loss of my only child. But did it end there? Nay. When some years later I went to visit my grandchildren, I asked no questions, but was voluntarily told of trouble, and hardships that the daughter-in-law had been made to endure. I saw the causes of it all, my son had avenged me to the fullest extent. I gave no word of reproach, but in the silent hours of night, I pleaded with my spirit son to forgive her as sincerely as I had, and bring peace and prosperity to the troubled household, (which has been wonderfully verified).

Last August, during a seance held by Mrs. Maud Freitag, my son came, and with the most exciting impetuosity, related the whole circumstance, or causes of his happiness, as due to my sincere love, my forgiveness, for the great wrong done me and him and my begging him to ris higher. Oh, what a blessing he showered upon me; not him alone, but my husband in spirit life says the scales have at last fallen from his eyes, and that he was ascending the steep pathway that leads ever upward toward a clearer conception of higher things. He tells me that my good thoughts help him rise, (I confess 'tis hard for me to forget the many phases of mediumship suppressed, on his account, or rather, his command—oh, those were bitter days, now past, with many a lesson, well laid to heart.

Now let me say with the "Nazarene:" "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them, that hate you, and pray for blessings on them who despitefully use you, and persecute you."

I blame no man for his ignorance, or egotism, though it be, as mountains high, but I do blame him for reveling in it, as so many do. It is not my Spiritualism.

Here is one thing more I have proven: "Give not that which is holy unto dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine, least they trample them under their feet, and turn again and rend you." These are my pearls.

"Take no thought for the morrow" was never intended to promote idleness, or tramps, as so many suppose.

Jesus nowhere encourages wastefulness, but enjoins upon us to "gather up the fragments, let nothing be lost."

Fragments of time, of opportunities, of thought, of everything pertaining to the use, or benefit of man to-day and be assured, "to-morrow will take care of the things of itself."

Now, is all we have. This endless "to-morrow," on our shoulders, is what is most conducive to the tramp system as it is fast becoming.

I have made a long letter, with but lightly touching upon that which is nearest my heart, "Christian Spiritualism." But I purpose to come again, and trust you to give me a little space, at least, in your paper. There comes a time when it seems a shame to remain silent.

I have never sought notoriety, having become almost aged before I felt at liberty. But when I, with millions of others are called, "Idiotes," for our faith for having, "eyes to see, ears to hear, and hearts to understand." I want to know why?

I say millions; I believe it. I know from what I have myself witnessed, that great numbers are ready and waiting for a better rendering of the Philosophy of Spiritualism, something for a platform, and what is better than the "Rock of Ages." The Gospel of "Truth," or "Christ," which is the same thing.

MRS. HARRIET PARKER.
Summerland, Cal.

There is no real elevation of mind in a contempt of little things. It is, on the contrary, from the narrow views that we consider those things of little importance, which have, in fact, such extensive consequences.—Fenelon.

Philosophers have done wisely when they have told us to cultivate our reason rather than our feelings, for reason reconciles us to the daily things of existence; our feelings teach us to yearn after the far, the difficult, the unseen.—Bulwer.

The first mention of the Siamese is by Portuguese travelers in 1511.

OBSESSING INFLUENCES.

The Causes of Trouble, and the Remedy.

I have read Brother Bett's appeal in your paper of December 19, and find that the readiest and most effectual way, is to send through these columns my words of sympathy and helpfulness. Admitting all to be true, that the brother has stated, we find ignorance of the laws of life covers the whole ground, and there is only one way out, and knowledge, covers that ground, and lights up the way for relief. I send these thoughts willingly and cheerfully, gained by intuition and experience.

These intelligences come by an immutable law of life which all are subject to but few understand. That is, like attracts like—and in all cases that I have treated I find the afflicted ones vibrating in a negation that they themselves must help to help themselves out of; and just as soon as they begin to realize their own power and right, these inharmonies will disappear.

These influences come on the thought-currents of life, and all must remember that thought makes our atmospheres—and here I will quote from that gifted and inspired writer, Ralph Waldo Trine. He says in regard to this law of like attracts like: Whether one is conscious of it or not, the law operating here is one with that great law of the Universe that one continually attracts forces and influences most akin to his own life. We can by virtue of our ignorance of these powers of the mind forces and the prevailing mental states, take the passive, negative, fearing, drifting attitude, and thus constantly attract to us like influences and conditions from the seen and unseen side of life; or by knowledge we can take the positive, the active attitude, that of mastery, and so attract the higher and more valuable influences, exactly as we will to."

I hope all afflicted ones that read this will commit it to memory and not lose sight of the principles it involves for their benefit.

I do not approve of opening the doorway for those obsessing spirits to go from one mortal to another, thinking that is the only way out of this dilemma; but I do approve of letting the Wisdom spirits take them and educate them as they can and do without making a sluice way of any physical form here, leaving evidences of their having been there, as they always do, after their departure. There are not media enough in this mundane sphere to educate them all and bring them to a consciousness of right; on the contrary there are innumerable hosts of them selfishly waiting to encompass mortals with their unwelcome presence. You might as well try to count the stars in heaven, or number the sands of the seashore, as to try to educate all that surround you when you are in their element, and the experience of many that have corresponded with me, testifying to the truth coming from sufferers that unselfishly entered this work and now are reaping the effects of committing the grave error of tampering with a law they did not fully understand, and my experience in treating them, tells me I have been taught right by the Guides who have this work in charge.

We have an example in the ages past of the more correct method of dealing with these unwelcome guests; they were not allowed to control another but were cast out entirely—entered the swine and the swine got rid of them by going into the sea. That was an education for those spirits.

No case is cured until the soul becomes conscious of its own power. The healer must awaken such persons to a realization of what they can do for themselves; unless this is done, there is no sure foundation upon which to rest the cure. When the soul is thus awakened, it rises out of all these negations, into the sunshine of positiveness that builds an impenetrable wall and none can do this but yourself, my brother or sister that is suffering) against all intruders and leaves them in command of the situation.

Healers can awaken a soul, but they cannot grow for it. All the help in the Universe does not benefit us unless we appropriate the good to ourselves; and did all sufferers realize how much good there is for each one of us, you would lift up your heads and rejoice and join in the glad anthem of praise that nature is ever singing in recognition of it.

I do not believe in this sacrifice of self, but I do believe in the ennobling of one's nature; and I catch glimpses of a wisdom beyond all finite sense, that is speaking to each soul in the grandeur of the silence, telling of heights yet to be attained; and the only way of their attainment is a growing consciousness of our duty to ourselves, and others, and that by recognizing our own possibilities we become true to ourselves and in so doing are true to all the world. Take no offense at the quotation (brothers or sisters) of "like attracts like," for it is your thoughts at that time, and in the changing vibration caused by thought you remove yourself from your unwelcome visitors—you are all good, strong, well and harmonious, and when you all more fully realize it you will enjoy the sunshine in its full fruition, which is your rightful heritage, here and hereafter.

MRS. AMANDA A. COTE.

The Wends, of Northeastern Germany, were a branch of the Slavonians, who settled along the sea in the sixth century.

The Roumanians are descendants of the Romans who conquered and occupied a portion of the territory now called Roumania.

The Saracens were descended from the first followers of Mohammed, who were so called from the Arabic word, Sharg, the East.

The reason why so few people are agreeable in conversation is that each is thinking more of what he is intending to say than of what others are saying; and we never listen when we are planning to speak.—Rochefoucauld.

JESUIT CONTROL.

How They Managed Affairs in Ecuador.

An Object Lesson for the American People.

A very fair and striking object lesson for Americans is afforded by the situation of affairs in Ecuador, South America, as set forth by the well-informed correspondent of the Chicago Record, Mr. William E. Curtis, who writes that an exciting controversy is now going on in the republic of Ecuador between President Eloy Alfaro, who recently obtained control of the government by a revolution, and the Catholic church, which has dominated politics and public affairs. With the exception of Colombia, Ecuador has been the only country in South America in which the church has maintained its supremacy. The archbishop has been ex-officio a member of the cabinet; a crucifix always stands upon the official desk of the president, and the presiding officer of the two houses of congress; public officials when they are sworn into office take an oath to support the holy Catholic church as well as the constitution of the republic; the president is inaugurated in the cathedral with a high mass, and the oath of office is administered to him by the archbishop; the customs inspectors for years have been priests, and no books are allowed to be imported into the country that do not meet with their approval. In fact, the constitution of Ecuador declares that the government exists to promote the cause of the church.

Alfaro has for years been the leader of the anti-church or liberal party, and has inaugurated several revolutions, the last of which was successful. During the previous administration of Camanno and Flores he was banished, and has been living an exile in Peru, where he organized a movement of the liberals against the government in 1895, crossed the frontier and took command himself. He captured Guayaquil, and then Quito, and finally the entire country recognized his supremacy, and has since elected him president.

Shortly after Alfaro obtained control he issued a decree for the expulsion of the Jesuits and members of other orders of seclusion, and the priests who had supported the government against his invasion. It is claimed that many of them actually took up arms against him, and that Archbishop Schumacher, the head of the Catholic hierarchy, commanded a division of the regular army and led them in battle. But this has been denied. Large numbers of priests, fearing the vengeance of Alfaro, have fled from the country, and many of them have arrived in New York, where they have been telling horrible stories of his cruelty.

In November a convention assembled at Guayaquil to revise the constitution, and Alfaro's ideas prevailed. The new constitution, which was there adopted and is now organic law of the republic, separates church and State as in other Latin-American countries. It limits the power and the functions of the priests, divests the church of much of its income, and restrains its control of its own property. There is also a provision prohibiting the existence of religious orders of seclusion, which have heretofore had charge of the schools, on the ground that they are the enemies of the public welfare. The next step will be to tax church property and confiscate it.

For years there has been a rapid growth of liberal sentiment in Ecuador, but it has been confined mostly to the seacoast cities, and has not been shared by the people of the interior who have no books or newspapers, and no means of communication with the outer world except by mule trains over the Andes, and it is believed that when Alfaro attempts to enforce these new constitutional provisions he will provoke an uprising that will overthrow his government. The priests will not permit the civil authorities to strip them of the power and perquisites that they have been enjoying ever since the conquest of the country, and their influence over the people is almost complete.

The people of the interior are not very particular who runs them provided they are let alone, but they are very sensitive concerning any interference with their home life and customs, and particularly their religion.

This gives a clear and correct idea of the sort of republican (?) government that Romanism—that is to say, the controlling Jesuits of that church—desire to establish everywhere. A republic in which the Romish church shall dominate politics and public affairs, the archbishop shall be "ex-officio a member of the cabinet;" a crucifix shall always stand upon the official desk of the president and of the presiding officers of the two houses of congress; public officials when they are sworn into office shall take an oath to support the "Holy Catholic church;" the president shall be inaugurated in the cathedral with high mass; the oath of office to be administered by the archbishop; the customs inspectors shall be priests, and no books shall be allowed to be imported into the country that do not meet their approval. In fact, the government shall exist solely to promote the cause of the church.

Such is the sort of government the wily, slimy Jesuits that control the Romish church would establish in the United States.

Ecuador has revolted against their rule, and the Jesuits of Ecuador are flocking to our country to carry on their nefarious work here. Wherever they go they leave the trail of the serpent. Always and ever they are the friends of Rome—and the deadly, dark and damnable enemies of true liberty.

The motto of Voltaire, "Encrasez l'Infame"—"Crush the Infamous," should be the motto of every government and every friend of liberty in the world.

X-RAY.

Brittany is inhabited by the descendants of the original Britons or Bretons.

PUZZLING SCIENTISTS.

Italy's Peasant Medium Continues to Increase in Power.

EUSUPIA PALADINO, POSSESSED OF A STRANGE ELECTRIC PERSONALITY, WHICH EXERTS A WONDERFUL INFLUENCE OVER INANIMATE OBJECTS —TRAGEDY OF HER LIFE.

Pretty nearly the whole of the scientific world has heard of Eusapia Paladino by this time, says the Washington "Post." To those interested in the phenomena of psychology the fat, dumpy, Italian peasant woman has been a veritable gold mine of surprises. Unbelievers in the supernatural would almost be willing to change their minds could they see her perform the marvelous doings which within the past year have convulsed cold, clear-headed men of science in all the great centers of Europe. She has been studied and analyzed over and over, but not one of these men of brains has been able to logically account for her mysterious powers. If she had lived a hundred years ago she would probably have been condemned to the stake as a witch. As it is she is the greatest living puzzle before the eyes of the world to-day.

Her strange powers are easily described, but no explanation of their source can be offered. She possesses some peculiar force in her body which is potent enough to move weighty objects standing at some distance from her. It is described as a species of electrical current, emanating from her body and taking hold of the desired object, and moving the latter about as she wills. Her force is not confined to a single object at the same time. She can move a dozen things from different parts of a large room, causing them to fly through the air at the same instant. This has been demonstrated, and it adds a new chapter to the already long list which the scientists are trying to puzzle out.

HER WONDERFUL POWERS.

Some time ago Eusapia was taken to England, and she gave a number of exhibitions in the presence of a number of English, French and German scientists, who adopted a variety of precautions to detect her in any fraud. No fraud was discovered, but her doings were so remarkable and unnatural that some of the scientists, after vainly attempting to trace the causes of the phenomena, decided that there must have been fraud, and so stamped her as a vulgar trickster. But these accusations were so groundless of fact that little attention was paid to them, and the fame of the Italian woman to-day is greater than ever.

In Paris she has just given an example of her powers which is regarded as more remarkable than any of the others, because it shows the surprising energy of the force she exerts. Heretofore she has only attempted to move small things, like causing a letter weighing machine to move up or down, and thumping the keys of a piano placed at some distance from her.

In this last exhibition there were a number of scientific men present, and they adopted many precautions against the exercise of fraud or the introduction of any outside agency. The wife of one of the scientists had dressed the peasant woman in a tight-fitting gymnasium suit to guard against the possibility of her using any concealed mechanism in performing her wonders.

MOVES ARTICLES AT WILL.

In the drawing room where the tests were made Eusapia was seated in a light bamboo chair, entirely devoid of anything which would conceal the smallest thing. The peasant woman always falls into a trance when giving her exhibitions, and when she had reached this stage one of the scientists got down on his knees on the floor and held her legs firmly in his hands. Another caught hold of her hands and held them in a tight grip, while another stood immediately at the back of the chair to watch for any suspicious movement. A fourth stood right in front of her for the same purpose, and others were grouped around, eager to catch her in any deception.

Then the excitement began. The trance like sleep deepened. The first thing to feel the force of the woman was a heavy armchair, placed in a recess of the window. It began to move about in spasmodic jumps, and then a toy piano, standing near, began to play. The heavy window curtain swelled out into the middle of the room, and twined itself about the head of one of the watchers. The leg of a distant table pounded three times on the floor, and the heavy armchair moved up and down. One of the watchers felt something like a sharp blow in the small of his back, and another, a bald-headed man, cried out that something had hit him on the top of the head like the five fingers of a hand. Another was pinched on the right arm.

EFFECTS PRODUCED BY TRANCE.

All this time the toy piano was clattering away, the table leg was pounding on the floor and the armchair was moving up and down. The sleep of the woman seemed to grow deeper and the noise greater. Then came the strangest part of the test. The window-curtains broke loose from the pole and came on a table near Eusapia. Then the toy piano sailed through the air, striking one of the watchers on the head and landing near the curtains. While the piano was still in the air Eusapia got up from the chair and it started on a flight through the air, first backward and upward, and eventually landing in the lap of a man who had been sitting right in front of her.

This is regarded as the most remarkable of the many examples which the woman has given of her powers. Her history, aside from the strange force she possesses, is simply told. She was born in Naples forty-one years ago, of poor parents. When eight years old her father was killed by brigands, and this tragedy had a strange effect upon her nerves, which, in a measure, may account for her powers. She became hysterical and was often the victim of hallucinations, seeing strange faces staring at her from the walls and ceilings. Then she began to fall into trances, and Spiritualists who heard of her induced her to take part in seances when she was but thirteen years of age. She tired of this after a while, but when twenty-two years old she again became under the influence of a Spiritualist.

Now she has little or nothing to do with Spiritualism. Her strange powers first attracted attention about seven years ago, and since then she has been in every large city of Europe at the invitation of scientists, who have found in her a most interesting study.

Here is a grand medium, having little or nothing to do with Spiritualism. Well, so be it; she is filling her mission well.

LUCRETIUS.

New York.

RIPENESS ESSENTIAL.

Suicide from the Standpoint of Another Life.

A Nessus Shirt of Burning Torment.

Spirits are constantly endeavoring to reach the living with this message that the suicide, the prematurely born into spiritual life, the murdered, suffer keenly from their close connection with the old life here, and the poor decaying frame belonging there unto. Children are sometimes "carried" by the mother "over-time." It is an injury. So with the death of the physical body, "ripeness is all," as Shakspeare tells us.

The savage kills his grandmother for his and the tribe's convenience. She was past work, and the civilized man adds that life was a burden to her. The doctor watches the agony of a hospital case and exclaims "I'll shorten that!" Who among us all dares judge his deed as being advisable or expedient? How shall we know! Take, the case of the engineer slowly scalding to death beneath his overturned locomotive. "Oh! Some of you fellows knock me on the head!" A blow to end his misery seems like the touch of the mid-wife's slender fingers on the head of the unborn; relief unspeakable, an aid to the process of birth.

To those who imagine that "death ends all" the philosophy of Euthanasia presents a phase of its own. It is different from what it is to the Spiritualist. "I prefer to be annihilated if I don't regret it afterward" is after all a popular idea! Suppose that a nurse or physician accepts the responsibility of "mercifully" assassinating a suffering patient. Who can say that the life in spiritual planes is freed from suffering? What of the painlessly killed who awakens in the spiritual life to find himself half in the body, half out? Whose new existence is a physical torture? What does he think of those who "aided" his transition, who bungled it, who gave him chloroform that he might awaken to a pain that knows no earthly parallel? A woman once upon a time, brought to a distinguished specialist, her youthful son. She announced that he was ready for an exceedingly delicate and dangerous operation previously recommended by physicians. "That's all right" remarked the surgeon gruffly, "but he must take chloroform."

"Oh, I gave him laudanum two days ago and I thought he'd never wake up. He's all right. Go ahead and cut. He'll never know it."

It took some time to convince this lady that patients were usually operated on, while under the influence of anaesthetics, not some time after such influence was dissipated and gone. The spirits say that the trains of "assisted emigrants" from "our earth" are loaded with the victims of blunders. That the wardens at the Celestial "Castle Gardens," have cares and perplexities beyond our knowledge in all these cases. That the worst trials and dangers which confront them and their charges, spring from the finespun theories and the romantic, wild assumptions of the earth-born, and aspiring, the dwarfs and weaklings of the universe.

With the difficulties that beset us in the attempts to communicate with the other worlds; with our conditions of ignorance and prejudice standing in the way of investigation, it is dangerous to take much for granted, as to spiritual life. We see a mortal undergoing great affliction; one whose needs and sufferings awaken our regret and sympathy. It is an easy matter to jump to the conclusion that death ends conditions of ill-health, loneliness, poverty, persecution. We assume that it is a kindness to the poor wretch to aid in bringing to a close this earthly existence, which to him or her, is worth 'so little.' We assert that it would be best, all things considered, to "mercifully" terminate a wretched human life, just as kindly and in the business-like manner characteristic of the police official or the agent of the local humane society, who "disposes of" the crippled or hopelessly injured animal. We theorize and maintain that "it would be better," but how many of us have the nerve or the "courage of our convictions" to administer the "merciful" stroke or deal out the "advisable" dose of poison to a fellow-creature, even though we know his sufferings are great, are productive of no good, and must apparently last for a weary time sapping the strength of the individual concerned and grieving to the heart any one who loves him, wearing out the patience of the hireling nurse, and the unsympathetic attendant. We turn with a shudder from the struggles of the cataleptic, the bitter torture of the leper, the writhing in pain and the wasting away by slow degrees of the cancerous and consumptive. Better to hasten death! So we assert, but we do not know! The sufferers plead for relief, but who is like to so relieve them? The soldier on the field of battle vainly asks his comrades for the "boon of death. The blessed privilege of rest." He shows them that he is mortally wounded. One quick stroke and all his pain is past! But who will give that stroke? The chances are that his comrades leave him in his misery.

The average man or woman has an instinctive horror of being in any way accessory to the death of any human creature. The soldier slaying his first man in battle feels himself to be a Cain with the mark of the accursed and outcast, on his forehead. The humanely inclined sheriff, called upon to put an end to the earthly career of a notorious criminal, shrinks from what he knows to be his duty. The instinctive refraining from participating in another's taking off like the instinct of self-preservation, a part of our inmost natures. Motives of duty as in the case of the sheriff, the soldier in the ranks of battle, the justice who pronounces sentence on the erring or in other cases the heat of passion, a righteous indignation, a desire to remove from our midst the sinner whose hands are red with the blood of the innocent, or that one who has shocked common decency by his offenses; there is much to be met on this plane of strife and conflict that overrules this instinct, this voice of nature crying "spare thy brother!"

Spirits tell us that the prematurely born "soul" is like the prematurely born child of our earth-life, which cannot "help itself." An infant "carried" its full time is active as to its muscular system. All its environments are full of life, energy, activity, charged with muscular vitality and power. The nurses say that "everything gives," and the baby's entrance to the living world is comparatively easy and rapid. The child loosened from foetal imprisonment, before due expiration of the sentence has practically no muscular development or power. It is a "dead-weight." All that should be relaxed and pliable, is rigid and unyielding. The breathing world receives a tiny corpse, and object scarcely human, so there comes into the plane of spiritual life, the one whose death was premature. All conditions accompanying that death militate for a thing against a happy spiritual existence. We are told of the agony of having a "spiritual body thrust suddenly upon the naked soul." It is described as being a Nessus shirt of burning torment. The soul so prematurely clothed seems like one of old condemned to the embrace of the "iron maiden" in the torture chamber, enveloped and scorched in every member by red-hot metal.

The process of "Euthanasia" should be viewed from the standpoint of another life than this.

URSA.

THE CURSE OF THE CHURCH.

Preachers who complain of the small attendance at the churches and the lack of interest in the sermons do not seem to realize that the fault is chiefly their own. In the majority of cases the cushions in the pews are too soft, and this softness is increased by the discourses preached. The spiritual needs of the people go unheeded, while their physical needs are catered to in the fullest meaning of the word.

Witness the elegant upholstering of the churches, the sensuous adornings and the velvet cushions that invite to profound rest and slumber! Sinners and saints, either real or artificial, enter their seats in these churches and remain there in a semi-somnolent condition until the services are over. If they remember the text, it is an oasis in a desert of forgetfulness; if they have been moved by the sermon it is as rare as an island in the middle of the Atlantic.

The natural softness of the cushions is enhanced by the discourse of the preacher, who, instead of preaching Christ and Him crucified, tells of a trip that he made to Jerusalem last summer at the expense of his parishioners. Instead of preaching of the Golden Rule, he enters upon a learned disquisition as to whether the ass upon which our Saviour rode once upon a time was a bay or a brindle, or whether Peter's wife's mother was sick with a bilious or an intermittent fever.

Soft cushions are the curse of the church, and this is not meant in a material sense, either. It is spiritual almost entirely, and the fault lies with the preacher almost entirely. To keep the people awake something else must be dealt out to them besides the dry husks of theology or the finical speculations of hair-splitting creeds. To stir them up and dispel their lethargy the blast of a trumpet is necessary, and not the "lascivious pleasings of a lute."

With the right kind of a preacher and the right kind of a subject, the softest kind of a church cushion can be made so hard and prickly that the remembrance of it will not vanish for many a day. An awakening from the most complacent sleep can be had, and the ultimate result is bound to be a most beneficial one.

"Cry aloud, spare not! Show my people their transgressions and the house of Jacob their sins." That should be the medicine of the church in general. Hypocrisy should be exposed and sin be laid bare among the rich as well as with the poor. The human soul should be weighed in God's scale, and its earthly expressions analyzed in the white light of God's own truth. Tell the people their sins and how they may escape the penalty of these sins, instead of confusing them with speculations as to the birthplace of Moses, or if the pillar of fire by night was a mere torch-light procession in some adjacent town.

Tell the people of their sins and their false pretenses; the mask with which they strive to deceive not only the world but God. Tell them of their lack of charity and of faith; their arrogance, their cruelty and their falsehood.

Tell them of God's love, His mercy and His infinite compassion—all to be freely given them if they but repent and bring forth fruit meet for repentance.

The preacher whose lips have been touched with a coal from on high, whose heart is aflame with the glory and the power and the sacredness of his mission, can make the softest cushion a bed of nettles and the hardest board a most precious rest for the soul that is awakened to its own heritage—immortality.—The Sunday Advertiser, N. Y.

DOUBLES! DOUBLES!

Some People Are Compelled to Lead Two Lives.

One of Which Is Repulsive to Their Better Nature.

WOMEN OF THE MOST EXQUISITELY ELEGANT SENSIBILITIES SUBJECTS OF THESE HORRORS—REMORSE FOR INVOLUNTARY ACTS—IS THIS FREE AGENCY?

"Many cases of insanity develop a phase of double consciousness that might be studied to advantage," continued Dr. Harding, in the Cincinnati Enquirer, "and I am strongly inclined to the view that in these there is evidence of dispossession of the spirit belonging to the persons afflicted by malignant powers of the air, or, in plainer language, by demons. We have plenty of Biblical authority for this opinion, and in some measure the sacred record is confirmed by historical data. Furthermore, those who truly believe are told to cast out devils in the name of the Lord through prayer and fasting, and all are admonished to resist the Devil and he will flee from them."

"Then you believe in obsession as a distinct disease?"

"As one variety of insanity—yes, and as the prevailing type of female dementia. Perhaps it is not fair to say that it is more prevalent in one sex than the other, but I have seen more of it in women than in men, and it seems to affect them more calamitously. It would be indelicate to indulge in many peculiarities of the disease as it influences women, causing some of the most modest and retiring to indulge in spasmodic fits of obscenity in word and act, in drunkenness, wild hilarity and orgies that would shame a harridan. I am familiar with a case of this kind that is astounding to even the firmest believer in its moving cause. The lady is the only daughter of one of the best families in a prosperous Ohio city. She has had every advantage of education, travel and social affiliation; is bright, accomplished and agreeable; a musician of more than ordinary talent and a poet, and she possesses all the advantages of beauty, wit and vivacity. She does not regard herself as extraordinarily favored in either an intellectual or physical sense, and makes no display of her gifts beyond her own circle of intimate friends, except on those occasions when she is not herself.

"One of the first eccentric performances of Miss R. that has come to my knowledge was her appearance upon the streets of her native city astride of a wild steed, unbroken to the saddle, fractious and apparently untamable, pitching and bounding and rearing at every stroke of the lash, which the lady applied with vigor. She was garbed in only a nightdress and a pair of top boots belonging to her brother, and nothing could be more outre and fantastic than her long, loose hair waving upon the breeze, her eyes flashing with high resolve, her denunciations of the animal plentifully emphasized by the most boisterous oaths, her thin wrapper streaming back and making manifest the absence of a saddle; and to say that is putting it mildly. It was a pleasant afternoon, and many people were on the streets. When the mirabile visee was noised about—as it was very promptly—it appeared as if everybody was there to see, and the relatives of the girl took immediate action to rescue her from the perils of her insane adventure. This was by no means easy, for instead of seconding their efforts she tried to defeat them, applying the whip indiscriminately to the horse and to those who came to her relief, and apportioning to both a large and very miscellaneous collection of profane epithets. In her normal condition she was a prime favorite with her father, and their mutual love was even pathetic. Now she heaped upon his head the most stinging barbs of verbal opprobrium. Ordinarily she evinced great pride in her brother, an estimable young gentleman of high intellectual attainments; now she spurned him with strange oaths. She had a lover who was deserving of her dearest regard and he made extraordinary exertions to rescue her from peril, but she repelled him with ribald words and charges too unseemingly for repetition.

SHE OCCASIONED A SENSATION

"All this time the horse was striving to unseat his rider by plunging, rearing and gyrating madly, threatening damage to not only the lady, but to all who attempted interference in her behalf, and she, doubtless resolved that she would not be defeated, continued to apply the lash with unabated strength and the most cruel persistence. One who witnessed this strange spectacle said she reminded him of the Queen of the Amazons, as represented in Beich's great painting, and that, long before the catastrophe terminated the exhibition, a stream of blood crimsoned the froth that issued from the mouth of the thoroughly maddened horse. At length two strong men seized the bridle simultaneously, and brought the animal to a sudden stand, but in a moment, gathering all his strength for the effort, he leaped forward and threw them heavily to the ground. He continued to go forward, and immediately broke into a run down one of the principle streets. At the foot of this street was a steep hill, half way down which was a turn—an abrupt right angle—and a sudden comprehension of the impending danger ran through the crowd as horse and rider disappeared over the brow of the declivity. The whip was still applied smartly, and even the most unreflective person could see that it was impossible to avoid disaster if that angle were attempted at such mad speed. Such vehicles as were at hand were at once turned in that direction, and a great concourse of people on foot made all haste to witness what every one believed must prove a tragic result. Arrived at the brow of the hill, they saw neither horse nor rider; arrived at the angle, they saw evidences that a partial turn had been made, and then that the animal had suddenly swerved and leaped a high stone fence. Beyond this impediment they found the horse sunken to his knees in a swampy bit of ground, one foreleg broken, and Miss R. lying some 10 feet further, stunned and bruised, but otherwise uninjured.

"The animal was killed. The lady was removed to her home by friends, and for many weeks her life was despaired of. When, upon her recovery, she was told the circumstances I have related she had no recollection of them, and accused her friends of romancing, but the evidence was made overwhelming, and then she refused for many months to see her lover, so thorough was her chagrin at the treatment she had accorded him when he sought her rescue from danger. In her normal state she was afraid of a horse, and had no more idea of equine menage than a child. A few days previous to her adventures she had listened to her father's description of the fractious animal upon which she came so near to death, and she advised him to sell the beast or give him away, averring that she would not feel safe till he was removed beyond the chance of injuring any member of the family.

AFTER THIS ESCAPADE

the young lady was subjected to strict espionage for many months, but nothing unusual developing there was finally a relaxation of watchfulness. More than a year elapsed before the second obsession manifested itself, and then, without any previous warning of anything abnormal in her condition, Miss R. was found at midday upon the most frequented thoroughfares staggering about in maudlin inebriety. She was laughing, crying, cursing and singing ribald songs, and when first discovered by friends was the center of a group of loafers, who encouraged her profane talk and applauded whatever she did in outrage of respectability. When removed by force she appealed to that disreputable crowd for protection against the father whose heart bled for her and whose love for her her true self prized above all earthly blessings, but the rabble knew that interference would be unsafe. Again she was dangerously ill, and again immeasurably shocked when made acquainted with the facts.

"It is needless to relate all the details of constantly recurring attacks in this case, which now came on with accelerating frequency, till life became a burden to the poor girl. She was most frequently obsessed by influences with a craving for strong drink, and on these occasions, no matter how vigilant the watchfulness, she was sure to become drunken and indulge in scandalous exhibitions. No liquors were kept in her father's house, and she was denied the independent use of money, but when the demand for stimulants smote her sensibilities she sold portions of her wardrobe or jewelry for means to respond in liberal measure. With all the cunning of insanity she eluded the vigilance of those appointed to her charge, and on several occasions was upon the street in a hilarious condition before her absence from home had been noticed. Once she surreptitiously possessed herself of a large sum of cash, left home unbeknown to her parents for an Eastern city, stopped off at an intermediate town, consorted with thieves and other disreputable vermin in a drunken debauch, and when at length she was discovered by her heart-broken father it was in the hospital of a jail, where they celebrated their reunion. She, sick almost unto death was held there as a suspicious character.

"At the date of her return from this adventure I was visiting in the city of her residence, and learned the facts. Through the courtesy of her physician I was permitted to see her. She was normally sound, but much debilitated. Her remorse was painful—deep enough to tear the heart of the most callous observer. How she ever obtained her own consent to do that which she had done was the problem that resisted all her efforts at solution, as well it might. It was a puzzle which plagued stronger heads. Her outraged modesty, soiled character, inclinations of a disgustful sort which still left the remnants of their besliming influence, were considerations that tortured her soul and almost constantly dissolved her in tears. It was a shadow of shame that bore as heavily upon her as it could had she have been the prime voluntary actor in the deeds it reflected, for nothing appeared to her more disgraceful and guilty than the agency she had involuntarily exercised in their commission. Is there anything that can be recognized as free moral agency under conditions like these? Still that poor child would frequently give expression to a sentiment like this:

"'I alone did these shameful things, and surely I alone must suffer the punishment.'

"She was sent to a retreat for the insane, where she was much benefited. Subsequently she married, and, at last advices, was sound of mind, thoroughly cured, and a happy wife and mother.

ALTERNATIONS OF DISPOSITION.

"A few points in the case of a gentleman whose obsession was in some measure like those in phenomena already mentioned appear to me worth relating. He was affected by influences directly opposed to each other on alternate days—full of joy and brimming over with humor on Sunday, and on Monday in the uttermost slough of despond. He was wholly unconscious of these varying moods, and on his bright days had no confidence in those who told him that depression and despair would follow in a few hours, and especially irate was he in his periods of gloom, when told that on the morrow happiness was sure to return. His friends of one day were his enemies of the next; the viands he preferred on Wednesday were on Thursday his special aversion; the books he yesterday delighted in were to-day thrown aside in disgust; all his tastes and habits were abruptly reversed every 24 hours. If in either of his moods he made an engagement for the succeeding day—and this was frequently done—he kept it on the second day, apparently oblivious of the intermediate period; and all his acts were governed and his affairs administered on the understanding that he represented two natures and lived two lives, as separate and distinct as could be represented by two disimilar individuals.

"Many complications arose from these conditions and numberless embarrassments intruded themselves upon those who attempted to make life pleasant for the afflicted man. He had an interesting family and considerable property. Several years ago a railroad corporation wanted right of way through his land, and the promoters, watching their opportunity, obtained his consent on one of his good days. On the dark days he was opposed to railroads, telegraphs and other progressive things. Unluckily he found men employed by the railroad company at work on his lands when his mood was the reverse of pleasant. He drove them away, and when his signature was exhibited denounced it as a forgery. It had not been witnessed. Shortly thereafter he was caught in a complaisant mood, acknowledged his signature before a dozen witnesses, and then the work was resumed; but in his fits of depression he denounced the railroad men as thieves and threatened to get even.

"The one person in all the world with whom he was on good terms all the time was his elder son, a young man of pleasant disposition and elevated morality. In his father's esteem Sam was perfect, and the old gentleman could imagine nothing too good for him. In course of time the thought invaded his mind that the young fellow was entitled to a good wife, justly regarded by him as one of the choicest of earthly blessings. He proposed the subject for Sam's consideration, and discovered that the good son had already thought of it.

"'Have you any lady in your mind, Sammy?' he asked.

"'Yes.'

"'Who?'

"'Well, I've thought of more than one, father.'

"'What! That is greedy. You're not a Mormon, I hope? Don't you think more of one than of all others?'

"'Perhaps I do, but before I'm fully committed to any one I want your opinion. You know all the young ladies I am acquainted with, and can tell which will make the best wife. Please give me your advice.'

"'Certainly. That's a reasonable request and does you credit. Give me till to-morrow to think it over.'

"'In a general way Sam's attack was more serious than even he had thought possible before the subject was broached by his parent, and inconsiderately he took the old gentleman literally at his word as to his promise for 'to-morrow.'

"'What in the Devil's name are you talking about?' asked the fond father. 'A wife! And I'm to advise you on the subject? It shall be negative, then. You cannot marry your grandmother nor the Queen. Anybody else you fancy—why, just take her and be as miserable as possible.'

"'Miserable?'

"'Certainly. There is nothing in the world but misery.'

"Then the young man saw the error in days, thanked his father, and waited for the more opportune occasion next day. When the subject was referred to, the father said:

"'I've thought of it a lot. All the girls we know are nice and the business is hard to decide. Most of them are pretty, all are good and sensible, and I see no way but to settle the matter by ballot. You call off the names and I'll write 'em down.'

"Sam proceeded with this task in a shaky voice. The plan seemed too risky, for, as his father had said, all the girls were nice and desirable; there was yet in his estimation, and he imagined the old gentleman might have weighed her in a balance equally favorable to her and himself. He hadn't the spirit to speak up promptly and boldly, and so the list was made, each writing down such names as occurred to his mind as among the eligibles, and calling them off as writen. The process was slow, for the elder gentleman was past the habit of rapid thinking, and the younger was hampered by the embarrassments of the situation. At length, however, the father appeared to be satisfied, for he threw himself back in the chair, laughed heartily and exclaimed:

ONE ALTOGETHER LOVELY

"'We needn't write any more.'

"'Why not?' quirled the son.

"'Because you've already decided the question. There's only one Esther Wilby, I'm sure, but you've written her down four times, and no other name is even repeated. It's a good choice, and all the advising in the world wouldn't help you to a better wife. You prize her four times as much as any other young lady, eh?'

"'Even more than that.'

"Esther found a good husband, and indulgent father-in-law and the height of earthly bliss in matrimony, and even in his worst days the old gentleman has a pleasant word and smile for her and the grandchildren she has brought to cluster around his knees, and she controls him by a word or a gesture as if he were a child. The physicians call her his savior, without whose consoling presence and composing ministrations, they say, he would have passed into a state of hopeless insanity. On alternate days he is mad and sane, as of old, but his aberration has become tame and innocuous, and his good days are seasons of superior enjoyment to all his friends. He knows nothing of the change in mood or disposition, and has never sensed it in any degree, thinking to-day that he has always been happy and contented, and to-morrow concluding that his condition has never been anything but sorrow and misery. He possesses two distinct individualities, both positive and as different in their manifestations as January and June. If my account deserves credit, this comment is true, and, if it is true, what becomes of the great Ego celebrated by Plato and his followers, as well as the neo-philanthropists? 'E-(don't)-go with everybody.

"Some of the strongest characteristics in the phenomena I have described have been classed with insane manifestations for hundreds of years, but they are certainly distinct from ordinary madness and never assume the phase of unreasoning violence. As a rule the subjects are meek rather than violent, unless unduly annoyed. One of the most pathetic cases among all that have come to my knowledge is related by Dr. H. C. Wood, of New York. He attended through many weary years a woman suffering with an apparently hopeless melancholia, whose final recovery he says he never saw paralleled. In her early years she had been one of the most refined and elegant of women. In middle life she was assailed by strange whims and the wildest fancies, and during fifteen years her character was completely altered, her demeanor changed, her personal being something else than it had been. With the terrible woe of a lost soul she was now bowed down in the dust. One evening she went down on her knees and prayed through the livelong night. A dear nurse, wise beyond women, had the clear discretion which prompted to let her alone, and the struggling soul was left to her own resources. When morning came the lady arose, and announced that she had been forgiven; that she had found Christ, and He had washed away all her degradation.

"The change was immediate and radical; her former character had been restored; the original elegance of manner characterized her every act; the former delicacy of thought came out from the recent almost brutal crudeness like blossoms that spring from unpromising soil. This condition lasted for only a few days. Then she announced that a storm was coming, and as the cloud drifts across the sunny landscape and brings darkness and dismay so there came over her the shadow of a great woe. After days of agony she would suddenly raise her head and say, 'The light is coming!' and out of the gloom the sweet, gentle, persuasive being would come forth chastened, clothed in her right mind and inexpressibly happy. These variations in attack and recovery followed each other at brief intervals for sixteen months, and then the menace of despair was gone forever, and all the monstrous phantoms that had beset her were relegated to their own place. The true woman again shone forth resplendent, a joy to herself and society, the unapproachable exemplar of those thousand decencies which daily flow from all her words and acts. There is not a stranger nor a more interesting case on record."

T. P.

SPIRITUAL CHURCH.

To the Editor:—I have just been informed that Brother G. W. Kates advocates a "National Spiritualistic Church," at Washington, D. C., in place of the present "National Spiritual Association," so instead of an N. S. A. we will have an N. S. C. Then, Mr. Editor, just as soon as the church people get their god in the constitution of the United States, the N. S. C. could adopt a mythical god, splice a Methodist hell on, and adopt any old Devil that was without a church, and out of a job and they would be fully equipped, just like any other church. This grand plan is a good one to carry our Spiritualism over bodily to the enemy that now is waiting to swallow us. What do our people think of the plan? J. W. DENNIS.

Buffalo, N. Y.

Constipation cured by that pleasant drink, Golden Laxative Coffee. 50 cents by mail. Golden Laxative Coffee Co., Ayer, Mass. 373

A PLAIN STATEMENT.

The Important Demands of the Hour.

WHAT SHOULD BE DONE WITH OUR CHILDREN, IN THIS, THE ENLIGHTENED NINETEENTH CENTURY.

In The Progressive Thinker for December 12, 1896, in a reply of Brother Tuttle to President Barrett, I was very much pleased at his showing up of the criminal neglect of the conductor of the lyceum who permitted his three children to go to the Episcopal Sunday school while he conducted the lyceum for Spiritualists. Such conduct is too contemptible to be tolerated by any right minded individual, even those who he is toadying to must despise him as a loathesome hypocrite. It is too bad; he is not the only one. Alas! he is but the type of thousands of Spiritualists who are ashamed to have it known that they have been more blessed than they deserve.

Is the knowledge we possess something we must hide from our children and friends? Does the knowledge of Spiritualism make such cowards of us that we dare not make it known that we can and do converse with our angel friends, or that they still live and love us still? Does it make us feel so debased that we dare not instruct our children in this wonderous knowledge and philosophy that is their birthright, and in which their spiritual welfare is dependent?

Is not the knowledge of Spiritualism which we possess our greatest pleasure and happiness when we are able to hold sweet communion with those who have gone before? Are we ashamed to have it known that we can communicate with a sainted mother, a loving father, a faithful wife or darling child who was, perchance, taken away unexpectedly—accidently—or it may be when we were absent from the loved one, just too late for a parting kiss or blessing? What would we not give to recall the loved one for just one word—perhaps to ask forgivness for some wrong done, some harsh word or frowning brow. We possess this knowledge, but do our children? Is this knowledge superior or inferior to the worthless creeds taught in our churches for 1800 years? If this knowledge is good for us it must be equally good for our children.

Is it not our highest duty to instruct our children in the highest and best truths that we know? Won't we be called to account for our stewardship in such a vital matter? By what shadow of right do we deprive them of the knowledge we should only be too glad to impart? Won't they take our places in the future as we have taken the places of those gone before? Won't they have the same trial to endure that we have had? Won't they want the same consolation in the hour of their distress that we have had? When the loved one has passed out of their material life, how they will turn to the spiritual side of life for consolation and happiness. Have you a special permit to deprive your children of this God-given blessing? Is it not a sacred duty to instruct them in the truth that as you sow so shall you reap, and that life is eternal—no break in the line? You arrive on the spirit side just as you leave this side, neither better nor worse. You gravitate to the place you have prepared and for which you are adapted. The spirit-world lies all about us like a cloud, and our friends are with us most all the time. Our thoughts are like an open book to our spirit friends, and when we go astray it retards their happiness. We can make them very happy by doing good deeds, or very unhappy by being wayward and not seeking the best good. It is of the first importance to make others happy, for thereby we make our own happiness here and hereafter?

It makes me feel sad when I attend our meetings; we appear to be all childless, to have lost all our little ones—not an inocent laughing child in the room; not a mischievous boy or laughing girl, scarcely any one under middle age, and I doubt very much if the children of most of us know where we are. Friends, is this just right? Think for one moment. Suppose some one of our loved are called suddenly away, or perhaps linger a long time in pain and anguish before drifting out of our sight. They are entirely ignorant of spirit return or the laws governing Spiritualism, and the blame rests upon you; upon all who deprive their children of their birthright for a mess of pottage (ignorant folly). Our children, in place of fearing death and that the Devil will roast them in a bottomless pit, should know that when death comes they are but leaving the material for the spiritual world, and that they cannot be seperated from loving friends; that there always is a bridge to communicate with those left behind?

Friends, I appeal to you to give this matter deep consideration. It is not a trifling matter that can be attended to at any time.

Make up your minds to be honest with your loved ones, honest with yourself and your happiness will repay you. If you consider this in the right light you will not fear the smiles or sneers of the "super-intelligent" ignoramuses, who may think nothing exists outside of their knowledge. We have many such in our midst, but time and opportunity will enlighten even the literary warts in the churches, who wrangle over mythological dogmas.

Think what this step in taking our children to our meetings will do for Spiritualism. You love it, don't you? You also want it respected. You also want it to reach out and take in all your friends. How can you expect people who think you are crazy, and who do not know enough to think or investigate to respect your wonderful stories if they see you sneaking off to the hall afraid your children or friends will know where you are going! Why, it is no wonder they sneer and laugh and say you have wheels in your head. They are justified in doing so, and you are the cause.

How this beautiful truth would reach out and be embraced by all if we were honest and open with our children; make them sharers in our happiness here and our hopes in the hereafter. The public are good critics, and when the children are included we will have more investigators than we have had in the past. Make up your mind to be the first to set the children and the world right in this respect, and you will lay up a store on the other side that will go a long way in balancing your short comings in other respects.

Make up your minds that the next meeting you attend, your children shall accompany you. It will build up our societies in numbers. It will increase our pile of dollars. It will encourage our mediums. It will employ our lecturers and speakers. It will assist the publishers of our literature. It will enlighten many who are in darkness, and it will fill your own heart with love. We will thus weaken the churches, which are our enemies, by withdrawing our support and applying it to our own necessities. By taking our children away from the influences of paganism and instructing them in true spiritual laws, we make the world more liberal and increase the happiness of humanity. By inculcating the best good, we make the world at large our debtors.

H. M. EDMISTON.

BEGINS TO SEE THE LIGHT.

THE AGENT THAT DID THE WORK

I may interest you to know why I have become interested in your valuable paper and the beautiful philosophy of which it is such a staunch exponent.

I am still an accredited member of the Disciples or Christian Church in this place, and its Sunday School superintendent; but I shall decline a re-election at the beginning of the year. Last May a single copy of The Progressive Thinker was handed me by a friend who had obtained it of some subscriber. I read it carefully, and became at once interested. I sent on a three months' trial subscription; when that expired, for a second one, and now I must have it continually. It is replete with spiritual food and instruction, and the old orthodox teachings of my church have become to me as the chaff and husks, while the grain and essence of all religion is found in the spiritual philosophy, which to my mind is the only reasonable, rational and scientific system of religious ethics extant. Thus we may see how much good a single paper put in one's way may often do. I shall try and put my papers after reading them where they will do good, by planting the seed of truth in new soil.

Spiritualists generally could do a great deal of good by paying more attention to the circulation of their papers and other literature, bringing spiritual food to many a hungry soul, as it did to me, and leading them out of the darkness of superstition and error into the full noon-day light of spiritual truth and knowledge, bringing them into the ranks of the only class of people on God's green earth who can truly say with Paul: "For we know that if our earthly house of this Tabernacle were disolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." I read this, (5 chapt., 2nd Cor.) to my Sunday school a few weeks ago, when our minister criticized Paul severely. He said Paul did not know that he had a house eternal in the heavens, etc., it was all a matter of faith; that we had no knowledge whatever on the subject. I said to several of our church people, that if they had a faith or religious belief not founded on knowledge, it would not be worth a picayune to me. I have a knowledge, born of the soul—strong, irresistable, bubbling up from the depths within—that the tenets of the spiritual philosophy are grand and eternal truths; that man does live after death; that life is continuous, an unbroken chain, whose links are the experiences which the soul meets in its eternal round of progression; that it is only by right living that we can hope to better our condition in the unseen world, and that theological dogmas and faiths will count for nothing in determining our status in the world to come.

You may put me down a regular subscriber to The Progressive Thinker until translated to other spheres of usefulness, and count me a confirmed convert to the beautiful philosophy of which your valuable paper is the fearless exponent. With many thanks for the light received. F. PLATTO, M. D.

Brewerton, N. Y.

AN ORTHODOX "PERHAPS."

There are many queer samples of orthodox reasoning extant, and here is another to add to one's repertoire of such curiosities.

It has been with many minds a subject for wonder that there is not, nor can it be proven that there ever has existed an autograph of any one of the four "evangelists," nor is there extant a single copy of the original Gospels.

It being a matter of supreme importance, according to the recognized orthodox views concerning man and his destiny, one would naturally suppose that the Great Inspirer of the Gospels would have caused that there should be left no room for doubt as to their authenticity and genuineness—would have so ordered that the original Gospels would be preserved, with all needed and indubitable evidence thereof.

The question is, Why has he not done so?

The answer seems now to have been arrived at that "perhaps it is for the best that none of the original Gospels exist." A writer in the Century magazine says:

"Some there may be who find it difficult to understand why, since God has revealed to us His will in a book, or rather in a library of inspired books, as the Bible truly is. He has not at the same time given us an infallible text. How much labor would have been saved had we possessed the autographs of four evangelists! To this we answer that, had one such autograph existed, some branch of the Christian church, possibly every branch, ourselves included would have made an idol of the writer's parchment, while neglecting its teaching altogether. We can only seek to comprehend the ways of Providence in one sphere by observing them in another. Man is the heir of all things; yet he is sent into the world to depend for food, clothing, and all the comforts and adornments of life, on his wits. How greatly is he thereby differentiated from the brutes! How immeasurably is the educated man, and especially the scientific investigator, raised above the savage simply as the result of his own efforts.

"Is it not possible that he who gave the Word of Life designs to quicken our interest in it by arousing afresh in each successive generation of Christians the desire to approach nearer to the sources, to remove the undergrowth of legend and tradition which has sometimes obstructed its free course, and that we are saved from the danger of finding it trite by the feeling that we possess a divine treasure which, though a gift, is not entirely independent of our own exertions for the measure in which it shall minister to our edification?"

That is to say that, after giving forth through specially inspired instruments a series of Gospels for the salvation of mankind, the Divine Inspirer purposely arranged or so ordered things, that no properly attested original copies should be preserved, nor any direct proofs of the genuineness and authenticity of the said purported Gospels be found, that would remove doubts which would be sure to arise in after years in the minds of those for whose salvation these Gospels were expressly given!

A very poor sample of reason—but probably as good as could be devised in the case. Orthodox Providence is a very peculiar sort of providence, anyway.

J. C. UNDERHILL.

Hammond, Ind.

CONSUMPTION

TO THE EDITOR: I have an absolute Cure for CONSUMPTION and all Bronchial, Throat and Lung Troubles, and all conditions of Wasting Away. By its timely use thousands of apparently hopeless cases have been permanently cured. So proof-positive am I of its power to cure, I will send FREE to anyone afflicted, THREE BOTTLES of my Newly Discovered Remedies, upon receipt of Express and Postoffice address. Always sincerely yours,

T. A. SLOCUM, M.C., 183 Pearl St., New York.

When writing the Doctor, please mention this paper.

NO CHRISTMAS.

SIMILAR IN MANY RESPECTS.

"While the Chinese have no Chrismas, as Americans understand the term, they have a great mid-December festival, which bears a curious resemblance to the celebration of the nations that honor the birthday of the founder of Christianity," said Wong Chin Foo, the Chinese philosopher, who is trying to convert Chicago to his religion.

"On the 21st of December, as you reckon, all the millions in China, without exception as to rank or wealth, hold a great annual feast, which is near enough in time and similar enough in character to be called a Chinese Christmas.

"Of course, there is no such word as Christmas in our vocabulary. This mid-December feast is called in our tongue the festival of Dun Gee. It is strictly a religious and social observance, and, in this regard, parallels the observance of your Christmas Day. The Chinese people, in celebrating Dun Gee, gather together to render thanks to supreme nature for all the good things of the year that has passed. As the Christians gather in their churches, so the Chinese gather in their joss-houses and join in services of thanks. While the incense is burning before the altar the congregation kneel and murmur silent prayers to the supreme ruler, the giver of all good gifts.

"The custom dates back 2,000 years, is national in its character, and stands third in importance among our festal days.

"While the English Christmas Day would not be complete without the plum pudding, the Americans enjoy their turkey and oysters, the Chinese have a characteristic dish for the feast of Dun Gee. It is part of the religious observance and is consecrated by presentation to the joss before it is partaken of by the worshipers. It is a very peculiar preparation, a sort of pudding, the ingredients of which are selected from all the cereals raised in China. In it are rice, millet, wheat, oats, barley and maize—Indian corn, as you call it, but China has produced corn for thousands of years, and I believe that your Indian corn first came from China. We have a legend to the effect that in prehistoric times thirteen junks set sail to the eastward from the coast of our kingdom. China was not an empire then, and that while none of the junks ever came back, stories reached home that the navigators had found a great new land, good for agriculture, and of such attractions that China would see these bold adventures no more.

"But to return to our pudding. It is prepared by boiling with sweet dates until it is thoroughly cooked and presents a glutinous mass. Portions of this dish are first offered as a sacrifice to the joss, and the remainder forms the dish of honor at the feast of Dun Gee. It is eaten with sugar, and is considered a great treat aside from its importance in a symbolic sense.

"While the Chinese children have no patron saint, such as Santa Claus, they have their part in the feast of Dun Gee. It is looked forward to by the children as a holiday given over to enjoyment. They do not attend school on that day, but spend it in frolic and play, and are given presents of candy and nuts.

"Religious services are held between 3 and 4 o'clock in the afternoon. In the evening the women and children attend parties, and the occasion is one of great social enjoyment. In this regard, you will observe, the festival of Dun Gee, is again parallel, in a certain degree, to that of Christmas.

"The feast was founded to celebrate the close of the year, and is really a festival of thanks to our ruling providence for the prolongation of life, the happiness that has been granted during the year just ended, and all the gifts that have been granted in the way of material prosperity.

"The feast resembles Christmas in that it is nearly coincidental in time; it is a religious observance; it is also a time of social reunion; because it has a dish peculiar to itself and because it is eminently a day upon which the children are allowed especial privileges and enjoyments."

THE POLYCHROME BIBLE.

Accepted Version Declared To Be Full of Errors.

Liberals, Spiritualists and church people will be interested to know that Prof. J. Welhausen, of Gottingen University, Germany, is translating the Book of Psalms for the great Polychrome Edition of the Bible. Prof. Welhausen is the leading Hebrew scholar of Europe. He is one of forty famous professors of Semitic literature who have undertaken the great task of translating the Bible into English without fear or favor, taking advantage of all recent discoveries and paying no regard to former translations or revisions. Their aim is to render the Hebrew into its exact equivalent in English.

In pursuance of this line of action, Prof. Welhausen announces, he has discovered that the accepted English version of the Book of Psalms is full of errors. In consequence, the Psalms have for centuries been misunderstood—false renderings having been accepted as "God's Holy Word," by the religious world. The people called Christians will still continue to cling to and revere the King James version, without doubt; such is the power of habit and superstition combined that it is hard indeed to break the fetters they have learned to love and worship. They will still hold fast as a most precious treasure the old book, with all its crudities, errors and mistranslations. Line by line, word by word, it has been to them, in their belief, the veritable "Word of God," and such, no doubt, for centuries to come, it will still continue to be—although scholarship has demonstrated its gross imperfections.

The old Bible has been and still remains a veritable fetich—reverence for it has become fetich worship.

X-RAY.

VERY SIGNIFICANT.

The Progressive Thinker leads. It publishes more reading matter than any other dollar Spiritualist paper on this green earth. It was the only Spiritualist paper that had enterprise enough to publish President Barrett's address before the National Convention at Washington. It covered three pages of the paper. It now proposes to send out 1,000,000 copies of the paper containing his address.

Read the announcement on fifth page, headed "Fifteen Cents," for particulars.

MARRIED.

In Cleveland, Ohio, on January 3rd, Mrs. Elizabeth J. Ulrich was married at her home, No. 59 Vine street, to Mr. James Knight, a veteran Spiritualist, and officer in a leading spiritual society there.

The Lombards were originally the Langobardi or Long-beards. They migrated into Italy from Northern Prussia.

The Arabs claim that they are directly descended from Ishmael, the son of Abraham and Hagar, born 1810 B. C.

FIFTY YEARS IN THE CHURCH OF ROME.

A Remarkable Book.

This is a remarkable work by FATHER CHINIQUY. It exposes even to the minutest details the corruption that exists in the Church of Rome. It is a work of 832 pages, and should be read as a matter of history by every Spiritualist. The following is a partial list of the table of contents:

CHAPTER I. The Bible and the Priest of Rome.
CHAPTER II. My first School-days at St. Thomas—The Monk and Celibacy.
CHAPTER III. The Confession of Children.
CHAPTER IV. The Shepherd whipped by his Sheep.
CHAPTER V. The Priest, Purgatory, and the poor Widow's Cow.
CHAPTER VI. Festivities in a Parsonage.
CHAPTER VII. Preparation for the First Communion—Initiation to Idolatry.
CHAPTER VIII. The First Communion.
CHAPTER IX. Intellectual Education in the Roman Catholic College.
CHAPTER X. Moral and R[illegible] in the Roman Catholic Co[illegible]
CHAPTER XI. Protestant Children in the Convents and Nunneries of Rome.
CHAPTER XII. Rome and Education—Why does the Church of Rome hate the Common Schools of the United States, and want to destroy them?—Why does she object to the reading of the Bible in the Schools?
CHAPTER XIII. Theology of the Church of Rome: its Anti-Social and Anti-Christian Character.
CHAPTER XIV. The Vow of Celibacy.
CHAPTER XV. The Impurities of the Theology of Rome.
CHAPTER XVI. The Priest of Rome and the Holy Fathers; or, how I swore to give up the Word of God to follow the word of Men.
CHAPTER XVII. The Roman Catholic Priesthood, or Ancient and Modern Idolatry.
CHAPTER XVIII. Nine Consequences of the Dogma of Transubstantiation—The old Paganism under a Christian name.
CHAPTER XIX. Vicarage, and Life at St. Charles, Rivierre Boyer.
CHAPTER XX. Papineau and the Patriots in 1833—The burning of "Le Canadien" by the Curate of St. Charles.
CHAPTER XXI. Grand Dinner of the Priests—The Maniac Sister of Rev. Mr. Perras.
CHAPTER XXII. I am appointed Vicar of the Curate of Charlesbourgh—The Piety, Lives and Deaths of Fathers Bedard and Perras.
CHAPTER XXIII. The Cholera Morbus of 1834—Admirable courage and self-denial of the Priests of Rome during the epidemic.
CHAPTER XXIV. I am named a Vicar of St. Roch, Quebec City—The Rev. Mr. Tetu—Tertullian—General Cargo—The Seal Skins.
CHAPTER XXV. Simony—Strange and sacrilegious traffic in the so-called Body and Blood of Christ—Enormous sums of Money made by the sale of Masses—The Society of Three Masses abolished and the Society of one Mass established.
CHAPTER XXVI. Continuation of the trade in Masses.
CHAPTER XXVII. Quebec Marine Hospital—The first time I carried the "Bon Dieu" (the wafer god) in my vest pocket—The Grand Oyster Soiree at Mr. Buteau's—The Rev. L. Parent and the "Bon Dieu" at the Oyster Soiree.

We have not space in this notice of Father Chiniquy's work to give the heads of all the Chapters. Those omitted are of especial value. The following, however, are of thrilling interest:

CHAPTER LIII. The Immaculate Conception of the Virgin Mary.
CHAPTER LIV. The Abomination of Auricular Confession.
CHAPTER LV. The Ecclesiastical Retreat—Conduct of the Priests—The Bishop Forbids Me to Distribute the Bible.
CHAPTER LVI. Public Acts of Simony—Thefts and Brigandage of Bishop O'Regan—General Cry of Indignation—I determine to resist him to his face—He employs Mr. Spink again to send me to Gaol, and he fails—Drags me as a Prisoner to Urbana in the Spring of 1856 and fails again—Abraham Lincoln defends me—My dear Bible becomes more than ever my Light and my Counselor.
CHAPTER LVII. Bishop O'Regan sells the Parsonage of the French Canadians of Chicago, pockets the money, and turns them out when they come to complain—He determines to turn me out of my Colony and send me to Kahokia—He forgets it next day and publishes that he has interdicted me—My People send a Deputation to the Bishop—His Answers—The Sham Excommunication by three drunken Priests.
CHAPTER LVIII. Address from my People, asking me to remain—I am again dragged as a prisoner by the sheriff to Urbana—Abraham Lincoln's anxiety about the issue of the Prosecution—My Distress—The Rescue—Miss Philomena Moffat sent by God to save me—Le Belle's Confession and Distress—My Innocence acknowledged—Noble Words and Conduct of Abraham Lincoln—The Oath of Miss Philomena Moffat.
CHAPTER LIX. A moment of Interruption in the Thread of my "Fifty Years in the Church of Rome," to see how my sad Previsions about my defender, Abraham Lincoln, were to be realized—Rome the Implacable Enemy of the United States.
CHAPTER LX. The Fundamental Principles of the Constitution of the United States drawn from the Gospel of Christ—My first visit to Abraham Lincoln to warn him of the Plots I knew against his Life—The Priests circulate the news that Lincoln was born in the Church of Rome—Letter of the Pope to Jeff Davis—My last visit to the President—His admirable reference to Moses—His willingness to die for his Nation's Sake.
CHAPTER LXI. Abraham Lincoln a true man of God, and a true Disciple of the Gospel—The Assassination by Booth—The tool of the Priests—John Surratt's house—The Rendezvous and Dwelling Place of the Priests—John Surratt Secreted by the Priests after the murder of Lincoln—The Assassination of Lincoln known and published in the town three hours before its occurrence.
CHAPTER LXII. Deputation of two Priests sent by the People and the Bishops of Canada to persuade us to submit to the will of the Bishop—The Deputies acknowledge publicly that the Bishop is wrong and that we are right—For peace sake, I consent to withdraw from the contest on certain conditions accepted by the Deputies—One of the Deputies turns false to his promise, and betrays us, to be put at the head of my Colony—My last Interview with him and Mr. Brassard.
CHAPTER LXIII. Mr. Desaulnier is named Vicar General of Chicago to crush us—Our People more united than ever to defend their rights—Letters of the Bishops of Montreal against me, and my answer—Mr. Brassard forced, against his conscience, to condemn us—My answer to Mr. Brassard—He writes to beg my pardon.
CHAPTER LXIV. I write to the Pope Pius IX, and to Napoleon, Emperor of France, and send them the Legal and Public Documents proving the bad conduct of Bishop O'Regan—Grand Vicar Dunn sent to tell me of my victory at Rome, and the end of our trouble—I go to Dubuque to offer my submission to the Bishop—The peace sealed and publicly proclaimed by Grand Vicar Dunn the 28th of March, 1858.
CHAPTER LXV. Excellent testimonial from my Bishop—My Retreat—Grand Vicar Saurin and his assistant, Rev. M. Granger—Grand Vicar Dunn writes me about the new storm prepared by the Jesuits—Vision—Christ offers Himself as a Gift—I am forgiven, rich, happy and saved—Back to my people.
CHAPTER LXVI. The Solemn Responsibilities of my New Position—We give up the name of Roman Catholic to call ourselves Christian Catholics—Dismay of the Roman Catholic Bishops—My Lord Duggan, Coadjutor of St. Louis, hurried to Chicago—He comes to St. Anne to persuade the People to submit to his Authority—He is ignominiously turned out, and runs away in the midst of the Cries of the People.
CHAPTER LXVII. Bird's-eye View of the Principal Events from my Conversion to this day—My Narrow Escapes—The end of the Voyage through the Desert to the Promised Land.

Price, $2.25, Post-paid.

PRINCIPLES — OF — LIGHT AND COLOR.

BY E. D. BABBITT, M. D. LL. D.

A truly great work in which the author exhibits the results of years of research, of a mind devoted to science and truth, highly gifted with keen intuitive insight and the psychic faculty of clairvoyance, enabling him to discover and elucidate facts and principles not observable to ordinary ken. The book is of very great interest and importance, bringing to light many important points concerning light and color in their mental and physical effects and their practical application in the conservation of health and the cure of disease and sickness. Its medical value is beyond estimation, and its teachings should be known by all.

Finely illustrated with cuts and colored plates.

PRICE, $5.00. POSTAGE, 36c.

For Sale at The Progressive Thinker Office.

STARNOS.

By Dr. Della E. Davis. A rosary of pearls, culled from the works of Andrew Jackson Davis. Intended for the light and solace of every sorrowing and stricken heart. Price 50 cents.

OBSESSION.

How evil spirits influence mortals. By M. Faraday. P. 23. Price 10 cents.

GOSPEL OF NATURE.

By M. L. Sherman and Wm. F. Lyon. A book replete with Spiritual truths. Price $1.00.

Memorial Oration by Col. Ingersoll

On Roscoe Conkling. Delivered before the New York Legislature, May 9, 1888. Price, 4 cents.

THE RIGHTS OF MAN.

By Thomas Paine. Parts I and II, Being an answer to Mr. Burke's attack upon the French Revolution. Post 8vo., 279 pages. Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

"SOUL'S LIGHT."

Dr. Baraduc's Own Explanation of the Mysterious Forces He Photographs.

ARE WE ON THE EVE OF MARVELOUS DISCOVERIES TOUCHING THE VITAL PRINCIPLE?—CENTER OF LUMINOUS FORCE.

As set forth by the New York Herald, Dr. Hippolite Baraduc, of Paris, has just sent to a friend in this country a copy of a short pamphlet embodying his very latest statistics in "Thought Photography." The following in a translation:

"The subject matter of this pamphlet is the photographic expression of a man's thought, made without sunlight or electricity or contact of any material kind. In a word, these impressions are subjective, are man's own personal vibrations, are what one might call his life's light—the light of his breathing soul. I have in all two hundred of these impressions, produced in the dark.

"I have devoted some four hundred plates, all told, to researches relative to my book on 'The Living Soul!—Her Movements and Her Lights.' Of these I have lost in the neighborhood of two hundred in one way or another, mostly in my efforts to perfect myself in the technique of photography. I have some two hundred perfect plates. Of this number twenty show the vital force with a 'curved basket handle, or horn,' to it. Of these twenty plates one was made by an abbe, two by physicians, three by ladies and two by children.

"I insist upon the value of my discoveries from two points of view.

"First, by reason of the images on the plates resulting from a force emanating from us or relative to our own proper vitality. That is to say, they are pictures of that invisible light which is intimately connected with the movements of our living souls. I say 'living soul,' because the words 'life,' 'soul,' 'love,' 'spirit' and 'light' have been always and absolutely synonymous. Neither heat nor electricity (which has a photographic imprint of its own) produces this same effect upon such sensitized plates as I have employed.

"We therefore find ourselves in the presence of forces supra-mechanical, spontaneous, entirely outside of and beyond all known modes of the exhibition of motion and energy.

"I am therefore fully justified in stating, as a logical consequence, that I have discovered a human, invisible light, differing altogether from all the different forms of physical energy, and also differing from the cathode rays discovered by Professor Roentgen.

CENTERS OF LUMINOUS FORCE.

"These Roentgen rays have their point of origin in an electric centre existing in the Crookes tube, whereas my distinct photographic impressions have their origin in human life itself.

"Our souls must therefore be considered as centres of luminous force, owing their existence partly to the attraction and partly to the repulsion of special and potent forces bred of the invisible cosmos. I call attraction 'aspiration' and repulsion 'expiration.' These two conditions together make up the atmosphere which flows around our cutaneous surfaces—the outside of our bodies.

"I have thirty photographs of 'aspiration,' which is that part of this circumambient force which we suck in, and I have forty photographs of 'expiration,' which is that part which we contribute from our within to the invisible without.

"Together they form the fluid or respiration of the soul of man, and they each present their specific imprint. Both these imprints differ from each other and from the imprints of all the known forms of physical force.

"Sensitized photographic films are therefore not only affected specifically by the sun and by electric shocks, but also by the 'gush' of the soul itself. Thus affected, they reveal to us the vibrations of that fluid atmosphere of us with which we live and from which we recruit our vital powers in actual soul respirations. These are just as actual as inspiration and expiration of air, just as actual as the absorption and rejection by our bodies of the solid and liquid constituents of our planet.

"In the second place, I wish to draw attention to my explanation of the peculiar appearances of these photographs. When we float in the depths and shallows of our being we suck in from about us, attract breath in certain ellipse-shaped bits of the cosmos, which are in power and fineness en rapport with that which we call our condition of soul, thick and opaque or transparent and gauzy, and we expel from us into this same cosmos emanations more or less gross or subtle corresponding with or following an analogous vibratory condition of soul.

"We find, therefore, outside of and distinct from ourselves, under certain conditions produced by accident or created by environment, a zone, so to speak, a fluid atmosphere of aspiration and expiration which stands out in strong contrast—the us and the not us. This is the crucial point.

A TRINITY IN MAN.

"In more than two thousand instances my system of biometry has shown me this zone by its movement set up without physical contact and at a distance. The photograph has demonstrated the fact to me by its fixed picture. A sensitized film has permitted me to register the invisible light by its visible effect, exhibited in the picture—a permanent proof of this zone of respiration; this fluid atmosphere in which man bathes.

"We are not, then, separate from the cosmos, but over and above and outside of solar light, of heat, of electricity and of more or less rarefied air; we are surrounded by other forces which we breathe in and out, just as we inspire and expire air.

"My theory, founded on my facts, therefore, leads me to suggest a trinity in man—the body, the soul (light of life) and the spirit.

"The vibrations of this life soul in us give rise to attraction or repulsion cosmosward. Biometry registers this movement, and its light effect is varied according to the photograph, which, though shy and uncertain, is a truthful picture of the phenomena which it reveals.

"In conclusion, the discovery which I have made shows:

"First—The description of the vital cosmic force under the guise of the ellipitoid basket handles characteristic of the disturbances of ether.

"Second—The vital force of me penetrates and permeates the vital force of the cosmos.

"Third—The human soul contracts and expands as a result of its respiratory movements. It gives rise, around itself as a center, to a special respiratory zone, a peculiarly personal atmosphere, its own fluid habitat.

"The written demonstration of this luminous zone, of this photoplastic life, proves that the essence of me, my soul, is not only motion, but also light; that it moves and shines. To this truth may

Continued on page eight.)

MATERIALIZATION.

"Seek, and Ye Shall Find."

Philosophic Expression of Some Weighty Truths.

Nothing worth having in this world has ever been attained without earnest seeking; not a casual looking, but "seeking" in all the weighty meaning of the thought this word conveys.

In this writing I have no quarrel with the one who says there is no such thing as materialization. With such an one I have sympathy and would reach out the helping hand, as I agreed with him fully during ten long years of "looking" into spiritual phenomena. But in four years of most earnest seeking I have seen more than one thousand genuine materialized forms.

Very many times I have seen one I knew and loved dearly when she was in the body, materialize from the floor and build her body before my eyes. Dozens of times we have clasped arms, talked of old times, and looked in one another's faces. An hundred times have I taken her hands and held them in mine as she slowly sank down and went, as she came, into the unseen, at my feet. So I know what others may "doubt" or "believe," as they have little or more light.

With the higher guides I have talked over this phase of the phenomena many times and their teaching is, I know, truth. They invariably tell me that the material of which the materialized body is built, must be gathered from the people in the circle. The clothing also is generally taken from that of the people in the circle, but the vital force is that of the medium. Sometimes the material for both the form and the vital force are taken from the medium, but always is the vital force so taken. In those rare cases, where the spirit materializing and that of the medium are soul-mates, the medium need not, and seldom does, go into the trance state; but in all other cases the medium is "under control," not necessarily entranced.

The man who is most cultivated intellectually may be the most ignorant one in spiritual matters and he will be the most earnest in his denial of the charge of ignorance in himself. He it is who most often will be in person or by proxy the "grabber." The grabber is the one so densely ignorant of spiritual law that he believes he can "expose" the medium by grabbing and holding the materialized form.

How many dozens of mediums have been exposed by the grabber! In many cases he has seen the form build up from the floor outside of the cabinet and come directly from that point to some one in the circle. Just then he has made his famous grab, and has a strong grip on the hands or arms of the form he has just seen materialize. A tremor thrills the form and he finds he has the medium in his grasp and the medium is "exposed."

If the grabber would allow himself two minutes of honest thought, he could, maybe, get a ray or two of the truth to penetrate his spiritual darkness at this juncture.

The vital force of the grabbed form belongs to the medium, and at all hazards this must be returned or the physical death of the medium is a certainty. The materialized form is fast in the grasp of personified ignorance, and if the materializing spirit allows the form to dissipate into its elements while in the grasp of the grabber, the vital force of the medium must also be dissipated at the same time. The physical life of the medium must not be sacrificed, and the invariable course of the guides in these cases is to call the body of the medium to the vital force. So through all time and under all circumstances the grabber will find the medium in his grasp, and each time the grabber will cry "exposed," and the ignorant public will say "of course."

Personally I know well four spirits to whom loving friends, in the body, have given garments such as we wear, and I have seen these materialized and dematerialized with the form over and over again. I have also seen the form dematerialize and leave the garment on the floor in full view. It is true also that these garments and the love that gives them carry a strength that makes these spirits come much stronger than others, in the material. Such a garment, left behind in the hands of a grabber, would be to him proof positive of fraud of the grossest kind.

It is a fact that the mediums themselves are to blame for nearly all their troubles suffered at the hands of ignorant sitters. One medium, through whom excellent materializations come, always tells her circle among other things, "the guides have the privilege of using me for impersonation or transfiguration if they so desire, and if you are in doubt as to whether the form coming to you is materialization, impersonation or transfiguration, ask the guides and they will always answer you truthfully." She is the only one of all the materializing mediums I know who gives eyen that much of an explanation of the possible phenomena.

Then again, mediums allow almost any one who will pay to sit in their materializing circles. These circles are for the very highest phase of physical phenomena, and are no more fit for the participation of the spiritually uneducated than is strong meat for infants. The higher guides state unequivocally that under no circumstances should any person, who has not become well acquainted with all the lesser phenomena, be allowed to sit in a materializing circle, and that in the infringing of this rule is always a case of pearl-throwing to swine. "Fools rush in where angels fear to tread," more often in spiritual circles than in any other place I know of.

Down deep in the soul of every human being is the desire for something better and higher than has yet come to him. Books are somewhat expensive and people of his acquaintance tell him spiritism is all a fraud. Therefore he will not read and thus inform himself somewhat in the only phenomena that prove the continuity of life. It is easier to pay a dollar and sit in a materializing circle, and once in the circle, with forms materializing about him, he cannot see why the great question of spirit identity should not be settled then and there. He cannot understand why the quivering voice, that tells him at her first coming it is his mother's, should not be as strong and why she should not show her face as fully as when she last clasped him to her heart in the flesh. To me now it is always a wonder how the dear ones on the better side of life can demonstrate at all in this way. In every circle there are from one to ten people who do not care whether any one else gets a thing, so long as they get demonstration. These people lose sight entirely of the divine law of love for the neighbor. Their selfish impulses rule and they not only ruin the demonstrations for others in the circle, but do not get for themselves a tithe of what would be theirs if they became unselfish.

Another force for evil in all circles is the investigator. At a mental tension, determined to let nothing escape, critical (in ignorance always, but) to a de-

(Continued on page eight.)

NEW YEAR THOUGHTS.

The Grand Mission of Spiritualism.

Spiritism—Spiritualism—Spirituality—Spiritual Life.

There never was a time when spirit did not exist, but time was when it was little understood. When Christendom was in a death-struggle between sacerdotalism and materialism, spirit began to manifest itself to the senses by the raps at Hydesville, N. Y., and we may say, with the Hebrew bard who sang as if in anticipation of this event: "Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast ordained strength."

This was the advent of Modern Spiritualism, so-called, but, as I think, more properly, by some, called spiritism.

Spiritualism implies spirituality, which does not always accompany spiritism. To be a Spiritualist is to live a spiritual life.

In the elucidation of this part of our subject we will quote from a paper in the Arena for December, by our favorite contemporary, Lilian Whiting, who, as Editor Flower of the Arena, says, "gives to her work the luminosity of a strong, loving faith."

Miss Whiting says: "The life of the spirit is not to be considered as merely identical with devotional attitudes or with religious exercises. It is a life, not a litany; a conviction deeper than a creed. It is joy, peace and love. Can a man or a woman in hard, sad, or exacting conditions live the life of joy, peace, and love? Here we face our problem."

Miss Whiting then speaks of the work of providing for the body and other necessary duties which belong to a busy, useful life, and asks: "How is one to lift up one's heart and live the life of the spirit?" She answers her own question in part as follows:

"Right thinking makes right living, and a true conception of the nature and purposes of existence determines the processes of thought.

"The first truth to realize is that we are, here and now, spiritual beings living in a spiritual world governed by spiritual laws. Man is primarily a spiritual being, and only secondarily a physical being. There can be little question that the higher self, one's own self, dwells perpetually in the unseen and a more direct communion with the divine forces. To the degree in which we can realize this higher self, and establish an identity with it, to that degree can we manifest its power on the physical plane of life.

"So to live is richness of life; so to live is to find perpetual joy, peace and love; it is to radiate happiness, and happiness is the normal condition of the spirit, as health is the normal condition of the body. The life of the spirit is love and peace—the life of radiant energy and abounding joy."

Spiritualism is best determined by its fruits—its effect on society. A Spiritualist could not be guilty of any of the inhumanities which lie at the root of the unrest of the present time. All who are guilty in that respect are spiritually sick and have not "joy and peace."

When the millions advocating Spiritualism combine their force and make it felt on the money aristocracy and help to establish a just and equitable distribution of wealth, then we will have proof of their spirituality and virtue.

There are private examples of spiritual heroism worthy of all praise. Plain people unknown to fame, with environment beyond the power of ordinary mortals to change, yet by spiritual power have been transformed into joy and happiness. But we want more than that.

The common people heard the Saviour gladly, but the rich young man "went away very sorrowful" when he heard that he must divide his earthly treasures with the poor in order to have treasure in heaven, "for he had great possessions." Yet he was not like our millionaires who monopolize land and trade, taking advantage of every facility conceded to them by society in the way of business organization, improved machinery, etc., which poor men cannot do, but they can; and it is tolerated because it conserves, in a sense, the interests of society and civilization. But, that the divine side is a blank, is seen in the fact that while they are getting richer and farther from the kingdom of heaven, the poor are getting poorer and more dependent, if not more numerous.

But you ask what can we do with an aristocracy so strongly entrenched? I will give my opinion.

The rich must be saved as well as the poor. Jesus gave, as a proof of his Christship, that "the poor have the gospel preached unto them." Show your superiority in saving both poor and rich and making them one fraternal brotherhood.

In that excellent book, "The Next World Interviewed," Judge Edmonds, the spirit editor, says: "I am sorry to say that Vanderbilt's religious impressions were not well grounded. Nourished in the hotbed of a sickroom, they had but a mushroom existence and have already come to an untimely end. He was heard to swear soon after his arrival, and curse his minister for not giving him a truer idea of heaven. Three days ago I spoke to you of his arrival in spirit-life; he is back to earth already, seeking to undo his will and add new bequests—is beginning to realize that death is not that quiet rest in the arms of a crucified Redeemer which from the teachings that were given him in his hours of weakness, he supposed it to be."

Teach the Vanderbilts of the world the sin and ruinous consequences of accumulating and hoarding up the wealth that should be used for the good of others. Show them that their own happiness in both this world and the next depends on their obedience to the law of justice and reciprocity, and give them the proof of it which you have.

This is the mission of Spiritualism. It must permeate, like the little leaven, the lump of society, till the whole is leavened, and spiritualized. Then there shall be joy, peace and happiness, not to the individual alone, but to the community at large, and the world will be a heaven where all shall be happy.

This is the mission of Spiritualism which all other social compacts have failed to accomplish, and can only be done by bringing every passion and appetite under spiritual control.

The poet well said:

"This world is full of beauty
As other worlds above,
And if we did our duty
It might be full of love."

R. NEELY.

ONE MILLION! ONE MILLION!

We want to reach 1,000,000 new readers. We want to illuminate the minds of those Spiritualists who take no Spiritualist paper. We will send all new subscribers The Progressive Thinker three months for fifteen cents. Read the article on fifth page headed "Fifteen Cents." It will give full particulars.

ANIMAL SPIRITS.

Do They Survive the Disintegration of the Material Form?

Dr. Peebles et al. vs. 10,000 Intelligent Spiritualists, Trance Mediums, Etc.

Several weeks ago I wrote an article for The Progressive Thinker on the existence of animals in the spirit spheres, citing three or four personal experiences, any one of which, to my method of reasoning, constitutes incontrovertible proof that animals do survive the change called death. And now comes Dr. Peebles, in a later number of The Progressive Thinker and attempts to prove the negative without producing competent evidence.

When the good Doctor asserts that he has "never known a scholarly, representative Spiritualist to affirm any such irrational, unphilosophical position," he flatly contradicts his own statements, for within the past eighteen months he has referred to the undersigned, in his writings for the spiritualistic press, as "scholarly," and in those same articles he has highly eulogized the eruditeness and intelligence of many platform mediums and lecturers whom I know to be firm believers—through their own experiences—in the doctrine that animals have their place in the economy of the spiritual spheres. The only proofs he advances would upset his own doctrines of the immortality of the soul of man.

It seems to be the Doctor's great fear that "serpents will sting," "fleas bite," etc., "over there," and he asks how we know they will not? A motto at the mast-head of his Temple of Health was: "The Spirit Is Never Sick." If the spirit is not flesh and blood; if it is never sick; if it cannot be injured or mutilated; if the "corruptible shall put on incorruption," then how can a spirit feel the sting of a serpent or the bite of a flea?

We chance to know something about the conditions under which the questions were put to W. J. Colville and J. J. Morse by the venerable Doctor. These gentlemen were guests of his and were aware of the controversy between the Doctor and myself upon the subject. While they were under "influence" the Doctor put his questions, at the same time placing himself in such a positive condition that his own spirit framed and compelled the answer through mental suggestion. I have had many conversations with Mr. Colville and find his convictions upon the subject quite in harmony with my own, and I have read some of Mr. Morse's lectures in which he assumed the existence of animals in the spirit spheres. However, I have the proofs in my own experience and though all the writers in our ranks were to turn upon me, I would not yield my point. Captain Geo. W. Walrond, author of "A Practical Guide to Spiritualism," an erudite gentleman, an excellent psychic lecturer and a fine clairvoyant, has had some remarkable personal experience which proves to him conclusively that animals do not perish with the body.

It is possible and quite probable that animals do not reach the higher spiritual spheres; hence spirits may return who have never seen them. If two spirits from our earth were to communicate with the inhabitants of Mars—one a former inhabitant of the West Indies, and another a denizen of the frozen North—and one should tell of the polar bear, the fields of snow and ice and the general barrenness of the country, and the other was to say he had seen no such thing, but bananas, tropical flowers, birds, fruits and plants, both would be right, though apparently contradicting each other.

I fear the good Doctor has been sailing these forty years in an orthodox ship on the great fathomless sea of spiritual truth without taking the trouble to explore its hidden resources, its coral reefs, and its hidden pearls. Excepting at intervals when the power of the spirit is upon him, he still seems to be psychologized by some materialistic orthodox spirit, but it is to be hoped that the recreation contingent upon his third trip around the world will completely relieve him of the obsession.

According to the philosophy I have received from the higher intelligences, the soul of man passes through the mineral, vegetable, and animal kingdoms, and ends its evolution in man, or the spirit which evolves through him. This theory was recently explained to me in a lecture dictated by these intelligences, and delivered by me at LaFayette hall, San Diego, the subject being: "The Origin of Worlds and the Evolution of Man." If The Progressive Thinker can give it space, I may send it for publication therein at some future date.

ERNEST S. GREEN.

RINES ON SPIRITUALIST PAPERS AND BOOKS.

To the Editor:—I am only an investigator, and yet I find The Progresive Thinker intensely interesting. How Spiritualists can get along without such a paper is more than I can understand and yet there are some quite ancient Spiritualists in your ranks who do not consider a Spiritual paper of any benefit. Last Sunday morning, January 12, I attended services at the K. of P. Hall, 909 Market street, San Francisco, of which society Dr. Rines is the president. In the course of the service, the good doctor gave a short address, in which he said he never read spiritual papers or spiritual books, as he believed that what the spirits revealed to one, they could reveal to all, hence spiritual papers and books were useless.

JOSEPH M. CLUNE.

San Jose, Cal.

The above letter illustrates one remarkable phase of Spiritualism. This Dr. Rines is the one who withdrew from the National Association. We presume that he would be of great benefit to his society if he would retire from it and devote himself exclusively to some secular pursuit. Any Spiritualist who is so weak in mind that he believes that what the spirits can reveal through one person, they can to all, is to be pitied, and not censured. He simply lacks brain force. He is unable to think correctly. He would not have made a dunce of himself by such an assertion if he had the capability of reasoning to any great extent.

Spiritualism has been afflicted and cursed with men of such mental caliber. They are destitute of practical common sense, yet occupy positions of leaders; and such leaders!

Well, what can the prominent thoughtful Spiritualists do in such a case? Nothing. When the common people learn some sense they will relegate such a man to his proper position, and his voice will not be heard in public.

"Mahomet, His Birth, Character and Doctrin." By Edward Gibbons. This is No. 6 of the Library of Liberal Classics. It is conceded to be historically correct, and so exact and perfect in every detail as to be practically beyond the reach of adverse criticism. Price, 25 cents. For sale at this office.

CALIFORNIA NEWS.

Many Items of Interest Are Noted

To the Editor:—The interest in things spiritual has been revived in this city by the return of Mrs. Maude L. Freitag, the young ballot test-medium, whose first appearance here aroused such enthusiasm during the meetings held in September last under the auspices of the California State Spiritualists' Association.

Mrs Freitag was re-engaged by the officers of the State Association, and is here for two months, giving her wonderful platform tests every Sunday evening in Scottish Hall.

The phase of mediumship possessed by Mrs. Freitag is quite similar to that of Mrs. Ada Foye, who is located in your own city. The raps are loud, and distinctly heard, names and relationships are readily given, questions read and answered, clairvoyant descriptions and clairaudient messages follow in rapid succession while Mrs Freitag is upon the platform. The greatest enthusiasm prevails as one skeptic after another is confounded and converted. A brilliant future of usefulness and success awaits this—the youngest and best of our present platform mediums.

Amongst the local mediums who keep to the front in public work may be mentioned, Madam Young, who has recently fitted up a neat little hall at 418 McAllister street, where her own meetings are held and also those of the Ladies' Aid Society. Mrs. E. J. Meyers conducts meetings at her own hall, and Katie Heussman also holds public meetings, while Mrs. Hendee-Rogers, Mrs. Shriner, Mrs. Eggert-Aitkin, and Clara Mayo-Steers hold Sunday evening seances at their own homes. Dr. Rines conducts the meetings of his society as usual, and Mrs. Fleming still presides over those of the Progressive Spiritual Church.

The leading society of the city—The Society of Progressive Spiritualists—is taking a vacation this winter while the State Association is in the field. The Children Lyceum is flourishing under the management of those veteran workers, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Wadsworth and W. T. Jones.

Edward K. Earle has just closed a series of most wonderful slate-writing seances, which he has been holding Sunday evenings in Scottish Hall, before large and interested audiences, and has gone to Los Angeles, where he is engaged by the Harmonial Spiritualists for the month of January.

John Slater has been astonishing Spiritualists and unbelievers in Los Angeles and San Diego during the winter thus far, but expects soon to revisit England. As two great lights—Earle and Slater—leave us, we are compensated by the return of Mrs. J. J. Whitney, who has been doing such excellent work in Boston, and also Doctor Schlesinger, who has returned from an extended tour in the Northwest and Kansas, where he has made hundreds of converts, and healed the afflicted. These two popular platform mediums expect to remain at home during the remainder of the winter, and it is hoped by their many friends that they may be induced to engage in public work during their stay.

Madame Montague, a brilliant and talented speaker is at the front of things spiritual in Oakland.

Mr. and Mrs Lillie, the noted Eastern workers, are meeting with cordial receptions at each point they visit. San Diego, Los Angeles, and now Santa Barbara has been favored with their ministrations and it is hoped that San Francisco will not be overlooked or passed by.

Dr. N. F. Ravlin has found a field of labor in San Diego, where he is much appreciated.

Mrs. Sarah Seal is engaged as speaker for the San Jose Society and is doing good work.

Elsie Reynolds, the materializing medium has been holding some remarkable seances in San Diego at the rooms of Dr. Ravlin, which have given great satisfaction, and are declared to have been held under the strictest conditions.

Fred Evans, the slate-writer, has been creating quite a sensation in Sacramento and awakened some of the sleepy Spiritualists of that city; but like all the others has gravitated to that Mecca of mediums—Los Angeles—where he is at present entertaining the Harmonials.

Mrs. Griffin, an excellent platform medium, has returned from San Jose and located here permanently.

The philosophy of Spiritualism is in the background, while the phenomena take a back seat. SCRATCHUM.

San Francisco, Cal.

BEAUTIFUL ISLE OF THE SOUL

O, wonderous isle where soft echoes stray
Deep in the soul evermore.
Like crystal streams that shimmer and play
From mountain and valley in rhythms of May
On Memory's mystical shore.

How the years go drifting like the deep waters flow
While the days lie soft between,
And oft we recall wherever we go,
Loved faces and scenes of the long, long ago,
When life was sunny and green.

And this musical isle, sun-lit and fair,
Holds ever a sacred control,
And we gather fondly our loved ones there
Radiant in form and free from care,
In the beautiful isle of the soul.

O, remembered and dear be the blessed isle,
In our heart's affection for aye.
When the evening descends with its radiant smile
And our eyes shall close in dreamland awhile,
To wake in an infinite day.

BISHOP A. BEALS.

Summerland, Cal.

A STRONG ENDORSEMENT.

I have given up the other spiritual papers as they were an extra expense; The Progressive Thinker covers the whole ground, and really so much better, that I had no desire to read the others after they came. Tuesday morning I always look for my paper, and read a good share of it before I eat my breakfast. My wife often says she thinks I would rather read The Progressive Thinker than eat. I tell her that the paper contains food for the mind, and when the mind is well fed and in a healthy condition, the body otherwise can take pretty good care of itself. My friends often say that such and such an article is good this week in The Progressive Thinker. I tell them the paper is like a good, sound nut—chockfull of delicious meat, and I read it, commencing with the first article on the first age, and never ending until I have gone through every page, advertisements and all. I thank you for publishing such a good paper at so reasonable a price. THOS. E. ADDY.

Aurora. Ill.

How is your liver? If torpid, dribn Golden Laxattve Coffee. 50 cents by mail. Golden Laxative Coffee Co., Ayer Mass. 373

A SWEET COMFORT.

It Is Found in Genuine Materialization.

To the Editor:—I have been reading my last "Progressive Thinker," and believe it to be one of your very best issues. W. H. Bach makes timely suggestions in regard to holding Semi-Centennial Jubilee at Rochester, N. Y. I wish every one in the United States who claims to be a Spiritualist or a medium would take this into serious consideration and help to put the idea into a tangible shape, as I believe all who are interested in our beautiful religion, whether on this continent or not, will act with us and take pride in making it a success, and one worthy of the religion that is the truest and best ever given to earth's inhabitants—making us to know beyond the shadow of a doubt that we do live and love and progress when we lay aside the physical body.

Let us act at once; be of one mind, and success will crown all our efforts. I live where I stand alone and have to bear the shafts of persecution, because of ignorance and superstition, but I have never yet denied the knowledge of our ability to demonstrate under favorable circumstances, that we continue fully alive after death, as human beings, with all our peculiarities of temper and disposition, all our loves and hates, and ability to do good or evil, as we desire; if we can only get a medium through whom we can communicate or control for that purpose.

I remember an experience which came to me many years ago, which is as vivid now as when it occurred and I am positive of its truth, as I was wide awake at the time. It was in summer. As my husband was a postmaster and also a physician, I was many times overworked. At this particular time he was away professionally, and I had more than I was able to do, but reached the end of my labors for the day at 10 o'clock and retired, but not to sleep—I was too exhausted for that, and thought I would die if no help came to me. I did not try to get any assistance, as it seemed to me I could not. My room door stood open.

All at once I saw my eldest brother in the doorway, with a beautiful reassuring smile on his face and a wealth of brotherly affection in his whole demeanor, he rapidly came near me, making passes as he advanced to me; then, when I was fully relieved, with a gentle "good-bye and go to sleep, sis; you are all right"—he appeared to sink through the carpet and I went to sleep and slept well. In the morning I was as well as usual.

My brother was a Presbyterian preacher, passing out of the body October 13, 1844. It was to me a perfect materialization, as he was dressed in the same garments he wore when in the body. This took place in 1866, several hundred miles from where his body lay.

This is but one of many experiences it has been my lot to have, and I am firmly of the opinion that our loved ones are, some of them, ever near us. As one of my friends said to me when I begged, at a materializing seance, for him to take me with him, as I could not remain alone, his answer was: "You are never alone. Because I drop my mantle, and you cannot see me with your physical eyes, it is no indication that I am gone, as I shall go home with you, though to you unseen."

Such assurances are of more value to me than all the wealth of this world, and no amount of persecution can ever make me deny the truth as it has been given to me, and how any one can go and connect themselves with a church, when a cloud arises, is beyond my ability to comprehend. To become popular is with some the way to all happiness; not realizing that to be true to the truths they have gained is far better than gold or popularity. Dear Editor, I rejoice that you are not afraid of becoming unpopular, and may you always be so true and just toward all that when you change your earthly conditions for the spiritual you may be invited to come up higher, having never denied to give the truth to anyone as you saw it. MRS. S. C. TRACY.

MRS. CORA L. V. RICHMOND'S WORK IN CHICAGO.

The Church of the Soul, organized last June (or rather merged from the First Spiritualist Church,) has held its regular meetings at Schiller Theater on Sunday mornings. Mrs. Richmond, its pastor, through whom the church was founded, has officiated every Sunday except one—she being called to Washington to attend the meeting of the Board and the Annual Convention of the N. S. A. The discourses have been of the high order that we ever receive from her inspirers, and the work goes on in a steady stream of enlightenment that promises well for the great spiritual awakening that is upon us.

The Sunday services by no means constitute the whole, or even a moiety of the work of Mrs. Richmond: funerals, christenings, weddings and anniversaries take up her time and ministrations. Only a little over a week ago she was called to Iowa to officiate at a funeral, and immediately returned to go to Michigan City to attend one there; while last Sunday evening a christening service and ordination called her to the extreme southern portion of this city.

Added to this is the Band of Harmony, which has extended its sphere of influence and usefulness by meeting in the three sections of the city alternately, and by adding an afternoon session for the ladies, at which there are very interesting topics discussed and the social feature of the tea-cup and—if Dame Rumor is to be believed—harmless fortune-telling and no end of chat; making those of us who belong to the sterner sex rather envious, as we are only invited to the evening sessions. However, we get a good many spiritual crumbs, even if we are denied the previously served sandwiches and tea.

It is the intention, I understand, to extend the work of the Church of the Soul to many active branches of practical labor, as well as for the promotion of the teachings of spiritual truth. A Young People's Club has been formed for the purpose of mutual improvement, and spiritual study; Mrs. Richmond being occasionally at liberty from other engagements to attend.

Thus are the many branches of local work carried on by the indefatigable labors of our pastor, who also neglects no duty in connection with her official relation to the National Association.

May glad tidings spread from pole to pole.

As our secretary is very busy, I am requested to send this imperfect sketch of the work being done here. Wishing you and your readers a Happy New Year, I am, yours very truly,

A. LAYMAN.

Chicago, Jan. 1st, 1897.

"Mahomet, the Illustrious." By Godfrey Higgins, Esq. (Library of Liberal Classics.) No author was better qualified to write an impartial and honest life of Mahomet than Godfrey Higgins, and this volume is intensely interesting. It should be read in conjunction with Gibbon's work. For sale at this office. Price, 25 cents.

Religion of the Future. By S. Weil. Cloth, $1.25; paper, 50 cents.

The Other World and This.

A Compendium of Spiritual Laws. No. 1, New White Cross Literature.

BY AUGUSTA W. FLETCHER, M. D.

In this volume the author, in the thirty-nine chapters, discusses a wide variety of subjects pertaining to Spiritualism, from a spiritualistic standpoint. She evinces the powers of a trained thinker, both in matter of thought and fine literary style, and capability of thought expression. The subjects are well-handled with conciseness and yet with clearness. It will prove a rich addition to any Spiritualist's library, and a most excellent book for any one seeking information concerning Spiritualism and its teachings.

For Sale at this Office. Price, $1.50

Superstition in all Ages

Or "Le Bon Sens,"

By JEAN MESLIER,

A Roman Catholic priest, who, after a pastoral service of thirty years in France, wholly abjured religious dogmas, and asked God's pardon for having taught the Christian religion. He left this volume as his last will and testament to his parishioners and to the world. Translated from the French original by Miss Anna Knoop.

Post 8vo., 339 pages, with portrait. Cloth, $1.00; postage, 14 cents.

"The work of the honest pastor is the most curious and the most powerful thing of the kind that the last century produced. . . . Paine and Voltaire had reserves, but Jean Meslier had none. He keeps nothing back; and yet, after all, the wonder is not that there should have been one priest who left that testimony at his death, but that all priests do not."—James Parton.

"THE DREAM CHILD,"

A FASCINATING ROMANCE OF two worlds. By Florence Huntley. Price: paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.00. Books like "The Dream Child" spur humanity on to make more and more demands of this nature, and will open up new heights and depths of spiritual knowledge.—Ella Wheeler Wilcox. Will, I believe, take its place beside Bulwer's "Zanoni" and the "Seraphita" of Balzac.—"Daily Capital," Topeka, Kansas. Although simple and unvarnished with any inflammable descriptions, enthralls the mind to the exclusion of other thoughts, until reluctantly the reader closes the last page.—Minneapolis "Sunday Times"

THOMAS PAINE

SOME OF HIS NOTED WORKS.

Life of Thomas Paine,

By Editor of the National with Preface and Notes by Peter Eckler. Illustrated with views of the old Paine Homestead and Paine Monument, at New Rochelle, also, portraits of Thomas Clio Rickman, Joe Barlow, Mary Wollstonecraft, Madame Roland, Condorcet, Brissot, and the most prominent of Paine's friends in Europe and America. Cloth, 75 cents.

The Age of Reason;

Being an investigation of True and Fabulous Theology. A new and complete edition, from new plates and new type; 186 pages, post 8vo. Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Common Sense.

A Revolutionary pamphlet, addressed to the inhabitants of America in 1776, with explanatory notice by an English author. Paper, 15 cents.

The Rights of Man.

Parts I and II. Being an answer to Mr. Burke's attack upon the French Revolution. Post 8vo., 279 pages. Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Paine's Complete Theological Works.

Age of Reason. Examination of the Prophecies, etc. Illus. edition. Post 8vo., 432 pages. Cloth, $1.00

Paine's Political Works.

Common Sense. The Crisis. Rights of Man, etc. Illustrated edition. Post 8vo., 650 pages. Cloth, $1.00; postage, 20 cents.

SPIRITUAL HARP.

A Collection of Vocal Music for the Choir, Congregation and Social Circles.

By J. M. Peebles and J. O. Barrett; E. H. Bailey, Musical Editor. New edition. Culled from a wide field of literature with the most critical care, free from all theological bias, throbbing with the soul of inspiration, embodying the principles and virtues of the spiritual philosophy, set to the most cheerful and popular music, (nearly all original), and adapted to all occasions, it is doubtless the most attractive work of the kind ever published. Its beautiful songs, duets and quartets, with piano, organ or melodeon accompaniment, adapted both to public meetings and the social circles. Cloth, $2.00. Postage 14 cents.

ANGEL WHISPERINGS

For the Searcher After Truth.

BY HATTIE J. RAY.

All who love genuine poetry, of excellent moral and spiritual quality, should read this book. This work is handsomely bound and is clearly printed on good paper. For sale at this office. Price $1.

THE DEAD MAN'S MESSAGE.

By Florence Marryat, author of "A Scarlet Sin," "How Like a Woman," "The Risen Dead," "There is No Death" etc. Cloth, $100.

The Religion of Humanity;

A Philosophy of Life. By J. Leon Benwell. A beautiful paper-bound pamphlet, with likeness of author. A most valuable publication to circulate among Christian people. Price 15 cents.

TALLEYRAND'S LETTER TO THE POPE.

This work will be found especially interesting to all who would desire to make a study of Romanism and the Bible. The historic facts stated, and the keen, scathing review of Romish ideas and practices should be read by all. Price, 25c. Sold at this office.

THE RELATION

Of the Spiritual to the Material Universe; and the Law of Control. New edition, enlarged and revised, by M. Faraday. Price 15 cents.

MEDIUMISTIC EXPERIENCES OF JOHN BROWN,

The Medium of the Rockies, with introduction by J. S. Loveland. This is the history of one of the most wonderful mediums that ever lived. 167 large pages. By Moses Hull. Price, 50 cents. For sale at this office.

The Evolution of the Devil.

By Henry Frank, the independent preacher of New York City. The most learned, accurate, scientific and philosophical analysis of His Satanic Majesty ever published. The book contains 66 pages, and is beautifully bound, with likeness of author on title page. Price 25 cents.

IMMORTALITY.

A poem in five cantos "If a man die, shall he live?" is fully answered. By W. S. Barlow, author of Voices. Price 60 cents.

The Devil and the Adventists.

An Adventist Attack on Spiritualism repulsed. By Moses Hull. Price, 5 cents. For sale at this office.

AN INTERESTING BOOK.

The Candle From Under the Bushel; or Thirteen Hundred and Six Questions to the Clergy. By Wm. Hart. Price 40 cents.

HOW TO MESMERIZE.

By Prof. J. W. Cadwell, one of the most successful mesmerists in America. Ancient and modern miracles explained by mesmerism. An invaluable work. Price, paper, 50 cents.

Psychopathy, or Spirit Healing:

A series of lessons on the relations of the spirit to its own organism, and the inter-relation of human beings with reference to health, disease and healing. By the spirit of Dr. Benjamin Rush, through the mediumship of Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond. A book that every healer, physician and Spiritualist should read. Price $1.50. For sale at this office.

POEMS.

By Edith Willis Linn. A volume of sweet outpourings of a gentle nature, who has no thought of the bitter cruelty of earth-life. These are sweet, winsome and restful. Price $100.

Fifty Years in the Church of Rome

By Rev. Chas. Chiniquy, ex-priest. A remarkable book. Pages, 832. Price $2.25.

BEYOND THE GATES.

By Elizabeth Stuart Phelps. A highly entertaining work. Price $1.00.

THOMAS PAINE.

Was He Junius?

By Wm. Henry Burr. Price 15 cents.

Paine's Theological Works.

Age of Reason, Examination of the Prophecies, etc. Illus. edition. Post 8vo., 432 pages. Cloth, $1.00

POEMS OF PROGRESS.

By Lizzie Doten. They are really valuable. Price $1.00.

PAINE'S POLITICAL WORKS.

Common Sense, The Crisis, Rights of Man, etc. Illustrated edition. Post 8vo., 650 pages. Cloth, $1.00; postage, 20 cents.

The Progressive Thinker.

Published every Saturday at 40 Loomis Street

J. R. FRANCIS, Editor and Publisher.

Entered at Chicago Postoffice as second-class matter.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER will be furnished until further notice, at the following terms, invariably in advance:

One year..... $1.00
Clubs of ten (a copy to the one getting up the club)..... 7.50
Thirteen weeks..... 25 cts
Single copy..... 5 cts

REMITTANCES.

Remit by Postoffice Money Order, Registered Letter, or draft on Chicago or New York. It costs from 10 to 15 cents to get checks cashed on local banks, so don't send them unless you wish that amount deducted from the amount sent. Direct all letters to J. R. Francis, No. 40 Loomis Street, Chicago, Ill.

CLUBS! IMPORTANT SUGGESTION!

As there are thousands who will at first venture only twenty-five cents for THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER thirteen weeks, we would suggest to those who receive a sample copy, to solicit several others to unite with them, and thus be able to remit from $1 to $10, or even more than the latter sum A large number of little amounts will make a large sum total, and thus extend the field of our labor and usefulness. The same suggestion will apply in all cases of renewal of subscriptions—solicit others to aid in the good work. You will experience no difficulty whatever in inducing Spiritualists to subscribe for THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER, for not one of them can afford to be without the valuable information imparted therein each week, and at the price of only about two cents per week

A Bountiful Harvest for 25 Cents.

Do you want a more bountiful harvest than we can give you for 25 cents? Just pause and think for a moment what an intellectual feast that small investment will furnish you. The subscription price of THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER thirteen weeks is only twenty-five cents! For that amount you obtain one hundred and four pages of solid, substantial, soul-elevating and mind-refreshing reading matter, equivalent to a medium-sized book!

TAKE NOTICE!

☞ At expiration of subscription, if not renewed, the paper is discontinued No bills will be sent for extra numbers.

☞ If you do not receive your paper promptly, write to us, and errors in address will be promptly corrected, and missing numbers supplied gratis.

☞ Whenever you desire the address of your paper changed, always give the address of the place to which it is then sent, or the change cannot be made.

SATURDAY, JAN. 16, 1897.

COMPLIMENTED AN ATHEIST.

In spite of continued efforts to the contrary, religionists occasionally tell the truth about those they generally falsify. Their province is to make unbelievers abhorrent in public estimation, so their own mothers will disown them. They exhaust their vocabulary of invective when they have pronounced an opponent an Atheist. Indeed, they have taught that this class of anti-believers are the vilest of the vile, without the possibility of a single redeeming trait.

It is not our province to defend those who reject belief in a Supreme being; but it is our duty to tell the truth at all times, and to vindicate the character of those unjustly assailed because of differing religious opinions. We have no more right to place a skeptic in a false position, than we have to place the most intolerant, oppressive or bigoted churchman, or the best of them, in a false position.

Some fifty-four years ago a Miss Jane Kelley, from the State of Maine, set out on a missionary tour to the Indians in Kansas. She was under the patronage of the Baptists. She became acquainted with an educated Indian of the same faith, by the name of Jones. She married him, and finally settled among the Ottawa and Pottawotomie tribes, where is now Ottawa, Kansas. The writer has known of this good woman, now in her 86th year, and her late husband, for more than fifty years. During all this long period she has been a model woman, devoted to her faith, and to the cause which led her in her girlhood to accept life among the Indians for their elevation.

Mrs. Jones was recently interviewed by a reporter for the Kansas City Star, as she was about to leave her magnificent home in Ottawa, to visit the scenes of her childhood, probably never to return to the West. After telling of her rough adventures with "Border Ruffians," who sought to kill her husband, and did burn their home, because of his Free State views, she then tells of the building of their fine mansion which took the place of the one destroyed, costing near $30,000. After describing the fine structure, she goes on to say:

"I recall the man who built it. His name was Damon Higbee, and he was an Atheist. But he built that house on honor, and it stands to-day as good as the hour it was finished. Higbee, although an Atheist, was a remarkably just and generous man. He grew rich. He had his cribs full of corn when there came a bad year, and the poor farmers, and those just starting, were in a bad way. Higbee sold them corn in preference to shipping it, although prices were high. The next year there was a great crop and corn was cheap. But Higbee allowed the farmers to pay him back the corn he had loaned them, bushel for bushel, regardless of price."

Would the saints who claim to inherit the earth, and think they should run its governments, have acted as nobly as did this earnest disbeliever, who rejected every feature of their creeds?

HARD ON THE PREACHERS.

It is lamentable that the clergy will not learn from experience, and abandon their ungodly work, when it is clearly apparent heaven frowns on their doings. The child is taught, as is the man, that God takes cognizance of all our acts. When he can no longer restrain his displeasure, he makes an exhibit of his anger by the destruction of the offender. Christian history is replete with such exhibitions of his wrath, while the Bible says he is a jealous God, not only punishing the offender with death, but following his posterity with curses to the third and fourth generation.

Over at Woodstock, a few miles west of Chicago, Rev. C. B. Wetherell, of the Free Methodists, on New Year's eve, commenced watch-night services. In some manner unknown to us he incurred divine disapprobation. Says the news dispatch:

"He had talked less than five minutes when he suddenly turned deathly pale, threw up his hands and fell across his pulpit unconscious. When carried out of the church he had every appearance of being dead and was believed to be past all medical aid. Physicians labored over him for hours, and several times gave him up as dead, but the powerful restoratives applied by them at last revived him and he slowly regained consciousness."

PRIESTLY DICTATION.

News comes from Montreal that the Catholic bishops of the province of Quebec are in a furor of excitement over the settlement of the Manitoba school question. They threaten disaster to any Catholic member of Parliament who approves of the settlement.

WHY NOT WEEP?

If we are to credit churchmen, the hope of the world is contingent on the conversion of sinners. If there are no conversions the race is lost; all will go down to a common ruin.

Dwight L. Moody, the revivalist, has better means for information in regard to the "salvation of souls" than has any other man. No well-informed Christian will controvert any statement he has made or may make on the subject. A late letter of his appears in The Independent, New York, in which he appeals to the clergy and the religious press, begging them to aid in getting the churches open every Sunday night for the preaching of the Gospel.

Why the urgency of this appeal? He bases it on an article which appeared in a previous number of The Independent, wherein it was stated:

"There are 1,400 Congregational churches in this country, and 1,750 Presbyterian churches which did not report a single accession on confession of faith during the year 1895."

Moody says: "This statement of The Independent has taken such a hold on me that I can't get it out of my mind It is almost enough to send a thrill of horror through the soul of every Christian."

Now this is an occasion for great big briny tears, and an abundance of them; but before we weep let us read him further. We quote:

"If this is the case with these two large denominations, what must be the condition of the others also? Are we all going to sit still and let this thing continue? Shall our religious newspapers and our pulpits keep their mouths closed like 'dumb dogs that cannot bark' to warn people of approaching danger? Should we not all lift up our voice like a trumpet about this matter? What must the Son of God think of such a result of our labor as this? What must an unbelieving world think about a Christianity that can't bring forth any more fruit? And have we no care for the multitudes of souls going down to perdition every year while we all sit and look on? And this country of ours, where will it be in the next ten years if we don't awake out of sleep?

"I wish some of you editors of the influential papers, who are in close touch with the ministers and churches, would tell us what is the matter. Is this the result of what they call 'modern criticism' of the Bible? Is this a specimen of the better times, when we would get rid of the old stories about Moses writing the Pentateuch, and the sun and moon standing still, and the fish swallowing Jonah?"

We need not copy the evangelist further. We have heard his convulsive sobs, and have been thrilled with his dolorous statement of facts, and we are really suspicious he smells a rat, and a decaying one at that.

FIFTH MONARCHY MEN.

In the leading editorial of December 19, a quotation was made from a letter of the late Archbishop Magee, of York, England, wherein he expressed his views of Christian Socialism, placing it on an equality with papacy, the Fifth Monarchy Men, and the Puritans of New England, each of whose teachings he condemned, and said they were destined to a certain and speedy failure.

A correspondent wants to know what is meant by "Fifth Monarchy Men," so we beg leave to refer him to Mosheim's Ecclesiastical History, 17th century, part 2, section 2, paragraph 22:

"The Fifth Monarchy Men arose during the administration of Cromwell, (1650 to '58) and were a set of wrong-headed and turbulent enthusiasts, who expected Christ's sudden appearance upon earth to establish a new kingdom. Acting on this illusion they aimed at the subversion of all human government and were for turning all things into the most deplorable confusion."

The Encyclopaedic Dictionary says:

"The Fifth Monarchists declared themselves subjects only of King Jesus. They held that a fifth monarchy would be established on earth under the personal reign of Jesus—the four preceding monarchies having been those of Assyria, Persia, Greece and Rome—and that no single person ought to rule mankind until he comes; but in the meantime, civil government should be provisionally administered by his saints."

Now that is precisely the position occupied by the God-in-the-Constitution movers of to-day. They want to make their Jesus Christ king, the Bible his law, and until he comes they are anxious the saints shall rule, and they are the saints.

SOUND ADVICE.

Geo. W. Foote, the efficient president of the Secular Society of Great Britain, lately in attendance on the Freethought convention held in this city, before leaving New York for home was interviewed by a representative of the New York Truth Seeker, at the close of which in answer to a question he expressed ideas often urged in these columns as important to Spiritualists as to Secularists. We copy:

"Keep your Freethought organizations free from all other questions. To add, in this respect, is to take away. The more planks you have in your program, the fewer people can stand on it, for what a man objects to is as important to him as what he agrees with. Politicians know this well, and go in for simple issues. Let us imitate them where they are wise. This does not interfere with individual freedom. Those who have special views of their own, in politics or in sociology, should advocate them on their own responsibility, or through organizations formed to promote such objects. One thing at a time is the policy of wisdom, and of success."

ANOTHER GOOD MAN GONE.

The painful news comes to us, without detail of facts, that our friend and faithful supporter of The Progressive Thinker, Morris M. Bostwick, Esq., of Milwaukee, late of Janesville, is no more. Mr. Bostwick was instrumental in organizing the Ethical Culture Society in the Cream City, and was made its lecturer and principal manager. He was a gentleman of great moral and social worth, and his loss will be severely felt by all who knew him. A letter from him to the writer, of date December 14, TOM MACHINE NINE was full of hope for his future work with the society, which he wrote had now some three hundred members. He gave no hint of impaired health.

Mr. Bostwick was educated for the bar, and was admitted to practice in the courts of Wisconsin; but his literary tastes led him to other fields of labor. He was some thirty-two years of age; was married about a year ago to a very worthy lady of Milwaukee, who we suppose survives him. His father is a prosperous business man of Janesville.

A GLIMPSE OF TRUTH.

It is really refreshing to get the first feeble glimmer of practical common sense and truth from the daily press of this country touching Turkish affairs. There has been a studied purpose to conceal the facts, and misrepresent everything pertaining to the distressed condition of that unhappy country.

The Chicago Chronicle of the 30th ult., in the closing paragraph of an editorial, shows that the writer was getting a glimpse, at least, of the wrongs the Christian powers are doing Turkey, and the source of the "exaggerations" they have set on foot. Would not the Anglo-Saxon term, lie, better fit the case than does the indirect, half apologetic, half ambiguous, by no means truthful, and wholly absurd word exaggeration? We quote the Chronicle:

"We have had in this country the grossest exaggeration of domestic emeutes (revolutionary outbreaks) in Turkey. They emanate for the most part from fussy, interested, self-consequential stipendiaries of missionary establishments. They are fomented and made much of by powers that wish to possess themselves of the territory and the power of the sublime Porte. These powers have been a long time badgering the Sultan. If they wish to kill him and extirpate his government they would better set about it, making no more moral pretenses."

THANKS.

A bouquet of beautiful flowers from "where rolls the Oregon" graces a vase on the table whereon we write. Thanks to the kind donors, with the hope that the choicest blessings of earth—health, home, friends and plenty—shall be theirs to the last moment of mortal existence, and that tranquility will mark their exit to that undiscovered bourne of which poets sing with glowing fervor.

TO BE ANGLICIZED.

It is said the Chinese government has determined to gradually Anglicize the Chinese people so far as language is concerned. If this could be done without borrowing our dominant religion, or defective moral code, it is very probable the country would be greatly profited. It is very apparent the English is to become the language of the world.

WELL KNOWN.

The poem, "The Moneyless Man," appearing in these columns on the 2d inst., came from the pen of Maj. Henry T. Stanton, Frankfort, Ky. It has had a place in our poetical scrap-book, with the author's name and addressattached, some thirty years.

TOO MUCH RELIGION.

Joel Deane, of this city, has just been sent to the insane asylum at Elgin, declared by Judge Carter and a jury with being afflicted with a religious mania. The poor fellow had too much religion, so it slopped over.

THE FREE-THOUGHT MAGAZINE.

The Free Thought Magazine for January is largely devoted to obituary notices of the late Samuel P. Putnam and May L. Collins. Mr. Putnam's most intimate friends, Messrs. George E. Macdonald, Thaddeus B. Wakeman and Dr. E. B. Foote, will each furnish an obituary notice of Mr. Putnam. Josephine K. Henry, the special friend and admirer of Miss Collins, will furnish a most graphic, interesting and touching notice of Miss Collins. A dozen of the editorial pages will furnish the most authentic life sketch of Mr. Putnam, that has ever been written, and also the latest revelations relating to the tragical death of these persons. Fine likenesses of these parties will appear. There will be a number of other articles by the ablest free thought writers of this country. The price of this magazine is fifteen cents, and it can be had of the publisher at Chicago, Ill.

A STARTLING FACT.

The Progressive Thinker was the only Spiritualist paper that had the enterprise to publish Prof. Barrett's address before the National Association Convention of Spiritualists We have his address, covering three pages, and five other fine addresses and articles, one by Col. Ingersoll, grouped in one paper, and we want to send out 1,000,000 of them. It is worth ten times its weight in gold.

Read the article on 5th page headed "Fifteen Cents."

THE SPIRITUAL ADVOCATE.

It is a bran new paper, just started at Cincinnati, Ohio, and we extend it the right hand of fellowship and good will, hoping it will meet with abundant success. It is well gotten up.

DREAM REVEALED MURDER.

Word comes from La Porte, Ind., that the solving of the mystery surrounding the whereabouts of Edward Fatters, who was murdered in Starke county, by William Sutherlin, who is in jail for the crime, is a strange verification of a dream.

Three weeks ago, Mrs. Isaac Martin, living near the scene of the tragedy, had a dream in which was vividly depicted the murder of a man and his burial under the carcass of a mule.

The horror of the dream awakened her, and thoroughly frightened, she told her husband of the tragedy revealed to her.

The matter preyed constantly on her mind, and when Fatters' disappearance began to be investigated the dream was again brought vividly to her mind, and to that revelation, so strangely and dramatically verified, is attributed the finding of the body of Fatters, search having been made for evidence of any newly-made grave in which might be buried a murderer's victim.

"Right Living." By Susan H. Wixon The author shows a wise practicality in her method of teaching the principle of ethics. She illustrates her subject with many brief narratives and anecdotes, which render the book more interesting and more easily comprehended. It is especially adapted for use in Children's Lyceum. In the hands of mothers and teachers it may be made very useful. Young and old will be benefited by it Cloth $1 For sale at this office.

"The Gospel of Buddha, According to Old Records," Told by Paul Carus. This book is heartily commended to students of the science of religions, and to all who would gain a fair conception of Buddhism in its spirit and living principles. Spiritualist or Christian can scarcely read it without spiritual profit. Price $1. For sale at this office.

"Religious and Theological Works of Thomas Paine." Contains his celebrated "Age of Reason," and a number of letters and discourses on religious and theological subjects. Cloth binding, 430 pages. Price $1. For sale at this office.

"Atlantis: The Antediluvian World. By Ignatius Donnelly Sums up all information relative to the lost continent of Atlantis. He regards the description of it given by Plato as veritable history If is intensely interesting. Price $2.

QUARTERLY MEETING

Of the Board of the N. S. A.

Interesting News from Washington.

TRANSITION OF MRS. MARY E. BABE—SHE BEQUEATHS HER ESTATE TO THE N. S. A.—FUNERAL SERVICES ATTENDED BY THE ENTIRE BOARD AND PARTICIPATED IN BY THREE NOTED SPEAKERS.

To the Editor:—Events of unusual interest have clustered around the quarterly meeting of the Board of the N. S. A., justifying an especial letter which must be brief, as doubtless more complete particulars will be sent.

Your correspondent learned from the secretary that all the members of the Board were present except one—Mrs. Pettingill, of Cleveland, who was detained at home, presumably through illness, but who sent a check for one hundred dollars.

President Barrett and Secretary Woodbury, as well as Treasurer Clendaniel, were, of course, at their posts.

Vice-president Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, and Trustee L. V. Moulton, came from their respective distant homes. Dr. Geo. A. Fuller, trustee, is regular speaker for the First Spiritualist Society this month, and was already here. Mr. Hickey came over from Baltimore. The Board then proceeded to carry out the instructions and business mapped out by the last convention, which was by no means a light burden. By subcommittees and instructions to the executive committee of the Board they managed to finish almost at midnight, Tuesday night. The appointments by the president of State agents and missionaries were confirmed for the year (none of any previous year holding good). Much business was done that the writer, of course, does not enter into.

Frank Walker, of Western New York, special agent of the N. S. A., on the Semi-Centennial Jubilee proposed in 1898, was a noticeable guest at Secretary Woodbury's during this week. Presumably he is here to report progress and receive instructions.

A very business-like air surrounds the headquarters and all the members of the Board, who waive all social engagements until their business is finished, even though friends implore.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary E. Babe was one of the features of the week. Mrs. Babe was a real "Mother in Israel," and her home has been the home of most of the speakers and mediums sojourning here for public work for years.

She has been a Spiritualist almost from the first, and was a devoted attendant at the meetings of the First Society of which she was a member. Past four score years, she retained her mental faculties unimpaired to the last, and until a year ago was seldom ill in body.

The services were conducted by Mrs. C. M. Glading, Dr. Geo. A. Fuller, and Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, who each spoke as only they can speak on such an occasion. Flowers (there was an absence of crepe and all paraphernalia of mourning) were the fitting surroundings and tribute of such a service and such a life.

The day after the service, T. J. Meyer, appointed by the testatrix, informed the president of the N. S. A., as did the morning papers, that Mrs. Babe had bequeathed her estates to the N. S. A., except two or three small bequests of money and personal property. The net amount is not known, as it is mostly in real estate.

MASS-MEETING AT BALTIMORE.

Availing themselves of the array of talent at the Board meeting, a mass-meeting was arranged for Thursday afternoon and evening at Suttro's Hall, Baltimore, a local revival being needed there, and the friends, including Mr. Frederick W. Fickey, one of the Board of the N. S. A., making every arrangement at that end of the line, while Secretary Woodbury, indefatigable ever, failed not in any one particular in bringing everything from Washington to complete the success; the officers and trustees of the N. S. A., which included the speakers for the occasion (any manager of any meeting of Spiritualists might like to duplicate the list), bringing speakers and singers, test mediums, and people, a special carload of the best people among Washington Spiritualists. The list of speakers was: H. D. Barrett, Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, Francis B. Woodbury, Hon. L. V. Moulton, Dr. Geo. A. Fuller, (all of the Board of the N. S. A.) and Mrs. Rachael Wolcott, of Baltimore. The test mediums were F. A. Wiggin and Mr. Homer Altemus, the latter of Washington.

The meetings were a success, the evening audience entirely filling the hall. All felt it good to be there, and the meeting closed amid the greatest good feeling and the certainty that much good had been done for the grand cause of Spiritualism and the work of the N. S. A.

The special train returned to Washington at midnight. The journey was enlivened by singing songs, conversation, and an occasional "how-how" from some "big Injun" through whose lips "deponent saith not;" for if one were to forget discretion and reveal the names, mo(u)lten vials of wrath would be poured upon one's head, and one could not avail one's self of Walker's line to escape al-l(h)e-mus.

A slight abrasion at the extremity of the secretary's olfactory organ suggested that explanations might be in order. With a hurried glance at his better half, he said he wood bury the hatchet if nothing more was said about it. A drowsy Washington policeman was startled into temporay interest by the arrival of the merry party at 1 a. m., but he soon relapsed.

As your correspondent bade them all good-bye and Godspeed to their distant homes, the thought uppermost was: This has been one of the most important weeks in the history of the N. S. A.

Politics tempts one to write a few lines, but time and space forbid.

O. W. W. G. T. B. T.
(One who was glad to be there.)
Washington, Jan. 8, 1897.

THE NEXT WORLD INTERVIEWED

The above work, a volume of The Progressive Thinker Library, is certainly very interesting, and contains but little, if any of the private earmarks of the medium-author, as is so often the case with similar communications. Unless the communications are genuine, in any case, the sameness, the medium's selfhood, will crop out in each to the detection of the ordinary casual observer, but, for instance, the notable distinction between Horace Greeley, Abe Lincoln, Agassiz and Charlotte Cushman, in this work, remains according to the separate individualities of earth-life, and each one seems to be in a continuation of their earth conditions at first consciousness over there. DR. T. WILKINS.

"Social Upbuilding, Including Co-operative Systems and the Happiness and Ennoblement of Humanity." By E. D. Babbitt, LL. D., M. D. This comprises the last part of Human Culture and Cure. Paper cover, 15c. For sale at this office.

SOLON AND MARY.

A SEQUEL TO

"Mary Anne Carew," Wife, Mother, Spirit, Angel.

BY CARLYLE PETERSILEA,

AUTHOR OF "THE DISCOVERED COUNTRY," "MARY ANNE CAREW," "PHILIP CARLISLIE," "OCEANIDES," ETC.

COPYRIGHTED BY CARLYLE PETERSILEA.

CHAPTER III.—Continued.

LIONS ON GUARD.

SOLON AND MARY VISIT DANIEL THE PROPHET, WITHIN THE HEAVENLY SPHERES.

"No;" replied Daniel, "he cannot see the atmosphere which surrounds his earth, he cannot see the various gasses which arise from it, he cannot see magnetism, he cannot see heat, nor cold, he cannot see perfumes, he absolutely cannot see anything except the most dense materiality which is revealed to his sight by the aid of electricity—for light is purely electrical—but, for light, he could not even see anything at all, although, all things might exist around him, as they certainly do on a very dark night, yet on such a night he can see nothing. He might answer, saying, 'yet if I cannot see material objects in the darkness, still I can feel them through the sense of touch; but, let such an one be paralyzed; where, then, is the sense of touch? yet the objects may be there just the same; and let him be deaf, and he can hear no sound; but, under such conditions, he would merely be confined within a prison house of clay, or materiality; as soon as he could make his escape he would find all his faculties as good as ever—with many others, of which he never dreamed, added thereto.

"Men called me a prophet, because I foretold disaster and ruin to an earthly king and his subjects. It needed not very great wisdom, on my part, to foretell disaster and ruin to a drunkard and libertine, a debaucher of the very worst type: When a man's body has become weakened and ruined, from any cause whatsoever, it is very easy to predict his overthrow; for any law, when once thoroughly understood, can be easily traced to its ultimate result: thus: if a man have wisdom, it is easy for him to be a prophet."

"But those in earth life," we said, "suppose you gained your power of prophecy directly from the Lord, or that the word of God was spoken through your lips; for it is written, 'thus saith the Lord.'"

"Well," replied Daniel, "wisdom was my master; and, Lord God, in the old Sanscrit, simply means, my master, or my king; and the words, 'Devil,' 'Satan,' 'Beelzebub,' simply meant 'evil,' 'wrong,' 'error,' in my time on earth, and by my nation. Let him who is well versed in the language of that time, used, by that nation, deny it if he can: He cannot! for well he knows that what I say is true. The word 'hell,' (or 'hades',) simply means pits, or pestilential, filthy places, where lepers, while still alive, were often thrown, to be tortured by the burning sun, insects, and crawling vermin, until they breathed their last. These pits were terrible places indeed—as I remember them, awful—Gehennas! They were usually at considerable distance from the city, and places were chosen for this purpose where there was a deep ravine, or gorge with precipitous banks; usually a sterile, rocky gorge, with a deep pool at the bottom, making it nearly impossible for any creature to escape, be it man or beast: here, dead, or dying animals, of all kinds, were carried or driven and thrown down: •cripples, maleformed children, those who had hopelessly broken their limbs, as well as the very aged, blind, and helpless, whose friends were not able to support them. Here also, were all kinds of refuse and filth from the city carried and thrown down; loose, filthy straw, together with the bed and bedding of lepers and those who had died of the plague; often as otherwise, the lepers, and those who had the plague, while they were yet alive. Thus festered the hells, hades, or gehennas; in other words, bottomless pits; for gorges were filled until nearly level with the higher land. These pits often became ignited from various causes, and would smolder and burn for months; and pits thus burning were preferred rather than those not ignited; the reason, of course, is obvious to anyone. How strange that any intelligent being should suppose that the imperishable soul of man, which cannot be injured by fire, could be cast into such pits, hells, or gehennas. Punishment was often inflicted by breaking the body and limbs of those who had offended and then casting them, alive, into the pits. Sometimes scores of people were thus cast in at one time; and hundreds would stand around the brink, looking down upon the horrible, writhing, tortured mass, hearing their cries, sobs, and groans. Husbands often cast their wives into these pits, if tired or jealous of them, or if they were worn out, sick and helpless.

"To be broken on the wheel, and then cast into hell was the proper punishment for all malefactors: crucifixion was not resorted to until a much later period in the world's history: But at last it was discovered that these hells were the cause of pestilence, and a king, wiser than the others had been, sent forth an edict, that the hells should all be fired, burned out root and branch, meaning the large and the small malefactors should be crucified, and afterwards entombed; all who could afford it should embalm their dead, and afterwards carry them to the mountains or hills, deposit them in caves or crevices high up among the rocks.

"This was heavenly or elevated compared with the former hells—but enough. Graveyards, of the present time are not much better than the hells of old; it is but the matter of a few feet of earth intervening, which does not hinder the same noxious exhalations, and before men are aware plague and pestilence, will lurk within the large cities. Do you consider this a prophecy, my Solon? It needs not very great wisdom to make such a prophecy. It would need but the words: 'Thus saith the Lord God: I will send pestilence, like a sword, among my people, and they shall cry unto the Lord God with a great cry; but I will turn a deaf ear, saith the Lord God, until they offer burnt offerings which shall arise like sweet incense to my nostrils, saith Jehovah; in other words, thus saith wisdom: Burn up your dead bodies, and all other filth, else they will breed pestilence among you. What a stupendous, religious fraud has been reared among men, because of misconstructions put upon our language of the olden time. The word soul is derived from sheol, or at first, the shee-ee-ee—which represents the blowing of wind—meaning the breath of man or like the wind—and it was thought that his breath, sheol, soul or ghost went out to join the wind which was like itself.

"Ah, my Solon, man is a little wiser at the present time."

"And yet," we said, "a spirit may prophesy through the mortal lips of one who is not very wise?"

"True," answered Daniel, "a spirit or an angel who is wise may speak through mortal lips that are not wise—the spirit of God or a wise spirit or angel, one who understands natural laws in all their various ramifications; and when that one speaks prophetic words he is but seeing clearly the result of natural laws. If a wise spirit prophesies the fall of a nation, in his wisdom he sees clearly the cause why that nation will surely fall; and thus of any other event. Sometimes his prophecies fail; and why? Because some unforeseen event transpires which counteracts the effect that otherwise would take place; for instance a man plants a field of corn; now, it might safely be prophesied that the corn would grow and ripen; that would be the sure result of a natural law, if no other law stepped in to counteract it; but the field of corn might be destroyed before it had eared or ripened; the prophecy in that case would fail, and thus of all other laws."

"The Christians, on earth," we said, "lay great stress on the prophecies of your time, and also those of Isaiah; saying that they foretold the coming of a Messiah—a Christ—who was to save mankind from the wrath of God: and they firmly believe that Jesus of Nazareth was that Christ, that he is a mediator between God and man; moreover, that he is the direct son of God. We would like to hear what you have to say on this subject."

"Solon," answered Daniel with great solemnity: "If you had lived on earth in the days of Isaiah, or myself, at the time we were in our mortal bodies, you also would have continually cried, with a loud voice, unto God or higher wisdom to send a Messiah or Savior to the wretched, miserable people of those times; not to save their spirits from hell after they had left their bodies—for the word spirit, as understood at the present time on earth, was not known among those people, neither did they know anything about a future life, and gave little or no thought to a life after death. The wretched creatures found but little time to think at all; their bondage was more cruel to them than death, hell or the tomb; they looked forward to death as a pleasant release from their awful slavery.

"To be slain by torture and cast into the pits, hades or hell was to them a fearful horror, and I think the people of earth at the present day would feel the same; but to have their bodies embalmed by their friends after they were dead and carried up into the hills and entombed, was to them paradise, and the wise men, or prophets of that time were continually crying out against the fearful torments which the people had to endure, and often with tears streaming down their cheeks, they called on God or higher powers, which the word really implied—Jehovah or Jah, the all-powerful—a power greater than that around them, to send them a good king, one who would save them from their terrible condition.

This is what was then meant by a savior or messiah, one who would save them from being cast into the pits or hells; in other words, one who would save them from the torments of hell; and these wise men or prophets tried to comfort and sustain the people by telling them that a Messiah would surely come who would save them; a son of wisdom or Jah—that is a King who would be wise and good and ease up their terrible bondage and sufferings.

"These prophets, or wise sympathetic men, were often destroyed as to their mortal forms; thrust into the dens of wild beasts, such as the lion, and tiger, or among wild bulls to be gored to death, and often to be trampled by elephants, if their sayings came to the ears of the king who might at that time be on the throne.

"To be cast into the lions' den, as you know, was my fate. The sufferings of the people were fearful—terrible in the extreme. The king and his court, or the favored ones whom he gathered about him, were supreme; the king held the people in utter subjection, and whatever the king desired for himself or his court must be forthcoming or the most fearful penalties were dealt out; so fearful were they that it passes description. To cut out the tongues of the people was considered a mild punishment; this was resorted to if the least complaint from them reached the ears of the king, or any of his courtiers or even of his soldiers; to burn out their eyes with an old lance heated to a white heat, was an everyday occurrence; to smear their hair with pitch and then set it on fire, was an amusement often resorted to, which caused uproarious mirth to the drunken courtiers and their more drunken king. Nearly all the trees had human bodies dangling from them, where they had been strung up for the least offense; they were often disemboweled alive, often their hearts were torn out, and flung to the dogs.

"The common people went entirely naked, except a little cloth about the loins, but the king's soldiers were clothed, armed, and equipped: the courtiers were clothed in purple and fine linen; the king in gorgeous apparel. Neither the king nor any of his courtiers or soldiers ever performed any labor; all labor for the kingdom, must be done by the people or subjects; and their bondage was most awful. The people themselves had nothing but the meanest huts to shelter them, and, but for their women; even these would not have been allowed them; but where such slaughter reigned, women must live and be sheltered in order that the nation might increase. This was the sole reason why women were not as barbarously treated as the males, but they were merely chattels, bought and sold whenever and wherever it pleased the king, his courtiers, or soldiers. Any girl who happened to be more beautiful, or comely than her companions, was at once taken by the soldiers before the king, and if she pleased him, she was immediately made one of his many hundred wives and concubines. Most of these were merely slaves of his household and of his whim; if they incurred his displeasure, they were whipped and turned over to his courtiers or soldiers. The soldiers did not marry but were allowed to do precisely as they pleased. No woman, or girl was secure from them except the king's favored wives, and these wives did not possess his favor long, for he changed them oftener than he did his clothes.

"The people's diet consisted principally of black bread made from grain coarsely ground between stones by the women, and baked in the coals or hot ashes, a little goat's milk, and sometimes small portions of goat's flesh, together with palm-oil; this was all that was allowed them as food; yet the women often gathered herbs, in other words common weeds of any kind which were not poisonous, and after cooking them, often set them before their husbands, together with the black bread; for this the husbands were very grateful, for with a little of the palm-oil poured upon them they gave refreshment and strength and were quite palatable.

"Women were compelled, by the edict of the king, to bear children from the commencement of puberty to the last, as many as were possible to them, under penalty of the most awful punishments if they did not. It mattered little to the king by whom they were begotten; to be prolific was enough; for this reason alone women were not put into the labor gangs, but remained within their huts, to care for and nurse their infants and small children and each was often the mother of twenty or more. A woman who was not the mother of fifteen at least was despised and held to be of little account. As soon as women ceased to bear children they were sent forth to toil in the fields—the king's fields. The mothers at home were compelled to weave and spin, for the king and his household, every moment they could spare from the necessary care of their little ones, and that care must not be overmuch, just enough for them to live and grow.

"Small children were comparatively well used, but this was merely for the growth of the nation. As soon as a boy reached ten or twelve years he was immediately taken before the king, and if considered strong and comely, was turned over to the soldiers to be drilled, if not, sent forth to perform what labor was possible for a youth of that age. These boys were made up into gangs, performing minor labor. Youths were not as badly treated as adults, for it would not do for youths to perish from off the face of the earth, else the nation would die out, and a youth was seldom or never broken on the wheel, but woe to the same after he had passed his twentieth year, or had become a bearded man.

"Now the people had not one luxury, hardly even the least comfort, and each and every one must toil from the early dawn until darkness set in, which, in those countries, is very soon after sunset. Midday meal they had none, unless the careful mother or wife had stealthily rolled a small piece of black bread into the girdle, and if this was eaten at all, it must be by stealth; for each gang of laborers was overlooked by one of the king's spies—and many were kept for this purpose. Besides, each hut was visited daily by the soldiers or spies, and everything not strictly in accord with the king's orders was immediately reported to him, but if not considered worthy of so much trouble punished on the spot after the methods before mentioned.

"The laborers performed all the work for the kingdom, built the city, which consisted of the king's palaces and religious temples wherein to worship idols. Walls surrounded the city. There were elegant residences for princes and courtiers, mosques and towers, gates, and archways. They dug moats and trenches; they toiled in the king's fields; they were hewers of stone; well diggers and carriers of water; workers in iron and brass; they made mortar and burned bricks; they planted and toiled in the king's vineyards; they were keepers of his fat cattle; forsooth, all things belonged to the king or khedive; he was the Lord God, the Jah, the all-powerful of his nation, and all things were for his especial pleasure.

"The people were like dumb cattle, kept in utter ignorance and subjection; toiled, from early dawn until nightfall, in complete silence, not being allowed even the privilege of speech. If one dared so much as utter a protest his tongue was immediately cut from his mouth.

"Now, my Solon, go tell the people of earth that Daniel the Prophet is not mistaken, for he lived on earth at that time and among those people; he, from early boyhood, had been one of the king's courtiers, and frequently a favored one, but being of large brain and sympathetic heart he could not be blind and deaf to the bitter miseries of the people, and he often opened his mouth, predicting the fall of the king, and the saving of the people; that a good king, or messiah, would at length come to reign over them; that there was an invisible power greater than the kings which would send them such a king's which would send them such a savior.

(To be Continued.)

TO CUBA IN A COCKLE SHELL.

Tony Schlosser of St. Louis is a devout believer in Spiritualism, and at the behest of one of the supernatural influences that guide his daily conduct he has just embarked upon an expedition that would be classed by the life insurance companies as extra hazardous. He is now pedaling his way down the Mississippi. Just how far Tony goes always depends on the spirits which Schlosser insists have taken the contract to guide him. The last trouble these spirit guides caused Tony was a few months ago, when they ordered him to save his wages as a stonecutter in Cairo, Ill., and build a boat wherein he should start for Cuba, since the spirits intended him to fight the Spanish.

So Tony built a craft in which he will try to reach New Orleans. Tony himself expects to go on to Cuba, but people who have seen his strange craft hardly expect to hear from Tony at any point beyond New Orleans.

The mariner is forty years old, and came to this country from Westphalia when nineteen. At Detroit, from which city Tony went to Cairo about four months ago, he built a similar boat, in which he managed to keep right side up on the Detroit River.

The voyage in a small craft down the Mississippi is not without its perils, for the great yellow stream is frequently swept by storms that pile the water up into waves that make even the big sternwheel steamers, with their immense freeboard, tie up in a sheltered nook along shore. That Tony Schlosser could cross the gulf from New Orleans in his frail craft is doubtful, for the gulf is not always pacific. Tony's enthusiasm for his trip has exited many other young men in the towns along the Mississippi, and they yearn for an opportunity to make their way to "the ever-faithful isle," there to fight for the independence of Cuba. Indeed, a Cuban recruiting officer could secure hundreds of eligible young men in the middle west and south. Times are not good, and the chance for adventure, coupled with an opportunity to achieve fame on the field of battle, has aroused a martial spirit all through the west. Schlosser's voyage, if it is not ended by disaster, will attract as much attention as did the trip down the Ohio and Mississippi in a rubber suit made years ago by the swimmer Paul Boynton.

"The Priest, the Woman, and the Confessional." This book, by the well-known Father Chiniquy, reveals the degrading, impure influences and results of of the Romish confessional, as poved by the sad experience of many wrecked lives. Price, by mail, $1. For sale at this office.

SPIRITUALISM SCIENTIFICALLY DEMONSTRATED.

BY PROF. ROBERT HARE.

His Remarkable Researches Made in the Early Years of Spiritualism.

Directly Edited and Revised by Him, Now in Spirit-Life.

These arrangements being made, an accomplished lady, capable of serving in the required capacity, was so kind as to assist me by taking her seat behind the screen, while I took my seat in front of the disk.

I then said, "If there be any spirit present, please to indicate the affirmative by causing the letter Y to come under the index." Forthwith this letter was brought under the index.

"Will the spirit do us the favor to give the initials of his name?" The letters R H were successively brought under the index. "My honored father?" said I. The letter Y was again brought under the index.

"Will my father do me the favor to bring the letters under the index successively in alphabetical order?" Immediately the disk began to revolve so as to produce the desired result. After it had proceeded as far as the middle of the alphabet, I requested that "the name of Washington should be spelt out by the same process." This feat was accordingly performed, as well as others of a like nature.

The company consisted of but few persons besides the medium, who now urged that I could no longer refuse to come over to their belief. Under these circumstances the following communication was made by revolving of the disk: "Oh, my son, listen to reason!"

I urged that the experiment was of immense importance, if considered as proving a spirit to be present, and to have actuated the apparatus; affording thus precise experimental proof of the immortality of the soul: that a matter of such moment should not be considered as conclusively decided until every possible additional means of verification should be employed.

This led my companions to accuse me of extreme incredulity. The medium said she "should not deem it worth while to sit for me again," and one of the gentlemen sat himself down by the fireside, declaring me "to be insusceptible of conviction, and that he would now give me up."

Nevertheless, the medium, relenting, gave me another sitting at her own dwelling a few days afterward; when I had improved the apparatus by employing two stationary weights by which the cord actuating the pulley, as in the drill-bow process, was made to pull it round by a horizontal motion of the table supported on castors, instead of the tilting motion.

The results confirmed those previously received, my father reporting himself again. He said that my mother and sister were with him, but not my brother. I inquired "if they were happy." The disk revolved so as to bring the letter Y under the index, signifying the affirmation.

On the following week, I took my apparatus to the house of a Spiritualist, where a circle was to meet. The apparatus being duly arranged, a lady whom I had never before noticed, and by whom my apparatus was seen for the first time, sat down at my table behind the screen. The spirit of an uncle who had left this life was invoked by this medium. Her invocation being successful, the spirit spelt his name out in full; other names were spelt out at request.

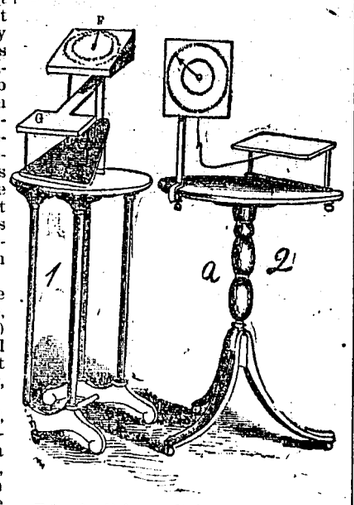
Although the requisite letters were ultimately found, there was evidently some difficulty, as if there was some groping for them with an imperfect light. This has been explained since by my father's spirit. He alleges that preferably the eyes of the medium would be employed, but that, although with difficulty, he used mine as a substitute.

But although, with a view to convince the skeptical, spirits will occasionally give manifestations when the vision or muscular control of the medium is nullified, it is more difficult for them to operate in this way; moreover, it is more difficult for some spirits than for others.

Those spirits by whom I obtained my test manifestations were interested in my success. Others have refused to aid me in like manner. One who assisted me with much zeal, has communicated that he would work my apparatus when arranged for a test; but, that as it caused much more exertion, and, of course, retardation, he advised that the test arrangement should not be interposed when it could be avoided.

this would make the experiment abortive, as it would remove the condition by which alone independency of interference by the medium was secured. However, it soon occurred that by means of a metallic plate, made quite true, and some brass balls, like billiard balls, with which I was provided, I could neutralize the power of the medium to move the table, so that she could not influence the selection of the letters, though permitted to see them.

Accordingly, as soon almost as the medium placed her hands on the plate resting on the ball, and without any other communication with the table, the disk began to revolve in such a way as to bring the letters under the index in due alphabetic order. Afterward various names were spelled, and communications were made. At subsequent sittings, the grandfather and brother of the medium manifested their presence successively by spelling their names on the disk. My father, by means of this apparatus, gave me the name of an uncle who was killed by the Arabs nearly seventy years ago. In order that, without any possibility of contact with the legs, the medium might sit at the table, the length was subsequently extended to six feet, being so made as to separate into three parts, for convenience in carrying from one place to another. It is under this modification that is represented in Fig. 2 accompanied by a description, with the medium sitting as when employed in obtaining some of the manifestations herein mentioned. On the left may be seen the wheels and axle. The front wheel may be distinguished, with its groove securing the band which embraces it, together with the pulley on the disk.



The disk represented in this figure differs from the one represented above, (employed in my first investigations,) in having the alphabet in the usual order. But they are so made as that one can be made to replace the other, when requisite.

On one side of the long table Fig. 2, a board or tray on castors is represented. This was used sometimes as a support for the hands of the medium, by its being interposed between them and the table. On one occasion, where the hands of the medium were supported by the plate and ball upon this tray, it was moved briskly to and fro upon the table, the hands of the medium and the ball and plate accompanying the motion.

On various subsequent occasions I have had this experiment of putting the hands of the medium on a plate and balls repeated, and with the same result. The interposition of the plate and balls makes it much more difficult for spirits to move a table than when the hands are directly applied. In the latter case, the spirits actuate the hands primarily, and the table or apparatus secondarily; but when the hands are incapacitated from influencing the motion, the spirit has to assail the inanimate matter directly, assisted only by an emanation from the medium. In this attack upon ponderable matter, the spirits of the second sphere are the most capable; but even with their assistance, the condition of the medium must be very favorable to render success possible.

I next resorted to an apparatus like the plaything called a seesaw, excepting that the fulcrum, instead of being under the middle of the board, was situated at one-fourth of the whole length from one end. There was one foot on one side of the fulcrum, and three feet on the other. The disk and its axle was transferred from the table, Fig. 1, near to the longer end of this seesaw-like apparatus. The cord attached to two weights was employed as above described, so that as the disk was made to rise or fall with the vibration of the board by the action of the cord, a revolution took place, bringing the letters successively under the index, as already explained to have resulted from the movements of the table.

The disk being situated edgewise to the medium, the letters could not be seen. Under these circumstances, the hands of the medium were placed upon the surface of the smaller portion of the board outside of the fulcrum. The disk

Pease's disk, or dial apparatus, associated with a vibrating lever and stand contrived by myself. The whole, thus modified, has been named the Spiritoscope.

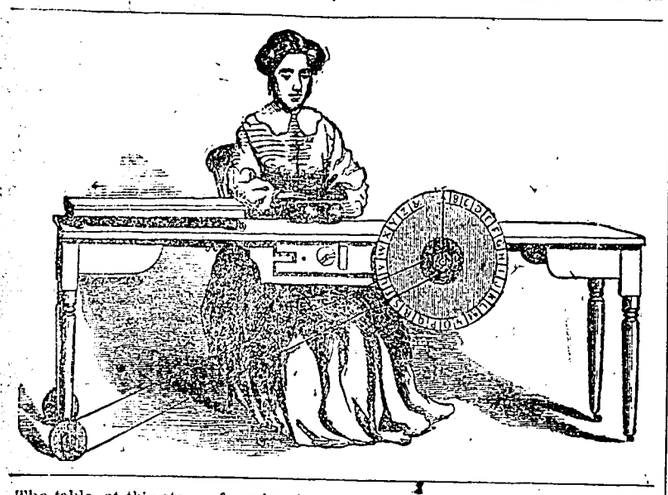
(c) The apparatus thus designated consists of a box F, which is a miniature representation of a low, square, four-sided house, with a single sloping roof, but without any floor closing it at the bottom.

(d) On the outside of the part serving as the roof, the alphabetic dial is depicted. On the inner surface of the roof board, the spring, pulley, and strings are attached, by which the index is made to revolve, so as to point out any letter.

(e) G represents the vibrating lever upon which the medium's hands are placed. When test conditions are not requisite, her hands should be situated so that merely one-half may be on each side of the fulcrum wire, on which the lever turns. When test conditions are requisite, the hands should be altogether on the portion of the board which is between the exterior end of the board and the fulcrum. When thus placed, it is utterly impossible to move the lever so as to cause it to select letters, or to control the selection, by any spirit who may be employing them to make a communication.*

(f) Not only are the letters of the alphabet printed equidistant, in due order, on the margin of the disk or dial-face; there are likewise words, the digits, and notes of music.

(g) The words are as follows: Yes—Doubtful—No—Don't know—I think so—A mistake—I'll spell it over—A message—Done—I'll come again—Good-bye—I must leave. These words are printed on equidistant radial lines, nearly dividing the area between them. The digits are printed on radial lines intermediate between those on which the words appear.



Five concentric circular lines, dividing the margin into as many smaller portions, as in music paper, serve for the inditing of musical notes; respecting which the directions are given by Pease upon a printed slip of paper pasted inside.

(h) The index in this instrument is secured upon the outer end of a pivot supporting a pulley of about ¾ of an inch in diameter. The spring consists of a coil of brass wire, of which one end is fastened into the inside of the roof-board (c) of which the outside forms the surface for the letters, etc., while the other end of the wire is prolonged beyond the coil to about 2½ inches, and, by means of a loop, has a string of catgut tied to it securely. This string is fastened to a perforation in the pivot. Another piece of the same kind of string is fastened to the circumference of the pulley. The pivot being turned so as to wind upon it the string proceeding from the spring, and thus constraining it make it capable of effectual recoil from the pulley, the latter may, with a little care, be made, as the spring recoils, to wind about it another string duly attached to its circumference. The strings being thus wound, (one to the right, the other to the left,) when the string attached to the pulley is pulled from the outside of the box, it is unwound therefrom, and meanwhile winds that attached to the spring upon the pivot. The reaction of the spring, when left to itself, reverses this process, producing the opposite revolution in the pulley. The index attached to the pivot of course turns in one direction or the other, as the pivot is actuated by the drawing out or retraction of the string which proceeds from it. This, at the outer end, is tied to a ring, which prevents it from receding into the box.

At a is represented the same disk, so arranged as to be affixed to any table of moderate dimensions. The fulcrum on which the lever vibrates is so made as to be affixed to one of the table's edges by clamps, while the disk, situated in a vertical plane, is supported by a bar which has a clamp to secure it to the table, while to the disk it is fastened by being introduced into square staples, made to receive it securely, in a mode resembling that by which a square bolt is secured. Under the vibrating lever, a hollow wire is fastened by staples, so as to receive a solid wire, which can be made to slide farther in or out, and thus adjust itself to the distance.

(To be Continued.)

Golden Laxative Coffee cures constipation. 50 cents a package. Golden Laxative Coffee Co., Ayer, Mass. 373

The table, at this stage of my inquiry, was not more than thirty inches in length. I had improved the construction in the following way:

Two of the legs were furnished with castors, through holes duly bored. Through perforations in the other two legs a rod was introduced, serving as an axle to two wheels of about five inches diameter. One of these wheels was grooved, so as to carry a band which extended around the pulley of the disk. Hence, pushing the table nine inches horizontally by the necessary rotation of the supporting wheels, caused the disk to make a complete revolution. It was while the table was of the size above mentioned, that I first saw the violent action to which they might be subjected without any corresponding or commensurate visible cause. The hand of the medium being laid on the table at about half-way between the center and the nearest edge, it moved as if it were animated, jumping like a restive horse.

Having my apparatus thus prepared, a medium sat at my table, the screen intercepting her view of the disk. No manifestation took place through the disk, though other indications of the presence of spirits were given. Hence, inducing the medium to sit at an ordinary table, I inquired if any change could be made which would enable them to communicate through my apparatus? The reply through the alphabetic card was, "Let the medium see the letters." At first it struck me that revolved to and fro, so as to bring the letters under the index in due alphabetic order. Moreover, while this process was under way, to render the result more unquestionable, I interposed a screen between the disk and the eyes of the medium, without causing any arrestation of the process.

Afterward, upon the table supported on wheels or castors, and moving the disk by a band, I used a tray on castors to support the hand of the medium.

When the hands of the medium, or those of any other operator, were placed upon this tray, it was impossible to move the table by means of it, because much less force would make it move on its castors than would move the table. Sometimes the tray would be moved backward and forward with rapidity, the table remaining quite still. Yet, on urging that the table should be moved, this desideratum would be conceded, and the tray would become stationary, relatively, to the table. On one occasion, when an intelligent spirit was manifesting, I interposed a brass ball (Fig. 1) and a plate between the tray and the hands of the medium, and then requested that the tray might be moved. My request was obeyed; the tray moved repeatedly about a foot to and fro, accompanied by the hand of the medium, the ball remaining at rest, relatively, to the tray.

Having my apparatus at the residence of the lady by whom it had been actuated in the third trial above mentioned, this lady sitting at the table as a me-

NO WONDER INGERSOLL RIDICULES US.

A STRONG APPEAL FOR COMMON SENSE TO BE APPLIED TO THEOLOGY—CHILDREN MUST UNLEARN WHAT HAS BEEN TAUGHT THEM—THE TROUBLE IS INSIDE THE CHURCH, NOT OUTSIDE—MOODY IN HIS TEACHINGS DRIVES AS MANY PEOPLE FROM THE BIBLE AS HE DRAWS TO IT.

It is grand to see the progress being made in religious thought, especialy when a sermon scintilates with telling points. At San Francisco, Cal., Rev. Mr. Rader lately sermonized before a large audience at the Third Congretional Church. He struck right and left. A number of ministers were present. He chose for his subject, "The Garden of Eden and the Fall of Man." The full text of the discourse is as follows:

In discussing the Garden of Eden and the first sin we will consider the creation of man, his antiquity, in the light of science, the direction and significance of his fall, whether from savagery to perfection, or from perfection to savagery—or both, with an interpretation of the theology of the first chapters of Genesis.

Let me restate my belief in the Scriptures which I hold to contain God's word; in the inspiration of the scriptures, which deal with God's relation to man and man's relation to God in the historical method of Bible study, which is the study of each author or period in the light of their own culture. I believe in the heights and depths of inspiration, conditioned by the circumstances in which the writing was produced. The Bible is not a graigie, but a landscape broken up into magnificent mountain peaks of vision and glory, so that the "Chronicles" are not equal to the Gospel of John, nor the Song of Solomon to the Epistles of Paul.

The Bible is not a forest of equal texts into which we may go, and cut down a sapling here and a sapling there, and come out laden with "proofs" to support some dogma of the church. No passage can be studied apart from the conditions producing it, and this is the historical method of study. No man has more respect for this Bible than I. To me it is becoming more and more a volume of power. It is not a miracle or a fetich, it has a history, is the result of hundreds of years of evolution, the product of the Christian consciousness.

My desire is to study the story of the fall and get at the majestic theology which is enfolded in the narrative.

EDEN.

The picture of the Garden of Eden is traditional and seems not to have originated on the soil of Palestine. Other religions beside the Hebrew and other nations than the Jewish have narrated the tradition of Eden.

It pictures the best thought of the primitive mind respecting the fall of man. The author of Genesis was not inspired in science. God was not just then dealing in science. He was trying to unfold himself to an early people, and these people grasped his idea and set their faith in the immortal pictures which make up the background of Genesis.

The hebrew mind is theistic—that is, it believes not in many gods, but in one God. It nowhere claims infallibility in geology or astronomy. The Bible is not a universal authority.

THE BUILDING OF A MAN.

In all architecture the structure of a human being is at once the most wonderful and fearful. "No poem in stone" is equal to this physical palace. No mountain is so sublime, no delicate system of natural laws has the cunning of his hand, no star the twinkling miracles of his eye. His body once rocked in the cradle of an almost invisible cell: now it stands erect, the master of the world. He is crowned with mind, that subtle storehouse of facts, the throne of power, the reservoir of genius, which reaches out and brings forces to obedience. It utters itself in speech that pours its thunder along the ages, like cannon echoes, in lasting art, in civilizations and systems. Wonderful is man! But more wonderful is the eternal within him, that which sings and weeps and dreams and loves and lives forever and ever.

How long was this human cathedral building? Was it made like a flash of lightning or by evolution. Is is miracle or law? Whence and how came this deathless personality?

It is not within the scope of my thought to trace back mind to its earliest dawn, to the moment it first flushed the brain with the light of consciousness. The author of Genesis tells us of two stages in the making of a man, the first is the stage of dust, the second that of soul. The scientists say no more. If that is evolution, then I am an evolutionist. The why and wherefore of evolution, an uninspired psychology has not made plain. God made man, apparently, according to law, but just how he has not told us. Neither have the Berkeley professors. The truth to be remembered is that God created man out of the dust of the earth, and printed his image upon him in the type of his own breath.

THE ANTIQUITY OF MAN.

Neither the Bible, nor science, tells us how long man has been upon the earth. Everywhere he has preceded history, everywhere we find him a savage, battling with winds and beasts, and struggling with his environment. First a savage with his rudest implements, then a hunter subsisting on his prey then as an agriculturist with flocks and herds and tiller of the soil, and finally as a scientist and artist. Primitive man is shrouded in mist. Before Abraham there was no Hebrew chronology. The tendency now is to locate man upon the earth thousands of years before the time assigned him by Usher's chronology. Much of this is speculation. It is generally conceded by experts that man lived about the time of the glacial period. No essential doctrine of morals is affected by the long or short duration of man upon the earth.

The chronology of the Egyptians traces his history back about 6,000 years, the date of the Hebrew.

The approximate estimate based on the deposits of the delta of the Nile—an estimate based on a calculation that each century leaves a deposit of six inches, beneath which is seaweed, still saturated with salt, indicates a period of duration nearly 6,000 years.

But there are evidences that man has been on the earth a longer time. The remains of implements, skulls, stalagmite floors, lake dwellings, cave dwellings are remains associated with the drift period, prove man was on the earth during the glacial era. Niagara river has cut its channel of seven miles, and according to the best scientific testimony it required 7,000 or 8,000 years for its work—the lapse of time since the breaking up of the ice age. Man as man, however, is recent, compared with other creatures. Assuming the accuracy of the date of the flood, it is shown that the whole race could have been produced since then.

The remains of the famous skull found in Table Mountain, Cal., with the remains of a mastodon, and the now celebrated Calaveras skull discovered by miners, lead to the opinion that in all probability the Californian is older than Adam, I am not enough of a scientist to be dogmatic on these discoveries, but believe that there are evidences to vindicate that man has been upon the earth longer than 6,000 years.

WAS ADAM A SAVAGE?

Was Adam the lowest type of a savage, just out of animalhood, or was he a perfect man, the model for all time? What was his moral status, his mental power? I give three answers:

One is that he appeared on the summit of creation, the perfect man, innocent and complete, the ideal of God. He begins at the top, but plunges down, and is still falling because of his organic relation to the race. He falls from perfection to savagery, as a snowflake falls from cloud to mud. His problem, henceforth, is his ultimate restoration to his God. This aspect of the fall, believed by many races, has located the Golden Age back of the Garden of Eden.

2. The other answer is this: That the first man began at the base of the mountain in savagery, in primitive culture, without implements or knowledge or civilization, and that his fall was a fall upward. Thus the traditions of China and Peru accept this solution. This coincides with the theory of development. Out of it grows the optimism of the world, the belief in the final victory of man growing out of the lower into the higher.

3. The third favors the idea that man began at a point between these extremes, and according to the laws of evolution and degeneration, went both directions, both up and down. This accounts at once for the genius of a Shakspeare and for the lowest barbarian who eats his brother and has teeth twice as long as his forehead is high.

The savage of to-day is not identical with primitive man as we know him. Adam was not perfect, except in innocence. He was the child of the race. He stood between the two extremes, having a character which the savage has not, in order that from the primitive moral foundation civilization could proceed. How shall we account for the savage? Men have grown from savagery to civilization, but never from civilization to savagery. The "dangerous classes" never become savages. How shall we account for them? Must we go back to study the nature of primitive man to find grounds for his existence?

The Bible does not give us a very clear photograph of the first man, but we see enough to infer that his intelligence was very primitive. The sphinx expresses the heathen view of man. The human countenance rises out of the savage form of an animal. That is development. Michael Angelo had the same thought in a riper age, when he lay upon his back in the Sistine Chapel and described creation on the ceiling. A human form of magnificent strength is half-rising from its recumbent position, as if just awakening to conciousness, "and reaching out its hand to touch the outstretched finger of God." That is religion.

THE STORY OF THE FIRST SIN.

In interpreting this story I lay down but one law—the law of common sense. Let us be reasonable. From childhood we have read the story of Eden. We have imagined the garden, its mystical trees, the great serpent, and we have imagined Adam, and Eve created from his rib. And to some of us this is very real; and we have defended its literal meaning and stood for "the inspiration of the Bible" and had visions of strange things in a far-off land, at the beginning of time. And we have taught our children these things, and they have believed literally these traditions, and your son goes out to the Park on Sunday, and his father, your husband, remains away from church because they have grown to distrust these fabulous facts, so-called, and copies of Ingersoll creep into their libraries, and they turn to popular skepticism for intellectual relief.

It is all a stupendous mistake. Thousands of children must unlearn to-morrow what they learn to-day, and the process of unloading knowledge is always perilous; a thing should be learned properly in the first attempt. Men will not accept the inspiration of the Bible if we cover it with superstitions. I plead for reason in religion, for downright, honest thinking in the pulpit and in the Sunday-school. The false interpretations which have been given these sacred traditions have done more harm than infidel attacks. The trouble is not outside the church, but inside. At heart men are reasonable; they think, and I believe they are honest; but they will turn away from literalism; they like flowers better than botany. We make sport of John Jasper, the Richmond colored preacher, who insists that the "sun do move," but there are many Jaspers. You will pardon me if I say that it is my opinion that that splendid evangelist, Mr. Moody, would double his influence among thoughtful people if he were to pour on more light upon his Bible. When he declares that the Bible stands or falls upon our belief in the story of Jonah (which has a great truth in it), then I venture the remark that he drives as many people away from the Bible as he draws to it.

The location of the Garden of Eden has been a subject of discussion. The round earth has been searched for its ancient site. The oldest nations in the East have been ransacked. President Warren of Boston University has written a book locating it in the vicinity of the North Pole.

The trees and the serpent have been much discussed. Only last week I read an article which supported the theory that the snake was empowered with speech, stood erect and talked, whether he spoke in Arian, in classic Greek, in German or in Latin, the writer did not state.

It is no wonder that Mr. Ingersoll ridicules us, and compels great audiences to laugh at the interpretations of the church, which holds to the crude literalism of the Bible. It is not my purpose to enter into the mystery of Paradise, to define the serpent, or outline a doctrine of the Devil. It is enough to say that "by one man sin entered into the world, and so death passed upon men, for all have sinned."

This tradition is almost universal among the earlier races. It is found in the myths, and allegories of ancient tribes. The Bundehesh preserves the characteristic features, recorded in Genesis. Traditions of the serpent reach back to a time before the separation of the ancestors of the oldest nations.

When the race was in its kindergarten this pictorial representation was used to indicate the early, mysterious moral disturbance of the race. The principle of Genesis, the desire to reach to the cradle of life, is as native to mind as apocalypse and the vision of the throne of God.

The Scandinavian myths tell of a garden in the midst of the world, where was perfect innocence and where grew the fruits of immortality. But Loki, the tempter, was there, and foreign fruits were the means of his seduction. On Assyrian bas-reliefs are pictured the sins of Eden. A stone cylinder in the British Museum shows a man and a woman facing each other on the two sides of a tree, from which hang two great fruits, while they stretch out their hands to pluck them. Behind the woman is an erect serpent. On Roman sarcophagi and early Christian art and on the famous vase found by Cesnola, now in the Metropolitan Museum, New York, are carrings which prove the traditions of the earliest people respecting the first sin, though the origin is not clear.

The Garden of Eden is a traditional conception wrought over by the Hebrew genius.

THE THEOLOGY OF EDEN.

What does it teach? It teaches this, that somewhere sin disturbed the character of man, which disturbance has jostled the universal race; that sin is disobedience, the penalty is separation from God; that God begins to save man as soon as man begins to sin. It teaches farther that depravity is unnatural; that it is not total, and that man's first estate was one of happy innocency. It further teaches that man has the power of choice, the moral ability to choose between right and wrong. The garden presents the two, and with them the impulse, the motive, represented in the serpent. Without entering into the origin or permission or explanation of sin, or without attempting to trace the history and genealogy of the Devil, the first chapters of Genesis go thus far, and no farther. They teach monotheism—one God. It matters little to me whether Eden is at the North Pole or in Southern California; whether there was a snake or a garden; whether the apple was sweet or sour; whether Eve was made out of Adam's rib or out of dust; whether there were two trees or an orchard of apples; whether Adam was a low savage, or a genius, or whether this is legend or fact. The water from a spring is just as sweet from a cocoanut shell as a cup of gold; the truth is as precious in legend and story as in fact and history, and when told in either form I bow before God who reveals it.

I believe that the great majority of church-going people have sacrificed these majestic truths for the sake of their orthodoxy, and that ministers and teachers have evaded the grains in this golden sheaf of Hebrew wheat. Popular skepticism can only be answered by absolute frankness in the pulpit, and in the Sunday-school and in the home. If we find a legend in the Bible, let us in the name of God's eternal truth, have the courage to call it by its right name. We have been running Sunday-school excursions under, above and around the Garden of Eden. We have talked to our children in an unknown tongue, and we have been raising up a generation of doubters. It is all wrong. Let us be fair. The Bible will not be destroyed. It will live resplendent and magnificent long after our orthodoxy shifts its base for another's orthodoxy.

This book of Genesis has truth in it, uttered in ancient legend, expressed in picture and allegory. But it is a truth which has impressed the world. The book of Genesis is like one of the old oriental wells, where the camels came and sheperds with their flocks. It is rustic and primitive, but the water is pure and divine.

Or, to change the figure, this book looms up against the sky of idolatry, against polytheism like a clear cut peak of granite. There it stands at the threshold of the church. It is the portal of history. It is "sounder" than the men who make pretensions to defend it. Defend what? The truth?—no, but their opinion of the truth, the traditions of the church, the wrong and pernicious interpretations of the Bible.

I stand for the spirit of the Bible, which is the infallible word of God. I do not stand for the letter, which is perishable. I stand for the hope that some day, the spirit rising out of the burning sands, entangled with sin and lower nature, will be free, in the freedom of Christ, in the liberty of the sons of God.

WHY REMAIN IN IGNORANCE.

You should read Col. Ingersoll's masterly address. You should read Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond's two lectures on "Spiritual Unfoldment" and "The Dwellings of the Dead." You should read about the Roman Octopus and "The Night the Light Went Out," and above all you should read President Barrett's Address before the National Convention of Spiritualists.

For full particulars read the announcement on the 5th page headed "Fifteen Cents."

"The Molecular Hypothesis of Nature." By Prof. W. M. Lockwood. Prof. Lockwood is recognized as one of the ablest lecturers on the spiritual rostrum. In this little volume he presents an succinct form the substance of his lectures on the Molecular Hypothesis of Nature; and presents his views as demonstrating a scientific basis of Spiritualism. The book is commended to all who love to study and think. For sale at this office. Price 25 cents

"Human Culture and Cure. Marriage, Sexual Development, and Social Upbuilding." By E. D. Babbitt, M., D., LL.D. A most excellent and very valuable work, by the Dean of the College of Fine Forces, and author of other important volumes on Health, Social Science, Religion, etc. Price, cloth, 75c. For sale at this office.

"Encyclopedia of Biblical Spiritualism: or a Concordance of the Principal Passages of the Old and New Testament Scriptures which prove or imply Spiritualism; together with a brief history of the origin of many of the important books of the Bible." By Moses Hull. The well-known talented and scholarly author has here embodied the results of his many years' study of the Bible in its relations to Spiritualism. As its title denotes, it is a veritable encyclopedia of information on the subject. Price $1. For sale at this office.

"Human Culture and Cure. Part First. The Philosophy of Cure. (Including Methods and Instruments)." By E. D. Babbitt, M. D., LL.D. A very instructive and valuable work. It should have a wide circulation, as it well fulfills the promise of its title. For sale at this office. Price, 75 cents.

FIFTEEN CENTS!

PROF. BARRETT'S ADDRESS.

Other Subjects Treated of Especial Interest.

The Progressive Thinker is to be sent three months for 15 cents to all New subscribers.

Spiritualists, keep posted in current Spiritual events.

Why remain in ignorance? Why don't you keep posted in regard to the great Spiritualistic movement? Prof. Barrett delivered an address before the National Association of Spiritualists. It was an important one, and should be read by every Spiritualist in this broad land. We have had his address (which covers three pages of The Progressive Thinker) and five other important lectures and articles embodied in one paper, which we propose to send forth to illuminate the minds of those who have not had an opportunity to read them.

The first page of this paper contains he lecture by Col. Ingersoll, given in a Chicago pulpit. It scintillates throughout.

The second page contains a highly interesting lecture by Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, on the "Dwellings of the Dead."

The third page has a splendid article on "Science versus Theology," in review of Andrew D. White's two superb volumes.

The fourth page has another excellent lecture by Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, on "Spiritual Unfoldment."

The fifth page is very suggestive throughout, and is devoted to the "Hindoo Teachers—They Will Try to Capture the United States."

On the sixth page commences Prof. Barrett's admirable address, occupying three pages. In order that all whom this notice may reach, can secure this address, as well as the other lectures and articles, we have made arrangements to have 10,000 copies printed to be sent out free to new-trial or new yearly subscribers. This paper is well worth 25 cents. Every Spiritualist who wishes to know what has been going on should carefully read it. Our regular subscribers have, of course, had the contents thereof.

We will also, in connection with this paper, send out another equally as valuable. The first page contains an excellent lecture by Virchand R. Gandhi, a learned Hindoo. The remaining seven pages contain the wonderfully thrilling narrative (founded on facts) entitled, "The Night the Light Went Out," exhibiting many of the inside workings of the Catholic Church. Besides the address by Mr. Ghandi and the remarkable narrative, "The Night the Light Went Out," the first page has an excellent communication obtained through Ouija. The second page has a startling statement in reference to the "Romish Octopus—It Is Winding Its Poisonous Coils Around Washington." The poem on the same page, "The Sad Picture of a Wrecked Human Life," is wonderfully suggestive. The third page has a striking illustration showing how the Romish Church treats heretics. This page and the fourth also have a continuation of the "Romish Octopus." The fifth page has that remarkable poem, "St. Peter At the Gate." Every freethinker should read it. It is full of excellent "points." It also contains interesting facts in reference to the Romish Church and offices. The sixth, seventh and eighth pages have the following: "Monasteries and Convents—Where Those Alive Are Entombed." "Rider Haggard and the Immuring of Nuns." This paper alone is well worth the price of a year's subscription.

Every Spiritualist in this broad land should have these two papers. Our regular subscribers have already read their contents. For Fifteen cents we will send the Progressive Thinker for three months to all New trial subscribers and also send these two valuable papers.

Bear in mind that by New subscriber we mean one who has not been on our list for at least three months. Those of our present subscribers who wish to buy these two papers can have them both now for five cents. All of our regular subscribers have read their contents.

Send The Progressive Thinker three months to some friend, and thus get him interested in the cause. Stamps taken on small orders.

VERILY, WHAT NEXT?

Under the head of "A New Programme," we announced a radical new departure from the general routine of work assumed by the average Spiritualist paper. We do not follow old established usages unless we are thoroughly convinced that they are the best, which is very rarely the case. We established the original dollar Spiritualist paper, and introduced a new era in the line of Spiritualistic journalism. Others have followed after us, but in all candor the only thing in which they have equalled us, is in the price of the paper—one dollar.

We now have three books which we send out at a nominal cost to our subscribers: The two volumes of the Encyclopaedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit-World, and The Next World Interviewed. The three volumes will be sent out to those who remit a year's subscription to The Progressive Thinker on the following terms:

The Encyclopaedia of Death and Life in the Spirit-World, when ordered singly, will be sold at 50 cents per copy. The Next World Interviewed at 35 cts. Those who order the three books at one time will get them as follows:

Vol. I. of the Encyclopaedia	$ .45
Vol. II. of the Encyclopaedia	.45
The Next World Interviewed	.35
Total	$1.25

NO. OF PAGES IN EACH BOOK.

Vol. I. of the Encyclopaedia	400
Vol. II. of the Encyclopaedia	400
The Next World Interviewed	250

Each of these books is neatly and substantially bound in cloth, and printed on fine paper, and as prices go, are well worth one dollar per volume.

Bear in mind that this Library is being formed for the exclusive benefit of our subscribers, and all orders for one or more of these books must be accompanied with a year's subscription to The Progressive Thinker. To all others the price will be one dollar per copy.

Just think of the great good that will be accomplished by this plan which we have outlined. Tell your neighbors about it, and get them to subscribe for The Progressive Thinker.

Remember, please, that in order to obtain these three books for $1.25, you must send along a year's subscription to The Progressive Thinker; the paper one year, and the three books costing $2.25. It is the subscription to the paper that enables us to send you these three books at cost.

..GENERAL SURVEY..

THE SPIRITUALISTIC FIELD—ITS WORKERS, DOINGS, ETC., THE WORLD OVER.

Bear in mind, please, that we cannot publish weekly reports of meetings. Whenever a change is made in speakers, or anything of special interest, send us a brief item, please. A great deal can be expressed in a dozen lines; but long reports will not be used. Meetings are of local interest only. We extend a cordial invitation to all speakers to send in their appointments to lecture, and general movements, which will be read by at least 40,000. We go to press early Monday morning, and items must reach us as early as Friday or Saturday in order to have immediate insertion.

Communications must always be accompanied by the full name and address of the writer, or no attention will be paid to them.

John Friel writes from Applegate, Placer county, Cal.: "Another year is coming, and many years in the past has the paper come to me; in sunshine and clouds, drouth and moisture, the faithful paper came, like some incentive to us all to a stability of purpose, never wavering because of clouds or shadows at times. I love the energy, the power that stands behind the paper; the patience, loving goodness of heart and soul of its editor. May you be truly happy in '97 and all other years."

Frank T. Ripley, lecturer and test medium, having gotten over his serious illness, is now at Union City, Mich., and can be engaged for February and March. Address all letters to Union City, Mich., for January.

John Berkshire writes from Des Moines, Ia., that in the absence of regular society meetings, "quite a number of our home mediums opened their parlors for the holding of seances, with good results; notable among the number, Mrs. Bemiss, who has for her guides a band of spirits of a high order, and the friends who attend her circles are always well repaid. Mrs. Mary E. Camp, one of our best mediums for missionary work, and who has been a public medium for a number of years, never fails through her controls to please and give words of encouragement to all who attend her meetings."

H. W. Boozer writes from Grand Rapids, Mich.: "Co-operation with phenomenal demonstration is part of the work of the Band of Harmony here. This, with oral efforts, and the special agency of music as a teacher of Spiritualism's truths, is our work. We have had a feast indeed in the presence of C. E. Winans, of Edinburg, Ind., with his manager, A. Norman, in materialization, slate-writing and light seance physical manifestations. Results have been surpassingly fine, and many truth-seekers have new light. Give mediums harmonious conditions, and the masters of forces in the beyond will not fail to prove our claims."

Rhoda M. Benham writes from Michigan City, Ind.: "Will you say to Farmer Riley that I think he would do well in this city if he would come here on his way home. Mr. Riley would do a great good here."

G. H. Brooks began his second engagement this season with the Unity Spiritual Society of Milwaukee, Wis., the first Sunday in January. Though the weather was very unpleasant, there was a good attendance. He is to remain with the society for January and February. He is located at 558 Milwaukee street, where all letters and telegrams will please be sent for the two months. He will respond to calls to attend funerals.

Mrs. H. L. Bigelow writes: "The Children's Progressive Spiritual Lyceum of San Jose, Cal., had a very pleasant time on the 27th ult. A Christmas tree was prepared, and beautiful and useful gifts were to be seen, and after a fine programme by the scholars—calisthenic exercises and march—the presents were distributed, and the children followed the leader into the dining-room, where they found an excellent lunch spread for them, as well as a large company of the members who wished to stay to the quarterly business meeting of the society. In the evening Sister Sarah Seal gave her last lecture for the present. It was a masterly effort from one of her guides. The society have engaged for the coming month Sister Georgia Cooley, of Portland, Oregon, who comes highly recommended as a speaker and medium."

Mrs. Scott Briggs writes: "This number (December 26) will be found especially interesting from the first to the last page. I read Miss Collins' lecture with much interest. I was perfectly charmed with 'Solon's and Mary's visit to Benjamin Franklin in the heavenly spheres.' I learned what constituted an angel—sensible, reasonable, instructive. I do not see why the female should lose her identity, though; she seems quite as necessary to complete and round out Franklin as he is necessary to her; yet while they are one, why not connect their earth names, so that while visiting Franklin, we may identify the woman? She might be an old friend; at least known to us through history."

Mrs. R. R. Jones, of Laurel, Cal., wishes to add her testimony to that of others, as to the honesty of the Brockway Family. She writes: "I had highly satisfactory sittings with Mrs. Brockway while the family was in San Jose, Cal. I know she used no fraud in my case."

Wm. A. Thompson relates how his family and two others were mobbed by the instigation of "Christian" people, because they were investigating Spiritualism, in 1871, and says: "I cannot think any sane man or woman with the information I have of the persecuting spirit of the churches, aided by my experience, can ever wish to affiliate with any society calling itself 'Christian,' or 'Christian Spiritualist.'"

May Ayres, secretary, writes: "The fourth annual midwinter meeting of the Michigan State Spiritual Association will be held in Lansing, February 5, 6 and 7. It will be a mass-meeting of National and State, with the National president, H. D. Barrett, with us. Full programme will be published later."

Wanted—Good test mediums and speakers. Those traveling on the higher planes preferred. Teachers that can teach the higher degrees of the philosophical parts of Spiritualism in plain A, B, C language. Apply to Wm. Kline, president New Orleans Spiritual Society, 537 Canal street, New Orleans, La.

Mrs. Lois F. Drake writes from Toledo, O.: "The First Alliance of Progressive Thought Society has been having very successful meetings the past month. Frank T. Ripley has occupied the rostrum, and had good houses. He gave good satisfaction, and returns in February. Through the month of January the society has Dr. Adah Sheehan. She comes highly recommended, and they expect to have full houses and a feast of good things for the soul."

J. A. Wertz writes from Alexandria, Ind.: "Our cause is prospering in this section. This is the home of Mr. Jessup, the well-known trumpet medium. He has just returned from Richmond, Ind., where he held a series of very successful seances, resulting in the conversion of quite a number of prominent persons to the grand truth of Spiritualism. Five years ago there were only three or four Spiritualists in this place. There are about one hundred now."

Lilias Thomson writes from Portland, Ore.: "The First Spiritual Society of Portland, Ore., held its annual meeting for the election of officers, on Sunday, December 27, 1896. Mr. L. A. Lesourds in the chair. Minutes of last meeting read and approved. Reports of recording secretary, financial secretary, corresponding secretary and treasurer were read and approved. The following members were then nominated and unanimously elected to office: W. W. Sproul, president; E. A. Marshall, first vice-president; W. H. Addis, second vice-president; Mrs. N. P. Thompson, third vice-president; Mrs. Lilly Jolly, recording secretary; Mrs. Lilias Thomson, corresponding secretary; Armin Beautikoffer, financial secretary; Miss Maud Thompson, treasurer. The above constitutes the executive board of trustees for the year 1897. After a few short speeches from the newly-elected officers, and a vote of thanks to the retiring ones for their faithful services, the meeting adjourned. We hope to be instrumental in giving to Portland spiritual food, and to awaken a new interest in Spiritualism, so to further that end, we would like to have all speakers and mediums who are desirous of visiting the West, where there is a fine field for workers, to write to Mrs. Lilias Thomson, 556 Union avenue, North, or to the headquarters of the First Spiritual Society 291 Alder street, Portland, Oregon."

Mrs. E. A. Parker writes of the good work going on at Flint, Mich., where there is a society organized under the State laws, and which has excellent music, conference at 3 p. m., closing with satisfactory tests. The best families in the city attend the conference and meetings. Lectures by Mrs. A. E. Sheets, of Grand Ledge, at 7 p. m.

H. J. Rich writes: As we have organized a society at Overbrook, Kansas, please let the world know that our light is burning brightly, and is not hidden under a measure, but is ready to shine for all truth-seekers. Mrs. E. A. Mabee, of Topeka, Kansas, is our pastor for this year. We are deeply indebted to her for the efficient work she has accomplished at this place. Our president is Jacob Hey, who is a well-known and diligent worker for the cause we love so well. Long live The Progressive Thinker. So say we all."

Mr. Oscar A. Edgerly, who has just closed a most successful engagement with the Lynn, (Mass.) Spiritualist Association, was, with his charming wife, tendered an informal reception at the home of Dr. and Mrs. G. W. Fowler, upon the highlands, on Saturday, evening, December 26, last, during which, with many other pleasing and profitable exercises, participated in by the officers and members of the above society, resolutions were unanimously adopted and afterward ratified at the Sunday meeting by the large and intelligent audience present. These resolutions present Mr. Edgerly as an able and eloquent exponent of our cause, an excellent test medium, and an affable, courteous gentleman, endorsing him in all respects, and recommending him to other societies.

K. Wright sends the following from Cripple Creek: "I must have The Progressive Thinker, for it is the only spiritual food I get from the earth-side, and we can starve the spirit as well as the body. I have taken the paper ever since the first issue, excepting four months when I was sick and was too poor to pay for it, and I intend to get it as long as I stay on the earth-plane. I look for its coming every week as for some well-beloved friend, and if it is beyond Thursday night coming I am so disappointed. May you live long, Mr. Editor, to work for the spirit-world."

At Hygeia Hall, corner of Paulina and Washington boulevard, Mrs. Thomas held a watch-night service to welcome in the New Year. Our Prohibition brethren held a meeting that lasted until 10 o'clock, when the hall was well filled with Spiritualists who were addressed by Mrs. Thomas, whose power of harmonizing an audience is rare and unequaled. The feature of the evening was Prof. Ferris' address on the outlook for 1897. Professor Ferris is a mystic and a Socialist, and he predicted the co-operative Commonwealth in the near future, as the way out of all social troubles.

W. H. Bach writes from Springfield, Mass.: "The children's lyceum connected with the First Spiritualist Ladies' Aid Society of this city, celebrated Christmas at the Ladies' Aid hall, Tuesday evening, December 22. To say that the evening was an enjoyable one does not begin to express it at all. The cantata introduces several Christmas songs, Santa Claus and his attending spirits, a Christmas tree and a moral lesson. All of the parts excepting Santa Claus were taken by children of the lyceum. After the play, Santa Claus with the assistance of the conductor and Mr. F. J. Hart robbed the tree of its load of goodies, and in response to the call the members of the lyceum came forward, and with shining eyes and flushed cheeks returned to their places to compare notes as to Santa's selections for each one. None were forgotten; every one had a present of some kind. Picture books for the younger ones, dolls, fancy tissue paper boxes for the larger girls, and books of natural history and travels for larger boys, and to cap the climax a fancy tissue paper fringed box of candy, figs, dates and raisins for each scholar. The older attendants were not forgotten either. Fancy cornucopias were made, presenting a fine appearance by their blended colors, and each one, filled to the brim with candies and other goodies, were handed to those in attendance, old and young, who were not members of the lyceum. Mrs. H. G. Holcomb, who has been the honored president of the Ladies' Aid Society for a number of years, was called up and received a beautiful sunflower emblem, it being the Maltese pendant in solid gold, presented with the best wishes of the Ladies' Aid, and as an appreciation of her work in their interest. Mrs. Bach and myself desire to express our thanks to all those who assisted in making the entertainment a success, and especially to Miss Magoon, who presided so acceptably at the piano. These things will make our lyceums a success. It is not so much the want of books, papers, or anything else as it is the want of workers who will take hold and aid such movements. Then children's lyceums will be a success and incidentally meetings will have increased vigor."

A. K. Sisson, president, of 55 Comfort street, Rochester N. Y., writes: "The Rochester First Spiritual Church proposes to hold an anniversary meeting, March 28, 29 and 30. A large popular hall will be secured and paid for by the local Spiritualists, and given free to the convention of friends of the cause desiring to organize a State Association of Spiritualists during the day sessions March 29 and 30. The First Spiritual Church of Rochester has authorized me to call this convention, and I hereby ask all who can or will attend to at once let me know. We will endeavor to entertain two local delegates officially, appointed by each organized society in the State. All others will obtain special hotel and boarding-house rates."

Secretary writes: "Friday, December 18, at the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. Gifford, 14 North Lincoln street, Chicago, over forty persons assembled to enjoy a social evening, the occasion being to assist the First Society of Spiritual Unity's Children's Progressive Lyceum. Great credit is due to Sisters Sears and Calmus, who were the acting committee on invitation, and to Brother and Sister Gifford, whose bright home was the place of warm greeting and welcome to all who entered into the festivities of the occasion. Many thanks to the mediums who aided in spreading the spiritual menu."

Lucina N. Flint writes from Edwardsburg, Mich.: "About three weeks ago we succeeded in getting here Joseph King, of Pipestone, Mich., a materializing medium. He gave us two seances. At the first one there were twenty-three perfect forms, all recognized, made their appearance. The second night sixteen came. We consider him a good, honest man and a gentleman; also a fine medium."

Geo. F. Perkins, lecturer, singer and test medium, will answer calls near to Chicago. Address him at 587 N. Clark street, Chicago.

Spiritualist meetings are held every Sunday evening at Lincoln Turner hall, Sheffield and Diversy avenues, by Mr. and Mrs. Carl A. Wickland, with a view to organize a Spiritualist society among the Swedish-Americans at Lake View. Speaking and tests in both English and Swedish.

TOM THIRTEEN MACHINE

Mattie E. Hull writes: "I occupied the platform for the First Spiritual Society in Portland, Me., three Sundays in December. I met good audiences—the friends were quite enthusiastic over my work. I lecture in Waltham, Mass., January 24. I do not intend to go out of New England during the winter. I will send dates of positive engagements in a few days."

The following is from The Freethinker, published in London, wherein Mr. G. W. Foote, the editor, in his Editorial Notes from America, while writing of the magnificent meeting in Central Music Hall, which formed the closing session of the Freethinkers' Congress, in Chicago, says: "The next speaker was Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, a Spiritualist—preacher to the Church of the Soul in Chicago. Her fine presence was set off by tasteful costume—rich but not gaudy; and her eloquence was of the highest character. She spoke as a woman should speak. A woman loses charm when she loses repose; fierce declamation, which may suit a man's more powerful physique, sounds unnatural from her lips, and turns her into a monad. Mrs. Richmond avoided this mistake even in her strongest passages. She never raised her voice much, but produced her effects by modulation. Her elocution was perfect, and her address was replete with fine thought and feeling. She dwelt upon the points she had in common with Freethinkers, praised their noble championship of liberty, and, above all, their consistent non-recognition of any difference between men and women in the service of humanity. Mrs. Richmond sat down amidst rapturous and well-earned applause."

Mary Wilson writes from Fort Worth, Texas: "For the past month Dr. E. H. Denslow has lectured to the First Spiritualist Society of this place, giving under inspiration some of the ablest lectures it has been our good fortune to hear. As the inspired words of love and wisdom fell from his lips, we could feel curtain grow thinner that separated us from the spirit-world. It can truly be said of him that good deeds bear fruit, and in the fruit are seed that in their turn bear fruit and seed. We commend Dr. Denslow to all Spiritualists in Texas and elsewhere. He is an honor to our cause, and should be welcomed by all Spiritualists with outstretched hands to their hospitable homes, and in their temples of worship."

T. J. Marks writes from Princeton, Ill.: "In this quiet little city of 5,000 inhabitants there are fifteen churches and a Y. M. C. A., with a probable attendance of 2,500; and not more than half of this number are active church workers. There are, perhaps, not more than twenty-five Spiritualists, and they, too, are inactive, so to speak; at least there has not been a meeting of any kind held here for a very long time. The question now arises, why would this not be a good field for active workers? I believe if a good medium and lecturer could be induced to come into our city, that a great amount of good could be done, and there is little doubt but many who are now skeptical, would be added to the number of Spiritualists, and a good society organized. Mediums and lecturers who are passing through this city en route, not having all of their time occupied, would doubtless profit by stopping off here and arrange for a series of lectures. May we hear from some one soon."

Mrs. Mary C. Lyman, speaker for the First Society of Spiritual Unity, has moved from 189 Park avenue to 32 Park avenue, third flat. Receptions every Wednesday evening at 8 p. m. will be given. All friends who are interested in promoting the good of Spiritualism are invited to attend these social gatherings, where mortals and immortals work to keep the gates ajar between the two worlds.

Veritas writes: Geo. V. Cordingley has kindly tendered to the medium, G. G. W. Van Horn, who is favorably known, a testimonial benefit to be held at Lakeside Hall, corner 31st and Indiana avenue, January 19, Tuesday evening, at 8 p. m. Many noted mediums of this city have volunteered their services in the production of various phases of mediumship. A programme will soon be issued. Tickets on sale at Sunday meetings. Price 25 cents. Friends of this worthy medium are requested to attend, as there will be a first-class entertainment given, Mr. Van Horn will retire from the field soon to engage in his former business as photographer. Please secure tickets in advance to financially aid the same, and oblige."

"Woman, Church and State." By Matilda Joslyn Gage. A royal volume, of more than common intrinsic value. The subject is treated with masterly ability; showing what the church has and has not done for woman. It is full of information on the subject, and should be read by every one. Price $2, postpaid.

"The Fountain of Life, or The Threefold Power of Sex." By Lois Waisbrooker. One of the author's most useful books. It should be read by every man and woman. Price 50c.

ITEMS FROM LIGHT, OF LONDON, ENGLAND.

John Ruskin says: "The more I think of it, I find this conclusion impressed upon me—that the greatest thing a human soul ever does in this world is to see something and tell what it saw in a plain way."

Hundreds of people can talk for one who can think, but thousands can think for one who can see. To see clearly is poetry, prophecy, and religion all in one.

My experiences in Spiritualism have been to me the fulfillment of a prophecy of my early days, before I knew anything whatever of the nature of its claims.

Seeing the edifice of orthodoxy tottering to its fall, built as it were on sandy foundations of tradition and priestcraft, I felt that somewhere beneath the waves of theological controversy there was solid rock on which to rest the edifice of a religion based on scientific investigation; in a word, that our positive thought would find written upon the constitution of man himself the story of his origin and destiny.

I feel it, therefore my duty to record the fact that it was Spiritualism that saved me from the inevitable tendency of my nature and pursuits towards materialism, and to some extent even now influences me strongly in my investigations.

I have decided preference for the materialistic method of investigation over the ideal or Spiritualistic one, and find in modern Spiritualism itself, as "Bassille" states it, a reconciliation between Spiritualism and materialism.

As I stated once to a friend, I shall cling to the materialistic (or experimental) ladder, all the way up to the summit of all possible attainment in knowledge, and even when that fails me I shall, doubtless, instinctively feel out towards the void for it. It has been my good fortune not to depend originally on this or that medium for the phenomena, as I have witnessed these things in the strict privacy of my own home through members of my own family, so that the reality of mediumship has been proved under conditions where doubt would either resolve itself into infidelity to these members of my family or that breach of trust in the integrity of natural law (and in human nature as its highest expression), which Sir D. Brewster said is the foundation of the whole world of science.

I have little faith in the supposed freaks of so-called subliminal consciousness, whilst I positively decline to believe that the Devil of orthodoxy has the power to ingratiate himself in the inner self on purpose to play the fool with the outer self.

Prior to my experience of any mediumship outside my own home, we had table movements and messages unknown to any of the sitters; spirit lights have floated about the room, visible to everyone, and as distinct as an ordinary gas flame; hands have grasped me and other sitters; my piano has been lifted without contact; a materialized form has been seen by two persons at the same time; and on two occasions I have seen materialized hands when we were not sitting.

My wife at times is clairaudient, and can carry on conversations with spirit people. She has been controlled by spirits passing through death by fire and drowning, and for three weeks was entranced, and remembers her visit to the spirit spheres and some whom she saw and conversed with, at the same time seeing her body controlled by other intelligences.

I saw a cloudy form moving near my bedside and felt a hand passed over my face, whilst my wife, the only occupant (besides the two children) in the house at the time, was entranced. When she is controlled by my little boy he tells me that his mother is in the room standing by me, or sometimes floating near her entranced body, and she tells me herself, when she has come out of trance, that she has seen and heard our dear little boy controlling her.

I cannot better finish this rapid sketch of the phenomena than by giving in detail the most startling of the whole, viz., the apparent passage of matter through matter.

One Sunday evening a few of us were sitting at Mr. Craddock's home when under a low gas-light the medium passed into the cabinet entranced.

There was no way out of the cabinet except through this door down to the cellar, and there was no way out of the cellar except up the grid in the front street. The front door was locked, and there was no one in the house but those who occupied the seance room.

I held the curtains together in front of the cabinet with my hands, and also with my feet on the floor, awaiting for the medium's guides to proceed with the ordinary phenomena. We waited some time, and nothing occurred, as we thought, I opened the curtains to see if the spirit friends were going to do anything, when to my surprise I saw the medium in a cataleptic state (with the cabinet, with his feet and his hands still fast behind him) suspended horizontally across the top of the cabinet, with his feet and head just ledged on each end of about two inches of boarding.

I opened the curtains for all the sitters to see, and closing them again, I was hoping that he would be put on terra firma at once. Hearing no movement for some time, I opened the curtains again, when to our consternation we found the medium was missing altogether, and the cellar door was undisturbed.

I closed the curtain again, when we all heard the Indian control, "Foebear," dancing the entranced medium in the next room, out of which he came when the door was opened, still entranced and his hands still tied behind him.

At another time I found him missing from the cabinet, and heard him in the bedroom over the roof of the cabinet, to which he must have passed through the seance room by me had he gone in the ordinary way, which he certainly did not.

On June 23rd, 1891, we had placed a pen and ink and a book on the end of the piano nearest the cabinet, and the arm and hand of a lady came out and wrote the word "Rosetta" on the fly-leaf.

ITEMS FROM THE FREETHINKER, LONDON, ENG.

When the Nonconformists see that secular education is the true solution of the religious difficulty, we shall accord them both our sympathy and support. Meantime shilly-shallying tactics will not frighten the common enemy—clericalism.

In an ancient Greek fable we are told of an old woman who sits at the gate of life presenting to all who enter a cup which diffuses through every vein a subtle poison that will cling to them for the rest of their days. The old dame, in our interpretation, is religion, which gets hold of the mind of the child while yet unable to reason, and so indoctrinates it with the belief in its mysteries and dogmas that the sound food of reason is forever saturated by the poison, unless it can be purged by a drastic dose of ridicule.

The Prince of Wales evidently does not heed the Catholic stories that Freemasonry leads up to devil-worship, since he has again accepted the headship of the body in England, where Freemasonry is almost congested with its own extreme respectability.

Irrational Broad Church Rationalists assure us Satan is only an allegory. But they will not admit that all the angels, so often referred to in the Bible, were also allegories, or that Satan's divine antagonist is only an allegory.

We commend to the notice of Light what the Catholic Review has to say of Spiritualism. It observes: "The fourth annual Convention of the National Spiritualists' Association of the United States and Canada was held on three days of the past week at Washington, D. C. Among the delegates were a number of Freethinkers, men and women, and a bust of Thomas Payne (!) was set before the President's desk.

The Catholic Review says: "The very chronology of Freemasonary is a denial of Christianity; for instance, we have a Masonic address to our Lord Mayor (of Dublin) dated, not Anno Domini, 1876, but Anno Lucis, 5876."

At the entrance to Buddhist temples in Japan stand two huge figures of ferocious appearances. Their office is to guard the sacred precincts from the approach of evil spirits. These images are commonly seen spotted all over with pellets of paper. "A worshiper writes his petition on paper, or, better still, has it written for him by the priest; chews it to a pulp, and spits it at the divinity. If, having been well aimed, the paper sticks, it is a good omen."

There are a variety of curious customs connected with spitting, many of which are mentioned by Mr. Wheeler in his Footsteps of the Past (pp. 108-9). He illustrates the story of the clay and spittle used by Jesus, from a number of savage and barbarous customs.

The Crescent of November 25 gives the names of five converts to Islam made in Liverpool in the month of November alone.

Dr. Thackeray says there are six thousands of unemployed clergy; but the English Churchman considers this "surely a serious exaggeration."

The Catholic Review says: "The utter impotency of Protestantism to convert pagan countries to Christianity is most strinkingly indicated by the experience of England in India. For a hundred years England has had control in India, with the invariable result of Protestanism in all heathen countries—that is, the enlightening of the people and removing the moral restraints imposed upon them by their own religions, without substituting the moral restraints of Christianity." For Catholics, with their teaching of absolution, to talk of moral restraint is rather rich.

The Christian Leader, of Glasgow, says that the census which it took of church attendance in that city shows a decrease which is "simply alarming" when contrasted with that of ten years ago.

Everywhere we find the rule to hold good, "Like people, like gods." The gods cannot be better than the people who make and worship them. And as all these gods were the product of men or of people in their earlier, more ignorant, crude, and brutal state, it is but reasonable to expect—that the gods, creeds, and religious systems of any people will be found inferior in character, more crude, brutal, and irrational than the people themselves.

ITEMS FROM THE SPIRITUAL REVIEW, LONDON, ENG.

Two species of divination were employed by the Greeks; one claimed to be the direct voice of the gods, speaking through human lips, and the other was said to be evolved by the performance of certain mysterious rites, in which prayers, music, and ceremonies were practised, and the words spoken seemed often to respond to the thoughts or inquiries of those that attended upon the prophet or prophetess.

Sometimes these "sacred" personages fell into trances, or were seized with a sudden frenzy, and gave forth strange and oracular prophecies; or spoke of hidden things in voices different to their own; and sometimes by actions which spoke plainer than words.

Cicero says: "They whose minds, scorning the limitations of mortal bodies, fly off into higher realms than earth, when inflamed by music, or incited by some divine ardor, they behold things and destinies, not of human, but divine origin. They can then predict the future of men and nations, and tell where and how the dead yet live, and, from the paradises of Jove, or the realms of Pluto, bring words of remembrance, love, or warning, to the earth, and give wise council to all who listen.

In addition to "gods" and "demi-gods", every department of the Universe was supposed to be filled with spirits, who were termed "demons," an appellation that applied to good and evil souls alike.

Hesiod, the renowned Greek poet, thus refers to this universal belief. He writes:

"Ten thousand holy demons rove
This breathing world, the immortals sent from Jove,
Guardians of men, their glance alike surveys
The upright judgments and the unrighteous ways;
Hovering they glide to earth's extremist bound.
An ariel cloud, all veils their forms around."

Also it was taught that at death, the soul, clothed in its life principle, but invisible body, goes to enjoy Paradise for a season, or to suffer in Hades (Hell) until all its earthly sins are expiated. Then if the Judges of the dead decreed it to return again to the earth, it entered into flesh existence in accordance with its improvement.

But the souls of the good that had no further need of earthly trials, went to join the Gods in "Elysium." There the never-setting sun, the brilliant stars, the ever glorious scenes of paradisiacal beauty, made up the Heaven of the pure, the good, the brave, and true.

Delightful music and enchanting scenery enlivened these realms of the blest. There the husband rejoined the beloved wife, the children and parents were united; in short, a bliss transcending all language to describe, made up the realms of the first paradise, and pointed ever onward and upward to the realms of eternal bliss beyond.

Even the worst ill-doers of earth might—as the classical writers alleged on the faith of classical prophets and prophetesses—repent, become reformed in the realms of Pluto, and commence life afresh on another step higher on the path of progress, cannot but be a more offensive and "pagan" doctrine to the present High Church dignitaries who condemn every creature outside of their own two-inch creeds to a torture destined to last through all eternity, to which no being with a human heart would condemn a worm even for five dreadful minutes.

And thus, whether in the year one or that of 1800, whether with ancient Greeks and Romans, or modern American and English Spiritualists, "Ever the truth comes uppermost, and ever is justice done."

ITEMS FROM THE TWO WORLDS, OF LONDON, ENG.

Your correspondent, E. B. B. R., Richmond, puts a question relating to Light and Heat, and advances a theory which is by no means new, as I have myself, more than once, heard it put forward as information given us from the spirit-world.

However, we need not concern ourselves as to what this or that spirit-control has to say on this subject. It is enough for us to know that here, at least, science makes no mistake.

Light and heat are the direct results of etheric vibrations. Light (comprising the color scale) is the sensation produced on our brain, through the medium of the eyes, by etheric vibrations, having a frequency of about 500,000,000,000,000 (in the red) to 750,000,000,000,000 (in the violet) per second.

Remember that outside the brain and our consciousness light does not exist.

Heat is due to a set of etheric vibrations of a lower value extending from 17,000,000,000,000 up to light vibrations per second. Physical matter is affected by these etheric pulsations just in proportion to what we may call its molecular sympathy.

The atmosphere has nothing to do with the formation of light and heat, and those etheric pulsations exist in space just as they do here. Wherever there is a source of incandescence—a sun—we have etheric waves originating and traveling outwards in the same manner as when a stone is thrown into the water—waves of water originate and spread outwards from the center.

There is no necessity to locate the spirit world outside the atmosphere. It is more than probable that it is interwoven through and through with that plane of sensation we know as the physical universe: that it is everywhere around and within us.

Not all "those who have passed from this into the spirit-life" advance immediately "to a higher state of intelligence," for some who pass over are probably a length of time (as we count time) before they become aware of the change that has taken place in relation to their previously used body.

So our friend is evidently rather confused in his reasoning on this subject.

When the spirit leaves the earthly body in a natural way it becomes sensible of visual faculties fitted for its changed conditions.

What is darkness to us may be light to those who pass on in natural order.

The question of light and darkness, as related to existence in the new conditions can only be interpreted to us by symbols, or by analogies.

The material universe may be composed of atoms varying in density so greatly as to afford to the spiritual forces, operative in equal variety, relative conditions of light and heat. These atoms, set in motion by spirit energy, propelled and repelled according to emotional proclivities of the denizens in the several spheres, give the sensations natural to the being, and state of being.

What can a person born blind on the earth know of "light?"

It is also conceivable that the sensations of cold may differ so vastly in degree as to amount to comparative insensibility.

Take a man from Equatorial heat to Arctic cold instantaneously, and what would be the result? And, vice versa, bring a man from the polar regions to the equatorial conditions of life instantaneously and imagine the result. In all probability the result in both cases would be the severance of connection between the ego and his earthly body.

Cold-hearted people in earth-life would not be able to exist among warm-hearted spirits until they had become acclimatized by conforming gradually to the laws of being "over there."

Our friend will see, if he will think deeply and long, how foolish it is to expect to gather grapes from thorn bushes in Spirit life, any more than he does expect to find it possible in earth-life.

IMPORTANT TO MINISTERS.

To the Editor:—The Western Lines Passenger Association has kindly furnished the National Association with a copy of its rules under which Interchangeable permits are granted to all ministers of religion for the current year. As this office is held responsible by many of our Spiritualist lecturers and missionaries for their inability to secure this half rate courtesy, I wish to call the attention of all such to the rules, which clearly show that the N. S. A. is not responsible for the deprivation of anyone of his or her clerical tickets whatsoever.

All Spiritualist speakers settled as pastors of societies are entitled to rates, but the mere fact of ordination as a minister of the religion of Spiritualism carries with it no right whatever to clerical tickets, unless the person so ordained is in charge of a society as a settled speaker or employed as a missionary by some State or National Association under a salary from the same. This will rule out all missionaries appointed by any local, state, or national association, if they give their services gratuitously. All missionaries, however, who are compelled to travel constantly when holding commissions from state or national associations, upon furnishing proper proof that such is a fact, may receive rates; even then it is discretionary with the railroad authorities whether they receive them or not.

Ministers, lecturers, speakers or mediums, making application for clerical rates, are required to state that their names are registered at the State or National Association office of the denomination to which they belong. They must also have the endorsement of their local railroad agent and some clergymen of their respective denomination to whom the railroad authorities can refer.

If any speaker or missionary sells books, establishes agencies of any kind, solicits insurance, or receives any compensation whatever from other than religious work, he or she is not entitled to rates.

It is also a fixed rule that each application for permits must be accompanied by a fee of 50 cents and no application will be considered unless such fee is forthcoming.

For these rules the N. S. A. is in no wise responsible, hence cannot be held accountable by any one for his or her inability to obtain time or annual permits.

It would be well for all speakers and mediums having ordination papers from regularly incorporated societies to file copies of the same with the N. S. A., together with a letter naming the society over which he or she is now presiding, the compensation received as salary, and the exact character of the work performed by such speaker or medium. This will enable the N. S. A. to furnish references for the railroad associations when desired. The registration fee of $1.00 should invariably accompany all copies of ordination papers filed with the N. S. A. as a guarantee of good faith.

H. D. BARRETT.

"Mediumship and Its Development, and How to Mesmerize to Assist Development." By W. H. Bach. Especially useful to learners who seek to know and utilize the laws of mediumship and development, and avoid errors. Price, cloth, 50 cents; paper, 25 cents.

"The Philosophy of Spirit, and the Spirit-World." By Hudson Tuttle. A most able and interesting presentation of a most important subject. Every Spiritualist and every inquirer into the proofs and philosophy of Spiritualism should have this excellent book. Cloth, $1. For sale at this office.

Joys Beyond the Threshold

A SEQUEL TO

THE TO-MORROW OF DEATH.

BY LOUIS FIGUIER.

TRANSLATED FROM THE FRENCH.

THE TO-MORROW OF DEATH was writen to develop the idea of the principle of the permanence of the human soul after death, and its reincarnation in a chain of new beings, whose successive links are unrolled in the bosom of etherial space. "BEYOND THE THRESHOLD" continues on the same lines, enlarging and expanding the idea by reasons and considerations drawn from science and philosophy; claiming that the certainty of a new birth beyond our earthly end is the best means of arming ourselves against all weakness in the presence of death, and that the help offered by science and philosophy to that end is far superior to that of any of the existing religions. From beginning to end it is interesting, entertaining, instructive and fascinating, and whether one accepts it all or not, much will have been learned and much pleasure enjoyed in its perusal. Price $1.25. For sale at this office.

THE PRIEST, THE WOMAN —AND— THE CONFESSIONAL.

BY FATHER CHINIQUY.

This is a most valuable book. It comes from an Ex-Priest, whose character is above reproach, and who knows what he is talking about. Everybody should read it. Price, $1.00. It contains the following chapters:

CHAPTER I. The Struggle before the Surrender of Womanly Self-respect in the Confessional.

CHAPTER II. Auricular Confession a Deep Pit of Perdition for the Priest.

CHAPTER III. The Confessional is the Modern Sodom.

CHAPTER IV. How the Vow of Celibacy of the Priests is made easy by Auricular Confession.

CHAPTER V. The highly-educated and refined Woman in the Confessional—What becomes of her after unconditional surrender—Her Irreparable Ruin.

CHAPTER VI. Auricular Confession destroys all the Sacred Ties of Marriage and Human Society.

CHAPTER VII. Should Auricular Confession be tolerated among Civilized Nations?

CHAPTER VIII. Does Auricular Confession bring Peace to the Soul?

CHAPTER IX. The Dogma of Auricular Confession a Sacrilegious Imposture.

CHAPTER X. God compels the Church of Rome to confess the Abominations of Auricular Confession.

CHAPTER XI. Auricular Confession in Australia, America, and France.

CHAPTER XII. A Chapter for the Consideration of Legislators, Husbands and Fathers—Some of the matters on which the Priest of Rome must Question his Penitent.

Sent Post-paid, Price, $1.00.

VOLNEY'S RUINS —AND— THE LAW OF NATURE,

TO WHICH IS ADDED

Volney's Answer to Dr. Priestly, a Biographical Notice by Count Daru, and the Zodiacal Signs and Constellations by the Editor;

Also, a Map of the Astrological Heavens of the Ancients.

Printed on heavy paper, from new plates, in large, clear type, with portrait and illustrations. One vol., post 8vo, 248 pages; paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

This is undoubtedly one of the best and most useful books ever published. It eloquently advocates the best interests of mankind, and clearly points out the sources of human ignorance and misery. The author is supposed to meet in the ruins of Palmyra an apparition or phantom, which explains the true principles of society, and the causes of both the prosperity and the ruin of ancient states. A general assembly of the nations is at length convened, a legislative body formed, the source and origin of religion, of government, and of laws discussed, and the Law of Nature—founded on justice and equity—is finally proclaimed to an expectant world.

THE EVERLASTING GOSPEL.

A COMPILATION OF THE LECTURES given by the Spirit Band through the mediumship of Mrs. Magdalena Kline. This volume consists of a series of lectures, messages and poems, written and delivered in public through the mental organism of Mrs. Magdalena Kline, a trance, clairvoyant and inspirational medium. Their tone is excellent and their spirit good; and even though one may find some ideas that differ from those he has held, yet he will find much to please, benefit and instruct. The reverence with which Jesus is mentioned will please many, although the ideas advanced concerning Jesus and Christianity are not after the orthodox standard. The book contains 488 large pages, and will be sent postpaid for $1.50. For sale at this office.

THE VOICES.

By Warren Sumner Barlow. The Voices contain poems of remarkable beauty and force. They are most excellent. Price $1.00.

MARGUERITE HUNTER.

A Narrative Descriptive of Life in the Material and Spiritual Spheres,

Transcribed by a Co-operative Spirit Band, combined with chosen media of earth. It was given through independent slate-writing. The illustrations were given in oil paintings on porcelain plate by Spirit artists. It is not a fiction, but a narrative of real life, without a parallel in the literature of Spiritualism, being a clear and succinct exposition of the philosophy, religion and science of Spiritualism. The book contains 260 pages with six illustrations in half-tone, and twelve pages in original independent writing. It is beautifully bound in blue silk cloth, stamped in silver. Price, $1.25. For sale at this office.

IT IS INTERESTING.

LIFE AND LABOR IN THE SPIRIT-World: Being a description of Localities, Employments, Surroundings, and Conditions in the Spheres. By members of the Spirit-Band of Miss M. T. Shelhamer, medium of the Banner of Light Public Free Circle. Cloth $1.00. Postage 10 cents. For sale at this office.

ANTIQUITY UNVEILED.

The Most Important Revelations Concerning the True Origin of Christianity.

Reader, in bringing to your notice ANTIQUITY UNVEILED it is with the sincere hope that you are earnestly looking for the truth, regardless of any other consideration. If such is the case, this advertisement will deeply interest you, and after reading this brief description you will doubtless wish to give the work a careful perusal.

MISS JUDSON'S BOOKS.

WHY SHE BECAME A SPIRITUALIST. 264 pages. One copy, $1; six copies, $5.

FROM NIGHT TO MORN; Or, An Appeal to the Baptist Church. 32 pages. One copy, 15 cents; ten copies, $1.

THE BRIDGE BETWEEN TWO WORLDS. 209 pages. One copy, bound in cloth, $1; paper, 75 cents.

For Sale at this Office, 40 Loomis Street.

HYPNOTISM UP TO DATE

BY SYDNEY FLOWER.

An entertaining manual of hypnotism, useful to students of the subject. In the form of dialogue and story, the author presents very successfully a condensed account of hypnotism, its theory and practice up to date. Price, paper, 25 cts. Sold at this office.

WAYSIDE JOTTINGS.

Gathered from the Highways, By-ways and Hedges of Life. By MATTIE E. HULL. This is a marvelously neat book of selections from Mrs. Hull's best poems, sermons and essays, and contains a splendid portrait of the author, also a portrait of Moses Hull. Price, neatly bound in English cloth, $1. For sale at this office.

SOCIAL UPBUILDING,

Including Co-operative Systems and the Happiness and Ennoblement of Humanity. By E. D. Babbitt, LL. D., M. D. This comprises the last part of Human Culture and Cure. Paper cover, 15c. For sale at this office.

JOAN, THE MEDIUM.

Or, the Inspired Heroine of Orleans. Spiritualism as a Leader of Armies. By MOSES HULL. This is at once the most truthful history of Joan of Arc, and one of the most convincing arguments on Spiritualism ever written. No novel was ever more thrillingly interesting; no history more true. Price in cloth, 40 cents; paper cover, 25 cents. For sale at this office.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

This department is under the management of the distinguished author, speaker and medium,

Hudson Tuttle.

Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio.

S. S. K., Winnebago, Wis.: Q. When persons are buried in a trance, as we read of in the Cyclopaedia of Death, is it possible for them to regain consciousness so as to realize their condition, with so little air as is contained in the casket?

A. It is the almost unvarying testimony of those who have been thought to be dead, and have recovered before the final rite of burial was performed, that they preserved their consciousness, even to painful acuteness, and knew of all the preparations going forward, but were unable to move or give the least sign. In such cases there is paralysis of the muscles of motion, yet the activity of the brain is even increased. It is this knowledge, combined with utter inability, that makes the situation so terrible.

In this trance state there is so complete suspension of the vital functions that there is no visible breathing, and the escaping air from the lungs will not even cloud a mirror held to the mouth. As long as this state continues there is need of very little air. But if the unfortunate victim revives after interment, the necessity of large quantities of air becomes imperative, and the limited supply in the casket could maintain life only a few minutes. The agony of suffocation would be great, but of short duration. Only the marked changes of decay are absolute tests of death, and recovery has been made after experienced physicians had pronounced the appearance of these. The haste of relatives to hold the funeral obsequies should be deprecated.

M. A., Atlanta: Q. What is the meaning of Diakka?

A. This word was first used by A. J. Davis to designate undeveloped, ignorant, mischievous spirits—those in common parlance known as evil.

The same correspondent asks: What is transfiguration?

Transformed, as when the medium takes on the appearance of the communicating spirit. The expression of the spirit when it transcends the body, as in clairvoyance and sometimes at the moment of death. This is entirely distinct from materialization, although it is often mistaken therefor.

M. R. Stauff: Q. Is the danger from microbes as great as scientists tell us, and should we guard against them by boiling the water we drink, and sterilizing the air we breathe?

A. The danger may or may not be as great, and it may be far greater. There are a vast number of species of microbes, the majority of which are harmless or useful. If a man was surrounded by sheep, deer, horses, etc., he would not be in danger, but if tigers and lions should take the place of these, his position would be one of imminent peril. Precisely so with microbes; it depends on the kinds that come into his surroundings. He cannot escape them. Every drop of water he drinks, every inch of air he breathes, contains them by the thousand and the million. They are in the salt air of the sea, and the crisp breeze of the mountain summit.

Fortunately the most of these germs are of harmless or helpful species, and the swiftest road to sickness would be to breathe only sterilized air, and drink boiled water. If the health be rightly maintained, the microbe germs as they enter the blood are quickly destroyed and assimilated. The more vicious germs of disease vainly assault the citadel of life, and are absorbed. It is the constant attack, or the overwhelming onslaught, as in epidemic and contagious diseases, when the air is filled with germs that produced the most certain yielding. Under the right conditions, that is, if the body is a well-prepared soil, perhaps the presence of a single germ of typhoid fever might multiply and produce that disease.

In the breaking up and removal of the waste products from the body, the various kinds of microbes play an important part.

Hope, Norwalk: Q. Are the blind to hope for restoration to sight by means of the X-rays?

A. They have no more reason to hope for sight through the X-rays than through electricity. The X-rays are not condensible by a lens, and hence the field of vision they would afford would be too small to be of any service, granted that they were recognized by the nerves.

Perhaps few subjects have called out so much senseless talk and writing as the X-rays, and the newspapers constantly teem with what Edison or Tesla says, when both claim that as yet they know scarcely anything about this form of force—it is entirely misleading to say light. That it is not refractable removes it completely from the scope of an instrument like the eye, constructed to receive and refract the rays. Already the quack doctor, ever ready to impose on the ignorant by the mysterious, has taken up the X-rays as a curative agent. The forces of and from the sun have created all living forms on the earth, and hence all the forces coming from the sun are embodied in their effects in man. Beyond these forces he asks nothing, being their creature and work. Any influence or force outside would be out of unison, and either inconsequential or conflicting. If the X-rays are combined in the beams from the sun, these afford an exhaustless force, and in that form best adapted to the wants of the organism.

If the sunlight does not contain the X-rays, then as a force foreign to the organism, their insulation and employment as remedial can only be harmful. This does not apply to the use of these rays to observe the internal structure of the body, or as a help in surgery.

Dr. C. T.: Q. If all living things were swept from the earth, would the process of evolution again restore them?

A. The theory of evolution necessitates the spontaneous creation of the first forms of life, that is, the primordial or lowest living organisms. If this be not granted, then the only resort is that of special, miraculous creation. As the latter is not to be entertained, for the present at least, the former must be received. If these lower forms were at first, in the early ages of the earth produced, then as the same forces continue to act, when conditions are favorable they must be created at the present time. Protoplasm, as matter not organized into living beings, but capable of such individualization exists, and under right conditions becomes thus living forms. These are lost in the crowd of beings with which they mingle, and cannot go on in ascending evolution because the field is fully occupied with forms of life adapted to their environment by countless ages of evolution and hence stronger and more resisting.

If, however, all living beings were removed, the new forms which would arise would have no rivals in the struggle for existence. There would be a new "beginning," and the path of development would be again traversed.

Yet it must not be assumed that the results would be the same; that the ultimate species differentiated would be like those which perished. In the present evolution, homogeneous life, that is life as a plastic speck of protoplasm, began in a homogeneous world—a world in which almost the same climate extended everywhere, and a thermal sea laved the equator and the poles. Its wonderful differentiation into species as wide apart as the mollusk and the tiger, the snail and man, is mainly the result of the differentiation of climatic conditions.

If these were swept away, the new evolution would meet a heterogeneous world, and under the peculiar conditions of each locality either advance or perish. The resulting specific forms would not be like those in the preceding evolution, nor is it possible to predicate what they would be.

"Universalist," Washington, D. C.: Q. (1) It is presumed that all infants go to heaven. Why, then, should God, who is infinite love, allow a Nero or a Judas to grow up and commit horrible crimes, which must be punished with everlasting torture?

(2) Is there an unpardonable sin, and, if so, what is it?

(3) Christ died for all, will not then his loving purpose fail if he cannot save all?

A. (1) These questions presuppose, in the mind of the questioner, the direct supervision of God, in contradiction to the rule of law; they presuppose the acceptance of the Christian scheme of salvation which is necessitated by man's "fall." If God had the power or the foresight to remove the Neros, Caligulas, and all who ravage, like wild beasts on mankind, it would be better that he went a step further back, and not allow such criminals to be born. For even as infants the villainous characters that they developed adhered in all its possibilities, and it is, if there could be a choice, altogether best to be well born.

It is not true, in the sense intended by the questioner, that all children "go to heaven," or that all are equal. The taint of heredity and earthly conditions remain to be outgrown. Under the superior influences and away from the inciting causes, they do not manifest the depravity of the animal nature, and with angels for teachers outgrow the shadows of ancestry and birth. History is the record of the struggle of the spiritual to ascend and control the animal, and to actualize its ideal in earthly life; a struggle which grows out of the plan by which life is evolved from the lower to the higher; reaching from the protozoon to man, and through man to individualized spirits. The Neros, the Alexanders, the hero-murderers and lauded assassins are by-products of this plan as it reaches on to saints and sages, as the tiger and hyena are branches of the trunk of the great tree of life as it ascends to man.

(2) The "unpardonable sin" has created a great deal of discussion, and been hurled at the heads of recreant heretics, and yet its character and meaning is in dispute. It is generally accepted that blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, which means, if it means anything, the rejection of the evidences of the Christian faith, is the substance of this terrible sin, which leads unto death, and dying in the sin of this unbelief, forbids repentance and thus meets eternal damnation.

As we have no idea what the Holy Ghost is, or may be, and no authority has determined, this sin has no greater significance than would have our disbelief in the claims of a big medicine man, or an African witch doctor.

Sin is the giving ourselves to the control of a lower instead of a higher law, and the suffering which inevitably follows is in no sense a punishment, but the means of forcing us to higher grounds.

Avenging punishment, in the sense of human laws, is unknown in the natural and spiritual worlds.

(3) Christ died for all, as every martyr has died, every sage taught, every poet sang. Everyone lives and dies for all. That he died as a vicarious atonement for the sins of mankind is a needless dogma, when it is proven, as is admitted by every scientific man in the world of any eminence, that so far from being created perfect and falling from that high estate, man is a creature of evolution from savagery and animalism. If he never "fell," why needs he a redeemer? If not lost from God, why a saviour?

All will, truly, be "saved," not by belief, or by the "blood of Christ," but by inherent growth. The spiritual at last will escape the animal, and that will be salvation. As a means of grace, the ideal Christ, the perfect one, held aloft as a pattern of spiritual excellence, is a power making for righteousness.

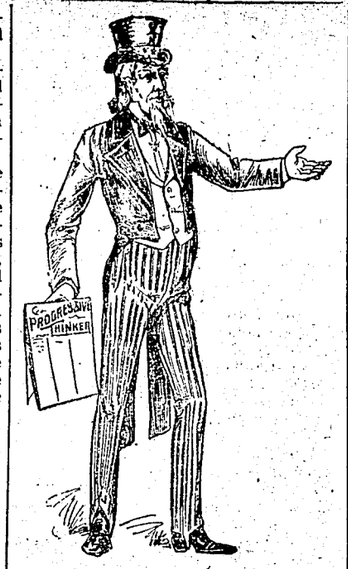
SPRINKLING BABES.

AN EARNEST PROTEST AGAINST IT

"The Spiritualist church in Pittsburg has adopted the rite of baptism. Three babes belonging to Alderman Klotz were duly sprinkled on the 13th inst., Mrs. Ida Whitlock being the officiating minister. Alderman Klotz says he thinks it is the beginning of a new era. No doubt of it."

To the Editor:—I see by the above clipping from Light of Truth, that an association calling itself the "Spiritualist Church" (which is certainly a misnomer), has committed what I call an outrage against our cause.

I am not inclined to rush into print. I have always left matters like the above to our literary giants, that they might express their scathing rebukes against the offenders of our cause; but they have failed to take notice of this case and I thus call their attention to it. I would also ask: Is this the beginning of the end of Spiritualism? Has it come to this? Is this what we have battled for? Is this the goal which we have braved social ostracism in order to attain? After our hard-fought battles against the common enemy, must we bow in reverence to that silly orthodox custom of water baptism of innocent babes.



I for one will say: No! a thousand times no! If this is the natural result of organizing, I say for the love of heaven don't organize any more. Don't drag our grand, noble cause down to the level of orthodox forms, rites and customs. It is better to let Spiritualism sleep till the day of doom, than have it sacrificed upon the cross of dogmatic creed.

So let the press turn her heaviest guns upon the camp of our enemies, until the last vestige of orthodox falsehood is removed.

I hope to hear from others.

Columbus, Ind. JAMES M. BOYER.

"Hypnotism Up to Date." By Sydney Flower. In the form of dialogue and story, the author presents very successfully a condensed account of hypnotism its theory and practice up to date. Price, paper, 25 cents. Sold at this office.

JESUIT SPIRITS.

Their Nefarious Work Not an Idle Fancy.

A VIVID PORTRAYAL OF THEIR PERNICIOUS INFLUENCE—THE OPINION OF J. J. MORSE SHOWN TO BE ERRONEOUS.

At the last convention of the N. S. A., I listened with deep interest to the able report of J. J. Morse in reference to the cause of Spiritualism in England and United States. The report concerning the cause in his native land, was not only very interesting but quite encouraging. The tidal wave of Spiritualism having had its rise in this younger country, nearly half a century ago, seems to have swept over England with results similar to that found in the history of the movement in this country.

There is, however, one section of Mr. Morse's report to which I wish to refer at this writing. He says in reference to Spiritualism in the United States "one other thing has struck me somewhat with surprise; it is the fear of Catholic Jesuit Spirits that I hear so much about in this country."

This remark proves to those who have had many years of experience, in rescuing and defending mediums from the persecution and thraldom of this class of spirits, that Mr. Morse has had no experience in this direction. It seems at least unfortunate for so able a writer as well as so prominent an exponent of Spiritualism as he has been, to speak as flippantly as he did in his report under this head.

On this question Mr. Morse stands with the majority, as there are but few who realize the power and effect of the work carried on by Jesuit Spirits in retarding human progress. He calls attention to the spirit patriots of '76, the heroes of the Revolution—Washington, Lafayette, Paine and others—as well as the immortal Lincoln, saying that doubtless they are as watchful as ever over the destinies of this glorious country. Quite true, but did the watchful care and constant efforts of those patriot sires, prevent the consummation of the work of Jesuits in both worlds? Facts prove to the contrary. Was not Abraham Lincoln the foremost American of his time, murdered through the baneful influence of Jesuit minds in both worlds? So Mr. Lincoln informed me through the lips of Mrs. Nettie Maynard, about two years before she passed to spirit-life.

This testimony, however, only confirmed from the spirit side, what was known to be true here. We may be sure that the spirit patriots are doing all in their power to counteract the subtle schemes of the Jesuit Spirit hordes, in their endeavors to prevent the onward march of progress, but in view of the ignorance of mankind upon this subject, they can make but very little headway at present. While the spirit fathers and saviors of our Nation, are watchful as to its interests, as Mr. Morse suggests, does he suppose that the Jesuit Spirits who have always been opposed to liberty and progress, and especially to Spiritualism, are idle and inactive? If so, no greater mistake could be made in this connection. If the Spirit fathers of this Republic are looking well to its safety; if they are laboring to unfold the truth (including Spiritualism), to the minds of the generations they have left behind, is it not probable that Jesuit spirits on the other hand are doing every thing in their power to sustain their position? In both worlds the Jesuit is against liberty, against our Republican form of government, and against Spiritualism, because these different factors in our civilization, are not of them, and they are determined to crush them out. In many cases they freely admit this to be their object. Jesuits do not cease to be Jesuits when they pass the boundary line of mortal life.

I pass on now to consider further the remarks of Mr. Morse. He says that evil influences, the fear of Catholic machinations, mortal and spiritual, with obsession and similar affairs, have been done to death. Are they not idle fancies? Such statements and queries as these from a teacher, only confirm the ignorance of the people concerning this vital question. Indeed these are not idle fancies, but facts proved by experience, the outcome of which is of the most serious importance, and the nature of which, all should understand, especially sensitives, that they may be protected and directed by the truth.

Mr. Morse takes a hopeful view of the situation, and thinks that this Jesuit question rests upon an exaggerated fear, instead of a solid foundation of fact and reason. The general trend of his report upon this subject causes the writer to understand that he has much to learn concerning this question. Very little knowledge may be gained by speculation or supposition as to the psychological power of Jesuit forces against Spiritualism, and the mediums through which we receive its truths, experience is the test.

While this portion of Mr. Morse's report was being read I wondered what President Barrett and a number of others closely allied with him in the interests of the N. S. A. thought, in view of their experiences in this direction; also what many others present thought, who have had severe object lessons, both of defending and being defended, from these Jesuit enemies of Spiritualism and mediumship.

The writer has had a most thrilling experience with this grade of spirits, in the past twenty years, in different parts of the country, sketches of which might be forthcoming if time and space would permit.

A communication from Spirit William White, late of the "Banner of Light" is in point just here, and may be interesting and profitable to the reader. It was received in 1881 and was as follows:

"My brother, it was foreseen long before any demonstrations had occurred on your plane of life, that the so-called Christian church, both Catholic and Protestant would become alarmed at the spread of Modern Spiritualism, and we also saw that they were preparing to subjugate it to their selfish ends; failing in that, to crush it.

"We have watched the power being exerted on the spirit side, and observed how subtle their movements were, and how sure they were to accomplish their object, until a power above them, saw fit to step in and protest with a "thus far." This Jesuit power began to operate by visiting spiritual seances, coming in the guise of the friends of truth, and in this manner they have deceived many. We also saw the medium Jennie Leys and many others whom we might mention, surrounded by these spirit enemies in the interests of the Catholic church. Their first move was through psychology, to cause them to think they were surrounded by a band of spirits so high and holy, that they could not say or do anything that was not right; making true the saying, 'when ye think ye stand, take heed lest ye fall.' Jennie Leys was in the toils of the enemy before she left the East for the West. The moment she accepted the statement that the Nazarene was her guide, that moment she was hopelessly enslaved and obsessed; and all that has transpired since has been the strongest corroborative proof of this fact. She long ago discarded all spiritualistic aid, and has been the most ardent devotee of the band of Jesuit spirit priests around her, that ever did penance before patron saint.

All in time will be forced to believe—yea know—the fearful danger to which every sensitive is exposed, especially those who through their mediumship, must necessarily convince the world of the truth and cause of obsession.

This remarkable communication from our ascended Brother White, in itself is a most potent answer and rebuke to the unwarranted and unwise statements of public teachers, concerning hostile influences.

The writer could bring forward a volume of evidence gained through experience if opportunity offered. I am reminded, however, just now, that I must not weary the patience of the editor, and will close briefly, by saying, that we should not fear Jesuit spirits as Mr. Morse suggests, but become intelligent in regard to their movements. If we look for their trail, we shall find them busy at work as spirits, in ways acceptable and familiar to themselves, as of yore, when they inhabited this plane of life. We shall also find that the results of their work among mediums and Spiritualists, explains many things which seem very strange to the superficial observer. To all who entertain the views expressed in the report in question, viz., that this is a subject done to death, and one that rests upon idle fancies, with no solid foundation of fact or reason, the writer would say, this is a very important subject, as well as one of profound interest to every one interested in Spiritualism and the general progress of mankind.

No class of minds better understand the subtle power of Jesuit organizations in both worlds, than the heroes of the Revolution who sealed with their blood the compact of our freedom, from kingcraft and priestcraft, as well as from the religious persecution of Jesuitism. These immortal patriots before mentioned, look to us upon this material plane, for intelligent co-operation in defeating the wicked schemes and purposes of these deadly foes to freedom, progress, and the enlightenment of the people. Shall they look in vain, or will we meet them, to do our part in the contest, armed with the truth, before which all must finally bow? Those who have received the light are responsible, and will be required to answer this query now, and in the future. B. B. HILL.

Philadelphia, Pa.

SPIRITUALISTS, ATTENTION.

The following contains a commendable plan for the spread of spiritual truth in Kansas and Missouri:

To the Editor:—I wish to lay before the readers of your excellent paper a plan which has been impressed upon me for the advancement of our cause in the above-mentioned States.

Having been in public work for the past two years in these States a considerable portion of my time, I am in a position to know something of our status. To tell the plain facts in the case, Spiritualism is not making much headway here at the present time. There are a large number of Spiritualists in Kansas and Missouri scattered up and down, but I believe I can safely say the number of societies holding regular public meetings may be counted on the fingers of one hand. On the other hand there are a number of speakers able and willing to work for the spread of spiritual knowledge, who have altogether too much time to rest; they lack encouragement for want of concerted action. Now our plan is to get these workers (if possible) to work in co-operation with each other instead of working as rivals, and to so arrange the work that the expenses of traveling may be reduced to a minimum.

First we would like to hear from every Spiritualist in the two States who would assist in any way to arrange regular meetings, either by providing a suitable hall or large room, or by providing entertainment for workers or in any other way. We would then arrange these places in regular routes so that a speaker could visit each one with the smallest possible expense. Regular dates would be arranged for each place. Next we would enroll all speakers willing to join the Bureau with the headquarters in this city and send a new speaker each meeting as long as the supply might last. The advantages to be gained by this plan are many.

First, the speakers could work harmoniously together without any feeling of rivalry which is a feeling much out of place in a spiritual worker.

Second, the societies would have a variety of speakers which would add to the general interest.

Third, there would be a great saving of railroad fare and incidental expenses.

Fourth, the Bureau would be in a position to furnish a speaker on short notice for funerals, or special meetings by wiring the nearest available speaker.

Fifth, a temporary home might be provided at headquarters for mediums needing rest.

Now I am willing to start the ball rolling by answering all letters containing stamp for reply and would like to be literally swamped with letters for a while. I want to hear from every Spiritualist in Kansas and Missouri, giving the names of every investigator they know of. I want to hear from every speaker now working on our rostrum in this section of the country.

Let us get right down to business and start the work for the year of 1897 with all the energy we possess.

Now sit down and write to yours truly, W. E. BONNEY.

720 East 12th st., Kansas City, Mo.

Fifty cents is all we ask for a package of Golden Laxative Coffee. Beautifies your complexion. Golden Laxative Coffee Co., Ayer, Mass. 373

WE WANT TO DO MORE GOOD.

And in order to do it, we should reach 1,000,000 new readers. Help us to do it. Let each subscriber get an additional subscriber. Read the announcement on fifth page, headed "Fifteen Cents," and then act in our behalf.

THE CAUSE IN YONKERS, N. Y.

To the Editor:—As the holidays came on Friday this season, the day we usually hold our meeting, we postponed the Friday meeting, and held a joint session with the Lyceum December 27 and January 3, and we had an enjoyable holiday festival I assure you. Mrs. Helen T. Brigham was the speaker for the occasion.

First on the programme was the christening of five infants by Mrs. Brigham: Ethel Aleon Rogers, Susan M. George, Hebron Embree Kimball, Syble Ruth Potter, and Edith Potter (twins). Mrs. Brigham using flowers, hyacinths, roses, etc.

One mother said to Mrs. Brigham: "Some of my friends think it will not be much of a christening without water." when she brought her infant to the platform, Mrs. Brigham dipped the flowers in a vase of water, and as it dropped upon the infant, said: "May thy teachers and instructors that assist in thy unfoldment, be as pure as these drops of water untouched by mortal hands."

In another instance she said: "The lower stems of these roses have thorns. Loved one, grasp it above the thorns" (the child complied, and placed it to its nose quite gracefully), "May thy earthly journey be so guarded as to avoid the thorny pathway and rugged hills that many of earth-children have experienced.

I have given but a faint idea of the beautiful, happy expression she gave in her usual poetic style, differing in each case and still appropriate. I regret that we did not have a stenographer to have taken the exact language. While giving each child its earthly name, she also gave the spirit name and its significance without the least hesitation. Our hall was well filled. Many strangers were present who expressed their admiration for the unique proceedings, and contrasted it with the usual stereotyped method.

Veritably, "thoughts are substantial spiritual things," and when used in wisdom's ways, produce good results.

Some of our friends in Yonkers and in the Greater New York entered a demurrer, stating that we were following after church customs too much. May not some of the forms be worthy of imitation when it is made apparent that they are understood to be symbolical of some important spiritual principle.

I would like to hear from some of your able correspondents on this subject.

The Children's Lyceum Festival under the management of its able conductor, Mrs. Mary H. Mosher, was a creditable affair, and would have pleased our earnest advocates, as lately expressed through the spiritual press, in regard to the Spiritualists' system of lyceums for children, had they been present. The singing, silver chain recitations, and especially the marching with banners, children from three to seventy years of age, were in harmony with this progressive age. Then followed the distribution of Christmas presents.

On the third, in addition to the usual exercises, Alfred Andrews, president of our Society read from The Progressive Thinker of the 2nd inst an article entitled "Experiments in the Production of Thought Photography by Dr Baraduc. Something similar appeared in the New York Herald one day later. Thanks to The Progressive Thinker for its timely presentation of new achievements in science, and especially when it points so plainly to the spiritual. The subject brought out commendable comment.

Mrs. Gale read her poem, thanking the old year for all it has given us in human progress and asking of the New what it has in store for us.

TITUS MERRITT, Sec.

NEWS FROM THE PACIFIC COAST.

To the Editor:—I find that Spiritualism is on the move in the Northwest, and that much good was done by the introducing of the camp-meeting at Port Blakely last summer, by Brother Love, of Portland, the people being very anxious to have another one next year. From that place Charles Anderson—the Boy Speaker—and myself went to Seattle, where we held forth to large audiences for six weeks. There are at present three meetings held each Sunday evening, which means several hundred people listening to exhortations from the "Spirit-world." There is also a good lyceum under the auspices of the "First Society.." On going to Tacoma I found there had been no public meetings held for about a year and under the direction of my band, I set to work at once towards opening one. I found Mrs. L. Gifford a most worthy woman and earnest worker there also. The Boy and myself held a Sunday afternoon meeting to a fair audience, and Sister Gifford and Sister McCall also had a good meeting in the evening. Charles Anderson and myself held another meeting to a packed house the following Thursday, he then going into the country for a rest, and Mrs. McCall—who has done a noble work as a home medium for three years at Tacoma—and myself kept up the interest, having full houses every Sunday. Mrs. McCall continued the meetings after my departure and I hope the people of Tacoma will never allow the doors to be closed again.

On my return to Portland, which was about six weeks ago, I found plenty of work, both public and privately. Each Sunday evening the hall has been well filled with most intelligent audiences, notwithstanding very inclement weather. Next Sunday I hold my farewell meeting. Sister Westlake whose sweet soprano voice thrilled the souls of hundreds of listeners will continue the meetings, as it is the intention of her band to keep her henceforth in the work as lecturer and test medium.

Charles Anderson, the Boy Speaker, is at present holding forth at Rainier, Ore., where he is interesting the skeptics and believers alike. He and myself leave in a short time for California, he to work at San Francisco, myself going to San Jose, where I am under engagement for the month of January. From there I go to Summerland for a month's rest, then to Los Angeles and San Diego, which finishes my work on the Western coast, for the present, myself and husband expect to start on an Eastern tour, intending to stop wherever there is work to do.

I forgot to mention the good work done by our noble sister worker Mrs. Lanont, of Seattle, who for several years has been a most untiring worker at that place, and the present growth of Spiritualism there is due much to her zealous efforts. Also Mrs. Carter, who is comparatively a new worker, who made a successful visit to Alaska in the interest of our cause, during the summer months. Thus you see Spiritualism is honey-combing our Western coast from one end to the other and I feel it will not be long ere we will stand upon a level with the Eastern coast.

May every earnest worker ever have the support of all true Spiritualists.

Will be open for engagement for societies and Eastern camp associations after March, 1897.

GEORGIE GLADYS COOLEY.

Portland, Oregon.

The native Australians are said to differ in several important respects from every other race of people on the earth.

MOST WONDERFUL BOOKS.

The Warfare of Science With Theology.

A History of the Warfare of Science with Theology in Christendom. By ANDREW D. WHITE, LL. D., late President and Professor of History at Cornell University. In Two Volumes. 8vo. Cloth, Five Dollars. For Sale at This Office.

In these two large volumes are combined information that the reader could not find in the libraries of the world in fifty years. It shows the constant and determined opposition of Theology to the advancement that has been made in every branch of Science. To the Student it is indispensible. Every Free Thought Speaker should have it. It should circulate in every community. It goes into minute details, citing in all cases the authority, showing the persistency of Theology in fighting new and advanced ideas in Science.

"The magnum opus of the eminent ex-President of Cornell plants a new and notable milestone along the highway of ever-advancing human thought. The work is the masterpiece of a mind as devoid of wanton iconoclasm as of moral cowardice. It is a definite statement of where the best thinkers of the world now stand in the religio-scientific conflict. It is clear, honest, brave, and must be given a place among the great books of the year."—Chicago Tribune.

"The most valuable contribution that has yet been made to the history of the conflict between the theologians and the scientists; struggles that have alarmed timid Christians, but, as Mr. White shows, there was no occasion for alarm. The several chapters are extremely interesting, and while President White never flinches in telling the whole truth, as he thinks science has ascertained it, he is nowhere irreverent. He confronts truth, takes its hand, and follows boldly wherever truth bids him come."—Buffalo Commercial.

"The book is written almost colloquially, and so interestingly as to enchain the attention at once, and keep it enchained. Concise as a history of the universe could be made, tabulated so that instant reference to a particular bit of history, theory, or biography may be had, it will be valuable as a lexicon relating to religious controversy. It is crammed with information, sorted, sifted, winnowed, and prepared for the consumer, as reading it is of an absorbing interest, and it will probably provoke answering arguments."—Chicago Times-Herald.

"Undoubtedly the most exhaustive treatise which has been written on this subject. It is able, scholarly, critical, and impartial in tone."—Boston Daily Advertiser.

"A literary event of prime importance is the appearance of 'A History of the Warfare of Science with Theology in Christendom.'"—Philadelphia Press.

These two large volumes, containing about 900 pages, will be sent to any address on the receipt of the price, Five Dollars.

A UNIQUE BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK.

OLD TESTAMENT STORIES

COMICALLY ILLUSTRATED.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

408 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS.

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,
Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,
Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50; Boards, illuminated covers, $1.

Address THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER.

THE WOMAN'S BIBLE THE GOSPEL OF NATURE.

PART I. THE PENTATEUCH.

Comments on Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy, by Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Lillie Devereux Blake, Rev. Phebe Hanaford, Clara Bewick Colby, Ellen Battelle Dietrick, Mrs. Louisa Southworth, Ursula N. Gestefeld, and Frances E. Barr.

"In every soul there is bound up some truth and some error, and each gives to the world of thought what no other one possesses."—Cousin.

The bright and scholarly comments of this galaxy of bright minds are of deep interest, and throw a strong and new light on the Bible teachings relating to woman. All should read it.

Price 50c. For sale at this Office.

IT IS A MOST EXCELLENT WORK.

This work is by DR. M. L. SHERMAN, assisted by PROF. W. F. LYON. Heretofore it has been sold for $2, but the price now has been reduced to $1. It is a book that will interest and instruct. It contains 480 pages, and is full of suggestive thoughts. Dr. Sherman was a medium of rare qualities, and his work is a reflection from the celestial spheres. It treats of the Soul of Things; Intelligence in Substance; Animal Intellects; Purity; Salvation; Discords; Good and Evil; Unnatural Ideas; Church History; Progression; Inherent in Substance; The Nebulous Theory; Particles are Entities; Justice; Impregnation of the Virgin; The Science of Death; Spiritual Death; Immortality; Mourning; The Confounding of Language; The Spirit Abodes; Matter and Spirit; Size and Distance; Spiritual Organisms; Born Again; The Key; Spirit Biography; Goes to Heaven; A Slave Master; etc., etc.

The author says: "Each individual partakes of both physical and mental or spiritual ailment for himself. Each one must digest their various kinds of food for themselves, and that is all they can possibly do whether they be priest or layman, teacher or pupil. My physical expands by virtue of that food and nourishment of which I individually partake and digest. My soul must expand by virtue of the soul essences which I individually gather and comprehend or digest." For sale at this office.

THE SPIRITUAL BIRTH,

OR DEATH AND ITS TO-MORROW.

The Spiritual Idea of Death, Heaven and Hell. By Moses Hull. This pamphlet besides giving the Spiritualistic interpretation of many things in the Bible—interpretations never before given, explains the heavens and hells believed in by Spiritualists. Price, 10 cents. For sale at this office.

RELIGION OF THE FUTURE.

BY S. WEIL.

Cloth, $1.25. Paper, 50 cents.

This is a work of great value, written by one of the keenest, most powerful and most truly religious minds of the day. It is particularly a work which should be put into the hands of those who have freed themselves from the dogmas of orthodoxy and from the dogmas of materialistic science, for it will strengthen the conviction of the free mind that mind and senses are not the whole of life.

The chapters reveal a new method in psychic and spiritual research. They show vivid glimpses of a stupendous moral cosmos that will supersede moral confusion; that only verifiable tenets can survive, and the childhood period of faith and fancy will be superseded by knowledge and facts. For sale at this office.

BIBLE MARVEL WORKERS,

AND THE WONDROUS POWER which helped or made them perform mighty works and utter inspired words, together with some Personal Traits and Characteristics of Prophets, Apostles, and Jesus, or New Readings of "The Miracles," by Allen Putnam. Price 75 cents. For sale at this office.

The Occult Forces of Sex

BY LOIS WAISBROOKER.

This admirable work consists of three pamphlets embodied in one volume, in which questions of great importance to the race are discussed from the standpoint of an advanced social reformer. Price 50 cents. For sale at this office.

A SEX REVOLUTION,

BY LOIS WAISBROOKER,

Author of "Helen Harlow's Vow," "The Occult Forces of Sex," "Perfect Motherhood," and many other works. Price 25 cents. For sale at this office.

LIFE IN TWO SPHERES.

Have you promised yourself the rare pleasure of reading this beautiful work by the good, old-time writer, Hudson Tuttle? Price, 50 cents. Contains a fine portrait of the author. For sale at this office.

WAS ABRAHAM LINCOLN A SPIRITUALIST?

—OR—

Curious Revelations from the Life of a Trance Medium.

—BY—

MRS. NETTIE COLBURN MAYNARD

Together with Portraits, Letters and Poems. Illustrated with Engravings and Frontispiece of Lincoln, from Carpenter's Portrait from Life.

This book will be found peculiar, curious, startling!—more so than any work issued since Uncle Tom's Cabin. It breathes forgotten whispers which the rust of time had almost covered, and which have been snatched from the very jaws of oblivion. It deals with high official private life during the most momentous period in American History, and is a secret page from the life of him whom time serves only to make greater, more appreciated, and more understood—"Abraham Lincoln."

Cloth, 12mo, illustrated, pp. 264, $1.50; Paper, 75 cents.

For Sale at this office.

THE ELIMINATOR

—OR—

Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets.

BY DR. R. B. WESTBROOK.

Profoundly reverent, but thoroughly radical; exposing the fabulous claims of ancient Judaism and dogmatic Christianity, containing many startling conclusions never before published, showing clearly the mythical character of most of the Old and New Testament stories, and proving that Jesus was an impersonation and not a person. A genuine sensation.

Price $1.50. For Sale at this Office.

Ingersoll's Great Address

On Thomas Paine, at the late Paine celebration in New York City. Price, 6 cents; ten copies for 50 cents.

GOLDEN LAXATIVE COFFEE.

SOMETHING NEW, BUT OH, SO NICE!

CURES CONSTIPATION!

Ask your druggist for it, and if they don't have it, ask them to order some of us, and they will do it.

GOES AS FAR AS 4 POUNDS OF PURE COFFEE.

A Package by Mail, 50 Cents.

Golden Laxative Coffee Co.,
AYER, MASS.

"SOUL'S LIGHT."

(Continued from page three.)

be added that other, that the images of the creative spirit, what I call psychicones, form a sort of background to my soul pictures.

"I may therefore safely affirm that the human soul is movement, light and creation, and that its experimental demonstration easily enters into the positive sphere of science accessible to man.

"DR. HIPPOLITE BARADUC."

The friend of Dr. Baraduc to whom this pamphlet was sent is a prominent professor in one of our largest universities. He has known Dr. Baraduc abroad. He states that Dr. Baraduc did not impress him as at all visionary or impractical, and he says that Dr. Baraduc has the ear of the most conservative and learned of European scientists.

And thus it is that the world is advancing, and the secular press is helping it along. LUCRETIUS.

New York.

MATERIALIZATION.

(Continued from page three.)

gree he wonders why none of his loved ones come, not knowing that he has set up an impassable barrier by his attitude of "investigation" (God save the mark). The Christ so truly said, "Except ye become as a little child ye shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of Heaven," and the investigator must hug that truth home to his soul till it becomes a part of himself. When it does, he will "see Heaven open" in a way that will delight him. Unselfish love is the soul of all spiritual phenomena, whether seen or unseen, and, given that condition in a circle, there is absolutely no limit to the power of spirit for demonstration in the material.

In the search for truth no half-way allegiance will be accepted. If the truth is worth anything it is worth all the searcher can give. "He who seeketh findeth" is the promise and it is true. I know beyond "belief" or "doubt." Under conditions as they are now the expenditure of both time and money is necessary to the speediest proving of the truth of what I have written. If any man or woman will come to me with unselfish desire in the heart and a willingness to give up both time and money in a search for this truth, I will gladly show the way I have trod to find it and will guarantee a perfect result to the honest searcher. Poverty of means is only pleaded by the person who is too indolent to do earnest work, for earnest work and poverty do not room in the same house.

Chicago, Ill. SOUTHWORTH.

A SPIRITUALISTIC CHRISTENING.

Very elaborate and beautiful services accompanied the public christening "baptism and giving of name) of the infant daughter of Eric L. Ihle, at the church of the Students of Nature, 1052 Milwaukee avenue, on Sunday, December 27, Mrs. M. Summers, the pastor, officiating.

The occasion was introduced by an invocation and an impressive hymn. Six girls, dressed in white and decorated with cut flowers, holding also a bouquet in their hands, stood upon the rostrum and each in turn gave short recitations. The child to be christened, having been brought forward by its parents, with accompanying decorations of cut flowers, was presented. The pastor then said:

"Since the term 'christening' signifies only a dedication to Christ, and we think it far more noble to dedicate a child to the highest sympathies of human nature, we here perform the simplest act that we can, accompanied with appropriate words, to show to the world what we recognize as our privilege and duty with reference to the rising generation. The privilege is the greatest liberty of each individual compatible with the like liberty of all others, and the duty is to work for the highest and sweetest sympathies of which our natures are capable.

"As 'christening' is a resolution to bring the child up in the Christian faith, so this natural dedication is a resolution to let the child grow up into a normal development, believing, yes, knowing, that such a course is the surest method of perfecting the human species and producing the greatest happiness, which indeed is the only thing we all should strive for.

"How cruel it is, therefore, to prejudice a child in advance of his mature years in favor of any disputed creed, thus warping his mind and unconsciously dwarfing it as it were within a prison for life. Naturalism is our only creed, and this does not consist of dogmatic statements but a life of freedom, normal development and health, as indeed we imagine the birds of prairie and forest to enjoy."

Taking then the babe in her arms, the minister proceeded to say:

"Beautiful as a flower from heaven, this babe is to bless your wedded life. May the ministering spirits accompany her as the years go by.

"On thee, dear child, I strew these petals, symbol of the baptism of heaven, where the flowers never fade. I christen thee for this world, Martha Evaline, and for the heavenly name we will call thee the Flower of Life."

The girls dressed in white, encircling the minister in charge, expressed angelic sentiments concerning her holy function, appreciating her as the beloved pastor. S.

The Babylonians, according to tradition, became a nation under Belus, the Nimrod of the Book of Genesis.

IMPORTANT!

DR. G. E. WATKINS,

—THE—

FAMOUS CHRONIST,

OF AYER, MASS.

QUICK CURES! SMALL DOSES!

Send age, name in full and two 2-cent stamps and leading symptom, and we will send you a diagnosis of your case FREE, and we will try and make the price of treatment right to you. Remember, please, that we do not wish to take your case unless you are dissatisfied with your present treatment. Do not ask OUR opinion of this doctor or that one, because we never express an opinion, nor have we any one connected with us that is allowed to speak ill of any one or even to express an opinion. We know some doctors do so, but we do not.

The day of shot-gun prescription is past; drastic drugs in large doses will not be given ten years from now. We believe in the certainty of medicine and in specific medication, but specific medication requires specific diagnosis. He who understands the action of drugs, and who is gifted with the power of correctly diagnosing, is the successful physician to-day.

SPECIFIC MEDICINE! NO DRASTIC DRUGS!

A Book on "Chronic Disease" Sent for 2-cent Stamp.

G. E. WATKINS, M. D.,

AYER, MASS.

DR. C. E. WATKINS.

A Wonderfully Gifted Man.

Something About the So-called Quacks, and Something About the Regular M. D's.

The first and prominent desire of man has been to prolong his existence, and even at the present day, notwithstanding the eagerness with which wealth is sought, the preservation of health and life occupies a conspicuous situation in the hearts of men. Health is of the first importance to the human family. What treasures can indemnify us for its loss? What is the nature of that life which is passed in pain and suffering? Of what use can a diseased man be to his fellow-creatures, to his wife, to his children, to himself? If it be possible, patients should choose the physician who has the greatest success in curing disease—not the one who has the greatest number of diplomas. Medical diplomas cannot cure the sick; they cannot even be used for a plaster. Many quack plasters are far better, especially an old-fashioned mustard plaster; yet medical education is of the greatest importance, if for no other reason than to discover the harm certain drastic drugs are doing. There are thousands of medical quacks who are practicing medicine to-day; some regular graduates, and some the seventh daughter of the seventh daughter, who would make better blacksmiths and better dressmakers than physicians.

There are without question a great many who have some kind of a psychic gift, who can diagnose a case correctly. These are called clairvoyants, but unless they have a medical education they seldom cure the sick. There are the regular "M. D's", who have no intuitive powers; who cannot diagnose correctly, and not knowing what is the matter with their patients, they fail to cure; and yet there are physicians who have a thorough medical education, and are also gifted with the power of correctly diagnosing a case. To cure disease one must have a correct knowledge of the disease; this knowledge combined with a medical education is what makes the successful physician of to-day; such a physician we find in Dr. C. E. Watkins, the famous chronist. His gift of psychic power by which he correctly diagnoses disease is marvelous, and his cures are most remarkable, curing the sick where all others fail. Dr Watkins is a regular graduate, yet he says that if he did not have the gift of correctly diagnosing a case he would not practice medicine a single day. A great many M. D's have this gift, yet they, through fear of their medical brothers, refuse to acknowledge this gift. Dr. Watkins, on the other hand, claims boldly that he is a firm believer in this psychic power of diagnosing. We take this sentence from his book on chronic disease: "We wish all to understand, however, that it is our honest belief that we are guided daily and hourly by some power higher than ourselves. We feel that it would be an act of cowardice on our part to deny this fact, yet we do not ask others to believe it."

Dr. Watkins has a most wonderful power or gift, different from most physicians, and the world knows it to be a fact, as he has time and again demonstrated this fact. Once one who was sick unto death, telegraphed her symptoms, thus: "Portland, Maine, September 24.—Dr. C. E. Watkins, Ayer, Mass.: Severe pain in head. Telegraph prescription at once. Mrs. L. Brown." The Doctor telegraphed: "Will give you psychic treatment at once."

Two hours after the answer came: "Pain all gone."

We find seven such cures made in the past year by the Doctor. One poor woman suffering from a complication of diseases, walked some seven miles to see the Doctor. Her own friends did not know where she had gone. She had faith to believe the Doctor could cure her, and he did in five minutes' time, and sent her home in his carriage, and she has been well ever since. The touch of the Doctor's hand relieves pain at once, and that he can cure disease without touching his patients and without medicine is also a truth. This phase he calls psychic treatments; and Dr. Watkins' psychic power is no new gift with him, as the world knows that his gift of psychic power or mediumship is a fact that he has demonstrated for twenty years. Dr. Watkins puts up himself all of his medicines. He leaves this to no one else. He is always to be found at his office from 8 a. m. until 10 and 11 p. m., hard at work for his patients. JOHN STRONG.

DRS. PEEBLES & BURROUGHS,

SPECIALISTS IN ALL CHRONIC DISEASES.

—Depend for their remarkable cures, not upon the old drastic drug system, but upon the knowledge of diseases and their proper remedies—upon science and the finer psychic forces.

Some of their cures, like Schlatter's, are INSTANTANEOUS; in other cases months are required.

Having carefully studied all the therapeutic agencies in connection with their long medical experience, they use those best adapted to each case with unvarying success.

Hundreds are joyfully writing the Doctor: "I am better," or "I am cured." "God bless you."

THEY TREAT THE FOLLOWING:

Dyspepsia, diarrhœa, dropsy, epilepsy, eczema, erysipelas, falling sickness, rheumatism, scrofula, nervous spasm, gravel, gout, headaches, heart disease, kindey complaint, female weakness, liver difficulty, neuralgia, paralysis, bleeding piles, bronchitis, asthma, bladder affection, cancer, catarrh, pimples upon the face, uterine diseases, weaknesses of men, barrenness, insanity, drunkenness, constipation, la grippe and all chronic diseases. And further, they furnish

FREE TO ALL PATIENTS

Hygenic and Physiological literature, enabling them when cured, to remain healthy.

Correct Diagnosis Free,

By enclosing name, age, sex, leading symptom and stamp for reply.

REMEMBER TO ADDRESS

DRS. PEEBLES & BURROUGHS,
P. O. BOX 177,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND. 351tf

PASSED TO SPIRIT-LIFE.

MRS. ANNA ORVIS.

Mrs. Anna Orvis, a favorite speaker and medium of Chicago, passed to spirit-life at San Jose, Cal., December 31, 1896. Mrs. Orvis was a highly gifted lady, and leaves a large circle of friends in this city to mourn her untimely departure to the spirit side of life. It was hoped that her removal to California would result in her recovering her health, but unfortunately such was not the case.

A little bud now blooming in the Summerland. Eddie, 6 years old, son of C. L. and Jennie Dean, has received the eternal reward which awaits innocent childhood. The writer laid the little form in mother earth, December 29, 1896. JOHN W. RING.

Galveston, Texas.

Passed to spirit-life, from Braintree, Vt., November 10, 1896, Mr. Geo. Pratt, aged 70. His last illness covered a period of several months and was of a very distressing character; but he was devotedly cared for by Mrs. Tarbell, his only surviving child. Mr. Pratt was loyal to his convictions and outspoken in his opinions; but tolerant toward others; hospitable and generous to a fault; kindly affectionate to his friends and warmly attached to children. He had been a Spiritualist for more than forty years, and with his esteemed wife, one of the first and most devoted lecturers and test mediums of Vermont, labored zealously and unselfishly for the advancement of its cause. May the blessed assurance of its religion outweigh all earthly loss to his near relatives and many friends. E. L. PAUL.

Passed to the higher life, in North Dorset, Vt., on the 10th day of August, 1896, Frank Maynard, aged 73 years.

Like most mediums, Mrs. Maynard is blest (or cursed) with a sensitiveness which has made her life peculiarly trying; but her husband has been to her a tower of strength, and his patience and good nature never failed.

None of us, to whom their house was and is the very gate of heaven, will ever forget his hearty welcome, his pleasant face and genial words. His neighbors among whom he walked visibly for fifty years, held him in the highest estimation as an honest, kindly, peace-loving man; wise in counsel, full of neighborly kindness, and active in good works.

And although to Mrs. Maynard, her loneliness and the desolation of her home seems more than she can bear, yet the constant care of the angel world is more apparent, and almost every hour they give her proofs of their interest and unfailing love. S. A. N.

MEMORIAL SERVICES.

Memorial services were held Sunday evening, December 27, 1896, by the People's Religious Spiritual Society of Cincinnati, Ohio, in honor of Mrs. Susan Cassel, one of Cincinnati's best mediums and workers in the case of Spiritualism. Mrs. Heckman, of Covington, Ky., delivered a noble invocation, after which Mrs. Mary Garrett, organizer of the society, made a few appropriate remarks, portraying the true and noble life, the many acts of charity and kindness of our departed sister, to which all who knew her could testify. The hall was crowded, as it always is when our medium, Mrs. Garrett, is on the platform. The table was decorated most beautifully with flowers, and a memorial card placed upon it, with the following words in gilt letters: "Susan Cassel, aged 64 years, passed to her eternal home. She will be missed, but not forgotten by her sister medium, Mrs. Mary Garrett." Sister Cassel's career as a medium was of many years' standing. Quietly she performed her mission, and as quietly ended her earthly labor, passing away very suddenly in the stillness of the night, to the intense surprise and sorrow of her many dear friends.

BARBARA BECHTOLD.

Dr. E. J. Worst,

of Ashland, Ohio, will mail any reader of The Progressive Thinker one of his new Aerial Catarrh Inhalers with medicine enough for one year free. He will allow you three days as a trial, then if perfectly satisfied, send him $1; if not, return it to him in the original package. Catarrh, asthma, colds in the head, bronchitis and tuberculosis immediately relieved and speedily cured. Don't pay big prices for worthless inhalers. Address above. 376

The Belgians are the children of the Belgii, who are first named in "Caesar's Commentaries."

Mrs. Dr. Dobson-Barker,

AS A SPIRITUAL HEALER HAS NO EQUAL! . . . .

Rejoice and Be Glad! Herald Forth the Tidings of Good Health!

DR. A. B. DOBSON'S

Healing powers are being repeated over and over again through the mediumship of MRS. DR. DOBSON-BARKER, who, for the past year and a half has

SUCCESSFULLY TREATED OVER ONE THOUSAND PATIENTS

of all diseases that flesh is heir to, and will give you proof of her powers, by sending requirements as per small advertisement for diagnosis of your case. Here is one of her many cures:

St. Louis, June 21, 1896.

MY DEAR MRS. DOBSON:—I herewith enclose $1.15 for another month's remedies for my sister Emma. I can't tell you how much good these medicines do her and how thankful and grateful we are for having applied for them. When she began taking this last medicine, she had considerable distress in the bowels and stomach, but after a week she was relieved and we are convinced if she had not the medicine she would have had a serious sick spell as liver, stomach and bowels were in a bad condition. Now everything seems in good order; still we feel as if more medicine will eventually cure all her ailments. We thank you sincerely for prompt reply, and wish you all the success you so well merit.

With affectionate regards, very truly,
REBECCA LEVY.

8331 Laclede ave., St. Louis Mo

THE LYCEUM QUESTION AS VIEWED BY W. H. BACH.

I see that I have been called down again. This time on the Lyceum question.

Brother Tuttle thinks my "statistics" would be interesting reading. Yes, Brother Tuttle, I have quite number of statistics that would be interesting reading but they would be more interesting to our enemies to use against us than they would be for us to take. The worst part of them is that they are true and have been gleaned while out in the practical work of upbuilding Spiritualism, and when coming in contact with the Spiritualist societies of the United States.

My figures on the number of Lyceums were from Mr. Barrett, who has traveled all over the United States, and has taken pains to learn the number and as much as possible of their career. Perhaps I am peculiar, but I prefer to accept the statistics of those who are engaged in the practical work of Spiritualism, and coming in contact with the people, than the statistics of those who stay at home and theorize.

The fact that Dr. Peebles and my critic published a "year book of Spiritualism" which listed but seventy-three lyceums does not constitute statistics. Anyone who has attempted to secure statistics of Spiritualism without going for them personally realizes of how little importance such a work is.

The census of 1890 was a case in hand. The papers assisted and sent out hundreds and perhaps thousands of blanks to be filled out. The interest was so great that out of the boasted ten or twelve millions of Spiritualists but 45,030 were reported and the records as shown in the census bureau today say that the Spiritualists number 45,030 and have property valued at $573,650, with 334 organizations.

Several attempts have been made within the past two or three years to secure a complete list of the societies and mediums in the United States and until the matter was taken up by the president of the N. S. A. and made a personal matter, gathering statistics wherever he went, which has been in, I think, forty states and territories, no definite figures could be given. These attempts have failed for the reason that response could not be had from the people. I was connected with an effort to learn the number of Spiritualists in a certain section. We gave it up for the same reason. Therefore, unless responses were more prompt and complete in former days than they are at present, I think that if returns were received from seventy-three there must have been over twelve hundred.

The Lyceum movement has flourished in England and Brother Tuttle knows it as well or better than I do. Thirty years ago there was but one lyceum in Great Britain, which met in the town of Nottingham. According to the statistics given by Mr. J. J. Morse there were eighty-four the first of October 1895.

But the conditions are different. We must remember that England contains but 50,840 square miles, or a little more than our one State of New York, and, if I am correctly informed, the Spiritualism of Great Britain is practically confined to England. If this is not a healthy showing compared with even the reports as given by brother Tuttle, what is it?

My statistics come from a personal experience and observation and the experience of veteran lyceum workers. Mr. J. B. Hatch, Jr. who belongs to a family of three generations of Lyceum workers and whose hand is always ready with funds to assist the Lyceum movement, before a meeting in Boston said: "You say the Lyceum is progressing. Yes. It has progressed from a point where there was not a hall in the city of Boston large enough to accommodate the crowds that attended, and when we postponed the march because there was no room to march in, until the conductor can count every person in the hall. The number of Lyceums has 'progressed' the same way.

Certainly the Lyceum movement is now looking up. But it is not even a circumstance to what it should be. The greater proportion of the larger cities have no Lyceum. A good organizer could do much to remedy this. Personal experience proves it to me and to other active workers.

While I honor the lady spoken of by Brother Tuttle in an article recently published in which he stated that "she proposed to start a lyceum with herself, her child and a Lyceum Guide as members," it must be understood that one mother, one child and one book do not make a Lyceum.

If my memory serves me right, another article said: "It was while conducting a lyceum of four hundred members that Mrs. Tuttle saw the necessity of a lyceum Guide, and the present work is the result." Now it would be interesting to us to hear of the "progress" of that lyceum. It had four hundred members several years ago. How many has it now? W. H. BACH.

WHAT WE WANT TO DO.

We desire to illuminate the minds of every Spiritualist. We will therefore send The Progressive Thinker to new subscribers for three months for fifteen cents, and hope by so doing to reach 1,000,000 of Spiritualists. For full particulars in reference to this remarkable offer read the communication headed "Fifteen Cents," on our fifth page.

Golden Laxative Coffee cures constipation 50 cents by mail. Golden Laxative Coffee Co., Ayer, Mass. 373

A Good Offer.

If you are sick and have failed to find relief, send your name and address to Dr. J. R. Craig, 1346 Market street, San Francisco, Cal., and he will send you a correct diagnosis. Stamps for reply. 378

The Burmese are mentioned first as a nation at the foundation of the present dynasty, in 1750 A. D.

SPECIAL READING NOTICES.

Mothers will find "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" the best to use for children while teething. An old and well tried remedy.

SPIRITUALIST BADGES.

EVERY . . . . SPIRITUALIST SHOULD WEAR THE SUNFLOWER JEWELRY.

As the Sunflower turns its face towards the sun, so Spiritualism turns the faces of humanity from darkness and superstition towards the Sunlight of Truth and Progression.

PRICES:

Rolled Plate Bar Pin	$2 25
Solid Gold Bar Pin	8 50
Electro-plate Badge	75
Rolled Plate Badge, Scarf Pin or Lapel Button	1 25
Solid Gold Badge, Scarf Pin or Lapel Button	1 75
Rolled Plate Maltese Watch Charm	3 00
Solid Gold Maltese Watch Charm	5 00
Rolled Plate Maltese Pendant	3 00
Solid Gold Maltese Pendant	5 00

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE,
40 LOOMIS STREET, CHICAGO

Spiritualist Meetings in Chicago

The Church of the Soul, at Schiller Theater. Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, pastor. Services at 10:45 a. m.

The First Spiritual Society of the South Side, New Masonic Temple, 3120 Forest avenue. Services at 2:30 and 7:30. Mrs. Ada Foye lectures and gives tests.

Beacon Light Church 617 North Clark street, near Burton Place. Services at 2:30 and 7:45 p. m., conducted by Mr. and Mrs. Geo. F. Perkins.

German Spiritualist Society, Gartelman's Hall, 13th street and Ashland avenue. Services at 3 and 8 p. m.

The Spiritual Endeavor Society meets at 1 South Hoyne avenue, 7:45 p. m. Mrs. Sarah E. Bromwell, pastor.

Spiritual Gospel Temple, Hygeia Hall, Washington boulevard and Paulina St. Services at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m.

Home Spiritualist Society, 11 Ada street, at 3 and 8 p. m.

The Church of the Spirit, Willis Edwards, pastor, meets at 620 North Clark street, at 3 and 8p. m. Lyceum at 2 p. m.

People's Home Association, Bricklayer's Hall, 93 South Peoria street. Services at 7:30 p. m.

South Side Christian Spiritual Society, Kenwood Hall, 4308 and 4310 Cottage Grove avenue. Conference meeting at 3 p. m. Lecture at 8 p. m.

The Spiritualists Church of the Students of Nature meets every Sunday evening at 7 p. m., at Monsen's Hall, 1052, Milwaukee avenue, corner Lincoln street. Mrs. M. Summers, pastor.

Spiritual Advancement Society, 684 West Madison street. Services at 7:45 p. m. Dr. Hasenclever will lecture and give spirit messages, assisted by other prominent mediums.

Brown's Hall, Forty-seventh and State streets. Services at 8 p. m. Lecture and tests by Dr. Harry Abbott of California.

Society of Spiritual Truth, 887 West Monroe street. Services at 8 p. m.

The First Society of Spiritual Unity will meet Sundays at 11 a. m., 3 and 7:30 p. m., in Washington Hall, 490 Washington boulevard, corner of Ogden avenue. Mrs. Mary C. Lyman, speaker.

South Side Christian Spiritualist Society, 4308 Cottage Grove avenue. Services at 3 and 7:30 p. m. Mrs. Lee Norie Claman, pastor.

The Progressive Spiritual Church, Lakeside Hall, southeast corner Indiana avenue and Thirty-first street, G. V. Cordingley, pastor. Services at 3 and 7:30 p. m. Harry W. Miller, soloist. Children's lyceum at 1:30; Bible class at 2:30.

German Spiritual Society, Hanshman's Hall, 384 W. Division street. Services 2:30 p. m. Mrs. Caroline Drews, medium.

Mrs. Caroline Drews, German trance medium, holds services at 2:30 p. m. in Hanschmann's Hall, 384 W. Division street.

The Church of the Star of Truth meets every Sunday evening, at Wicker Park Building, in the large lodge hall, on North avenue, near corner Milwaukee avenue, North avenue and Robey street. Services at 7:30 p. m. Easily reached from all parts of the city. Max Hoffman, pastor.

Spiritual meetings at 77 Thirty-first street, South Side, every Sunday at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m. Lecture and tests by Mrs. Edith E. R. Nickless.

Spiritual Church of Love, Faskin's Hall, 3012 Archer avenue. Mrs. E. J. Hanson. Children's lyceum, 2 p. m., followed by developing circle. Spiritual science at 7:30 p. m. Tests at all meetings.

Divine services in Mystic Temple, 1910 Washington boulevard near W. 40th street, at 10:45 a. m. and 7:45 p. m. Sunday-school of Love at 2 o'clock. Georgina McIntyre.

Valuable Books and Pamphlets.

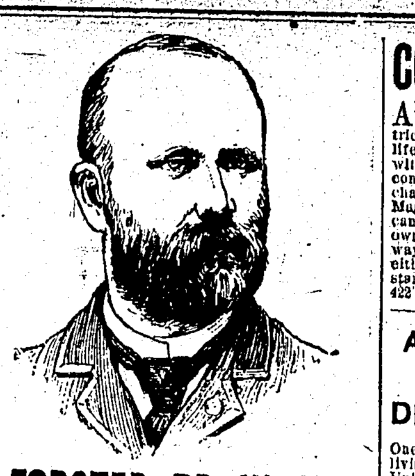
We have on hand a limited number of copies of the various writings and lectures of Mrs. Maria M. King, whose name ranks high in the list of Spiritualist authors, for profundity in philosophic thought. Her elucidations of various questions pertaining to the science and philosophy of Spiritualism, as well as the related field of natural science, are truly remarkable for their depth and clearness. These books and pamphlets constitute of themselves a noble Spiritual library, of sufficient intrinsic value to worthily engage the study and thought of the wisest students in spiritual science.

Although slightly shop-worn, they are in good condition, and we offer them at reduced rates, as follows:

The Principles of Nature, as Discovered in the Development and Structure of the Universe. Material and Spiritual Magnetic Forces. Laws of Spiritual Manifestations and Mediumship. Spiritual Planes and Spheres. Given inspirationally, by Mrs. Maria M. King. In three volumes, 8vo. A remarkable work; among the greatest in the literature of Spiritualism. Price reduced from $1.75 to $1.25 per volume. Postage 12 cents.

PAMPHLETS.

The Spiritual Philosophy versus Diabolism. Two lectures by Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.



Mediumship. A chapter of Experiences. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price 10 cents.

God the Father, and the Man the Image of God. Two lectures. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.

What Is Spiritualism? and Shall Spiritualists Have a Creed? Two lectures. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.

Social Evils: Their Causes and Cure. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.

The Brotherhood of Man, and What Follows from It. Two lectures. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.

FORSTER, DR. W. M,

THE NOTED MEDICAL CLAIRVOYANT OF THE PACIFIC COAST,

Will send a free diagnosis and terms for treatment to all who will send their name and address—in their own handwriting—with postage stamp for reply.

"The Pacific Coast Spiritualist" of Dec. 30, 1893, says of Dr. Forster:—

"Since his coming here he has made himself highly respected and beloved for his benevolent work, his humanitarian ideas and practices, and his straightforward course of integrity and honor."

"Dr. W. M. Forster, California's noted clairvoyant physician, is receiving commendations from far and near over his remarkable success as a healer."—Philosophical Journal.

Address,

DR. W. M. FORSTER,
1050 Market Street. - San Francisco, Cal. 333

A LOCK OF YOUR HAIR.

If SICK OR AILING, send a lock of your hair, name, age, sex, leading symptom, four cents postage, and I will diagnose your case and tell you what will cure your ailments. Address

DR. J. C. BATDORF,
Dept. F., Grand Rapids, Mich. 358tf

ASTONISHING OFFER.

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, name, age, sex, one leading symptom, and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

MRS. DR. DOBSON-BARKER,
SAN JOSE, CAL., Box 132 346tf

DR. J. S. LOUCKS,

Of Shirleyville, Mass., and his band of powerful ancient spirits are effecting the most wonderful cures that have been recorded and are so acknowledged. By his clear knowledge of your diseases, aided by his marvelous spirit forces combined with his magnetic remedies, will convince the most skeptical of his wonderful power to heal the sick. Try him. Send him sex, age, name, lock of hair, and four 2-cent stamps, and he will send a diagnosis of your case free. He doesn't want any leading symptoms. Address DR. J. S. LOUCKS, Shirleyville, Massachusetts. 374

INVALIDS

WHO WILL SEND FOUR CENTS IN stamps, their disease, or symptoms, will receive pamphlet and advice FREE to cure themselves without drugs. The THOMAS BATTERY COMPANY, Cardington, Ohio tf

PSYCHOMETRY, CONSULT WITH Prof. A. B. Severance in all matters pertaining to practical life, and your spirit-friends. Send lock of hair, or handwriting, and one dollar. Will answer three questions free of charge. Send for circulars. Address, 710 Prairie street, Milwaukee, Wis. 374tf

MRS. ELLA M. DOLE.

This medium, who is clairvoyant, clairaudient, psychometric and prophetic, can be consulted at No. 1680 North Clark street. Engagements can be made by letter. 340tf

UP TO DATE CHEMISTRY OF LIFE AND GOOD HEALTH.

A powerful and well-educated intuitional healer, who teaches and cures the sick.

Send address, lock of hair, sex, age, whether married or single, location of two leading pains, and two 3-cent stamps for free diagnosis to

DR. J. H. RANDALL,
Independent Medical College, People's Institute, Chicago, Ill. 374

MRS. B. HASENCLEVER, 684 MADISON STREET. Test and trumpet circle every Tuesday at 3 and 8 o'clock. 25 cents. Materializing seance Wednesdays and Saturdays at 8. Independent slate-writing daily. 373

OBSESSION.

Obsessing influences removed: earth-bound spirits released; haunted places freed, and the sick healed by MRS. M. BERGEN BROWN, Morgan Hill, Santa Clara county, Cal. Consulting fee, one dollar. Refer to Chas. Betts, Burr Oak, Mich. 373

F. CORDEN WHITE,

Trance, Test and Business Medium. Sittings daily. 3058 Calumet avenue, corner Thirty-first street. Flat 9. Chicago, Ill. 371tf

MRS. S. E. TRIPP,

Formerly Mrs. Gilman, of Houston, Texas, will hold seances for materialization on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings, at 3017 Wabash avenue, Chicago. Other circles by appointment. 375

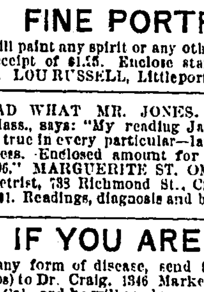
MRS. L. PACKER, 750 W. VAN BUREN. Clairvoyant, psychometry, business medium. Three reasonable questions answered by mail, with stamp, 25 cents. 376

Seership—Guide to Soul-Light.

Its art and culture, with rules for its attainment. Lucidity is no gift, but a universal possibility common to the human family. Price $2.

EULIS. The Third Revelation of Soul and Sex. A work containing many secret and inner doctrines of the Rosicrucians. In it and by it both man and woman have not merely the road to enormous power, both mental and individual, but the grand energy of effecting wished for changes in others; also prolongation of life. Price $2.50. Address KATE C. RANDOLPH, 23 Melrose avenue, Toledo, O. 379

SPECIAL TREATMENT FOR HEALTH AND success in business. After taking a vacation, we again offer our services to the public. For particulars address R. J. Brown, Box 153, Austin, Cook Co., Ills. 375



FINE PORTRAITS.

I will paint any spirit or any other photo in crayon, on receipt of $1.55. Enclose stamp for particulars. MRS. LOU RUSSELL, Littleport, Iowa. 376

READ WHAT MR. JONES OF CAMBRIDGE, Mass., says: "My reading January 20, 1896, has come true in every particular—lawsuit, sickness and business. Enclosed amount for another, December 30, 1896." MARGUERITE ST. OMER BRIGGS, Psychometrist, 733 Richmond St., Cincinnati, O. Readings, $1. Readings, diagnosis and business, $2. 376

IF YOU ARE SICK

with any form of disease, send ten cents (silver or stamps) to Dr. Craig, 1346 Market street, San Francisco, Cal., and he will send you a trial treatment of a revealed vegetable tablet. They will positively cure any disease, including stomach, liver or kidney trouble; also rheumatism and diseases of the nervous system. Testimonials will be furnished from people who have been permanently cured with one trial treatment. 377 and Head Noises relieved by using Wilson's Common Sense Ear Drums. New scientific invention; different from all other devices. The only safe, simple, comfortable and invisible Ear Drum in the world. Helps where medical skill fails. No wire or string attachment. Write for pamphlet. WILSON EAR DRUM CO., 234 Trust Bldg., Louisville, Ky. 1122 Broadway, [Room 250] New York.

DEAFNESS

ANGELL PRIZE CONTEST RECITATIONS.

To Advance Humane Education in All Its Phases.

BY EMMA ROOD TUTTLE.

Lyceums and Societies that wish to get up elevating, interesting and paying entertainments cannot do better than to have a Prize Contest. The entire plan, with full directions, is in the book, and may be easily managed. Nothing kindles enthusiasm more quickly than an Angell Prize Contest! Nothing is needed more. Any individual may organize one in his own town and reap a financial reward.

TRY IT! PRICE, 30 CENTS.

Address
EMMA ROOD TUTTLE,
Berlin Heights, Ohio.

COLLEGE OF FINE FORCES

AN INSTITUTE OF REFINED THERAPEUTICS including the Sun Cure, Vital Magnetism, Electricity, Mind Cure, and a higher science of life. Chemical affinity and basic principles developed with their marvelous applications. Students in four continents have taken the course. The college is chartered and confers the degree of D. M., Doctor of Magnetics. By a system of printed questions students can take the course and receive the diplomas at their own homes. Institution removed to 253 So. Broadway, Los Angeles, Cal. Diplomas granted under either the New Jersey or California charter. Send stamp for catalogue to

422 E. D. BABBITT, M. D. LL. D., Dean

A WONDERFUL OFFER . . BY . . . DR. W. F. LAY, Clairvoyant,

One of the most successful healers and diagnosticians living. The doctor has letters from all over the United States, Canada, Australia and Europe, telling of the marvelous results, after all hope in other sources have been given up, being speedily cured under his treatment. Nervous and chronic diseases of every character, peculiar to both men and women, are, by the aid of his wonderful and extraordinary power, cured.

The doctor has never failed in a correct diagnosis of any case, many times it being cases that had baffled the most renowned physicians, but was readily explained through his wonderful clairvoyant and clairaudient powers.

Each case receives the attention of himself and band, also remedies for individual case. Send three 2-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, sex, and one symptom, and by return mail you will receive a full and accurate description of your case and any advice regarding it. Through persecution on account of his marvelous success the doctor graduated in a regular school, therefore being an M. D.

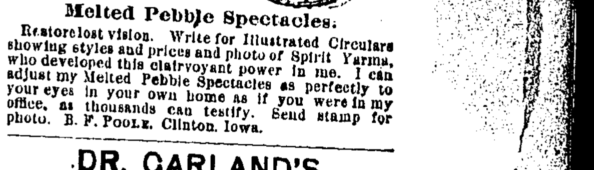
Sufferers, you that have failed to find relief, try once more and be convinced of Dr. Lay's powers and ability. Address

342tf DR. W. F. LAY, Box 918, Chicago, Ill.

HELIOCENTRIC ASTROLOGY.

A book containing instructions for making a heliocentric horoscope, together with a chart which gives the position of the planets from 1821 to 1916. The most complete work on this system ever published. Adapted for beginners or professors. One can cast and read a horoscope in half an hour. For sale by

FREDERICK WHITE, O. O. M.,
502 Fifth Ave., S. - Minneapolis, Minn.



Send the date of your birth and $1 and receive book and chart with your horoscope ready to read. Mention this paper when writing. 344tf

BETTER THAN GOLD.

Elixir of Life Nos. One and Two

Cures all forms of stomach, liver and kidney disease; also constipation. A sure cure for that tired, worn-out feeling. Guaranteed to assist your system to health with pure, rich blood. Sufficient quantity for one month sent for $1.00.

One package of our Magnetized Compound for sore eyes or poor eyesight. Has been used and praised by thousands in all parts of the world. Sent for 60 cents, or all three sent postpaid for $1.00, with Yarma's photo and instructions how to live 100 years.

Melted Pebble Spectacles.

Restore lost vision. Write for Illustrated Circulars showing styles and prices and photo of Spirit Yarma, who developed this clairvoyant power in me. I can adjust my Melted Pebble Spectacles as perfectly to your eyes in your own home as if you were in my office, as thousands can testify. Send stamp for photo. B. F. POOLE, Clinton, Iowa.

DR. GARLAND'S VEGETABLE COUGH DROPS

Are put up in six-ounce tin boxes and are guaranteed to give satisfaction or money will be refunded by the proprietor, Dr. M. H. Garland. Send 25 cents in stamps and receive by return mail a box of this

HOUSEHOLD REMEDY

as you will find it a blood cleanser as well as a Throat and Lung Remedy. Over 200,000 boxes sold and all recommend them. Address all orders to DR. M. H. GARLAND, 332 Sixtieth Place, Station O., Chicago, Illinois. 322tf

ORDER OF THE MAGI.

A New Badge in solid gold with blue and black enamel, with the pyramids, obelisk and sun's rays in gold. Every Mystic should have one of these beautiful emblems. Price $2. For sale at this office.

PSYCHE

Is the invention of a practical medium, under spirit guidance, and is designed to develop mediumship. Many, by its use, have received long communications from spirit friends, and express great satisfaction. Price, $1, and 20 cents extra for expressage. For sale at the office of THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER.

DR. T. WILKINS,

67 33D STREET, CHICAGO,

Treats Magnetically all Chronic Diseases, at office, or home of the patient.

J. C. F. GRUMBINE, SEER,

Is developing sensitives in Psychometry, Clairvoyance, Inspiration and Psychopathy by a series of inspirational teachings through the law of correspondence. For booklet, endorsements, terms, send an addressed and stamped envelope to J. C. F. GRUMBINE, 7820 Hawthorne Street, Station P, Chicago, Illinois. Psychiscopes, including a regular sitting, $2. For list of publications of "White Rose," send an addressed and stamped envelope. 364tf

CHRONIC DISEASES

A SPECIALTY.

Send your age, name in full in your own handwriting, and I will diagnose your disease

FREE OF CHARGE!

Enclose three 2-cent stamps and address

J. S. COOPER, M. D.
Chillicothe, Mo. 384

DR. MARY E. SELLEN.

CHRONIC AND NERVOUS DISEASES.

Every Case Successfully Treated. Magnetic Treatment Given. Fees Reasonable.

Office, Independent Medical College, People's Institute, Chicago, Ill.
LEAVITT AND VAN BUREN STREETS. 376

OCCULT FORCES!

A wonderful book containing valuable matter of intense interest to all who desire in any way to benefit their condition in life, a marvel of condensed thought and brilliant ideas pointing a new way to success in all undertakings through the mastery of subtile forces.

Develop your latent powers and accomplish what would otherwise be impossible. This knowledge not only increases personal influence but fortifies one against designing and unprincipled persons. Price of book 30c. or sent free for addresses of friends likely to be interested in it and 2c in stamps [illegible] free. OCCULT PUB. CO., 3574 Vincennes Avenue, P. T., Chicago, Ill. 410

The Blind Medium

Will send by letter life reading of past and future, with dates. Mail lock of hair and one dollar. Prof. H. W. Sinclair. 82 Adams avenue, Detroit, Mich. 378

HOROSCOPES

★ FREE For Men, Women, Young People and Children.

Send at once. PLANETS AND PEOPLE,
Enclose Stamp. 169 Jackson St., Chicago.

Send 25 cents for MAGAZINE OF THE HEAVENS.

LADIES, If you have superfluous

HAIR ON THE FACE

send for new information how to remove it easily and effectually without chemicals or instruments. Correspondence confidential in plain sealed envelope. Mrs. M. N. PERRY, B-130, Oak Park, Ill.

RUPTURE SURE CURE at home; book free. Dr. W. S. Rice, box 89, Smithville, N. Y. 367 13teow

MANSILL'S ALMANAC —OF— PLANETARY METEOROLOGY.

Weather Forecasters' Guide and New System of Science for 1897. It contains a planetary chart of each month, showing the position of the planets in the different houses in the Zodiac.

BY RICHARD MANSILL,

Author of "Geology and Microscopy Illustrated," "Cohesive Attraction and the Formation of World," "Universal Change in Natural Elements," etc. Price 25 cents. For sale at this office.

HEALTH AND POWER.

A handbook of Cure and Human Upbuilding by the aid of new, refined and powerful methods of nature. By E. D. Babbitt, M. D., author of "Principles of Light and Color," "Philosophy of Cure," etc. Price, cloth, 25 cents; Leather, 35 cents.

SCIENCE, SUPPLEMENTED BY AN EXALTED MORALITY, THE BIBLE OF THE FUTURE.

The Progressive Thinker

Progress, the Universal Law of Nature; Thought, the Solvent of Her Problems.

VOL. 15. CHICAGO, ILL., SATURDAY, JANUARY 23, 1897. NO. 374.

HUMANE EDUCATION.

ITS NECESSITY VERY VIVIDLY POINTED OUT.

INTRODUCTORY ADDRESS BY EMMA ROOD TUTTLE, AT THE ANGELL PRIZE CONTEST, BERLIN HEIGHTS, OHIO, DEC. 12, 1896.

There is an object in holding this entertainment which is higher than awarding the beautiful medal which some one of our young speakers will win tonight. It is to aid in spreading the divine gospel of love; to join in the march of those who endeavor to follow the mandate of Jehovah who said: "I, the Lord, love mercy—I will have mercy," and of Jesus Christ who declared "Justice, mercy, and faith are the weightier matters."

The spirit of Christ and the demon of Cruelty are in direct antagonism, and he who has the spirit of Christ will manifest mercy to all beings.

As I look in your faces tonight, I feel that there is not a person before me who is not trying to live to do good, not one who will not agree with me that cruelty tends to crime; that crime is nothing but various forms of cruelty. So kindness-teaching prevents crime and promotes safety and economy: for how much it does cost to convict and take care of our criminals! Hear this significant fact: Of six thousand graduates from a Scotch school, where kindness to animals is always taught, not one has ever been charged with crime.

You will agree with me that a careful regard for the rights and feelings of all sensitive beings, whether human or dumb, is the root of good manners, good citizenship, and of Christianity.

I regret to say that the church and the Sabbath-School are behind the state and the public school in teaching the mercy principles of Christianity.

As yet, the National Sunday-School Lesson Committee refuses to give a place to lessons on kindness to animals; but humane teaching has been ordained by law in all the school of some States, and Massachusetts has abolished vivisection in her schools, under penalty.

While the clergy, with but few exceptions, are as yet, silent before this towering iniquity, Robert G. Ingersoll, Philip Peabody and other skeptics are bravely opposing it. Place that to their credit if you give no other praise.

Oh, my friends, let us not "pitch our tents so far in the graveyards of the Past" that we lose sight of the bloody carnival going on in the seething Present. Duty calls us to act upon what is transpiring at the present moment, and, not upon by-gone work performed by men who have been dead for centuries. They may have acted nobly, and well—"Requiescat in Pace." Let us up! and join in the slogan-cry of war against present wrongs, for God knows the world is full of them. Look at Cuba, look at the Spanish demons, who centuries ago began killing, by inquisitorial torture, their best men—their thinking men, their kind men—their benefactors. Ought not they to have been attending mercy meetings instead of bull fights, these precious past years? I have often wondered if God did not make his first model of Hell in Spain, and forget to move out his pigmy demons. Among humanely educated people such war tragedies would be impossible.

Angell Prize contests were planned as a way of speedily quickening public sentiment toward the suppression of all forms of cruelty. They seem to meet a long-felt want and are being cordially adopted as fast as they are understood. The American Humane Educational Society has already purchased 1,400 copies of my book, and is sending them out in all directions. The Granges are seeing the importance of their aim and are engaging in Angell contests. The Erie County Pomona Grange has sent for books for the Sub-Granges, and next March will hold a meeting in this place, when a representative speaker from each Grange will contest for the Angell Prize medal.

And so the contest work, which started here, in this house, a little over a year ago, aided by your cordial patronage, has made a strong showing in one year, and I thank you all for your encouragement.

Speaking for myself, if you will pardon me, I tell you, I cannot help doing this work, I have always had an unutterable pity for slaves; for those held in bondage from their birth to their death; for those who work, but receive no wages; often not even sufficient food, drink, and shelter to make them comfortable; who are cursed when they do their best, and regarded as only property, not as friends. Some of the noblest and dearest friends I have ever had have been animal friends, and as they have been trusty and true to me, so I have been faithful to them. Their needs I have never forgotten, their pains have been mine and I have never been a Judas to anything I have ever owned. I have had many reproofs for wasting my energies on animals," but I always felt that I could afford to be just to animals as well as mankind. The pails of water I have carried to weary horses have never seemed heavy to me, and the thanks in their great, quiet eyes have been pay for all the trouble.

In my intimate acquaintance with my animal friends, I have found them possessed of so many traits identical with those of human beings that my egotism has all taken wings, and I know that God did not put all nobility into human form, but that he gave, generously, to the lower races as well as to man, of love, constancy and gratitude. Harsh tones pain them as do blows. An utter lack of sympathy makes them lonesome and despondent.

But I find most people have an entirely different standard of morals in dealing with animals and with men. No one would think of beating or whipping an overloaded man if he should fall beneath his burden, but we often see horses beaten when they fall in the harness, or strain to pull overloaded wagons. No one would strike a man because he could not stand up on an icy road, but the smooth-shod, or barefoot horse which slips, or fails to pull his load on the icy street is often cut with the driver's whip.

If you want a man not to stumble, you would never dream that you could prevent it by checking him up so he could see nothing but the sky above him.

If a man has severe labor to do, we know he must have ample food, plenty of drink, sleep, and shelter. But how often are all such needs disregarded when animals labor. People too often forget that the needs of man and beast are the same in all the essentials for health and comfort.

The labor of animals has always been claimed without dispute, but now another claim is made upon them which it chills my blood to talk about; but I put my sensitiveness under my feet and regretfully trample upon yours, because it is necessary that you know some very horrible things, that you may aid in repressing them. You can do this by talking, writing, and voting against them; by refusing to support persons who advocate and practice them. I know it is unpleasant to talk of such things, but it must be done if people are made to know they exist, and that they can stop them, and will do so, by laws and penalties.

The demand made upon animals is this: They are seized, and even raised, by hundreds of thousands for vivisection. That you understand probably as the dissection of living animals, but it technically means more than that. It means the most fiendish tortures which heartless experimentalists can invent. It means the brain-burnings of Goltz; the bakings alive of Carl Bernard; the crucifixion of Mantegazza; the electric stimulations of Brown Sequard; the freezing alive of J. C. Coleman; the disease-producing feeding of animals, upon the putrid lungs of human beings, by Dr. Klein; the inserting of tubes into arteries as practiced by Stephen Hales, of Teddington; the covering the shaven skins of animals with varnish by Drs. Kleinberg and Protatus; the injecting of putrid matter into the blood vessels by Dr. Sanderson; the starvings of Dr. Chossatt; the drownings and smotherings of the commission of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons, London; stopping windpipes with corks; holding animals under water until nearly dead and then by cruel methods restoring them to consciousness; holding the heads of Guinea pigs in basins of quicksilver to make them breathe it into their lungs; cramming the mouths and larynxes of dogs with liquid plaster of Paris, until it solidifies; these deeds, besides the yearly "cutting up" of more live animals than I could count to you, if I should count until morning—constitute vivisection. In Paris alone are 1,000 laboratories devoted to this business. Our American Colleges are practicing it, and even our public schools have attempted it in many places.

To do these things, Eurari, a drug which does not deaden sensitiveness, but paralyzes motion, is used, and in some cases Anesthetics, but not generally. There is no end of troughs, frames etc., to which the victims are fastened so immovably that the operators are safe, and so, as they express themselves, there is no need of anaesthetics! If they could be put there, would they say the same?

And now these hardened experimentalists are clamoring for human victims. A native of our own State, at Canton, Ohio, has been endeavoring to get a bill passed giving up State criminals for vivisection! You may be called upon to vote concerning these things. Do you want the doctors who treat your sick to come with hearts of stone, from such demoralizing lessons? No, and you will not have them!

Let me transport you to the hot-bed of vivisection, Alfort, France, and give you the sworn statements of eye witnesses:

"On June 3rd we again called at Alfort; we learned that about one hundred different experiments are performed there on each horse. Four horses are vivisected at one time, and eight boys are at work vivisecting each horse at the same time. These experiments begin at six o'clock and last until about noon.

"On June 10th we again called at this hell for horses, and witnessed this most horrible vivisection of three horses; many of the hundred experiments are repeated by each student, making probably two hundred experiments actually performed on each horse; when the end approached each of these wretched animals looked more like a piece of live meat than anything on this earth. I took a complete record of each of these experiments and gave it before me, but will not sicken the readers of the Transcript by giving the list.

"We saw no anesthetic in use or about the laboratories or elsewhere, and in answer to our question the highly intelligent attache who express duty it is to show visitors about and give them information, told us that no anaesthetics were used there, as the animals were so securely bound as to be incapable of resistance and anesthetics would be wholly unnecessary.

"PHILIP G. PEABODY."

And as fast as our Universities can afford it these expert professors are imported to American soil. One is now exploiting behind locked doors at Philadelphia in the University of Pennsylvania. And this cruelty is spreading over our land alarmingly. But you may dispute the extent of this business. Hear the truth!

In regard to the vivisection of other animals, Mr. Peabody says, in the same sworn statement:

"On May 10 of this year (1895) at Alfort, France, Dr. Baudry and I saw animals being vivisected and on hand for vivisection so numerous that it was utterly impossible to count them. Some idea of the number may be found when I say that in one room we counted thirty-five cages, many containing four to five animals in each cage; eight or ten animals could have comfortably lived in each cage; these cages are part of the structure, being permanently built in the room. Dogs, cats, sometimes with broods of kittens, rabbits, guinea pigs, parrots, pigeons, horses and mules were all there; one dog had four or five puppies. In another room in the same institution we counted twenty-eight, and in a third room twenty-four cages of dogs; several cages contained rabid dogs—in one case two rabid dogs being actually confined in the same cage. Many other rooms full of animals existed at this same institution, which I will not mention further than to say that we saw several hundred animals there, all intended for vivisection, and we failed to go into half of the rooms.

"On June 1 of this year (1895) we were shown through the Pasteur Institute in Paris, and found the whole place, consisting of many buildings, literally alive with animals; in one room we counted one hundred and twenty-seven cages, some containing twenty animals in a cage, all of which had been experimented on; we counted eighteen dogs (which animals they frequently deny having there), all of which had been inoculated with rabies—some or all—in the eye. We saw sheep, goats, rabbits, guinea pigs, rats, chickens and pigeons. We saw one laboratory where fourteen men vivisect at the same time. None of these animals, except the dogs, include those experimented on with rabies, which latter are kept in another room. We saw fully one thousand five hundred animals in this one institution, and we did not visit nearly all of the rooms."

But I have pained you. I did it in behalf of the innocent victims of man's cruelty.

THE CAUSE IN BOSTON, MASS.

To the Editor:—The annual meeting of the Massachusetts State Association, was held in Union Hall, Boylston street, all day Tuesday. The morning session was devoted to business. The president, Dr. G. A. Fuller had a very able report which was read by the secretary, Dr. Fuller being absent in Washington, D. C. It was well received and was unanimously adopted. The secretary's report was read, which was also adopted. A committee was appointed to draw up a set of resolutions to present to the convention committee: Moses Hull, Mrs. Carrie F. Loring and J. O. Perkins. The following officers were unanimously elected for the ensuing year: President, G. A. Fuller, M. D., of Worcester; first vice-president, Mr. J. B. Hatch, Jr. of Boston; second vice-president, Mr. N. B. Perkins, of Salem; third vice-president, Carrie F. Loring, E. Braintree; secretary, Carrie L. Hatch, Dorchester; treasurer, Wm. H. Banks, Malden; directors: Elvira S. Loring, Fitchburg; Hortense G. Holcombe, Springfield; J. O. Perkins, of Lowell. We had many able speakers and mediums to speak for us on that occasion, and we thank all for their kindness. Among those to take part were Dr. White, Mrs. Sarah A. Byrnes, one of our most eloquent speakers, Mrs. Carrie F. Loring, Moses Hull, J. B. Hatch, Sr., Oscar Edgerly, Mrs. Nettie Holt Harding, Mr. Grumbine, Mrs. Mattie Hull, and many others. Thanks are extended to Mr. M. A. Warren, and Mr. Cohen, for flowers received. A letter was received from the N. S. A. of Washington, D. C. sending greetings to the Massachusetts State Association of Spiritualists.

CARRIE L. HATCH, Sec.

OUR ANGEL MOTHER.

Our angel mother came to us, from spirit land,
And blessed, and caressed with sweet loving hand,
Touching each one, and both at one time—
Our own mother, from her heavenly shrine.
We in turn whispered: Mother, do you approve
Of our future plans for truth and love?
Yes! yes! came the taps, on our heads and hand,
From our beautiful mother, in spirit-land.
Oh how could we do aught but the right
When we know and feel all's in her sight—
Could we cause a spirit to look down in tears
At aught we might do in the coming years?
Ah! no, well have we learned in love for each other,
We have made happy our dear angel mother.
From the illumination that appeared to us then,
We received comfort, and assurance that when
We become developed in all that is grand,
We will be with that mother in spirit-land.

MRS. ELLA WOODWARD.

Toledo, Ohio.

THE FIRST LADIES' AID SOCIETY.

To the Editor:—At the annual meeting of the First Ladies' Aid Society of Boston (the oldest society) the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Mattie A. Allbe; vice-president, Mrs. Simeon Butterfield; secretary, Carrie L. Hatch; treasurer, Mrs. S. E. Burrel; directors, Mrs. A. E. Barnes, Mrs. Waterhouse, Mrs. Shachley, Mrs. Abbie Woods, Mrs. M. E. Young. This is a charitable society, and has done a great deal of good. We solicit contributions, both money and clothing, and we will assure you that it will be well used. This society meets every Friday at 241 Tremont street, Boston. The Boston Spiritual Lyceum in which the writer has the honor of being the guardian, is doing good work among the young people. We have a school of sixty and have rare talent. Our questions are well answered every Sunday, and we know by the answers that they are original. This Lyceum was started to make children think for themselves and we are pleased to notice its progress. This Lyceum meets in Berkeley Hall, every Sunday at 1 p. m. The Progressive Thinker is on sale at this hall every Sunday.

CARRIE L. HATCH.

74 Sydney St., Dorchester, Mass.

A SHINING LIGHT.

Spiritualism Has No Need of Christian nor Mohammedan.

It Is a Shining Light in Its Own Virtue.

Among a certain class of Spiritualists there seems to be a desire to obscure the bright light of Spiritualism by covering it over with the smoked glass of Christianity—a continual effort to cater to the prejudice and superstition of the past by aping the forms and ceremonies of the Christian church. Why should anyone wish to be called a Christian Spiritualist? Does it add anything desirable to Spiritualism? If a prefix is to be desired, why not the Mohammedan Spiritualist, the Buddhist Spiritualist, the Confucian Spiritualist, the Parsee Spiritualist, or the Brahmanical Spiritualist?

The ethics of any of the above-mentioned are one and all of them the equal—yes, the superior of Christianity. Never have they cursed humanity to the extent that Christianity has.

Their record, though perhaps at times stained and bedimmed, is not one continual saturnalia of bloodshed and wars, of massacre and assassination, of torture chamber and dungeon, of fagot and rack, of shrieks and groans, of anguish and tears. They came not as did Christianity to extinguish a brighter light which shone before them, but each one added oil to the lamp of knowledge that its flame might burn brighter and illumine the way of mankind—that its rays might make visible the path of justice and morality leading to higher planes.

Can the name Christian, which is inseparably associated with crime and mental blight, hallow that of Spiritualism? No; but will rather prove a barrier to the advanced and thinking people of the day.

How often do we hear from the Spiritualist rostrum that Christ was the greatest teacher that ever lived; and how ridiculous it must seem to those who are informed regarding the teachers of the past. As a teacher he was scarce third-rate. If he taught all that he is accredited with, he is not to be compared with some of the other teachers of antiquity.

The golden rule had been taught centuries before by others, so we cannot give him the credit of that, and many of his teachings are not only silly, but pernicious. For example, Luke xii:51: "Suppose ye that I am come to give peace on earth? I tell you nay; but rather division." Luke xiv:26: "If any man come to me and hate not his father and mother, and wife and children, and brethren and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple." Luke xix:27: "But those mine enemies which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither and slay them before me."

But you say they do not mean what they say. If they do not, and are so obscure that they may be interpreted in different ways, they are of but little value. A teacher whose meaning is not patent to all can scarce be called great. As teachers of humanity, the Stoic philosophers, Epictetus and Antoninus, were far in advance of Christ. Their teachings are as practical and applicable to this day and age as they were in centuries past. Their perception of the needs and possibilities of the human soul has never been excelled if equaled. The conception of a lofty and noble character which is revealed in the teachings of Antoninus is unrivaled. It is not one which seeks to curry favor with any man-made deity by self-abasement; nor does it deem itself inferior to any. It is the peer of all—self-contained, self-poised, knowing that all, whether good or evil, comes from within. Reason the only guide, and the divinity within recognized and glorified only by good thoughts, words and deeds.

"For virtue only of all human things
Takes her reward not from the hands of others.
Virtue herself rewards the toil of virtue."

In the article by G. W. Kates, reverence and a spirit of worship seem to be regarded as admirable attributes of the human character; though what good reason for it there may be I cannot see. I have no knowledge of any being that desires to be worshiped, unless it be some contemptible specimen of humanity whose soul is filled with vanity.

Reverence for what or who? Man being the crowning effort of nature—the epitome—there can be no other who requires the degradation of mankind by being reverenced or worshiped. They are attributes born of ignorance, and have been fostered by priest and king for selfish purposes. Man may have respect for good, for himself and his fellow-men, but when he exceeds respect and approaches reverence, then begins self-abasement, self-degradation and loss of proper self-respect.

Does nature require anything of the kind? I can discover no evidence of such desire, but if there is, to what particular part or force of nature should it be offered? Can it be that the sun-worshipers were fulfilling such a requirement?

Often do we hear Spiritualists extolling the Christian Bible as a source of inspiration and guide to mankind; though why they should is apparent to none but themselves. Of all books of that kind it is the filthiest and most nonsensical. There are many chapters in it, any one of which contains more filth and more idiotic statements than the Mohammedan Koran. I do not dispute that there are some good things in the Bible, but there being other books that have come to us from the teachers of the past that have more in them that is beautiful and good, and less that is filthy and disgusting, why cling to the Bible? If you must look to the past for a guide, will it not be better to take the best that can be obtained?

Before me I see a stable yard filled with filth in which a few flowers are growing, and also a field whose sward is dotted thick with flowers that are more beautiful and more fragrant than those in the stable yard. Shall I wade through the filth and offal to pluck the few flowers growing there, or rather shall I not pluck my flowers in the pleasant field? The comparison is none too strong as between the Bible and the teachings of the Stoic philosophers; and Mr. Editor, permit me to suggest that the discourses of Antoninus and Epictetus be added to the list of books which you supply your readers.

Though the word church may mean a sympathizing body of believers, it seems scarcely a fitting appellation for a society of Spiritualists. I did not suppose that many Spiritualists merely believed in spirit return, but rather knew it to be a fact. Be that as it may, how much more sympathy would there be in a church than in a spiritual society?

It does not seem becoming for an organization of independent and progressive thinkers, as I believe the majority of Spiritualists to be, to assume a name which has ever been associated with intellectual stagnation.

If spirit return is a demonstrable fact, it should be investigated in a scientific manner. There is no more reason for the fact that we continue to live, being made a sort of fetich, with all its attendant hocus-pocus of religious forms and ceremonies, than there is for the fact that we do live being made such. The phenomenon of spirit return is in harmony with nature's laws, or it could not occur. While it may effect man's emotional nature, as does no other phenomena, our attitude while examining it is not necessarily different than while examining any other phenomena of nature. If we have discovered a truth, why seek to disguise it in the blood-stained rags and tatters of Christianity? Truth has no need to seek recognition by means of hypocrisy or false pretenses, but can demand it upon its own merits. Let us proclaim the truth of Spiritualism to the world in a brave and manly way, and be respected even by our opponents for our honesty, instead of being despised for cringing apologists. Give us Spiritualism pure and simple, and scientifically demonstrated, and it will become the beacon light for all humanity.

A. CRAMER.

MRS. MARK M. POMEROY'S KINDERGARTEN.

Mrs. Mark M. Pomeroy gave the patrons of her school an enjoyable Christmas entertainment, Thursday morning, December 24. The guests were seated in the school-room which opened into the Kindergarten room, disclosing a circle of tiny chairs—like a fairy ring—and back of it a beautiful tree decorated with articles made by the scholars for their parents. The charm of this tree consisted in the fact that there was nothing upon it that had not been made by the busy little fingers of the scholars. Even baby Hazel, not quite three years old, had made a paper chain and a "stocking blotter," for her mamma. At the appointed time the little ones, led by the Kindergartener—Miss Eleanor Barwood, of Flatbush—marched down the stairs to the strains of a lively march played by Mrs. Pomeroy, taking their places in the fairy ring, while the older children had seats each side of the tree. Then followed a delightful programme of Christmas carols, recitations, Kindergarten games, etc., until the time came for distributing the gifts. As a souvenier of the occasion Mrs. Pomeroy gave to each pupil a violet satin book mark upon which was a lovely pansy painted by herself. The rooms were lighted by gas, and daintily decorated in Christmas greens and violet—Mrs. Pomeroy's favorite color—and altogether the effect was beautiful and Mrs. Pomeroy has every reason to be proud of her first "school exhibition."—King's County Journal, Brooklyn, N. Y.

FAWNING ORTHODOXY.

To the Editor:—I stand on a radical platform. I cannot do otherwise honestly. The inner voice of reason, aided by the spirit friends I trust and love, cause me to feel so. If for honest convictions I am to be scorned, then still will I stand firm though I should stand alone; though even forced to meet death's change alone, and take what comes to me as a consequence of my views—if I am in error by force of my own reason—I shall do so bravely. Why not? Except that greater growth—broader views, doubtless—shall come to me, I stand to-day when an eternity shall find me (I believe), an individual with power to live, without power to die, wholly outside the power of any God to change the fact of my existence. And some things I am radically opposed to are, "church," "Rev.", and "Christian," as having any connection with the works of Spiritualism. In every instance, the use of these old fogy words is a policy movement. I prefer direct honesty. We have the truth; orthodoxy has not; yet some of the prominent workers in Spiritualism's ranks bow, and seem to worship its many errors, while knowing the whole structure rests on a false foundation—on a savior's blood and a Devil's powers over the vast majority of mankind. O, cowardly fear and despicable policy, when will humanity have outgrown these powers that blind and bind?

ALLIE LINDSAY LYNCH.

INVENTION OF THE SPIRITS.

Anderson, Ind.—A successful test was made January 8, of a complicated fence-making machine for which the patentees, John Shimmer and son, claim absolutely no credit, but state that their bodies and brains simply carried out plans given to them by spirits and that the work as it progressed was directed by the spirits. They have been at work a year, but have a wonderful piece of machinery which will likely revolutionize the manufacture of wire fence because of the rapidity that is possible. They are both ardent Spiritualists and are well known to all members of the Indiana association and quite well known in Michigan.

The Lapps are first mentioned as being conquered by the Swedes and Norwegians in the thirteenth century.

HUMANITARIAN WORK.

Rescuing People from the Blight of Pauperism.

Friendly Visits, and Their Beneficent Effect.

Spiritualism must and does, from its inherent nature exert a humanitarian influence in the world. Its gospel of peace, love, equality, good will and brotherhood, proclaimed by mortals and immortals, has much to do in moulding thought and exciting humanitarian feeling and effort among men. Silently but effectively the influence of the gospel of Spiritualism is working in and leavening the general mind.

The true Spiritualist will rejoice in all humanitarian enterprises, and efforts, to ameliorate the condition of the needy, hence, will take pleasure, at this Christmas time, in this account of kindly work done in Chicago, as gathered from the Tribune.

There are about 25,000 families in Chicago, representing probably 100,000 human beings, who, at some time during the year, sink into at least temporary pauperism. In many cases the helping hand of charity is needed for an only brief support through a period of extreme distress. In the majority of cases a losing battle with the world has left its victims stranded and bereft of that last source of possible restoration, hope. Yet this vast army, whether enlisted for a season or a day, is an ever-present factor in the life of the community—and compels the thoughtful consideration of all who are impelled to share the responsibility of carrying the burden. The motto of the organization in which all this work is centered is: United an army; divided a mob." The spirit of this motto controls the charity work of all the large European cities. Yet it is declared to be a fact that only within the last year or two has Chicago made any decided advance in converting its moblike system into a semblance of army discipline.

The Bureau of Charities has been responsible for the present approach to harmonious and intelligent action in the distribution of alms and encouragement, and in it rests the chief hope for the future development of the system along the broad lines of a helpfulness that is not degrading. It is the connecting link between the various charity organizations which binds them together in a close co-operation that strikes mighty blows at the source of pauperism. It conserves all the strength of the individual societies for concerted action instead of permitting each to fritter away its energy battling single-handed against a sea that never grows less tumultuous. It has injected a new spirit of wisdom and forethought and prudence into a work that eminently calls for all three, but which formerly has been forced to trust to fitful and haphazard outbursts of philanthropic enthusiasm.

TYPICAL OF HIGHER CHARITY.

A specific instance traced to a climax and an instance which is a faithful type of thousands that are annually disposed of furnishes an accurate picture of the practical working of the charity system of to-day in its purely human and individual aspect. A family composed of husband, wife, and three children sunk through successive stages of poverty until the day came when it had reached the lowest depth, absolute desctitution. The breadwinner had lost his position because of hard times, his persistent efforts to gain other work had been fruitless, his courage and cheerfulness faded away with each day's disappointing search, and when the last resource had been exhausted he lay stretched out on a bed of sickness. His wife was scarcely better off physically, but still was able to go to the charity settlement near by and state their needs. The family had never before been forced to appeal to public mercy, but it was a bitter cup that must be drained, and on the woman fell the hard task of making the request.

The condition of this family was critical in two distinct phases. There was imperative need of material assistance, but that, given alone and repeated for any small, indefinite period without any other and higher form of help, would have smothered the last spark of personal independence in both the man and the woman. Yet that would have been the natural course of the ordinary and thoughtless philanthropist. The case contained every element that appealed to human sympathy—a poverty that had not been caused by any patent fault anywhere on the part of the victims—and it is easy to appreciate how strong would be the impulse to pour out alms and receive the selfish reward of fulsome gratitude.

WISDOM GUIDES THE ALMS-GIVER

But happily the family fell into the hands of a wise charity. The mother was questioned so that the regulation blank could be filled out with responses to the following questions: Full names, ages, occupations, and weekly earnings (if any) of all members of the family; place of residence, giving exact details as to the floor, front or rear, etc.; previous residence, where and when; later residence, where and when; nationality; general condition of the health; amount of rent paid for present home; number of rooms; what church if any, is attended; what debts the family has contracted in money, pawn tickets, provisions; what relatives, if any, able to render assistance; what aid, if any, had been previously asked and received; where last employed, and how long there; any other references that can be given.

This record, which is practically a complete personal history for all the purposes of a charity organization, is made in the case of every applicant for aid at any one of the settlements or aid societies, and a duplicate copy is sent to the Bureau of Charities, where it is filed away systematically so as to be convenient always for ready and immediate reference. This method alone brings all the settlements into a form of joint activity by which the possibility of a family imposing on public charity by obtaining duplicate aid from several societies is practically precluded.

The poor woman's case took the usual course and she was sent home with the assurance that some one would be sent at once to investigate and relieve the family needs. A woman who for several months had been one of the small army of volunteers whose duty it is to play the important part of "friendly visitors," and had begun to learn in this time that it took an immense amount of study and experience to be able to be an intelligent "friendly visitor," was sent to this family's home. In accordance with the system of the charity organizations, which holds that "friendly visitors" should not have more than two or three families to look after at a time, this particular friendly visitor was instructed to devote her exclusive attention to this one family, for it was seen to be in a sense a "celebrated case." It is believed that by thus concentrating the energy and interest of the "visitors" the greatest progress is made toward the chief goal sought, the rehabilitation of the family on a plane of independence—an absolute and permanent rescue from poverty.

GIFTS OF FOOD AND COURAGE.

The first visit in this case showed that all the statements of the poor woman had been correct and the family distress was indeed pitiful, not only from the very present destitution, but from the absence of any hope of a change for the better in the future. The visitor's report to the settlement was made promptly in accordance with the facts, medical aid and food were dispatched at once from some one of the many supply points on which the settlement draws, but not by the friendly visitor in person, and the stricken family was given a lease of life.

But the friendly visitor came again the next day and the next and every day, with cheerfulness, hopefulness, and revivifying counsel. She came so often and in a guise of such sisterly friendliness that she won a place in that family's heart. When the husband began to recover from his sickness she was at his side with suggestions and inspiriting counsel. He went forth with renewed vigor to make a new attack on the world and the friendly visitor was still close to him lest his new born spirit droop again under renewed disappointment. At last, largely through her testimony as to his previous misfortunes and his real capacity for honest and fruitful work he was given a place—he had gained a foothold. But she did not leave him until he had both feet planted again on firm ground of independence. He was reclaimed from pauperism to self-respecting citizenship through the instrumentality of one little woman's courage and steadfastness, she in turn embodying the beneficient principles of an intelligent system of charity. And when she had completed this task she went back with a strengthened spirit to begin at the bottom again to restore another person's shattered and tottering manhood.

The narration of such cases as these touches human nature on its kindlier side and awakens responsive sympathy. Dwellers in the angel spheres can look with approval on such humanitarian work, and aid with kindly and helpful inspiration the mortal workers.

And yet, is it not well, proper and timely, to seriously, thoughtfully and candidly consider whether man is not capable of upbuilding a system of society in which the necessity for such lines of humanitarian work, shall be obviated; where such cases of poverty and wretchedness will not exist; where all may enjoy the blessings of life in a degree proper to man's nature and his divine unfoldment as a mental, moral and spiritual being?

Along this line of thought will the more spiritualized minds of the future find their realm of exercise. And thus in the highest degree will be fulfilled the divine sentiment the Christmas idea: Peace on earth—good will to man.

J. C. UNDERHILL.

Hammond, Ind.

ADVENTISM AND THE BIBLE.

Some Pertinent Queries for the Adventists.

To the Editor:—In The Progressive Thinker of January 9, there is a quotation from a so-called Second Advent preacher, without any attempt at reply. There is a kind of witticism following, but it seems to me where so good an opportunity for brief elucidation is laid open, the thing ought not to be left as even a slight encouragement for the Adventist. He says: "The Bible expressly assures us that the dead are wholly inactive and unconscious. They sleep until the resurrection."

The Bible assures no such thing, except in the sense of annihilation, which was unquestionably the meaning of the writer to whom he referred.

There is no hint of resurrection from the same source. Thus: Job vii:9, "As the cloud is consumed and vanisheth away, so he that goeth down to the grave shall come up no more." That is the end of that particular cloud, is it not? True, another cloud may arise later, which contains some of the same fluid. So, too, another man may be born containing some of the same material which is the exact measure of materialism. So in Psalm cxlvi:4, "His breath goeth forth, he turneth to his earth. In that day his thoughts perish." If his thoughts perish, that is the end forever, is it not? Why not say in some of these: "Until the resurrection?"

Again read Job xiv:10 to 12: "As the waters fall from the sea, and the flood decayeth and drieth up, so man lieth down and riseth not." Isn't that a settler? He never rises, then. Isn't that encouraging? I have no Bible before me, as I am not in my library, but in my office, but I will venture one more quotation. In Ecclesiastes iii:18,19, etc., we learn in substance: "For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts," and (in substance) "Man hath no pre-eminence over the beasts." But if there is a resurrection for man and not for the beasts, this is false. Why did not this divine explain away some of the many passages in which the dead (?) are said to have returned?

B. R. ANDERSON.

ORDER OF THE MAGI—A BRIEF SKETCH OF ITS HISTORY AND ITS TENETS—OF PREHISTORIC ORIGIN—BASED UPON RELIGIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC PRINCIPLES.

So much has been said of this order and so little known of it by the general public that I am constrained to publish a true account.

The Order of the Magi was in existence prior to the time of the ancient Egyptian dynasties. Its origin on the earth dates back to a period so remote that the scriptural record of the earth's existence does not include it. The Order of the Magi flourished in Egypt during the reign of the pharaohs. The Magi built the temples at Heliopolis and Karnac, the pyramids of Cheops, and the sphinxes along the Nile, as well as temples and pyramids buried for ages beneath the sands of time.

The temples of Egypt were the world's scientific schools in prehistoric times, and even in the time of David kings and princes were sent to Egypt to learn its ancient lore. Students went there from Jerusalem, Tyre, Athens, Rome, Carthage, and Alexandria.

Most of the manuscripts of the Alexandrian library, bearing upon scientific subjects, were the contributions of the Magi.

In the course of time devasting wars robbed Egypt of her glory, the temples were invaded and robbed of their treasures, the mystics dispersed, and the dark ages ensued.

IN THE DARK AGES.

The wisdom of the Magi could not be buried even in the dark ages. Wherever mystics lived they met in caves and secret places to worship to Om of the universe. Why in secret places? Because when church and state were one the legislators granted to a church oligarchy a corner on divine afflatus. This church had the absolute right to dictate to the people what to believe and what god to worship, and woe unto them who openly defied this priesthood, as the martyrs bear testimony.

The secret mathematical knowledge of the Magi was for a long time maintained by small bands of mystics, who thus met in secret; but when that was no longer possible the word of Oriental mysticism and the secret knowledge appertaining thereto were handed down from man to man, and the truth was never without a witness in the world.

Now the flame has flashed forth anew, and another prophecy is fulfilled. The word has become flesh, and dwells among men.

The god of the mystics is the universal Om, which is a grander conception of the divine being than any heretofore existing in the minds of men, and toward which all human hearts slowly and surely gravitate, for it must be the final acceptance of the race.

The Om of the mystic is as much greater than the personal god of early orthodoxy as that conception of god is above the wooden idol of savages, spiritually speaking.

RELIGIOUS PRINCIPLES OF THE ORDER.

The religion of the order is known as the religion of the stars. It is founded on astronomy, geology, mathematics, and chemisty, or, rather, these four sciences are the main support in our superstructure, and so far reaching is the religious philosophy thus founded that it is equally practical on all inhabitable planets of space, and is hence the religion of the stars.

The initiations are conducted upon the celestial zodiac, twelve degrees constituting the outer temple, beginning with the house of Libra. Each house, as all astrologers know, corresponds to some portion of the human body, and all these departments and houses together make the grand solar man, with Aries the head and Pisces the feet meeting in the lower celestial meridian.

Each house has its own teachings, characteristics, and esoteric significance.

So completely hidden is the real meaning that many who advance in degrees know not for the time being what they are doing, for they have eyes to see with and do not see. None but true seekers after the light need enter, for those who come into this order out of curiosity, or with selfish motives to get some power or knowledge to use for selfish gain, get it not, but all who come with a pure heart earnestly seeking the truth for its own sake, will get pearls of knowledge of great worth in all the degrees.

At the very threshold the neophyte learns a beautiful object lesson, which teaches the value of charity and tolerance toward all other forms of worship, so that the real attitude of the order itself toward all churches, schools, and religious philosophies is that all are a light to our feet, and that all should be allowed to shine together, as many lights are better than one.

PROMULGATES SCIENTIFIC TRUTH.

The order promulgates scientific truth and ever seeks to impart natural law and natural solutions to all the many world mysteries.

Truth is the very essence of charity and is no more the enemy of the revealed religion than the freshman course in our universities is an enemy to the primary grades in our public schools, and creeds that cannot tolerate the light of science may as well make war upon our colleges and universities, which promulgate arts and science, as upon us, for the order is the very embodiment of science and philosophy.

Scientific and psychic research flourishes and is here to stay.

Science was feared, ridiculed, and persecuted by our early church, but that was no fault of truth, and here let me add that I look with profound regret upon the fact that there is still lingering in the hearts of many a smoldering fire that burned forth in all its lurid light during the Inquisition and liberated the souls of martyrs at the stake. If Pluto ever reigned upon earth, then was the time.

It is sad to think that here on the free soil of America, and with the flag of the free overhead, floating in majesty over all and a common protection to all, saying to the people as it unfurls to the breeze, "The genius of our constitution allows that here all men may worship God according to the dictates of their own conscience"—to think that here the slimy serpent occasionally shows himself to arrest human progress and harass the children of light.

Let there be more tolerance, and progress will be commensurate therewith.

If we have a word for struggling Cuba, it is this: If you gain your independence, ingraft into the preamble of your constitution an inheritance most sacred to man: In Cuba absolute religious liberty shall be maintained.

TEACHES THEORY OF EVOUTION.

The order teaches evolution, the evolution of suns and systems, and the evolution of life on our planet. We know that throughout space there are planets in all stages of formation, from cosmic to gaseous globes and solid formations, capable of sustaining generic life, that all planets must have passed through all stages mentioned above, and that nowhere or at no time was there a necessity for an instantaneous creation.

The mills of the gods grind slowly, but naturally, and nohow can we see how a miracle was ever wrought.

The evolution of the race is a very fascinating study. Biology takes us back to a time before sentient life had appeared, and the existing forms of life had no semblance to the present forms. It takes us through the development of the senses, development of form, development of brain cells and soul force, and, contrary to all other theories, we hold that even the soul of man is a product of evolution, and the present status of man, intellectual and psychic, is due to successive embodiments.

This seems hard to accept, but we would ask the student who investigates beneath the surface to look about him, and ask why the rich and the poor, the great and small, the civilized and savage, the strong and weak, the mental giant and the simple-minded, the white and black, the happy and the sad, the industrious and indolent, the philanthropist and miser—why all the thousands of phases of human condition that confronts us?

Incarnation is the only logical answer, and that all men are what they have made themselves out of their opportunities and estiny. Karmic law is as immutable as cause and effect in physical and material things, and the sooner man learns that he must work out his own salvation, the sooner he will begin to improve mentally and spiritually. Be not deceived concerning your individual responsibilities. Your acts, your thoughts, are real things, that cannot be obliterated or washed away in the eleventh hour, but become a portion of the entity, and, if evil, are removed only by pure thoughts and a pure life really lived.

The order of the Magi incidently teaches astrology as an adjunct to astronomy, and has for ages through observation and experience learned that all planets are as magnets acting upon all other planets of the same system and upon all vegetable and animal life thereon.

The magnetic influence of planets is so subtile that it searches the innermost recesses of being, astral and psychic, as well as the more external spheres.

THE LAW OF VIBRATION.

The Order of the Magi teaches the laws of vibration; that vibratory forces are the vehicles that bring forth to manifestation all forms of life and being; that the rate of magnetic vibrations is measured, and that things and people of low development are animated by a low rate of vibration, and the more advanced and highly endowed by a higher rate of vibration.

We are convinced that as surely as the different rates of vibration determine the different shades in the visible octave of colors, so surely do astral vibrations determine the advancement of soul and mind.

To the study of vibrations, magnetic and astral, properly belong the various forms of mental suggestions, Christian science, hypnotism, and telepathy. This belongs to the Essenean branch of the Magi and has yet no exponent who is working under the jurisdiction of the order, and is practiced outside rather than within the temple.

CODE OF ETHICS.

Our code of ethics is the same as that of any church, rendering unto Caesar the things which are of Caesar, and unto God, or Om, the things which are divine.

We believe in the eternal fitness of things, and whenever one is perfectly happy and contented with his surroundings and religious sentiment, there is the kingdom of heaven nearest realized by him. If any one is satisfied with Catholicism, there is his rightful sphere, and if one is pleased with Methodism he will surely stay there unless Methodism is displeased with him. If one finds happiness in the Salvation Army, we say stay there; or, if in Presbyterian Church, that is his place for the time being. All forms of worship are stepping stones to a higher life. All are as stars in the firmament of heaven, some small, some great, all lending their luster to the universal host.

To those who are happy in their present enjoyment of soul food, under whatsoever creed or ism, we say, "So mote it be."

But to such as begin to ask why and wherefore, and get no satisfying answer, we say all hail, there is another light, the light of Atlantis, the light of science. When you begin to ask regarding the infinite Creator, of his methods, of the infinite universe and all things therein, of our solar system, and of our own little earth, how came it here, whence and why? What am I? Whence am I and how? What of gravitic law? What of electrical and magnetic pulsations? What of all the visible manifestations of the infinite? What of the animating principle that throbs and beats in all forms of life? And what of law?

When these questions come, as come they will in time, then seek the brightest torch of reason that shines, and one by one the answers come.

WEEKLY LECTURES TO MYSTICS.

In the Order of the Magi, known as the Temple by all its members, lectures are delivered every Sunday on innumerable charts hung around the walls, showing the various stages or epochs that the earth has passed through in its formation. Nebulae, showing a total of 120,000,000 solar systems, in six grand nebulae clusters. Crucimacius, showing the cube of the Tarot. Tarotology, showing the formation of the ancient Egyptian Tarot. Sidereal, showing changes taking place in the appearance from earth of one constellation during 84,000 years. Atomic and chemical, showing union of atoms and chemical affinities. Comparative, showing comparative sizes of all the planets of our system. Magnetic, illustrating polarities, positive and negative magnetic currents. Spectrum analysis, showing the various precipitations of colors from far-off suns. Geological, showing the strata of earth and fossils of the different geological periods. Planetary, showing distance, destiny, magnitude, and diurnal periods of the different planets of our system. The tressal board in the East with movable planets of our system. The tressel and aspects, and all planets being placed in their respective houses in zodiac. The Cross of Om, showing a cross composed of the mystic testbook, the stem of which is a series of tarots, made from the emblems of the mystic testbook, and each tarot of at least quadruple significance, a study so deep that it is always new.

All of the above topics and many others are fascinating subjects that delight the mystics, but are only as grains of sand on the shores of infinity, when compared with the esoteric wisdom stored in the archives of the S. T. of the Order of the Magi, of which I cannot speak.

TEMPLE IN CHICAGO.

Chicago can boast that here is located the Grand Temple of the jurisdiction of Terra, having subordinate temples already dedicated in Cleveland, Brooklyn, Boston, Rochester, Grand Rapids, Minneapolis, St. Paul, and other places of less importance. We have among our membership some people of distinction, doctors, lawyers, merchants, manufacturers, members of Congress, journalists, and teachers of many isms.

The Temple was built at 1910 Washington boulevard, but, owing to the distance out there and the surroundings, it has been abandoned for the time being, and my lecture hall is the temporary quarters for Temple work, until such a time as we shall be able to build an auditorium commensurate with the future requirements of this grand work, at which time, too, we hope we will be given many good instruments that can place this knowledge before the people in the right light, having the necessary qualifications in mystic lore that all should have who are engaged in this work.

At the present time Professor Olney H. Richmond is the only man living who holds the key to this knowledge, now engaged in this work. I am only a student, but have been permitted to see and know much of the truth sacred to the inner circles, and have been honored with a charter of Grand Magea of the jurisdiction of Chicago, in the absence of the chief of the jurisdiction of the United States. We hope that not more than two years will elapse before Chicago will be favored with a beautiful edifice centrally located, where our convocations will be held, which will be equipped especially for the convenience and comfort of mystics.

MR. PETERSON'S CAREER.

My own career in this study will give the reader an idea why I am now devoted to its principles.

Born in the chaste climate of Norway, I came with my parents to America at the age of 11, reared by pious parents, and confirmed in the Lutheran faith.

Though the youngest in the class, I began to make mental inquiries concerning the probable truth of a literal interpretation of scriptures, and their literal inspiration by a personal God, who was triune, yet a unit, and all the other doctrines concerning a physical resurrection and a material yet spiritual destiny. Fortunately for me I soon came to Chicago, the Mecca of liberal religious beliefs. I lost no time in hearing the rhetorician, Dr. Collyer; the poet, Professor Swing; the inspired Cora L. V. Richmond, and the philosopher, Dr. Thomas.

It did not take long to decide that the philosopher was to be my future teacher, and there I became a regular attendant, but even this was not sufficient; nothing but natural solutions of all phenomena could satisfy me. I commenced to take lectures in mental science, Christian science, theosophy, and spiritual philosophy, and demonstrated as far as I went.

Of recent years we have had public lectures delivered here on nearly all the religious beliefs of the Orient, such as the Vedas, Hindooism, and the Yogi philosophy, Buddhism, the Chaldean and Islamic faiths, by such gentlemen as Professor Getsinger, Mohammed Webb, Dr. Hensoldt, and the gentle Hindoo, Virchand R. Gandhi, and everywhere and in all much good has been seen. All are stepping stones to a higher life, but when I found the order of the Magi, I found the essence of all wisdom, the crystallization of all knowledge touching life here and hereafter.

Had it not been for the fact that I had made such extensive search in all the isms and occultisms, I could not have appreciated this order as I do.

Withal a broad character is begotten and a cherished hope that all may see for themselves that all men are brothers, the world is surely advancing toward a realization of a universal brotherhood.

Let all remove the old barriers. We honor the great agnostic, who has stirred up the rusty armaments of reason. We honor the name of Thomas Paine. We perpetuate the name of Humboldt, who dared to enunciate "The universe is governed by fixed law." We love the memory of Galileo, Copernicus and Lily. We admire the fearless Aristarchus, who dared to advance theories of Heliocentric astronomy, 250 years B. C. We commemorate the eventful life of Jesus of Nazareth, who taught doctrines so far in advance of his time that the people could not understand the man Jesus. We revere his name, as well as that of Bruno and Socrates, and all who died a martyr's death for the sake of convictions. We respect the ancient Hindoo prophets, and we have cast our anchor in the prophecy of Daniel and read the truths of Revelation.

Our sympathies are with the oppressed, our hopes are for peace on earth and good will toward men. Let there be no contention or controversy, but come, let us reason together.

BERNARD C. PETERSON.

VERY SIGNIFICANT.

The Progressive Thinker leads. It publishes more reading matter than any other dollar Spiritualist paper on this green earth. It was the only Spiritualist paper that had enterprise enough to publish President Barrett's address before the National Convention at Washington. It covered three pages of the paper. It now proposes to send out 1,000,000 copies of the paper containing his address.

Read the announcement on fifth page, headed "Fifteen Cents," for particulars.

RED LETTER DAY AT LYNN, MASS.

Sunday, January 3d, was a red-letter-day with the Lynn Spiritual Association, Mr. J. M. Kelly president, it being the third anniversary of its incorporation, which is observed annually in a special manner, and this was the most successful one in its history. The afternoon meeting was addressed by a number of gifted speakers and mediums.

At 5 o'clock a bountiful lunch was served by the ladies in the banquet hall. During intermission a social time was enjoyed by the large gathering; which included many from surrounding towns who were entertained and instructed by the many mediums present.

The evening exercises opened promptly with increased attendance, taxing the capacity of the large hall.

President Kelty was introduced as the speaker of the evening by the vice-president, Mrs. M. T. Robinson, with appropriate remarks. Though this was Brother Kelty's first appearance as a public speaker, he acquitted himself in a very creditable manner, to the delight of his many friends, including some of his former co-workers in the church, who had come in to hear him. He was followed by Mrs. Fannie Burbank, of Plymouth, and those who took part in the afternoon service. At the close a surprise was sprung upon the president and Mrs. Kelty, and the audience, by the presentation of a beautifully upholstered easy chair to the former, and a handsome table lamp of unique design to the latter. The presentation speech, which was the embodiment of love and appreciation of their services in behalf of our society, was made by Mrs. John L. Robinson. Brother Kelty responded in a very feeling and felicitous manner. At the close of the long and interesting services they received the congratulations of their friends. The thanks of our society are hereby extended to all the friends who have contributed so generously in making the occasion such a grand success.

DR. G. W. FOWLER.

THE CHILDREN'S CORNER

The Boy Who Did Not Want To Be Forever Singing.

How the Good Angel's Came for Him.

Dear children of the greatest herald of truth, the ever welcome Progressive Thinker. Before we shall proceed with our story, let us pause and thank the indulgent editor for allowing our feeble light to peep forth through a great journal where so many greater lights have preceded us; and even though our efforts should be feeble, and may appear to older, graver minds, as symbolical of a child learning to take its first steps upon the great platform of life, it nevertheless affords us great pleasure to again greet you; for somehow I confess to an extremely warm place in my heart for the youth of our land and am always delighted to see the children well represented in my meetings, for they are the hope of our country, and the magnet that shapes the future; and from the ranks of the children, file not only the benefactors of our race, but our statesmen and presidents; and who shall say who among these little ones shall become greatest among us and greatly exceed our own efforts.

In 1880, while I was in the evangelical work, and superintendent of a Sunday-school, I had one little crippled boy, who never failed to come hobbling in upon his poor little crutch every Sunday. He was one of my brightest pupils, despite his lameness and poor and not too neat clothing.

No one had a better lesson than Willie Gray, and no child in all the group was so eager to hear of the future life as he. When told he would no longer be lame or sick, in the spirit-world, his eyes would brighten, and he would express a desire to go soon; but when told he would wear a crown and sing songs throughout eternity, he would shake his head and say he'd rather not sing so long, for he soon get tired of things.

One day while explaining the lesson, and giving a description of Heaven, he looked me squarely in the face and said: "I don't like to dispute your word, but I don't believe it."

I asked "Why?"

"Cause," said he, "I have seen heaven, and know better."

Of course all the children laughed, while one little girl, his sister, made apologies for his rudeness, but persisted he:

"I know I'm right, for I was not asleep or dreaming; and the folks there look just like we do here;" and as he spoke, his great dreamy eyes lighted up as I had never seen them before, "And," said he, "what's more, I'm going there soon."

At his last remark, a suppressed giggle passed over the room. No more was said.

A few Sundays later, Willie was not in his class. All through the session I felt something was lacking. There was an empty void somewhere. His sister said Willie was ill and wished to see me. I sent him the bouquet of flowers the children had bought me, with a promise that I would see him tomorrow.

Next day I followed the directions given me by his sister, and soon found myself in a narrow street, that literally swarmed with ragged, dirty children, that inhabited these homes of squalor that huddled close, one above the other and closely packed against each other. I climbed a broken stairs and inquired on the landing for the number given me. I was directed up a second passage, darker and more difficult to climb. A sad-faced, middle-aged woman admitted me into a room with only broken chairs, a pine table, and a bare floor.

On a bed in a bedsink lay my little pupil. When he saw me his face lighted up as he said; "I knew you would come."

"How did you know?" asked I.

"Why, God sent an angel to tell me," said he. "He told me, too, that I would go to heaven tomorrow;" and an expression of anxiety crossed his face as he asked, in a whisper, "Do you think I will have to play a harp and sing all the time? or can I rest sometimes?"

"Not if you prefer not," I said, "for Heaven would be incomplete if we were forced to do things distasteful."

He lay quietly as if half asleep, for a few moments, and said he: "They are here again."

"Who is here?" I inquired.

"Why, angels, of course; and they say they will take me sure, tomorrow—and I needn't sing either," he added.

After doing what little I could to make him comfortable, I kissed him and went away filled with strange, vague thoughts; for all my life I had seen and talked with those who had preceded me to the eternal shore, but as I had been led to believe it was of the Devil, and because I was irreligious and wayward. But here was an innocent child who professed to see what I could see. I knew nothing of the divine gift of clairvoyance, had never even heard it spoken of. So his words greatly puzzled me.

Next day I went to see him again; but this time my little friend didn't know I was there, but clutched closely in his skinny fingers was what was left of the bouquet I had sent him.

A strange stillness filled the room, and as I entered, I felt I was in death's chamber. I took one of his little, thin hands in my own, and clasped it closely, and as I did so a strange influence stole over me. The room was suddenly illumined as if by an electric light. Slowly coming to my view were angel forms and faces. They stood quietly by, never speaking a word. A thin white mist like a spiral cord floated above Willie's head. It grew larger and larger, until it had enveloped his whole body. By and by it began to slowly rise and assume shape, until it soon assumed another form, very like his own, only far more beautiful, with only a thin, frail cord uniting them. A grave-looking man with long, dark beard stepped nearer, and moved his hand and instantly the cord parted and the new form floated away.

A scream from his mother aroused me, and I looked about, half dazed yet, as she said: "My God! he is dead!" and swooned at my feet.

I played the organ and sang at his funeral, but all through the exercises I seemed to hear him say: "I'd rather not sing always." And who can blame him for not wanting to take part in such a monstrous, absurd entertainment, that would rob Heaven of its joy.

But none of my little readers need entertain a fear that Heaven is a place to loaf and sing songs and play harps, but a blessed condition of perfect bliss. The good book that has been authority to the masses, also tells us, "The kingdom of Heaven is within." Then let us unfold this little Heaven within, that we may have a little heaven—to go to Heaven in.

Below is one of the recitations Willie used to give us at our monthly entertainments:

PAPA'S LETTER.

I was sitting in my study, writing letters when I heard: "Please, dear mamma, won't you hold me, or don't you want to be disturbed?

"I is tired of playing with kitty, and want some other thing to do.

"Writing letters, is you? mamma, can't I write a letter, too?"

"Not now darling, mamma's busy, run and play with kitty now."

"No, no, mamma, me write letter, I can if you will show me how."

I will print my darling's portrait,
as his sweet eyes searched my face;
Hair of gold and eyes of azure, form of witching, childish grace;
But the eager face was clouded, as I slowly shook my head,
Till I said "I'll make a letter of you, my darling boy, instead."
So I parted back the tresses from his forehead high and white,
And a stamp, in sport I pasted, 'mid its waves of golden light.
Then I said: "Now little letter, go away and bear good news;"
And I smiled as down the staircase clattered loud the little shoes.
No one heard the little prattler as he once more climbed the stair,
Reached his little hat and tippet, lying on the table there.
No one heard the front door open, no
one saw the golden hair
As it floated o'er his shoulders, in the crisp October air.
But down the street the baby hastened,
till he reached the office door:
"I'se a letter, Mr. Postman, is there room for any more?
" 'Cause this letter is going to papa—papa
lives with God, you know;
Mamma sent me for a letter, does you think that I can go?"
Fain the clerk would have detained him,
but the pleading face was gone,
And the little feet were hastening by the busy crowding throng.
Suddenly the crowd was parted, people fled to left and right,
As a pair of maddened horses, at that moment dashed in sight.
No one saw the baby figure, no one saw the golden hair,
Till a voice of frightened sweetness rang out on the open air.
'Twas too late! a moment only stood the beauteous vision fair,
Then the little face lay lifeless, covered o'er with golden hair.
Reverently they raised my darling,
brushed away the curls of gold,
Saw the stamp upon the forehead growing now so icy cold;
Not a mark the face disfigured, showing
where the hoof had trod,
But the little life was ended—papa's letter was with God.

And now good-bye, my little readers, till another week.

MADAME PARCELLS.

Detroit, Mich.

HYPNOTIZES CATS AND DOGS.

In Lowell, Mass., there lives a boy who is endowed with a peculiar power over animals. Every stray dog and cat in the neighborhood knows him and loves to be in his company. A vicious horse which the stableman can with difficulty handle will stand like a lamb while he harnesses and unharnesses him. The doves fly around him, and in the woods the wild birds apparently regard him as a friend and ally.

The most remarkable exhibition of his power, which has long been known and commented on by his friends, was given the other day. A large and vicious rat was captured in the stable in one of those traps which permit of easy ingress and no egress. The men who were looking at the animal were afraid to go near the trap, the animal showed such terror, but the boy when he beheld the imprisoned creature fearlessly put out his finger and stroked its head, the rat manifesting as much pleasure as would a cat or dog. Several days have passed since then and the stablemen are still afraid of their capture, but he has grown so tame and familiar with the boy as to allow him to take him out and put him in the trap, will come at his whistle, and manifests every appearance of joy at his presence. There seems to be no question but that the boy could train that rat to perform almost any feat within the power of such an animal.

THE WOMAN'S FORUM.

"The Woman's Forum" is the name of a bright little paper, the first number of which has just made its appearance. It is of special interest to the women of Illinois, being the official organ of the Illinois Equal Sufferage Association.

It will contain the latest news on the woman question, and will well repay every one for the small price—25 cents a year, monthly.

GIVING SIGHT TO THE BLIND.

Blind people's first experiences of sight are curious. An old man who was born blind received his sight by the removal of a cataract. When the bandage was first removed the patient started violently and cried out as if with fear, and for a while was quite nervous from the effects of the shock. For the first time in his life he looked upon the earth. The first thing he noticed was a flock of sparrows. In relating his experience he said that he thought they were tea cups, although a few moments afterward he readily distinguished a watch which was shown to him. It is supposed that this recognition is owing to the fact that he heard it ticking. The blaze from a lamp excited the most lively surprise in his mind. He had no idea what it was, and when it was brought near wanted to pick it up.

"Religious and Theological Works of Thomas Paine." Contains his celebrated "Age of Reason," and a number of letters and discourses on religious and theological subjects. Cloth binding, 430 pages. Price $1. For sale at this office.

"The Bridge Between Two Worlds." By Abby A. Judson. This book is dedicated to all earnest souls who desire, by harmonizing their physical bodies and their psychical bodies with universal nature, and their souls with the higher intelligences, to come into closer connection with the purer realms of the Spirit-world. It is written in the sweet spiritual tone that characterizes all of Miss Judson's literary works. Price, cloth, $1; paper 75 cents.

"History of the Inquisition." Every citizen of our country should read this concise history of that Romish churchly institution known as the Inquisition. The animus of Romanism against all institutions, beliefs and parties not in conformity with the ruling powers of the Romish hierarchy is plainly shown in these statements of veritable history. The devilishness and murderous malignity of the "Holy Inquisition" is scarcely paralleled in all the world's records of inhuman atrocities. It is for sale at this office, and will be mailed postpaid for 25c.

"The Dead Man's Message," an occult romance, by Florence Marryat. The author's wide experience in Spiritualism and her study of occult science have prepared her to write this romance, which will be found laden with gems picked up in the course of her investigation and studies. Cloth $1. For sale at this office.

"Mediumship and Its Development, and How to Mesmerize to Assist Development." By W. H. Bach. Especially useful to learners who seek to know and utilize the laws of mediumship and development, and avoid errors. Price, cloth, 50 cents; paper, 25 cents.

THE ROMAN OCTOPUS IN CANADA—HOW IT IS TRYING TO UNDERMINE LIBERTY AND WIND ITS POISONOUS COILS AROUND THE PEOPLE—IT IS INIMICAL TO FREEDOM EVERYWHERE; AND A CURSE TO ANY COUNTRY.

The Roman Catholic hierarchy in the province of Quebec are evidently disinclined to accept the verdict of the Canadian elections held last June. Though their instructions to the faithful were disregarded, and Mr Laurier's policy on the Manitoba school question was triumphantly endorsed, they have never ceased to reaffirm their original position. Their latest action, however, is one of exceeding gravity, and threatens serious consequences to the civil rights of the whole French-Canadian population of the Dominion. L'Electeur, one of the most prominent Liberal newspapers in Quebec, has been put under the ban by the bishops of the archdiocese in that province, and the faithful have been forbidden to read, buy, sell, or in any way encourage it, under penalty of grievous sin and the refusal of the sacrements. In consequence of this mandement, M. Pacaud, editor of L'Electeur, has suspended publication, and proposes to seek redress in civil courts. It is understood he intends to take action for $5,000 damages against each of the bishops who signed the mandement. These are Archbishop Begin, of Quebec, Bishop Lafleche, of Three Rivers, Bishop Gravel, of Nicolet, Bishop Blais, of Rimouski, and Bishop Labrecque, of Chicoutimi. We mention them because of the exceptional prominence which their names are likely to have in the contest which they have challenged, and which can hardly fail to result in disaster to the Catholic hierarchy of Quebec. With the exception of the first named, all have been long known as ecclesiastical reactionaries of a bigoted type, and Bishop Lafleche has publicly proclaimed his regret that the Holy Inquisition was abolished. Such a mandement from such a source is not surprising, and has roused French and English-speaking Canadians alike in indignant protest against it. The gist of L'Electeur's offense was that it published certain articles, and also a pamphlet, asserting the supremacy of the state in civil affairs, and denying the right of the Church to dictate to the Catholic elector how he shall vote upon such a question as the restoration of separate schools in Manitoba. The Quebec bishops utterly refuse to separate the civil and ecclesiastical sphere in their pronouncements on the Manitoba question, and the popular inference is that they do not intend to recognize any such distinction at all. In this respect they are unlike their brethren in Ontario and the maritime provinces, who generally abstain from interference with the political views of their parishioners.

It is also reported that another mandement will be issued, denouncing the settlement of the Manitoba school question, and threatening extreme spiritual penalties to those French members of Parliament who refuse to put themselves on record against it. This would be a direct challenge to fifty Liberal members from Quebec. On the whole, it is clear from the protests of the press in Quebec, and from a chorus of strong dissent coming alike from Catholics and Protestants, that the action of the bishops is fully appreciated and will be stoutly resisted. Mass-meetings are being called, and strongly worded resolutions will express the opinions held on the question of clerical interference. The bishops' challenge to Canadian citizenship seems all the more inexplicable because inviting a contest almost similar to that in which they were so recently worsted. They have no ground of hope that the Quebec electorate will reverse its decision of last June, nor have they any reason to think that the penalties which proved powerless then will avail now. It is not the French Canadians, but their bishops, who fail to recognize that 1897 is not 1697, and that the forging of ecclesiastical thunder has not much terror for the upright voter.—Harper's Weekly.

"The Woman's Bible. Part I. The Pentateuch. Comments on Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy." The contrast between the thoughts of these brave women and the thoughts of the orthodox world during all time past, is very striking. Keen analysis, ripe scholarship and fearless adherence to the right, characterize this very interesting effort of some of the brightest minds of to-day. For sale at this office. Price 50 cents.

"The Fountain of Life, or The Threefold Power of Sex." By Lois Wais brooker. One of the author's most useful books. It should be read by every man and woman. Price 50c.

A new edition of "Three Sevens," by the Phelon's, is just issued. The May Arena says: "The gist of such books as Dr. Phelon's "Three Sevens," and other works descriptive of or alluding to the various occult societies, which seem to have existed for ages, has never, until recently, been said so openly and plainly that 'he who runs may read.'" Cloth $1.25, postpaid. For sale at this office.

ANGELL PRIZE CONTEST

RECITATIONS.

To Advance Humane Education in All Its Phases.

BY EMMA ROOD TUTTLE.

Lyceums and Societies that wish to get up elevating, interesting and paying entertainments cannot do better than to have a Prize Contest. The entire plan, with full directions, is in the book, and may be easily managed. Nothing kindles enthusiasm more quickly than an Angell Prize Contest! Nothing is needed more. Any individual may organize one in his own town and reap a financial reward.

TRY IT! PRICE, 30 CENTS.

Address

EMMA ROOD TUTTLE,
Berlin Heights, Ohio.

ENCYCLOPEDIA
...OF...
BIBLICAL SPIRITUALISM
...OR...
A CONCORDANCE

To the principal passages of the Old and New Testament Scriptures which prove or imply Spiritualism;

Together with a brief history of the origin of many of the important books of the Bible.

BY MOSES HULL.

Much that is in this book appeared in an abridged form in a series of nine full pages of THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER. These articles were prepared at the call of hundreds of Spiritualists who felt the need of some kind of document for ready reference. The only seemed to whet the appetite for more; hence the publication of this work.

The author, Moses Hull, has written many volumes on Spiritualistic and other themes and each one is full of careful study on the subject chosen. Mr. Hull, in his introduction of this work says:

"Hoping that this book will serve to lead the people out of the wilderness of doubt and despair; and that when Spiritualism shall have wrested the Bible from its 'sanctified' enemies, it will not 'spike' it, but will use it to batter down the walls of Christian superstition and ignorance, I send it out on its errand of enlightenment with the humble prayer that it will prove a divine benediction to every reader."

THE ENCYCLOPEDIA OF BIBLICAL SPIRITUALISM contains 835 pages, beautifully printed on good paper, contains a full-page portrait of the author and is handsomely bound in cloth. Every Spiritualist should have this work.

PRICE $1. FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

THE COMING AMERICAN CIVIL WAR.

BY BURTON AMES HUNTINGTON.

This excellent book is written in the interest of humanity, of liberty, and of patriotism—a book written for the purpose of calling attention to the deadly dangers that beset us on every side, and more especially to the hostile attitude and the insidious wiles of an ever-present, though secret, unscrupulous foe—the Catholics. Washington's words of warning, Lincoln's apprehension and the prophecy of General Grant are all included in the volume. Archbishop Ryan, of Philadelphia, in a recent sermon said: "The church tolerates heretics where she is obliged to do so, but she hates them with a deadly hatred, and uses all her power to annihilate them. Our enemies know how she treated heretics in the Middle Ages, and how she treats them today where she has the power. We no more think of denying these historic facts than we do of blaming the Holy Ghost and the princes of the church for what they have thought fit to do." Every one should read this work. Paper, 300 pages. It will be sent, postpaid, for fifty cents. For sale at this office.

The Molecular Hypothesis OF NATURE.

BY PROF. W. M. LOCKWOOD.

The only treatise ever offered the reading and thinking public in the interest of modern Spiritualism, that is absolutely free from the theories of superstition, and which

Demonstrates continuity of life and our environment of spiritual influences, from the data of modern physical and physiological science.

To the Spiritualist, an impregnable foundation of scientific data and verified facts.

To the materialist and skeptic, a revelation of the invisible energies operative in Nature's formula of evolution.

To the ecclesiastic, a new heaven and a new earth. A book to read, to study and think about. A condensed volume of scientific information for 25 cents. Address your orders to

The Progressive Thinker, 40 Loomis street,

MAHOMET,

His Birth, Character and Doctrine

BY EDWARD GIBBON.

This is No. 6 of the Library of Liberal Classics. It is conceded to be historically correct, and so exact and perfect in every detail as to be practically beyond the reach of adverse criticism. This work will be found intensely interesting. Price, 25c. Sold at this office.

THE GOSPEL OF BUDDHA,

According to Old Records.

BY DR. PAUL CARUS.

A translation from Japanese, made under the auspices of the Rev. Shaku Soyen, delegate to the Parliament of Religions. Was lately published in Japan. Price $1. For sale at this office.

TWO IN ONE

A COMBINATION OF

"The Question Settled" and "The Contrast" Into one Volume.

BY MOSES HULL.

This highly instructive and interesting work is a combination into one volume of two of Mr. Hull's splendid works. By this arrangement the cost is such that the reader is enabled to secure the two books contained at the same price as was formerly asked for them separately. This volume contains 462 pages and is handsomely bound in cloth, and contains an excellent portrait of the author.

THE QUESTION SETTLED

is a careful comparison of Biblical and Modern Spiritualism. No book of the century has made so many converts to Modern Spiritualism as this. The author's aim, faithfully to compare the Bible with modern phenomena and philosophy, has been accomplished. The adaptation of Spiritualism to the wants of humanity; its moral tendency; the Bible Doctrine of angel ministry; the spiritual nature of man, and the objections offered to Spiritualism, are all considered in the light of the Bible, nature, history, reason and common sense, and expressed clearly and forcibly.

THE CONTRAST

consists of a critical comparison of Evangelicalism and Spiritualism. It is a most able production, and is a perfect storehouse of facts for those who wish to defend Spiritualism, or find arguments against the assumptions of Orthodoxy.

PRICE $1. FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

IMMORTALITY,

...OR...

FUTURE HOMES AND DWELLING PLACES.

BY DR. J. M. PEEBLES.

AN INVALUABLE WORK!

This admirable work contains what a hundred spirits, good and evil, say of their dwelling-places. Give us details—details and accurate delineations of life in the Spirit-world!—is the constant appeal of thoughtful minds. Death is approaching. Whither—oh, whither! Shall I know my friends beyond the tomb? Will they know me? What is their present condition, and what their occupations? In this volume the spirits, differing as they may, are allowed to speak for themselves. No man is better qualified than Dr. Peebles to place a work of this kind before the people. He treats of the Mysteries of Life; Doubts and Hopes; The Bridging of the River; Foregleams of the Future; Testimony of Saints; The Growth and Perfection of the Spiritual Body; Is it the Soul or Body that Sins?; Clothing in the Spirit world; Our Little Ones in Heaven; The Personal Experiences of Aaron Knight; The Red Man's Testimony; Evil Spirits; Testimony of Physicians in Spirit Life; The Homes of Apostles and Divines; The Friends and Shakers in Spirit-Life; Spirit Homes of Bruno and Others; Many Voices from the Spirit-Land. Many other matters are treated, too numerous to mention. Price $1.50; postage, 12 cents. For sale at this office.

Soul of Things; or Psychometric Researches and Discoveries.

BY WM. AND ELIZABETH M. F. Denton. A marvelous work. Though concise as a text-book, it is as fascinating as a work of fiction. The reader will be amazed to see the curious facts here combined in support of this newly-discovered power of the human mind, which will resolve a thousand doubts and difficulties, make Geology as plain as day, and throw light on all the grand subjects now obscured by time.

Soul or Things—Vol. I.
Cloth.....$1.50
Postage 10 cents.

Soul of Things—Vol II.
Illustrated. 450 pp. Cloth.....$1.50
Postage 10 cents.

Soul of Things—Vol. III.
Illustrated. 362 pp. Cloth.....$1.50
Postage 10 cents.

THE SPIRITUAL ALPS

AND HOW WE ASCEND THEM.

Or a few thoughts on how to reach that altitude where spirit is supreme and all things are subject to it. With portrait. By MOSES HULL. Just the book to teach you that you are a spiritual being, and to show you how to educate your spiritual faculties. Price, bound in cloth, 40 cents; in paper cover, 25 cents. For sale at this office.

"LITTLE THOUGHT."

The Story of a Christmas Fairy.

Yes, a veritable fairy of brightness was Little Thought on the Christmas Day of which I write. Where does this beautiful fairy live, do you ask, my children?

I will leave that for you to guess, and only tell you she has a very large kingdom, all her own, where she reigns queen, and dispenses blessings of joy and peace to earth, bringing brightness to many hearts if she is a good Little Thought; but alas, she is sometimes fretful, discontented, and worst of all, selfish; then she spreads gloom and unhappiness over many lives; for you must know the kingdom of thought is subdivided into many small dominions, which are presided over by her many subjects, who are affected to partake of joy or sorrow as they sense the moods of their queen, Little Thought.

In some portions of her kingdom she is not very well known, because her subjects live so remote from her influence. This class are called thoughtless subjects; for they are wayward and selfish, always considering their own comfort, without a reasonable regard for the feelings of others. But as Queen Thought grows broader in understanding she will learn how to rule perfectly her entire kingdom, and have only loving, loyal subjects in her dominions.

The Little Thought I am going to tell you about was good, very good indeed, at this time, for it was Christmas Day, and that is the day when all are supposed to be unusually loving and kind. On this Christmas morning she looked out on the world with a pair of large, soft, tender, loving eyes, to see the feathery flakes of pure white snow whirling, falling upon the earth, covering it with a mantle of purity, chaste as the robes the angels wear.

She smiled as the chimes of the Christmas bells floated out on the frosty air, bringing their tidings of "Peace on earth, good will to men," as 'tis said the angels sang many years ago, telling of the divine Fatherhood of God, and the great brotherhood of man. Dreamily she listened while visions of mirth, pleasure and brightness floated before her mind, and she delighted to think of the happiness her subjects were enjoying on this day. In her visions she saw the Christ principle of "Love ye one another" fulfilled in the hearts of men.

But, hark! there comes now to her ear a sad minor strain of grief and sadness, telling of sorrow and tears, that mingle strangely with the harmoniously chiming bells, marring somewhat their silvery echoes. She feels the throbbing of some sorrowing heart, and knows some of her subjects are not blithe and gay. Ah, yes, some hearts must be sorrowing while she is idly dreaming in ease; perhaps they are hungry and cold, too cold to be happy.

Those wailing notes pierced her heart, and springing quickly into a state of active life, Thought clothed herself in her brightest robes of sparkling purity, and asking guidance from the angels whose messenger she strove to be, she wandered forth to soothe and comfort some of the unfortunate of earth, with her magic wand of love. She hoped to touch some hearts to do her bidding, for well she knew there were many kindly hearts who would dispense blessings freely if only Little Thought could whisper to them how beautiful it was to make hearts happy, if only for a day.

She was very busy among her subjects all this day, for the impulse was strong in her to alleviate suffering and give joy to all she could reach. And she did reach many, by stimulating her kindly subjects to do her will, and their influence working on others, caused them to take a nobler idea of life, and do such deeds of love and kindness as had been a stranger to their lives heretofore.

So Little Thought did much good, eased much pain, made eyes glisten with joy that before had known only tears, and gained many loyal subjects that ever remained true and faithful, while she ennobled her own selfhood at the same time. I will only relate how she influenced one mind to do her will on this day.

She found her way inside a mansion filled with warmth and brightness, where hunger was a stranger, and wails of sorrow were heard only from the street, in echoes low and faint, and not often heeded, for I fear the owner of this beautiful dwelling was inclined to be selfish until Little Thought made her a true subject. In front of a window Thought saw standing a lovely lady; but her pleasant features just now wore a fretful, discontented look that marred and spoiled her beauty. Her discontent found vent in words.

"Oh, dear," said she, "to be disappointed this day of all days. My Christmas is spoiled. My excellent dinner I have taken so much pleasure and care in preparing will be wasted—yes, wasted. I could cry with vexation."

And the angry tears commenced to fall as she continued for some minutes to lament her sore disappointment You see she showed a very selfish spirit; she thought not of others who might also be disappointed at not being able to enjoy the pleasure she had prepared for them.

Little Thought was nearly a stranger to this lady, but she bravely drew near to her side and strove to reach her heart by whispering all kinds of curious words of consolation, some of them wondrous strange to her, and ideas odd and unique floated through her brain as she continued to gaze into the street. At last the cloud lifted and a smile took the place of tears, resembling a rift of sunlight darting across a dark sky.

"Well," she mused, "I suppose there are others in this great world who have disappointments as well as I, and much more bitter; I really ought to be grateful, for I have truly many blessings. Perhaps I can do something pleasant to pass away the day, and be quite happy after all. As for the dinner—it seems a pity to have it wasted, as quantities of it must if not used to-day." She paused as an inner voice seemed to whisper: "Feed the hungry."

"Well, I do suppose there are hungry people even on Christmas Day, though I never seemed to think much about it before. I know what I will do; I'll have a novel Christmas, such as I never had before." And she clapped her hands gleefully, while Thought smiled at her victory. "I'll forget my disappointment in giving pleasure to others, in place of brooding over it. It will be a novelty, to say the least."

Soon a song floated from her lips, a Christmas carol, as she hastened to put her plan in execution. She soon had her table spread with a wonderful Christmas dinner, which she viewed with great and abundant satisfaction. "Now," said she, "I'll take my position by this window and watch the passers-by and gather in the poor and hungry-looking, till I have persons enough to fill this table. That will be jolly, to see their surprised looks. John shall bring them in."

So she ordered her servant to sit by her, and go out and bring in such persons as she should point out to his notice. Not a hungry-looking or scanty-clothed child escaped her vigilance, She continued at her post until she had full number inside her doors, all that could sit comfortably around her long table.

Full of wonder, but gladly they came in out of the cold into warmth, to partake of good cheer. Poor, starved forms, with faces blue and pinched with cold, had some of these street waifs. How they blessed the kind lady. How their eyes sparkled. When warmed they were taken to the big room where the feast of good things was spread, and they were invited in kindly tones to be seated around the richly-spread table, while willing hands filled their plates with tempting viands. Never in all their lives had these children known or partaken of a Christmas feast like this. Hunger and cold had been the portion of their little lives thus far. One tiny child turned on the lady a wistful earnest gaze, and timidly queried: "Ith you an angel?" Is it any wonder they thought that home was heaven, and the lady an angel? Their ideas of heaven and angels were vague and indistict, but they thought vaguely it meant something in connection with happiness, warmth and love. And were they happy? Yes, very happy.

And unto them for this day at least, the lady was an earthly ministering angel. Her unique Christmas, as she was pleased to call it, gave her a pleasure she had never dreamed possible could come to her by her act of kindness. She understood now how it was possible for one to make in a measure their own sunshine and happiness. Tears filled her eyes, called there by earnest, loving thoughts, making them soft and luminous as she gazed at the delighted children.

"Verily, my disappointment has worked for my good, I do believe. It has made me more in sympathy with my neighbors, my suffering brothers and sisters. It has taught me 'Tis more blessed to give than receive.' I am far happier than I could have been merely by the gratification of my own selfish wishes."

Thus she communed with herself, when the children had departed, taking such memories of pleasure and comfort with them that brightened their gloomy childhood for many days. Overflowing with tender sympathy, the lady remembered the sweet, pale-faced seamstress and her mother living lonely in the little brown house on ——— street; the lame boy and his mother who eked out a scanty livelihood at the corner store; the chore boy, and the old man who kept the walks free from snow, for a small compensation.

Their heartfelt and trembling "God bless you" sounded like a strain of sweet music to her listening ear.

"This has been a happy Christmas," was her final conclusion, as weary, but full of sweet content, at night she closed her eyes and slept. She had such dreams as visit the good in slumber. She dreamed two angels stood by her bedside, and between them a fairy of brightness, which latter may have been a reflection of her own pure soul-thought. The trio smiled upon her and whispered: "Dear child, you have this day fulfilled the Christ-principle of love, inasmuch as you have fed the hungry and ministered unto the suffering. Your reward will be unto you an hundred-fold in spiritual blessings. Peace be unto you."

Little Thought slumbered peacefully in her cozy nest that night, glorified and beautified by the brightness she was instrumental in bringing to lonely hearts. Companion of angels, may we cultivate her acquaintance more ardently for purity, and woo her to our hearts, that we may strew blessings in the pathway of others, and receive the smiles of angels.

CLARA MARSH.

RESOLUTIONS TO THE MEMORY OF MRS. MARY A. BABE.

Whereas, the sweet mesenger, Peace, miscalled Death, has entered our ranks, and removed therefrom, to a fairer and better land, Mary A. Babe, be it therefore,

Resolved: That, in the transition of Mrs. Babe, the First Association of Spiritualists of Washington, D. C., and the National Spiritualists' Association of the United States of America, have lost one of their truest friends and staunchest supporters, and the Cause of Spiritualism one of its worthiest representatives.

Resolved: That, in her mortal life, we recognize an example worthy of emulation by every one in the good deeds wrought by her for the sake of others, and in her steadfast devotion to the Truth as she understood it.

Resolved: That, in her departure to spirit life, we find the strongest proof of her love for the religion of Spiritualism through the bestowal of a portion of her worldly goods for the diffusion of its sublime truths among men, thereby setting an example to every Spiritualist in the land to demonstrate a like devotion to the same great cause by a similar donation to aid the angel world in establishing higher and purer conditions for humanity on earth.

Resolved: That, while we grieve for the loss of her physical presence, we yet rejoice in the gain that has come to her enfranchised spirit through its entrance into the higher life, where the reward of her well-spent life awaits her.

Resolved: That these resolutions be spread upon the records of the First Association of Spiritualists of Washington, D. C., also upon the records of the N. S. A., and copies of the same forwarded to all of the Spiritualist papers for publication.

G. A. HALL,
J. H. ALTEMUS,
H. D. BARRETT,
Committee.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 10, S. E. 49.

MISSOURI CAMP ASSOCIATION—REPORT OF PROGRESS.

Owing to serious illness among the share-holders, the meeting for permanent organization of the Missouri Camp Association has had to be postponed. The date now fixed for it is February 16, 1897, when the organization will assume definite permanent form, adopt a constitution and take other needful steps.

Immediate communication is earnestly desired with every Spiritualist in the State and vicinity who feels any degree of interest in this movement. It must not be supposed, because the headquarters of the temporary organization are at Springfield, that therefore the State Camp will be located near that city. The location of the camp has not yet been determined. It will be decided by the majority vote of all the stockholders, when the proper time comes for that step to be taken.

The Association is open to receive propositions from any part of the State; failure to communicate upon that subject might prove serious oversight. The location which offers the best facilities, adaptation and inducements will doubtless be selected. Several have already been proposed.

The responses to our former call have been numerous and gratifying. Much interest has been expressed, and from every quarter comes the earnest wish that Spiritualism in Missouri may have a permanent camp-home.

Address all communications to M. Theresa Allen, secretary, or J. Madison Allen, president, 233 Commercial street, Springfield, Mo.

PERTINENT QUESTIONS

For the Spiritualists to Answer.

What Are We Going to Do About It?

To the Editor:—In view of the attempt made by many Spiritualists to solve the vexing problems that confront us, I wish to ask a few questions, hoping that some one will drop personalities long enough to answer them fairly.

THE WORD "CHURCH."

The different encyclopedias inform us that although the name of church has been used by the Christians, it nevertheless was employed by the Jews before the Christian era.

The dictionaries give us three definitions: (a) "a place of worship," (b) "a body of Christian worshipers," (c) "to give thanks in church."

It is natural that the compilers of Webster's and Worcester's dictionaries would apply the word church to Christians exclusively—inasmuch as they were compiling the customary word usages of the age which was Christian.

Writers are constantly referring to the different religious denominations as "churches," whether Mohammedan, or Christian. We therefore conclude that the word church is and may be applied to any religious body.

We are posing before the public as a "religious body." Our State charter so specifies, likewise all the organized branches of Spiritualists.

We have found that if we would have any respectable standing, and any power legally, it must come through the organizing of societies as religious bodies. Thus we gain protection of the law.

I have never seen any speaker, however opposed he was to Christian church or religion, that refused the "clergy permit" privilege with the railroad. That permit was and is granted on his claim to the title of "reverend," and that title represents him as a minister of a religious body. The universal term is "church;" why not allow those workers who have sacrificed their lives for the cause to be protected by law, and respected by the public, as representatives of other religious bodies are protected and supported? Why not give the mediums an incentive to be honest and respectable, and encouragement to withstand the awful pressure of gross immorality and disloyalty that is crushing out the very life?

Why not give a teacher of Spiritualism as much encouragement as a member of the Salvation Army receives? Why would it not be a good thing for some of the croakers who have an income aside from Spiritualism and who are continually disorganizing us to experience some of the difficulties and endure some of the hardships and scoffs and sneers of the newspapers, etc., thus learning a little of what it is to be a genuine medium, with not a particle of financial backing or influence to assist him in his endeavors to obey the voice of the spirit?

Is it not time that we put aside the custom of quarreling over the northeast side of a hair, and look to the needs of the hour and consider the motives of the reformers, and do away with this senseless hullabaloo over the difference between "tweedle-dee and tweedle-dum?"

We are told by the newspapers and railroad officials that we are not a church, therefore are not entitled to the courtesies and privileges of other ministers.

We are told by some of these old-time Atheistic Spiritualists that we are not a church, and will get into trouble if we pose as a church; and yet the same people in another breath complain about the opposition and narrowness of the church, when they themselves furnish our opposers with a club to knock us out of existence.

Verily, "where are we at, anyhow?" Consistency is a jewel that the average Spiritualist is not blessed with to any great extent.

If half the force was spent upon keeping down this contemptible materialism and coarse animalism that seems to prevail among us, that is used to quibble about names and customs and forms that may or may not be used by some other religious body that is out of harmony with us, 'twould be a good thing.

As well object to the word "spirit" and "healing" and the many terms used by us, because the New Testament abounds with the same terms and applications.

It can't be possible that the better class of Spiritualists are going to allow this discordant element to break up and destroy all the hard work of so many grand workers, by introducing such senseless oppositions.

I have been working for ten months with the Herald and Post of this city, to get a respectful notice for the Spiritualists and the regular objection is that "you Spiritualists conduct your meetings not upon a religious basis. You have admission to the door, contrary to the other churches, you have 'seances' that are anything but religious or instructive—they resemble more a dime museum." These remarks were made to me by some of those editors, who are apparently honest in their objections.

What are we going to do about it?

GEO. F. PERKINS.

ONE MILLION! ONE MILLION!

We want to reach 1,000,000 new readers. We want to illuminate the minds of those Spiritualists who take no Spiritualist paper. We will send all new subscribers The Progressive Thinker three months for fifteen cents. Read the article on fifth page headed "Fifteen Cents." It will give full particulars.

VICTIM OF RELIGIOUS MANIA.

Terre Haute, Ind.—Mrs Mary Deshon, a long-time and well-known resident here, has been taken to jail, violently insane, pending a formal inquiry as to her condition. She became insane as a result of religious excitement. She fought desperately when two policemen took her from her residence and at the jail when a physician entered her cell she knocked him down. Her ravings are about religion and the doctors, her hallucination being that the doctors will kill her. Many of her friends here called at the jail to see her, and, while she recognized them and thanked them for coming to a jail to see her, she insisted that they must repent to be saved. Turning to the running hydrant in the cell, she said: "See, there is the blood of the Lord Jesus Christ; see how it gushes from his bleeding side. His blood will save us all and I am going to be saved now. I will drink and be an angel." Thereupon she placed her lips to the running water.

I CURE FITS

When I say I cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Postoffice address.

Prof. W. H. PEEKE, F.D., 4 Cedar St., New York

HURRAH FOR WALSER!

Lyman C. Howe Has Somewhat to Offer.

"A Plain Denial" in a late "Progressive Thinker," furnished us much amusement, as well as satisfaction in having a direct statement from headquarters. Whatever strange thing he may do, I could not believe, when I read the account of his joining the Presbyterian Church, that G. W. Walser, founder of the Spiritual Camp at Liberal, Mo., had thus lost his reason, and neutralized all his past life and his works. It is not safe to accept such reports from the secular press, and reiterate them as if they were settled facts.

But I cannot see so great a difference between the Presbyterian and other churches as to the reasonableness or moral sense they represent; for Hell is still the corner stone of most of them—Methodists, Baptists etc., as much as Presbyterians. But few of the clergymen, of any of them, dwell much upon total depravity, bloody atonement, endless misery, or any of the delicate preserves of ancient savagery, as they were thundered from the pulpit when Brother Walser was a boy. Moreover they do not even require new converts to subscribe to them. Predestined damnation is no worse than any other, except perhaps more certain of its aim!

And, though ministers are required to subscribe to them, they do not teach, nor ask members to even profess to believe them. Besides, I think Brother Walser is a little off in saying they (the Calvinists) have the least sense of the whole caboodle. It seems to me that the Presbyterian church has represented as liberal an amount of intellectual energy as any. But I know a liberal agnostic who says all men are fools in some directions.

Jonathan Edwards was a brilliant man of superior moral excellence; but his inheritance and the psychology of education and environment made him a fool on certain theological lines. And some great scientists talk like idiots, outside their drift. Touch them on the questions of immortality, and the demonstrations of modern Spiritualism, and they talk like driveling idiots. Agnostics often do the same, and Spiritualists are no exception. The haste made to publish a scandal against liberals or Spiritualists and the lying reports they send out as truth to delude their readers, gives to the press the same title of fools; for they act against their own best interest, to obey the hypnotic prejudice of religious dictation.

I am thankful for the letter from Moses Hull, from which we may fairly believe the plain truth is elicited in reference to S. P. Putnam and Miss Collins. Shame to a press which is the pretended dispenser of news, and current history, to thus malign, or misrepresent a man or woman that has passed beyond the veil and is powerless to reply so as to be heard and recognized.

But Spiritualists may profit by these evil traits and tendencies, and correct their own like proclivities.

The haste with which morbid gossips repeat a scandal, or any suspicion against a neighbor, often acts as a bane in our own ranks, and repels the angels of love and light. Those who spend their time and talent in efforts to injure others, have no time to devote to self-discipline, and are therefore objects of criticism from those whom they affect to despise.

Brother Walser, how is your spiritual camp-meeting progressing under Presbyterian management?

LYMAN C. HOWE.

FARMER RILEY.

His Seances at Streator, Ill., Gave Great Satisfaction.

To the Editor:—I wish to say that Farmer Riley has just closed his engagement with the "Home Circle" in this city. He gave us a week of successful seances; during the five nights some forty materializations were manifested. Never in the history of Streator has so much interest been stirred up in the cause of Spiritualism.

We have no regular organized society here, but a few faithful souls have banded themselves together under the name of "Home Circle," with myself as president; with untiring energy we have struggled along for over one year, with seemingly no gathered pearls, until we secured Farmer Riley. Mr Riley came to Streator a perfect stranger; he went from us yesterday leaving footprints in the solid rock for truth that no storm of ridicule can ever blot out. The seed sown has fallen on fertile soil, and the sod of superstition has been plowed below the subsoil. Mr. Riley has started a vibration in this city that will not cease to vibrate and revibrate until the end of time.

The seances were held at my house and I know that Mr. Riley gave our people the best satisfaction of any medium that has ever visited this city. All his work was open for inspection, and was pronounced by all as perfectly honest, and under the test conditions there was no possible chance for suspicion of anything but faithful and honest materialization. Mr. Riley "dark circles" gave great pleasure to all who sat in them and witnessed the wonderful and startling manifestations.

Another very interesting feature of Mr. Riley's seances is the slate-writing, which is produced in a perfectly dark room.

I send you a copy of what I received upon my slate from a dear niece who passed to spirit-life last June:

"Oh! Uncle Will, I am so thankful this good man, Mr. Riley, came in here, so I could write and tell you of my beautiful home here in Summerland, where beautiful flowers bloom perpetually and a pretty brooklet runs through this land of flowers. I am teaching a class of beautiful children their first lessons in love. Miss Carrie Parker is my companion. Tell all how happy I am, and that none need fear to come to live in this world if they do right in your world, for I find that as one sows so shall he reap is true. My love to my loved ones of earth. Lovingly.

"MAY TUCKER."

The above message was written like lightning and upon my own slate. The spirit companion she mentions is a sister to my wife. Sister Carrie was called to Spirit-life last March. I mention these facts so the readers will fully understand the beautiful message.

Many of our people received messages of importance. We were indeed sorry that we could not keep Mr. Riley longer, but he has so many calls he cannot stay long in one place. Should he and his noble, patient wife ever come to Streator again, they will ever find our home open to them. We can't thank Mr. Riley enough for the great work he has done here; for the ball is now rolling and all the priests, both in hell and purgatory, can't block its progress. I will only add if all mediums were as true and honest as "Farmer" Riley, the curses of priesthood, superstition and bigotry would soon be uncloaked.

W. H. H. TUCKER.

The Hittites were first mentioned about 900 B. C., as a commercial and military nation to the north of Palestine.

A LETTER AND A POEM.

From One of the Old-Time Workers.

To the Editor:—Having those energetic souls, Moses and Mattie Hull, as our next-door neighbors, I sometimes feel as though I would like to enter the field of labor as in days gone by, but the barque in which I am sailing o'er life's tempestuous sea is not as strong as Brother J. M. Peebles claims his to be, though with him I can say, I am not old! The I, the ego, that for more than thirty years was inspired to teach the gospel of Spiritualism to the thousands who came to listen, is just as young and ambitious as when the morning stars first shone, and I believe it is a spark of eternal fire, never to be extinguished. The body will mingle with its native dusty elemetns, but I shall go on and on in the eternal light of spirit forever. What a glorious comfort in times like these, when it seems as though all external things are in wild confusion. I well remember prophecies given forty years ago, through my own lips, of the uprisings and wars among nations, which must come in order to bring about an equalization of elements whereby equal rights to human beings can be made possible, and a prevailing justice be established. I may not see with mortal eyes the fulfillment, but I am sure it will come.

I enclose a poem written not long since, which, if you think worthy a place in The Progressive Thinker, may remind those of my old friends and coworkers that "I still live;" and my prayer is, that every one of God's children may be crowned with spiritual strength and life until peace on earth and good will to all becomes the unchanging law.

SOUL GROWTH.

I am only a chrysalis in my shell,
With wings close folded to my breast,
While my longing soul would soar away
To find a land of peace and rest.
Bound by the chains Dame Nature made,
I struggle, and weep, and pray,
And then, sometimes, I catch a glimpse
Of light from my freedom's day.

I feel in my soul's upheaving here,
The power of life divine;
And, somehow, know the glory of that
Will become a part of mine.
I look within to the power that swells
Till the very shell must break;
As a seed in the earth expands to grow,
And another form must take.

As the leaves of a bud are folded close
O'er the blossom that is to be,
So the gathering powers I know are here
Evolving to blossom in me.
And out of this prison I soon shall go,
As free as the birds of the air;
I shall join the grand army of those gone before,
And dwell in Love's sheltering care.

Oh, then will I sing a sweet song of praise
When I pass through that heavenly door,
No longer earth-bound in a chrysalis shell,
But free, on eternity's shore
I shall bask in the sunshine of holiest love;
I shall learn the deep lessons of life;
I shall mingle with souls at one with my own,
And know no more discord nor strife.

So, I rest in my bondage, so full of sweet hope
And, with patience await the glad day
When the shell will burst off, and my wings may unfold
To bear me in triumph away.
Thus Nature's grand law, if we study it well,
Will give us our anchor of peace,
And quietly thro' all the tempests and storms
We may feel all our blessings increase.

M. S. TOWNSEND WOOD.

Stoneham, Mass.

NEWS FROM SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

To the Editor:—The Church of the Spirit is holding prosperous meetings every Sunday in Mechanics' Hall, corner Main and Harrison avenue.

Since my last writing Mrs. Cummings of this city has given three valuable lectures, one especially upon "Generation More Important than Regeneration"—a discourse that should be heard by dozens of societies. Mrs. Cummings is a growing speaker. She has excellent command of language, clear thoughts and is very progressive in attitude.

Mr. Baxter has devoted a Sunday to our church, treating in a strong, emphatic manner upon themes appropriate, closing his evening lecture with a remarkable seance in which numerous spirits identified themselves with marvelous detail and accuracy.

Mr. Thomas C. Buddington delivered a profound and clever scientific lecture last Sunday evening upon Evolution, in which he advanced the new theory of the planets being born out of the sun-mother, and traced the evolution of the vibratory motion of atoms till it developed individual life on the planet, showing how step by step the protoplasmic germs produce the lower order of animals, and through the Batrachians, evolved the human races. The lecture was intensely interesting and was received with rapt attention. Mr. Buddington appears to be continuing the unfinished work of the late Professor Denton.

Mrs. Twing will speak the balance of the month, lecturing Sunday mornings at 10:30 o'clock and holding a seance in the evening at 7 o'clock. She will also give a seance on each Thursday evening in Sociable hall, same building, following the usual supper

The ladies of the church are preparing for a sale and fair to be held in their room the latter part of January.

H. A. BUDDINGTON.

Springfield, Mass.

CENTRAL NEW YORK CAMP AT FREEVILLE, N. Y.

The wide awake New Yorker officers of the above camp at Freeville, N. Y., are on the move and are already hustling for camp work in August, 1897. A good part of their programme is now made up, and they are making arrangements to hold their annual meetings in a grove near town.

There is a large hall at Freeville, where meetings can be held in bad weather. We are to have a good array of speakers and mediums, and the programme will contain Woman's day, Temperance day, Labor day, Three Sundays, and the session will be two weeks in length. Date of opening will be Saturday, July 24th, thus making the camp session one week in July and one week in August. Speakers and mediums can address for information, B. L. Robinson, president; McLean, Tompkins county, N. Y. J. W. DENNIS.

"Social Upbuilding, Including Co-operative Systems and the Happiness and Ennoblement of Humanity." By. E. D. Babbitt, LL. D., M. D. This comprises the last part of Human Culture and Cure. Paper cover, 15c. For sale at this office.

PLAIN STATEMEMT.

SPIRITUAL PAPERS—A PLEA IN THEIR BEHALF — SOCIETIES WHOSE MEMBERS READ NO SPIRITUALIST PAPERS PREPARED TO TURN INTO A CHURCH — POINTED TRUTHS POINTEDLY TOLD.

To the Editor:—Obsession is a condition where the brain of a man or woman, becomes in a dilapidated condition, and its powers are below par; then a low class of spirits can take hold and obsess a medium, and I hold that no person or human being can become obsessed in any other way, shape or manner; therefore to cure obsession the brain of the patient must be cured first, and when you find a man like "Dr. Hines," of California, who claims that he reads nothing of our Spiritual literature, but receives all the information the he needs from his spirit guides, you may set it down to be a fact that something is wrong with that man's brain, and that he is possessed as well as obsessed by some selfish, bigoted and self-conceited spirit from the lower planes of spirit-life.

No man on earth can receive any more from the spirit side of life or from those that have gone on before us or taken one step into the higher life, than he can from those "higher," or intelligent ones that yet inhabit this earthly plane of spirit-life, in which we now live. There are many spirits yet embodied in physical form in earth-life, that are far advanced beyond many of those that now dwell in the spirit-realm, and when a journal like The Progressive Thinker, with a living spirit in the body at the head of it, who has had years of experience in disseminating the truths and beauties of Spiritualism to the world, is ignored and laid aside as not a good means of gaining knowledge and increasing the intelligence and sharp brightness of a speaker, then there must be something wrong somewhere.

There is not a copy of The Progressive Thinker issued, but what contains subjects for a dozen lectures, and all of our best lecturers read all the spiritual works that can be found within their reach—all because they contain ideas and new thoughts from the brightest and most educated of spirits that now dwell in earth-life.

Many of the contributors for The Progressive Thinker write under inspiration from the higher side of life, and the added knowledge of both spirit and mortal is put before us upon the pages of this best of spiritual papers.

Ignorance of the current spiritual news is not a good recommend for any speaker to claim.

Our spiritual papers are the equalizers, the moderators, the amalgamators, the harmonizers and educators of our people, and I find that just as soon as a society calling themselves Spiritualists, do not have our "Progressive Thinker" upon their news stand, either for sale or for free distribution, or do not have some other good spiritual journal, then they take a step backward and call themselves a "church."

Only a few days ago I wished for an extra copy of The Progressive Thinker, and I called upon one of the lights of a so-called "Spiritual Church," just before their services began, and asked for The Progressive Thinker.

"Oh!" he exclaimed, "we don't keep any spiritual papers any more!"

I wondered no more why they called themselves a "church." They had fallen below par, and like Dr Rines, did not want any more information. They had enough now probably. They will promulgate a creed and a dogmatic theology, and "believe or be damned," will be the watchword and rallying cry.

I have camped with very many of our most brilliant and best speakers, and I find that men like Moses Hull, Lyman C. Howe, A. B. French, and a host of others are inveterate readers, especially of spiritual publications.

So, Mr. Editor Francis, send forth your Progressive Thinker, for it is the salvation of our cause on earth, and while we are ready to receive all that we can from the higher life around us, we are more than willing to receive through The Progressive Thinker all that you have to give us that is good, beautiful, grand and noble, and may you live long to help lead us kindly toward the light. J. W. DENNIS.

Buffalo, N. Y.

LAKE HELEN (FLORIDA) CAMP-MEETING.

To the Editor:—Letters from this new and growing camp, informs us of the pretty cottages being built, of the large number of visitors now stopping at Hotel Cassadaga, of the progress of the auditorium and the Club House.

There will be a large attendance this season, many going down from New England and the Northern States.

A party of twenty left New York, January 8, by the Comanche, of the Clyde line, for Jacksonville, nearly half of the twenty bound direct for Lake Helen Camp.

The names of this party are: C. L. Thayer and wife, of Northampton; Norman Eglested, of Ware; Mrs. J. D. Wederkind and Mrs. Eunice Bradley, both of West Mystic, Ct; Allen Avery and wife, of Mystic, Ct; Carrie M. Harris and sister, of Chemsford; Erwin E. Tuffer and wife, of Somers, Ct; Miss Adams, Enoch Olds and wife, Frank T. Steele, Miss Pool, Miss Capron, Mrs. Fullare, Miss Wilcox, Demiesar H. Sackett, all of Springfield.

Another excursion will leave New York by the Clyde line the first week in February. I shall go with this excursion. The prospect is good for a large party to go direct to Lake Helen.

Good speakers are engaged and every preparation is being made for a successful meeting.

In that lovely summer climate, in dead of winter at the North, those who go will find new life and comfort in the balmy pines and magnetic sunshine.

All who wish to join my next party should write me soon (enclosing stamp) for circulars of information. The price of first class round trip from New York to Jacksonville by steamer is $35.80. This includes board and lodging. Round trip from New York to Lake Helen is $42.00. H. A. BUDDINGTON.

91 Sherman St., Springfield, Mass.

"Right Living." By Susan H. Wixon The author shows a wise practicality in her method of teaching the principle of ethics. She illustrates her subject with many brief narratives and anecdotes, which render the book more interesting and more easily comprehended. It is especially adapted for use in Children's Lyceum. In the hands of mothers and teachers it may be made very useful. Young and old will be benefited by it Cloth $1 For sale at this office.

"The Priest, the Woman, and the Confessional." This book, by the well-known Father Chiniquy, reveals the degrading, impure influences and results of the Romish confessional, as poved by the sad experience of many wrecked lives. Price, by mail, $1. For sale at this office.

LIFE WORK —OF— CORA L. V. RICHMOND.

COMPILED AND EDITED BY
HARRISON D. BARRETT.

With portraits representing Mrs. Richmond in 1857, in 1876, and in 1894.

OUTLINE OF CONTENTS:

INTRODUCTION.

CHAPTER I. Parentage—Place of Birth—Childhood—School Experiences—First Mediumistic Work, etc.

CHAPTER II. Hopedale—Mr. Scott in Massachusetts—Removal to Wisconsin—The Ballou Family—Adin Ballou's Work—Work of Spirit Adin Augustus Ballou.

CHAPTER III. Ouina—Her Earthly Life and Tragic Death—Her Mission in Spirit-Life.

CHAPTER IV. Other Controls—The Guides.

CHAPTER V. Work in Cuba, N. Y.—Buffalo Pastorate—Workers in Buffalo—Thomas Gales Forster—Sarah Brooks—Horace H. Day—Removal to New York City, 1856—Philadelphia—Boston—Baltimore.

CHAPTER VI. Work in New York City.

CHAPTER VII. New York City (continued). Prof. J. J. Mapes—Hon. J. W. Edmonds—Dr. Gray—New York Editors and Clergy—Other Places in the East—Meadville, Pa., 1861—Hon. A. B. Richmond.

CHAPTER VIII. Washington, D. C.—Reconstruction—Senator J. M. Howard—George J. W. Julien—Gen. N. P. Banks—Nettie Colburn Maynard—Statement of Geo. A. Bacon.

CHAPTER IX. England—Robert Dale Owen—George Thompson—Countess of Caithness—Mrs. Strawbridge—Mr. and Mrs. Tebb—Mrs. Nosworthy—J. C. Ward—Mrs. Slater—Andrew Cross.

CHAPTER X. Work in England (Continued in Three Subsequent Visits.)

CHAPTER XI. California Work, 1875—Other Visits—Letter of C. M. Plumb—Letter of Mrs. John A. Wilson.

CHAPTER XII. Chicago Work, 1876 to 1895—First Society Chartered, 1869—Complete Account of Work in Letters and Statements of Members of the Society.

CHAPTER XIII. Camp Meeting Work—Cassadaga—Lake Pleasant—Onset Bay—Lake Brady—Lookout Mountain, etc.

CHAPTER XIV. Literary Work—Hesperia—Volumes of Discourses and Lectures—Psychopathy; Soul Teachings—Poems—Other Literary Work.

CHAPTER XV. Literary Work (continued)—Lecture on Gyroscope, 1858—"The Shadow of a Great Rock in a Weary Land," 1887—Poems—Choice Selections in Prose and Verse—Work of William Richmond.

CHAPTER XVI. Letters from Personal Friends; from Orpha E. Tousey; from Lady Caithness, and others—Appreciation of the Work from Those Best Qualified to Judge—Frederick F. Cook—Wendell C. Warner—Drs. Emmett and Helen Dinsmore.

CHAPTER XVII. Mrs Richmond's Experiences While in the Trance State, Written by Herself.

Price $2, Postpaid. For Sale at this office.

Woman, Church and State.

A Historical Account of the Status of Woman Through the Christian Ages, with Reminiscences of the Matriarchate.

BY MATILDA JOSLYN GAGE.

*THE AMOUNT OF VALUABLE IN-*formation succinctly and clearly stated in this volume of 554 pages is amazing. The title, as above given, fails to convey an idea of the fulness and completeness with which the subjects are treated. The Matriarchate, or Mother-rule, is the theme of the first chapter, in which much lore, quaint, queer and curious, is brought to view in elucidation of the subject. This is followed by chapters on Celibacy, Canon Law, Marquette, Witchcraft, Wives, Polygamy, Woman and Work, The Church of To-day, Past, Present, Future; and there is not a chapter in the book that is not handled in a masterly manner, and that for quantity and quality of information, is not worth the full price of the volume. It is packed with knowledge well-arranged, and intensely interesting from beginning to end. No one can possibly regret buying it; it is a valuable addition to the library of any free and truth-loving mind.

Price, $2.00. For sale at this office.

ROMANISM AND THE REPUBLIC.

A WORK THAT EVERY LOVER OF his country should have at hand for consultation. By Rev. Isaac J. Lansing, M. A. This is a most able work, consisting of a Discussion of the Purposes, Assumptions, Principles and Methods of the Roman Catholic Hierarchy. The work contains 447 pages, and may be considered a mine of valuable information for every patriot in the land. Price $1. For sale at this office.

RIGHT LIVING

— BY —

SUSAN H. WIXON,

Author of "Apples of Gold," "All in a Lifetime," "The Story Hour," "Summer Days at Onset," "Sunday Observance," etc., etc.

"Living is an art, a method of expressing great conceptions; in fact, the highest method, the noblest of the arts."—THOMAS STARR KING.

This book gives an admirable course of study in ethics, and supplies a long-felt want of an ethical text-book especially adapted to the comprehension of children, as well as older persons whom it is wisely and appropriately designed to interest while teaching them valuable ethical lessons.

The author shows a wise practicality in her method of teaching the principles of ethics. She illustrates her subject with many brief narratives and anecdotes, which render the book more interesting and more easily comprehended. It is especially adapted for use in children's lyceums. In the hands of mothers and teachers it may be made very useful. Young and old will be benefited by it. It is a most excellent book and should be widely circulated.

CONTENTS:

Right Living. What is Morality? What is Ignorance? Knowledge the Great Treasure. Concerning Education. Conduct; or Right Doing. Virtue, the Illuminator of Life. Prudence, an Economy of Life. What Know Ye of Justice? Fortitude a Noble Possession. Temperance and Intemperance. Is the Use of Tobacco Dangerous? Cultivation of Individuality. Character, a Jewel of Great Price. Idleness, Another Name for Loss. Industry, the Staff of Life. Value of a Trade. Recreation a Necessity. Games of Chance. Truth and Falsehood. What is an Oath? or the Worth of a Promise. Fraud a Crime. The Poison of Slander. What is Hypocrisy? Conscience, or Moral Sense. Selfishness, the Menace of Society. Gratitude, a Fragrant Flower of Life. Is Reverence a Duty? Self-Reliance. Self-Control. Self-Respect. Foolish Pride and Silly Prejudice. Anger, the Distorter. The Angel of Forgiveness. Observation a Great Faculty. Perseverance, the Friend of Man. Punctuality, a Promoter of Success. The Difficulties of Life. Temptation, the Demon on the Highway. Habit, Second Nature. Power of Will. Courage, a Necessity to Right Living. In Regard to Concealed Vice. Beautiful Charity. Fidelity, the Giver of Strength and Honor. Value of Wealth. Avarice, Not a Means to Life's Best End. Good Nature, One of Life's Best Blossoms. Reason and Free Inquiry. Free Speech. A Free Press. Rights of Animals. Rights of Children. Human Rights; or the Equality of Man. Moral Cleanliness. Politeness—The Gentleman. Politeness—Continued—The Gentlewoman. Best Society. Progress; or Enlightenment. Wisdom.

Price, Cloth, $1. Sold at this Office.

The Development of the Spirit

After Transition. By the late M. Faraday. The origin of religions, and their influence upon the mental development of the human race. Transcribed at the request of a band of ancient philosophers. Price 10 cents.

HUMAN CULTURE AND CURE.

MARRIAGE, SEXUAL DEVELOPMENT, AND SOCIAL UPBUILDING.

BY E. D. BABBITT, M. D., LL.D.

A most excellent and very valuable work, by the Dean of the College of Fine Forces, and author of other important volumes on Health, Social Science, Religion, etc.

Price, cloth, 75 cents. For sale at this office.

"THE WATSEKA WONDER."

To the student of psychic phenomena, this pamphlet is intensely interesting. It gives detailed accounts of two cases of "double consciousness," namely Mary Lurancy Vennum, of Watseka, Ill., and Mary Reynolds, of Venango county, Pa. For sale at this office. Price 15 cents.

COSMIAN HYMN BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF Original and Selected Hymns

For Liberal and Ethical Societies, for Schools and the Home.

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN.

This volume meets a public want. It comprises 258 choice selections of poetry and music, embodying the highest moral sentiment, and free from all sectarianism. Price 50 cents. Sold at this office.

The Progressive Thinker.

Published every Saturday at 40 Loomis Street

J. R. FRANCIS, Editor and Publisher.

Entered at Chicago Postoffice as second-class matter.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER will be furnished until further notice, at the following terms, invariably in advance:

One year..... $1.00
Clubs of ten (a copy to the one getting up the club)..... 7.50
Thirteen weeks..... 25cts
Single copy..... 5 cts

REMITTANCES.

Remit by Postoffice Money Order, Registered Letter, or draft on Chicago or New York. It costs from 10 to 15 cents to get checks cashed on local banks, so don't send them unless you wish that amount deducted from the amount sent. Direct all letters to J. R. Francis, No. 40 Loomis Street, Chicago, Ill.

CLUBS! IMPORTANT SUGGESTION!

As there are thousands who will at first venture only twenty-five cents for THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER thirteen weeks, we would suggest to those who receive a sample copy, to solicit several others to unite with them, and thus be able to remit from $1 to $10, or even more than the latter sum A large number of little amounts will make a large sum total, and thus extend the field of our labor and usefulness. The same suggestion will apply in all cases of renewal of subscriptions—solicit others to aid in the good work. You will experience no difficulty whatever in inducing Spiritualists to subscribe for THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER, for not one of them can afford to be without the valuable information imparted therein each week, and at the price of only about two cents per week

A Bountiful Harvest for 25 Cents.

Do you want a more bountiful harvest than we can give you for 25 cents? Just pause and think for a moment what an intellectual feast that small investment will furnish you. The subscription price of THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER thirteen weeks is only twenty-five cents! For that amount you obtain one hundred and four pages of solid, substantial, soul-elevating and mind-refreshing reading matter, equivalent to a medium-sized book!

TAKE NOTICE!

☞ At expiration of subscription, if not renewed, the paper is discontinued No bills will be sent for extra numbers.

☞ If you do not receive your paper promptly, write to us, and errors in address will be promptly corrected, and missing numbers supplied gratis.

☞ Whenever you desire the address of your paper changed, always give the address of the place to which it is then sent, or the change cannot be made.

SATURDAY, JAN. 23, 1897.

A BLOODY CHAPTER.

That is a sad lesson in II. Kings, chapter 10 inclusive, which shows how one ancient faith triumphed over another. Jehu had been anointed King of Israel, while Ahab reigned at Samaria. Jehu succeeded by shameful artifice, to slaughter the seventy sons of Ahab; then he slew all that remained of the great house of Ahab, his principal men, kinsfolks and priests, until he left none remaining. After this by treachery he captured the reigning king of Judea and his forty children, and, says the divine record, "he slew them at the pit of the shearing-house, even two and forty men; neither left he any of them." Reaching Samaria, to show his zeal for the Lord, he slew all that remained of Ahab in that city.

But the glorious slaughter did not end here. The grand denouement followed. Pretending to make a sacrifice to Baal, Jehu gathered all the people, the prophets, priests and servants of Baal, and proclaimed a solemn assembly in honor of this Syrian god. Not a man was left who was not in attendance. Then the good Jehu took measures and sent away "the servants of the Lord." This was followed by the appointment of fourscore of his own followers, who he instructed: "If any of the men whom I have brought [he should have added, by this damnable trickery], into your hands escape, he that letteth him go, his life shall be for the life of him." And then, after making a burnt offering, Jehu said to his guards and captains: "Go in and slay them; let none come forth." This command was executed to the letter, and Israel reigned in glory.

But let us have the sequel of this great slaughter, verse 30:

"And the Lord said unto Jehu, because thou hast done well in executing that which is right in mine eyes, * * * * according to all that was in my heart, thy children of the fourth generation shall sit on the throne of Israel."

The Bible is the infallible word of God, according to the orthodox faith, and its statement must not be called in question; but the God we worship never practiced such brazen duplicity as is here revealed, on any of the sons of men. It was a demon god, if any, which inspired such treachery and bloody acts; but it is the same one our Christian brothers wish to engraft on the American Constitution.

A STEREOTYPED LIE CORRECTED

"There is not a hospital in the United States, nor anywhere else, which was not built by people who believe in the deity of the Lord Jesus Christ."—The Interior.

The Daily Chronicle of this city, corrects the above falsehood, constantly going the rounds of the religious press, by saying:

"The good Dr. Gray surely forgets the Michael Reese hospital of this city, which was founded by the money of a Jew, and is managed now by Jews. New York has Mount Sinai hospital, one of the best in the country, and there are, we understand, Jewish hospitals in Boston, Philadelphia, Cincinnati and many other American cities, not to mention similar institutions in Vienna, London and several European capitals."

The falsehood of the Interior is usually accompanied with that other, that all our schools of learning were founded by Christians. They can say truthfully, that it was only believers in the deity of Jesus Christ who established the Inquisition. Christians only have burnt persons at the stake for differing with them in religious opinion. And it was those same Christians who murdered old women for being witches. It was they who were responsible for African slavery. They, too, have deluged the earth with blood in propagating their damnable Athanasian creed. We don't blame them for wishing to make it appear they have done some good in the world, but it would be better if they would cultivate an acquaintance with Truth in telling of it.

THERE IS SENSE.

Says a telegram from Topeka: "The custom of kissing the Bible at the inauguration of State officers, which has prevailed in Kansas since admission into the Union, was not observed on the 11th inst. Objections were made to the custom on the grounds that the germs of disease may be carried from one person to another by kissing the book, so a resolution was adopted to do away with that part of the programme."

Worse germs than microbes swarm in the Bible, and are communicated to victims who are instructed and made to believe the contents of the old book. Under the head of "A Bloody Chapter," in another place of this issue, is given a specimen of savageism which the reader is told was not only dictated but indorsed by God himself, after the horrible massacre had been perpetrated. Better let the old book with its foul record rest on closet shelves, and become covered with the dust of ages, while its leaves are consumed by the destructive book-worm, than continue such loathsome diseases, moral, mental and physical, which spring from its polluted pages.

WARS OF EXTERMINATION.

For two years or more the attention of the world has been directed towards the massacres of the Armenians by the Turks and Kurds. The reports of missionaries made these acts of violence appear as a thirst for Christian blood by Mohammedans—a causeless slaughter of innocents because of difference in religious belief. It is now known that the Armenians rose in rebellion against the Turkish government, and that the slaughter of enemies taken in battle is the common method in those countries of treating persons captured in arms against the constituted powers. This, too, is the method of the Armenians, of which missionaries in their letters do not report. If the contest is sufficiently protracted the country will be depopulated. That women and children are not killed is apparent from the large number of destitute widows and orphans who remain, and who appeal to the generous for relief from destitution and starvation. This being a war between conflicting creeds, of course Christians sympathize with Christians.

But battles for freedom are not limited to Christians who wish to free themselves from Islamitic tyranny. Only a few hundred miles from our southern coast we have the ghastly spectacle of Christian people warring against Christian oppressors; and, horror of horrors! the extermination of prisoners taken in battle or found in arms, is carried on with all the cruelty we have been reading about in Turkey. The Spaniards shoot down captive insurgents without remorse. Even prisoners are taken out in platoons, and are shot down like wild beasts, and their carcasses are thrown into the sea as food for sharks. The slayers and the slain are believers in a common faith, and that faith, be it remembered, is Christian.

How is this atrocity met by the insurgents? Simply by slaughtering every Spanish soldier or officer taken prisoner. It has become a war of extinction, a test of physical endurance. The wealth of the country is being destroyed and its resources wasted by the contending factions, and if sufficiently protracted, general desolation must be the outcome.

Our sympathies are with the insurgents fighting to be free. And our people, if they contribute aid, it is to those in revolt; but we hear nothing about Christian barbarity in Cuba. The preachers do not direct their discourses against the savageism of Christians fighting Christians. No, no, their sermons are exposures of Mohammedan cruelty, and their prayers are appeals to God for aid in putting down the followers of the Prophet, whose worship is limited to one God, and who disbelieve in an associate God born of a virgin. And this their crime.

JUDICIAL ACTION ASKED FOR.

The Bible in schools is engaging the attention of the people of Detroit. One of its citizens, a patron of the public schools, sets forth in a petition to the Court of Chancery, that the Bible is a book religious in its nature and teachings, and if used as a text-book the schools will be places of religious worship, a condition prohibited by the State Constitution. An injunction was asked for. The judge received the petition, and said a temporary order would be issued to restrain the further reading until final action is determined in the premises.

Secularists may, with as much propriety, demand the exclusion of the Bible from churches and Sunday-schools, as churchmen may demand its use in the public schools which are supported by taxes drawn alike from all the people.

WINTER IS HERE.

Last week we published the Revivalist Moody's lament, regarding the stupor which has fallen on the churches. It gives The Progressive Thinker pleasure this week to publish his appeal. It was issued during the last days of the lamented dead year, and is the keynote to a zealous effort to do what was not successfully done in 1895, and was probably a like failure in 1896. Here are his burning words:

"During the remaining days of this year, let us all wait on our Master for special preparation, and when the new year opens, why should not every church begin the season with a thirty-day series of Gospel meetings? Why not set aside every other diversion and church work itself, to engage in united work for the spread of the Gospel? The world needs it sorely and was never more ready to receive it."

The voice of the Howling Dervish will soon be heard in the land, for the summer is past, the autumn is ended, the winter is here, and his bread-basket is empty.

EVERYONE TAKE NOTICE.

Desiring to reach NEW readers and spread broadcast President Barrett's address and other important lectures and articles, we send out The Progressive Thinker three months for fifteen cents as set forth on the fifth page of this issue. This is done at an actual loss financially to us, for the purpose of doing a good work among Spiritualists. Under the circumstances it is very strange that any of our present subscribers would so far forget for a time their true sense of justice and honor, and renew their subscriptions in the name of some other friend or member of the family, in order to get the small financial benefit of this offer, at an actual loss to this office. Verily, what next?

ANSWER TO PRAYER.

The Truth Seeker tells the following interesting story:

"The Rev. G. W. White, of Denver, had implicit confidence in prayer. When he found himself short of funds, both he and his wife fervently prayed heaven for a remittance. The next day he had one hundred dollars, and the prayer theory seemed likely to receive new confirmation, until the minister was placed under arrest for rifling another man's mail and diverting its pecuniary contents to his own ends. The untimely interference of the police robbed the miracle of its moral effect."

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

The Church of the Soul has changed the hour of service to 7:30 p. m., thus necessitating a change of place. Services are held in Masonic Temple, Room 412. Sunday-school at 10:30 a. m., same place.

The Band of Harmony will meet at the residence of the pastor, Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, 3802 Ridge avenue, Rogers Park, Thursday January 21, at 3 and 7:30 p. m. Ladies in the afternoon. Take N. W. R. R. to Rogers Park or limits, and Evanston electric to Greenleaf avenue.

"Atlantis: The Antediluvian World. By Ignatius Donnelly Sums up all information relative to the lost continent of Atlantis. He regards the description of it given by Plato as veritable history ff is intensely interesting. Price $2.

A MINISTER WITH A THROAT FOR A CAMEL.

Talmage believes in Jonah. He can describe every sensation of that fisherman from the time he was swallowed until he was thrown on shore. But everybody expects crass ignorance gilded by grandiloquent verbosity from him, and he is not authority one way or the other. Moody believes the story of Jonah, literally, but he is about as much authority as a Hottentot would be in a problem in higher mathematics. Yet he has followers, who are as ignorant and as unscrupulous as himself. The Rev. William Justin Hartha, pastor of the Second Collegiate Reformed Church at Harlem, N. Y., comes to the rescue. He says:

"Yet I may call your attention to the investigations of M Courbet, the eminent French scientist, and of the Prince of Monaco. They have shown that the sperm whale is able to swallow cephalopods much larger and much heavier than a man. It is also upon record that in February, 1891, a certain James Bartley was swallowed by a whale, and after a day and night, his companions in the ship Star of the East, cut him out and found him unconscious but alive. He is living to-day."

It would be difficult to crowd more falsehood into the same space. "Collegiate" ought to stand for knowledge, and not for ignorant stupidity. He should have finished by relating the story of the whale that once drifted on the Irish coast, with a church steeple sticking out of its mouth. The priest was sent for, and the captors proceeded to cut open the "great fish." They were astonished to find the church entire, and the congregation were just kneeling in prayer.

Herbert Spencer, one of the greatest thinkers of any age, after thirty-six years of labor has finished his great work on the Philosophy of Nature, which is pronounced the greatest intellectual effort the world has ever seen. With Darwin he has overturned theology, renovated religion, and entirely changed the fundamental views of science, and yet, with the whole realm of thought shaken and overturned as by an earthquake, the vast army of church ministers go on preaching as though nothing had happened. They feed their laity the dust that gathers on the pages of their Bibles, and appear to be interested in the reading of the "notes" that they have ground out during the week. More pitiful to see Moody and Sankey, Sam Jones and Sam Small evangelizing cities like Boston, centers of culture, preaching the jingo rigmarole and claptrap of ignorance and bigotry, ignorant of all that has been wrought in the fields of knowledge; unconscious that the very foundations of their scheme of salvation have been swept away.

A WOLF IN THE FOLD.

The Chautauqua Summer School is a fashionable resort for goody-goody Christians. We understand in its conception it was designed to be purely a literary affair, but it soon drifted into orthodoxy. Lectures are delivered by the principal clergy of the country, between which is occasionally sandwiched a discourse by a questionable scientist. Of course great care is employed that heterodox sentiments shall not have a hearing.

During the last summer Bishop Vincent, an eminent divine, gave an address which has convulsed the Chautauquans everywhere, for they have pupils in all parts of the country. He enunciated ideas just frightful to think of. Several Presbyterian journals have taken up the subject, and insist that such teaching as his cannot be tolerated. He said—but, dear reader, prepare yourself for a tremendous shock. Our pen falters as we attempt to record it, for it is frightful to think that an ecclesiastic occupying so exalted a position as bishop can be guilty of such perfidy to his creed. It is reported he said:

"It is not necessary to believe in the doctrine of the divinity of Jesus Christ to be saved."

The Bishop's friends say he is falsely reported. They claim the words used were:

"A failure to believe in the divinity of Jesus Christ does not necessarily prevent a man from being a Christian."

Either expression must require the eating of a large amount of humble pie before the Doctor can regain his standing on the Chautauqua platform. It revives the whole Arian controversy, which is claimed to have been settled at the Council of Nice, A. D. 325. Millions of lives have been sacrificed to keep down this terrible heresy and maintain that Jesus is God, equal and co-eternal with the Father. This utterance of Bishop Vincent will inspire the hope that some of those burnt at the stake by the Inquisitors reached heaven in advance of their persecutors. That was the great and only offense of Michael Servetus, burnt at the stake at the instigation of John Calvin.

By and by some fool preacher of the orthodox persuasion will admit that there is a mere possibility that a person who believes the spirits of the worthy dead may make themselves known to loved ones, and that a very few of such believers may possibly squeeze into heaven. Oh, the accursed thought! Hold us, or we faint.

MRS. ROSE L. BUSHNELL.

Mrs. Rose L. Bushnell, well and favorably known in California, has been spending a few days in Chicago. Mrs. Bushnell came eastward on account of ill health, and she finds herself getting well rapidly, thus proving that this section of the country is unsurpassed as a health resort.

"Poems of Progress." By Lizzie Doten. In this volume, this peerless poet of Spiritualism may be read in her varied moods, "from grave to gay, from lively to severe." It is a book to be treasured and richly enjoyed by all who love genuine poetry, and especially by Spiritualists. The volume is tastily printed and bound. Price $1.

"Voltaire's Romances," translated from the French. With numerous illustrations. These lighter works of the brilliant Frenchman, and invincible enemy of the Catholic Church, are worthy of wide reading. Wit, philosophy and romance are combined, with the skill of a master mind. Price $1.50. For sale at this office.

"From Night to Morn, or An Appeal to the Baptist Church." By Abby A. Judson. Gives an account of her experience in passing from the old faith of her parents to the light and knowledge of Spiritualism. It is written in a sweet spirit, and is wel adapted to place in the hands of Christian people. Price 15 cents.

"The Great Roman Anaconda." By Prof. Geo. P. Rudolph, Ph.D., ex-priest of the diocese of Cleveland, O. A sharp and pointed letter to Bishop Horstmann. It is good reading, and should be widely distributed, that people may be enlightened concerning the ways and methods of Rome and its priesthood. Price 15c. For sale at this office.

Religion of the Future. By S. Weil. Cloth, $1.25; paper, 50 cents.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

Other Important Questions Are Suggested.

How to Arrive at Their Solution,

I find a series of fifteen questions in The Progressive Thinker of October 31. In order to be brief, I answer them somewhat dogmatically, but in strict harmony with what I have learned from the spirit-world.

Question 1.—What is the relation existing between the more ethereal body, soul, (called astral body by some,) and the earth body?

Answer: The soul is not the astral body. The astral body is the ethereal body, or the body of the spirit after it has shed its material form. The astral body holds the same relation to the soul that the earthly body does to the spirit. Each perishes in its appointed time. The soul holds the same relation to the spirit that the spirit does to the body. The relation of the soul to the earthly body is that of the principle or essence of eternal life to a transient and perishable garment. The earthly husk envelops it until it is developed so that it may exist independent of a physical body.

2. Do the phenomena presented by the ethereal body represent the true ego, or is it stupid, or more intellectual?

Answer: To the first proposition, yes.

3. Can the ethereal body entirely escape from its denser factor, the earth body, and leave the latter functioning for years?

Ans. No.

4. Can the ego, while in the earthly physical form converse with its astral self?

Ans. No; though the astral body may leave the physical body temporarily, and behold it as an objective form.

5. Can a person in the earth form hold conversation with the astral form of another individual?

Ans. Such cases are on record.

6. What degree of communication exists between an astral body and spirit?

Ans. The same degree and kind that exists between a human body and a spirit. The astral body is the body of the spirit after it has lost its material form.

7. What change, if any, immediately takes place in the astral body at the death of the earth instrument, the body?

Ans. It probably develops, as the body and wings of a butterfly develops and strengthen when it escapes from the chrysalis.

8. What purpose in nature do those mature yet miniature human and animal forms serve? They seem to be a quarter of an inch, a half inch, and an inch high, and with proper proportion.

9. Are they different from the human entities, those life forms that appear to be three inches, some six inches, others twelve inches tall, and yet having human forms?

10. According to psychic measurement, is there a gradation of heights, from the little human mite to that of an adult spirit in height?

Answer to the three questions: I know of no such beings.

11. Does man by his will create human, animal and vegetable thought life-forms, and if so, how long do they live?

Ans. They have no existence. If any one has seen such beings, they are purely subjective.

12. Can an ego assume any form it wills when freed from the dense earth instrument?

Ans. Most assuredly not. However, I believe that spirit can impress upon mortal senses a form quite different from its true form. Thus, when we see our friends who have passed away bearing the same form and semblance as on earth, we may feel certain these are not their true form and semblance, but a picture presented to us in order that we may recognize them.

13. By what process, if any, does the animal ego reach the form of man on earth plane?

Ans. Evolution is a spiritual as well as a natural law. All life moves in an orderly procession from the lowest to earth plane?

14. Does the mental evolution keep pace with the physical evolution of all life forms?

Ans. We see differing degrees of intelligence among human beings. Nevertheless the rule is, the higher the physical form, the higher the intelligence.

15. Is the ego or mind a substance, acting upon and reacted upon by its environment?

Ans. The ego is not a substance; but it acts upon and is reacted upon by its environment. In fact, the spirit, in the spirit-world makes its own environment, and is at the same time encompassed and restrained by it.

WHAT HAVE WE LEARNED?

In The Progressive Thinker for October 31, a correspondent quotes from, and then replies to, a writer who has spoken as follows:

"We are not aware that it (Spiritualism) has made any positive revelations, or that it can tell man with any certainty anything more about his nature and destiny than it could when it began, or than he may know without it."

Your correspondent refers to several things which we have learned through the agency of Spiritualism; but they nearly all refer to matters pertaining to this life. How much have we really learned concerning the life to come? How many of us, when we consult a medium, or sit down in the quiet of our own chambers to automatic writing, relative, content ourselves with asking ure existence which must some day become to us the present one? Confess; we nearly every one of us either question about our own personal mundane affairs, or, if in communication with a reltive, content ourselves with asking if he is happy. We never once think of asking what that spiritual country is like; whether the sun shines and the flowers bloom; whether there is work to do there, and if so, what kind of work. We never ask if there be conditions in the Spirit-world harmonizing with the differing moral and spiritual conditions of earth. Knowing that there are evil men in this world, who seem to have no spiritual nature, it never occurs to us to inquire what their fate may be in the world to come. There is no spirit in the Spirit-world in so darkened a spiritual condition, but, if he thinks you will believe him, will tell you he is happy and in heaven. And you do believe him; and then you say exultantly: "There is no hell." Now I beg of you, don't be too sure of that.

The correspondent to whom I have referred says that Spiritualism has "positively revealed that each disembodied mortal begins intellectually and morally where he or she left off here." I believe that, and believing it, I want to know where wicked, evil men and women go when they pass on out of the spiritual darkness and depravity of their life on earth to their life in the Spirit-world. If there is no hell, where do they find their abiding-place? I do not believe hell is eternal to each individual spirit, but if my many communications on that point, obtained through

(Continued on page 8.)

SOLON AND MARY.

A SEQUEL TO "Mary Anne Carew," Wife, Mother, Spirit, Angel.

BY CARLYLE PETERSILEA,

AUTHOR OF "THE DISCOVERED COUNTRY," "MARY ANNE CAREW," "PHILIP CARLISLIE," "OCEANIDES," ETC.

COPYRIGHTED BY CARLYLE PETERSILEA.

CHAPTER III.—Continued.

LIONS ON GUARD.

SOLON AND MARY VISIT DANIEL THE PROPHET, WITHIN THE HEAVENLY SPHERES.

"Now you have the whole history, why and how such a savior was promised of prophesied to the people, these wretched, miserable, ignorant people, kept in slavish bondage; why it was often prophesied by a few favored men, wiser than themselves, that their yokes at length should be made easy, and their burdens light, for they were often bent by burdens so heavy that they were nearly double.

"Ah! my Solon! these wretched people had not even an idea of a life after death, at all. The soul was to them merely the breath, and hell these pits, and heaven the hills. If they worshiped at all it was idols or little images which they themselves had made, or, sometimes, the sun, moon, or stars. The sun was to them warmth and light, the moon a beautiful goddess, the stars her children, and they had names for some of the brighter sons and daughters. Sometimes an old grandmother would weave a little story, or legend, to please her little grandchildren, and tell it them on a bright evening before they retired to their pallets of straw, or dried grass, as they sat outside the tent, or door of the hut, and this story nearly always took on the form of a messiah, savior, or king, who would at length come forth to be kind to them and save them from their miseries.

"This, my Solon, is the true meaning of all the prophecies contained in the book called the Old Testament."

"Daniel, we would be pleased to know by whom those books were written, more especially the book accredited to you—that is, the book of Daniel?"

"Each book has its own story," replied he, "but a few of the passages within the book of Daniel, I wrote with mine own hand; being one of the king's courtlers I understood how to write in mine own language, and I wrote down in an allegorical, or blind way, the story of my yearning over the people; this I placed, unknown to the king, within the temple called Solomon, together with other script written by those before me, the Priests within the Temple being freer from subjection to the King than any other people. These High Priests were keepers of the Temples, and revered as learned and holy men, which they often were, and mourned and sympathized with the people, and were nearly always opposed to a cruel and wicked king, yet powerless to do more than keep the sanctuaries; but a secret spy informed the king that I had prophesied against him, and I was at once cast into a den of lions kept for the purpose—for a king's courtiers might not be punished like the common people—and you know with what result.

"The king, perceiving that I was not devoured, or torn in pieces, became frightened, for he was exceedingly superstitious, in other words an arrant coward, and ordered me to be brought forth, clothed in purple and fine linen, and given my former position, for a power, greater than his, had sustained me, and, he feared this power as did the lions.

"This, my Solon, is a truthful sketch of a portion of my earthly life; but only a small part of the book called Daniel was written by me, and that so changed and garbled, added to and taken from, I should not know that it originated with me, by anything which is found therein, except the vileness of the king, the fact of my being cast into the den, my escape, and reinstatement to the king's favor; but the villainous king did not forget or forgive, for shortly after he ordered the soldiers to cut off my head, with a very sharp sword, at one sweep, and if the one thus ordered failed to sever it with one stroke so that it might not roll at his feet, another soldier standing near was to instantly split him in twain from the crown of his head downward, and if he failed another standing near was to instantly pierce him directly through the heart.

"The king meant to make a sure thing of it this time, and it should be done directly before his throne, that no other power could have a chance to interfere.

"The first soldier did not miss, and my head rolled from my body. The king was delighted, and the soldier was promoted to my place, that of a courtier or knight, meaning a servant to the king's person, or a body guard.

"Shortly after my head had been severed from my body, I was astonished to find myself intact, or, rather, the inner man, together with the will or soul power. I had loved and fostered this power so well, I felt delighted that the king had set me free, and soon I was in the midst of thousands of the spirits or souls of my murdered and departed people. They gathered around me joyfully, and at once made me a leader among them."

"One or two questions more, Daniel, and then we will take our departure. How were you able to tell Nebuchadnezzar the dream which he had forgotten himself? We are sure the people of earth would like to know by what means you were able to tell the king his dream as well as the meaning of it."

"At that time," replied Daniel, "I did not fully understand myself, how I was able to tell the king his dream; all that I was then aware of was that I saw the dream pictured upon my inner self, or, rather, I saw it with the eyes of my inner self as a projection or object, and the interpretation was spoken through my lips by a power I did not then comprehend; therefore I called it God or wisdom, meaning something higher and more powerful than myself. I was at that time but a youth, not old enough to know exactly how it was accomplished. I am wiser now, and understand just how these things are brought about. The words spoken through my lips were fulfilled to the letter shortly afterward; the king was beseiged and overthrown, because he had become weak and cowerdly through his vices and horrible debaucheries; likewise, a perfect fiend in his awful orgies, a maniac in his terrible cruelties, and the conqueror cast him forth as he would have cast a dog, and sent forth a decree that no one should give him so much as a crust, or shelter him; if they did the penalty would be sure death; therefore he was obliged to eat grass and weeds like an ox.

"At this time I should not have been able to overcome the lions, but, for many years afterward I exercised this soul or will power to its uttermost. At the time when Belshazzar was the reigning king, I had become very powerful indeed—so powerful that I defied him and would not worship his idol or image which he had set up commanding that all should fall down and worship it—for this disobedience to his commands I was thrust into the den of lions, although I had previously interpreted a dream for him. He had become as cruel and more vacillating than Nebuchadnezzar had been, and nearly as weak from his excessive vices, therefore he trembled and was sore afraid that I might yet be still alive, and finding that there was really a power with me higher than his own, he made me a ruler or commander of a province. I cared not to be a ruler except as it would give me power to ease, somewhat, the terrible bondage of my people; but, as I said before, this was not of long duration, for he soon ordered my head severed from my body, as I have already told you. This fact I was not, of course, able to give in my writing, therefore I give it now."

"One more question and we are done. What caused the writing on the wall?"

"Now we come to the pith of the whole matter," said the prophet. "The people on earth say that God wrote it with his finger. I then said that wisdom, God, or higher power wrote it, meaning that power higher than even the king's, or my own, wrote it, and the interpretation of the writing was spoken through my lips; but, after the king had caused my head to be severed from my body, I understood it far better. The thousands upon thousands of spiritual beings, whom I then joined, soon made me understand by what power all these things had been accomplished, and I was afterward taken to the very band of angels who had done the writing: and why had they thus written? The miseries, cries, prayers and groans of the people—their fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters, children, and friends, were constantly rising up to them, and it was only through higher spiritual power that their condition could possibly be ameliorated, their cruel tyrants intimidated, and themselves inspired by hope. Do you think, my Solon, that if there were an all powerful God, in the form of a person, that he would have allowed such horrors, as I have mentioned, to be constantly perpetrated on an ignorant, and inoffensive people. Ignorant, not from choice, but because of powerful tyrants who kept them in slavish bondage, not allowing them opportunity, or time, for learning of any kind, not even for original thought. Such a God as that, methinks, would not be worthy of any man's worship, not even his respect. We know, my Solon, that such is not the fact, that all things come to pass through great eternal, unchangeable laws, and time alone could set the people free—and why time? Because it needed time to bring forth wiser and better kings.

"The world at that period was nearer the brute creation than at present. The people who lived then, with the exception of a few bright lights, were more nearly allied to primitive or savage nations, and a personal God had nothing to do with their condition. The great law of progress, which at length, gives to savage nations larger brains, greater will or soul power, was the only thing which could bring about a better state of things. The men who were constantly predicting better things, and foretelling of a king who would come to reign over them, who would be so wise and good that he would save them from the aforesaid hades, or hells, and from their miserable bondage—messiah, wise and loving. The larger, more sensitive brains, could foresee and predict, for they felt sure that man was at length destined for a higher state of things.

"The prophets, together with myself, meant nothing more by 'the son of God' than a son of wisdom, or higher power, one who would be wise, good, and kind to the people, never dreaming, or meaning, that a personal God would beget a child by a woman; and the 'only begotten son of God,' meant, in our language, the man who begets, or hath wisdom; he, only, could save the people, who begot or had wisdom. Begot meant to have, or to be wise. Deny it, ye learned ones of earth, if ye can. Such words as begotten are often used to denote various meanings in all languages."

"Ah! Daniel; can you tell us something about Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego; the three men who were cast into the fiery furnace and were not burned, not so much as a hair of their heads scorched?"

"No," replied Daniel. "I would prefer that they told their own story. It is enough for me to relate how and why I was able to perform that which appeared to men wonderful and incomprehensible. A few words more, my Solon, and we part until you see fit to pay me another visit.

"Will not the black man say, in the years to come, that Abraham Lincoln was a Messiah, a Savior, a good and just ruler, president, or king, for did he not save us from a bondage more cruel than death? Thousands of black men have looked forward to death as a happy release from their sufferings under the lash of their cruel overseers, in other words, their master's spies, who compelled them to labor from early morn to darkest eve without recompense, and many of them were not allowed to speak or even to lift up their eyes without feeling the sting of the lash; surely, those in the earthly plane, on the much vaunted new continent of America, within the United Free States, so called, have not been very much in advance of the Orientals."

We arose to take our departure, Daniel and his wife kissed us, and we swiftly glided on our way.

We had now visited three of the most notable personages, Benjamin Franklin, he who on earth first harnessed the forked lightning and compelled it to do his bidding; Sir Isaac Newton who first discovered the great law of magnetic attraction, and Belteshazzar or Daniel, who first manifested to the world that soul or will-power could overcome the most ferocious brute force then known to the world.

"Ah, Solon," said my sweet Mary, "the joys of an angel are beyond the comprehension of those who dwell on earth!"

"Yes; my dear love," I replied, "to search after wisdom and find it, is happiness indeed, although we may be obliged to wing our way to remotest time and space in quest of the priceless jewels within its crown."

We now returned to our own home within a city of the angels, and after love, peace and rest, we arose into activity, and spent some time in constructing new and more exquisitely beautiful things than heretofore. Perhaps it may be interesting to many in the earth life to know about some of the things so constructed; for, whatever we invented and constructed would be observed by other angels, and if better than any of their own inventions, would be adopted and made use of by them; likewise our inventions would become palpable to spirits and earthly people, for we should soon again visit the Spiritual Spheres, and also put ourselves into communication with earth.

Angels wish to be laden with new and brighter truths at each visit thus made. They never go empty handed.

Now our visit to Daniel had strengthened our will or soul power; that is, we were a much more powerful angel than before our visit to him. Newton had given us a clearer insight into the law of magnetic attraction, therefore we were a much more attractive magnetic angel than before, and could hold all things in a more powerful grasp. Our visit to Franklin had incited and quickened our inventive faculties—the constructive elements within us—and we greatly desired to construct many things owrthy of our estate as an angel; also things which would greatly benefit spirits and men, and to do this three things were necessary: will or soul power, magnetic attraction, and substance, or material wherewith to clothe our inventions, or, rather, our concentrated thoughts.

"Substance?" questions our reader. "Does substance exist within the angelic world? We thought that substance belonged to earth, that the world where the angels were was something immaterial, void, nothing, without density or substance."

Our reply is: there is no such thing as nothing; there is no such thing as void; all things are substance, and density is merely comparative. Thus material existed forever about us, ready to be made use of whenever we became wise enough to make use of it; and here let us say, that if nothing lay between the planets, they would come together with an eternal crash, and all the worlds in everlasting space would be welded into one; but the truth really is that there is not a space as small as the finest point of a cambric needle where there is nothing; the truth is, that planets, and all worlds, are rolling within an eternal ocean of substance, its density being merely comparative. For instance, those things which to man appear to be the most dense we will say rock, iron etc., are really less dense than those things which appear to him immaterial or without density; and the truth is that the magnetic attraction holds or welds all things together, and that like is attracted to like, and by this means immense areas of space are cleared of coarse material substance which goes to form planets and earthly worlds, that the finer—the ethereal, the angelic, the spiritual—may have plenty of room and opportunity to develop and become grander, more beautiful, more angelic still.

But the great law which Newton discovered, the law of magnetic attraction, exists here even with greater potency than on the earth. How else could we be distinct angels? How else could forms of any kind exist within the spiritual and angelic worlds? This great law holds together all forms whatsoever their kind, and if our world is finer or less coarse than the earth, it certainly must have greater density, as all must agree that the finer the quality the more dense the quantity: For instance, fine flour is more dense than coarse pebble-stones; the air is more dense than the earth; water is more dense than wood; the ethereal atmosphere is more dense than the lower earthly atmosphere; the angelic atmosphere more dense than the ethereal or spiritual; for, being finer, its density is much greater; and now to make this so plain that any child who runs may read, we will say that an exceedingly fine piece of cloth is more dense than a coarse bagging through which one could shoot peas; light is more dense than the atmosphere, for if the atmosphere were more dense than light, light could not penetrate it, but being coarser, less dense, than light, light is able to penetrate through every particle composing it; and why? Because it is finer in quality, in other words more dense.

Now the spiritual and angelic—the ethereal and subethereal—are both finer, more dense than light, therefore can penetrate and permeate all which is of far coarser quality; yet the law of magnetic attraction holds together all forms belonging to both, consequently the materials with which we must work were exceedingly fine and dense, finer and more dense, even than the material light which man has from the sun; but light, although the finest, most ethereal material thing which man has, yet it is exceedingly tangible and visible to him, and, really, without it all other material things would be as nothing to him; and why? Because light is his finest, most dense element. Now take away the spiritual, the ethereal, and the angelic, and all else, even light, would be as naught, for there would be no life nor man to see.

Now within this angelic world we had the finest of all fineness, consequently the densest of all density, held together by the great Newtonion law of magnetic attraction in all the various forms which exist on earth; for all earthly forms are spiritual entities or types of angelic forms. To enumerate: earth, water, oceans, seas, lakes, rivers, streamlets, grass, trees, flowers, birds, beasts, fishes, insects and reptiles; mountains, plains and deserts; forests and shrubbery of all kinds; gold, silver, diamonds, pearls and precious stones, all in their finest, most ethereal and dense forms, indestructible, imperishable and everlasting.

All these forms exist within the angelic worlds, for there are as many angelic worlds as there are material worlds, and the size of a material world, as compared with an angelic, is as the point of a needle, or a star in space.

Think of it, my reader, and then think of your little local heaven and your little local hell; your personal man God, and your personal man Devil; your young earthly man of thirty years, who, by the shedding of his blood, is to save the countless hosts of eternity from that same little hell, and that same little man Devil.

Oh! be ashamed and hide your faces, and let spiritual and angelic light penetrate and permeate your obtuse minds.

(To be Continued.)

A STARTLING FACT.

The Progressive Thinker was the only Spiritualist paper that had the enterprise to publish Prof. Barrett's address before the National Association Convention of Spiritualists We have his address, covering three pages, and five other fine addresses and articles, one by Col, Ingersoll, grouped in one paper, and we want to send out 1,000,000 of them. It is worth ten times its weight in gold.

Read the article on 5th page headed "Fifteen Cents."

"Human Culture and Cure. Part First, The Philosophy of Cure. (Including Methods and Instruments)." By E. D. Babbitt, M. D., LL D. A very instructive and valuable work. It should have a wide circulation, as it well fulfills the promise of its title. For sale at this office. Price, 75 cents.

SPIRITUALISM SCIENTIFICALLY DEMONSTRATED.

BY PROF. ROBERT HARE.

His Remarkable Researches Made in the Early Years of Spiritualism.

Directly Edited and Revised by Him, Now in Spirit-Life.

At the house of a Spiritualist who had been holding circles for more than a year, I had confirmatory evidence of the intelligence by which spirit rapping is regulated. I was allowed to subject the table employed to a strict scrutiny, removing the drawer to obtain a more thorough inspection. This table was nevertheless repeatedly agitated with an energy which could not be ascribed to the hands placed quietly upon its surface by a circle of persons perfectly quiescent. Often at this circle, and at others during the chanting of hymns, have I seen a table thus situated keeping time by its vibratory movements with a sympathetic tremor.

The spirit friend of a medium present, who called herself Amanda Ford, used on request to make a sound like that of the hammering by blacksmiths, designated as "ten-pounds-ten." This sound would be shifted to that of sawing or sweeping. Doubtless, these manifestations might be imitated by certain ventriloquists; but I had not the smallest reason to suspect ventriloquism, and Amanda gave me the following unquestionable proofs of her spiritual existence:

Taking up the alphabetic card, and holding it near my face, in a feeble light, with the back toward the medium, so as not to be inspected by any one else, I asked Amanda, as I should pass my fingers over the letters, to indicate those necessary for spelling out her name, by the usual manifestation. The name was in this way correctly spelt out.

In the next place, at the same time and under the same circumstances, I asked her then to spell the name of Washington. Passing my fingers over the letters of the alphabet, not regularly but zigzag, and stopping a short time at the letters adjoining the right ones, that much-revered name was correctly spelt out, with one single error, the omission of the G.

Suspicion that the rapping or tapping could arise from any mechanism concealed in the table was precluded when they were made under my own tables, fitted with my own hands.

OF MANIFESTATIONS FOUNDED ON TABLE MOVEMENTS WITHOUT CONTACT, OR SUCH CONTACT AS CANNOT BE SUFFICIENT TO CAUSE THE RESULT.

If was at the same mansion where the above-mentioned manifestations were observed, that I first saw a table continue in motion when every person had withdrawn to about the distance of a foot, so that no one touched it; and while thus agitated, on our host saying, "Move the table toward Dr. Hare," it moved toward me and back again. At the same premises, when between the hands of each of two media and a small table a plate upon a brass ball was interposed, without any other communication with it, the table was violently overset, so as to have its legs uppermost. Yet while thus upside down, it continued to vibrate, a single finger of a medium girl, about twelve years of age, being the sole means of human contact therewith. This I ascertained, with the greatest care, by kneeling on the floor and causing the finger of the medium, by the tip of which alone her touch was effected, to be situated between me and the light of a lamp.

In the observations above stated, respecting the movements of the table when untouched, I was aided by the presence of my friend Joseph Hazard, Esq., of Narraganset, Rhode Island, who occupied a seat opposite to mine on the other side of the table; so that while he saw all clear on one side, I saw all clear on the other. In my narrative I have adverted to two recent instances in which severally, in the presence only of the medium and myself, the table moved, as I could judge, about eight inches, being at the same time untouched by either of us.

Next in importance to the movements of tables which take place without any contact, are those in which the table rises under the hands of the medium laid gently upon it. On one occasion I saw a large circular table, supported by three massive claws on castors, overset several times by the influence of three ladies, who were media. In order to have this experiment performed with as much precision as circumstances would permit, I seated myself on one side of the table, so as to be equidistant from two of the three claws by which it was supported. The intermediate medium was directly opposite the third claw, while the others stood one on each side of her. My relative position was such, that as they were standing upright before me, I could look at their persons partially below as well as above the table. These arrangements having been made, the three media laid their hands on the table a little beyond the margin, so that they could not apply their thumbs below the edge and thus assist the table to rise. Under these circumstances I was enabled to watch the media above as well as below the table, by casting my eyes upward and downward alternately, they being all on their feet, and standing upright. It was under these conditions, that the table, in three successive trials, came over toward me and went back to its normal position.

It did not slam down quickly, when arriving at such a position, as to make it impossible for the ladies to resist its farther descent; but descended gently, rising slowly in recovering its usual upright position.

I called one morning at the dwelling of a medium to whom allusion has been made more than once in my narrative. I sat down at a table with the medium, her father, and a gentleman who accompanied me. I inquired if any of my spirit friends were present; the table tilted negatively. "Will the spirit give its initials through the alphabetic card?" In reply the letters M C were indicated. My companion, whose attention had been withdrawn, on hearing the result, said: "They are the initials of my daughter's name;" exclaiming, "Maria, are you here?"

The table tilted in the affirmative, vivaciously, as if the daughter's heart were in the movement.

Maria proving to be a sprightly spirit, a lively conversation ensued. I inquired if she could not work my apparatus; she answered through the card, "It is impossible for a spirit to work your apparatus; I am very sorry." I replied that evidently it was not impossible, since it had been actuated by spirits successfully several times. "You mean to say," I added, "that it is difficult." To this she replied affirmatively by three tilts of the table.

As through the influence of the medium, who sat at the table with us, communications had been received through my apparatus several times, the alphabet arranged from a state of disarrangement, and names spelt out by the revolution of the disk, it cannot be imagined that the medium could have influenced the alphabetical communications in this instance, since the medium, even if prone to deception, would have perceived it ridiculous to allage it impossible to work an apparatus which had on several occasions under her influence, proved the opposite to be true, in the presence of her father as well as myself.

My spirit father, and spirit friend W. W., had alleged that they worked my apparatus with great difficulty when under test conditions, from their great desire to make me a convert to Spiritualism. It was, therefore, quite consistent that a spirit, who had no such powerful motive, should have preferred to find an apology for not actuating my apparatus, rather than to have studied, or sought for the means of surmounting the obstacles.

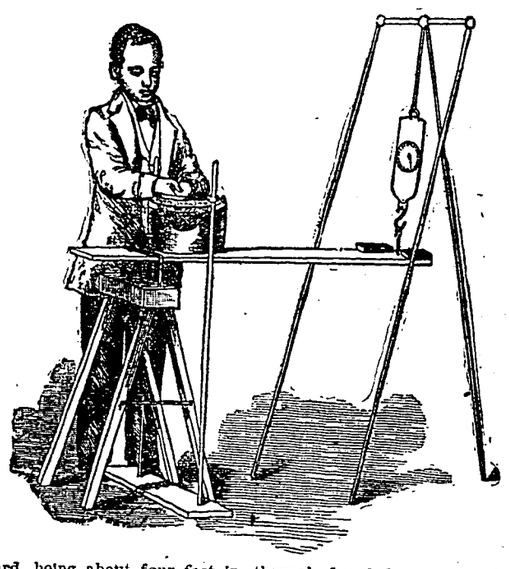
As all the manifestations, observed on this occasion, were by the tilting or partial lifting of the table, I urged the spirit to aid me in obtaining a test that these manifestations came not from the medium, but from herself, a spirit. I immediately procured from a basket which I had previously brought to the premises, a brass ball, turned truly spherical, like a billiard ball, and a plate of zinc which had been ground quite true. I placed the ball on the table, the plate on the ball, and the hands of the medium on the plate. She had no other communication with the table than that which was thus established. Pressing on the ball when situated between perpendicular lines falling inside of all the legs of the table, would of course only press it downward more firmly on its feet.

Things being thus arranged, I solicited Maria to repeat the upward jerks which she had employed in the communication which she had been making. Her father joined his solicitation to mine, pointing out that my object was to obtain evidence, which would satisfy the scientific world that such manifestations were due to the agency of spirits.

After a little delay the table rose under the ball, the plate, and the hands of the medium, with greater force than had been displayed in any of the foregoing movements.

Subsequently, being in company with Maria's father, at the dwelling of a Spiritualist, and sitting with a medium at the table supporting an apparatus for alphabetical communications, the spirit of Maria, who seems to follow her worthy father with much filial affection, reported herself. I inquired whether she remembered our previous meeting, and what means I resorted to as a test. She replied, "You used a plate and a ball to support the hands of the medium, which I knocked away."

While receiving communications from my spirit sister, the table tilting toward the medium, so as to cause the cord actuating the index, by being through a string tied to a weight on the floor, alternately to be withdrawn and returned, consequently, winding off and on the pulley which turned the index, I suggested that the relative position of the medium should be reversed, so that she should be on the same side with the apparatus. By this change the table would have to rise under the hands of the medium. The proposed modification was successfully carried out.



I asked my sister how a spirit could work an apparatus with the medium's hands on the upper surface of the table; the reply was, that the presence of the hands of the medium enabled the spirit to act in opposition to them.

Under this head comes the experiment in which a board was supported so as to turn on a fulcrum, one foot of the board being on one side of the fulcrum, and three feet on the other, the longer end suspended on a spring balance. When a medium, eleven years old, placed his hands on the short end, that end rose while the other, of course, went down; in some instances, showing an increase of downward pressure on the balance, equivalent to seven pounds.

This experiment was subsequently repeated at my laboratory, in the presence of John M. Kennedy, Esq. Having a basin of water on the board, the boy's hands being merely immersed in the water, and not touching the parities of the containing vessel; the balance was affected as in the experiment above described, although not to so great an extent.

In one case, Mr. Kennedy satisfied himself that the medium did not touch the vessel, by placing his own hands below those of the medium.

My much-esteemed friend, Prof. Henry, having treated this result as incredible, I was induced to repeat it with the greatest precision and precaution, as represented in Fig. 3.

The board, being about four feet in length, is supported by a rod as a fulcrum at about one foot from one end, and of course, three feet from the other; a glass vase, about nine inches in diameter and five inches in height, having a knob to hold it by when inverted, had this knob inserted in a hole made in the board, six inches nearly from the fulcrum. Thus, the vase rested on the board, the mouth upward. A wire-gauze cage, such as used to keep flies from sugar, was so arranged by well-known means, as to slide up or down on two iron rods, one on each side of the trestle supporting the fulcrum. By these arrangements it was so adjusted as to descend into the vase until within an inch and a half of the bottom, while the inferiority of its dimensions prevented it from coming elsewhere within an inch of the parities of the vase. Water was poured into the vase so as to rise into the cage till within about an inch and a half of the brim.

A well-known medium (Gordon) was induced to plunge his hands, clasped together, to the bottom of the cage, holding them perfectly still. As soon as these conditions were attained, the apparatus being untouched by any one excepting the medium as described, I invoked the aid of my spirit friends. A downward force was repeatedly exerted upon the end of the board appended to the balance equal to three pounds' weight nearly.

It will be perceived that in this manifestation, the medium had no means of communication with the board, beside the water. It was not until he became quite still, that the invocation was made. Nevertheless, he did not appear to be subjected to any reacting force. Yet, the distance of the hook of the balance from the fulcrum on which the board turned, was six times as great as the cage in which the hands were situated. Consequently, a force of 3 times 6 equals 18 pounds must have been exerted. The board would probably have been depressed much more, but that the water had been spilled by any farther inclination of the vase.

This experiment has since been repeated again and again, but on a smaller scale, when, not only the downward force was exercised, but the spelling of words was accomplished.

On one occasion, when no result ensued, it appeared to arise from the water being so cold as to chill the medium, because, on warming it up to a comfortable temperature, the desired manifestations were obtained.

At the same time and place, after the manifestation by means of the spring balances above described had been accomplished, I requested my spirit friends to repeat that which has been above mentioned, as performed by putting the hands of a medium upon a plate and ball supported by a tea-table.

Accordingly, the attending medium being placed under exactly the same circumstances and conditions, a similar violent tilting ensued.

Dr. Child, together with the same medium and myself, placed our finger ends all reciprocally in contact, and about a quarter of an inch above a tea-table. After an interval of about two minutes, the table rose, and was tossed from the legs on one side to those on the other forcibly.

During a visit to New York, I entered the apartment where one of the Misses Fox was sitting. There were more than half a dozen persons present. On my entrance, I inquired, "Does any one here recognize me, so as to know my name?" No person answered that I was known. As soon, however, as I inquired, my spirit sister announced herself, and indicated my name.

During a visit made to Boston last autumn, on sitting with a medium, my sister addressed me in the following way, by spelling the words out upon the disk apparatus just described:

Brother beloved, of ardent soul,
Striving to reach a heavenly goal;
Wouldst thou attain the blissful height
Where wisdom purifies the sight;
Where God reveals to humblest gaze
The bliss and beauty of his ways,
Incline thine ear to angels bright,
Who radiant from the realms of light,
For ever hover near,
To offer thee sweet words of cheer.

Only the first couplet in these verses differs at all from those which were given in the impromptu, the words having been too flattering for me to have mentioned. Soon after, being at the residence of a highly-esteemed friend, who is a medium, my spirit sister, who manifests much love for this lady, reporting herself, I told her of the change which I thus desired to have made. The reply was, "I give you full liberty to alter my verses; you know I never wrote two lines of poetry while in the flesh." Miss Ellis is no poetess, still less is Mrs. P., the medium.

After my lecture at the Melodeon, being at the residence of Mrs. Hayden, an accomplished medium, I requested a repetition of the experiment, of which I had given an account on that occasion, in which the view of the disk was cut off from the medium, by the interposition of a screen; and Mrs. Hayden consenting, an arrangement was made so as to satisfy the bystanders, as well as myself, that the letters on the disk could not be seen by her. Under these conditions the name of Washington was spelt out.

I have had this test repeated under Gordon's mediumship, as well as that of others several times. Afterward, Mrs. Hayden sitting aloof, on making the index move successively to each letter, those required for the name of Jefferson were selected in due order, by rapping at the one in demand, as it came under the index.

Through the influence of Mrs. Hayden, an uncommon test was afforded by my faithful spirit sister.

My charming intelligent friend, Mrs. Eustis, daughter of the late Rev. Dr. W. E. Channing, though not a believer in Spiritualism, became desirous of seeing the manifestations so much relied upon by me. Having accompanied me to the residence of Mrs. Hayden, Mrs. Eustis was sitting beside her, while through her influence my sister was making a communication by means of the apparatus.

(To be Continued.)

WHY REMAIN IN IGNORANCE.

You should read Col. Ingersoll's masterly address. You should read Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond's two lectures on "Spiritual Unfoldment" and "The Dwellings of the Dead." You should read about the Roman Octopus and "The Night the Light Went Out," and above all you should read President Barrett's Address before the National Convention of Spiritualists.

For full particulars read the announcement on the 5th page headed "Fifteen Cents."

A LIBERAL PULPIT.

Liberal Christians Hear a Spiritualist Preach,

And the Inspired Utterances Please the Hearers.

To the Editor:—It is not often that I trespass upon your time and space, but a circumstance transpired in this city last week, that I think your many readers may be interested in, for, from the occurrence three important facts may be emphasized.

We have in Jamestown about twenty-five downright, red-hot, orthodox churches, and to offset the teachings from these old fogy strongholds, and to clear the mental and spiritual atmosphere from the sulphurous fumes thrown off therefrom, from week to week, which otherwise would stifle us, we have one liberal church, independent in its nature and yet claiming to be Christian. This church is doing a grand and noble work here. Its pulpit has, thus far, about ten years been filled with live progressive men, all of them more or less friendly to Spiritualists in a quiet way.

This church has always been open to the Spiritualists for lectures or meetings, at half rates, and for funerals free it being the only convenient, available place here for such work.

And here, as elsewhere, where there are liberal churches, the most of our leading and more advanced Spiritualists attend this church; however much it may be regretted by some other Spiritualists, they go.

The present pastor, Rev. S. W. Sample, is a brilliant and powerful and, in style, inspirational speaker. But to the occurrence.

Last Sunday the writer, by urgent invitation of Mr. Sample, filled his pulpit morning and evening, and addressed two large and strictly attentive audiences (taking for themes "Life" and "Death"). And now, please don't, any one who reads this, think that I am a "Christian" Spiritualist: I want no prefixes to my Spiritualism. I went through the Christian church, but thanks to good mortal and immortal friends, I got out of Christianity to stay—but then what a bigoted, detestable old Spiritualist I would have been to refuse Mr. Sample's kind invitation to "preach" in his stead, that he might go to his former home and hold services in memory of a dear friend departed.

Although in a pulpit, I did not have to mumble the "Lord's" prayer, and I didn't; I did not have to read from the Bible, and I didn't; I did not have to dole out an "amen" and I didn't; but I did have to feel the descent of the spirit, I did have to feel the fires of inspiration closing over and around me, for its power was there; and mayhap the people may have thought it was the power of the Holy Ghost, but it wasn't; it was just the power of spirit, and the influence of the spiritual forces. And if I wasn't doing my own "puffing" I might tell of some of the expressions of the church people, complimentary to the addresses, both in subject matter and delivery, but that would seem egotistical, and I should be accused of boasting, which is not in my line very much, but to speak of just a few, perhaps will not injure me.

One person was heard to say: "Well, I didn't know that Spiritualists talked like that." Another: "Why! do Spiritualists believe like that? That isn't bad." Another: "If that is Spiritualism, the world needs it." Another, an old blue-bearded, hard-shell Baptist neighbor of mine, who strayed into the meeting out of curiosity, said: "Well, I never, I didn't suppose neighbor Watson could talk like that. I didn't suppose she knew enough; but I didn't believe all she said."

Of course he didn't, poor old ignoramus; it was probably the first "sniff" of liberal up-to-date thought he ever got, and it nearly choked him.

One of the liberal Christians said: "The lady ought to have a church."

And now, good reader, do not think that I gave them a diluted, wishy-washy, milk-and-water sermon; no. And while I did not say Spiritualism with every other breath, I did weave its principles into every utterance.

But the three points emphasized in this matter are, first, the growing liberality on the part of Liberalism, or of that branch known as Christian liberalism. Second, a recognition of the ability of Spiritualist speakers to instruct and edify; for had not Rev. Sample thought that my humble self could interest his audience he would have sought elsewhere for a supply for his pulpit, for he ministers to an intelligent people. The third fact noted is that many church people are ready to accept the truth of Spiritualism when it is courteously, and gentlemanly or womanly presented to them.

Verily, the world moves, and Spiritualism is one of the mighty agencies that is lifting humanity out of mental and spiritual bondage, and The Progressive Thinker is one of the heavy weights lending its strength to the movement. CLARA WATSON.

Jamestown, N. Y.

MISSIONARIES IN CHINA.

Says the Chicago Chronicle, when Li Hung Chang informed the representatives of the American missionary societies that some of the missionaries sent to China were good and some bad, and that it would be a wise plan to keep the bad ones at home, he stated a truth which should appeal to every Christian church in the country. Some of the reports that have been received as to the work of the American missionaries abroad during the past few years have been far from complimentary. Not that charges of immorality have been made against any of these persons, but some of them have proved to be without tact, without discretion, and their influence has been more than mischievous. This is due largely to the custom on the part of certain church societies to send men and women abroad as missionaries who lacked essential equipment for the duties they were to perform. The man who enters an unknown land to preach an unknown gospel to an unknown people must be more than a mere preacher. He must be a wise counselor and a diplomat as well. It is to the arts of diplomacy that the success of the Jesuit missionaries must be ascribed, and the sooner American churches recognize the fact that a missionary must be something besides an expounder of dogmatic theology the sooner will the cables cease to be burdened with stories of ghastly assaults perpetrated by bloodthirsty pagans on defenseless Christians, who are very often themselves largely responsible for the outrages.

"Encyclopedia of Biblical Spiritualism: or a Concordance of the Principal Passages of the Old and New Testament Scriptures which prove or imply Spiritualism; together with a brief history of the origin of many of the important books of the Bible." By Moses Hull. The well-known talented and scholarly author has here embodied the results of his many years' study of the Bible in its relations to Spiritualism. As its title denotes, it is a veritable encyclopedia of information on the subject. Price $1. For sale at this office.

CRIME INCREASING.

AN APPALLING NINETEENTH CENTURY PICTURE.

SPIRITUALISTS, HERE IS A PROBLEM—YOUTH AND CRIMINOLOGY—INTERESTING FACTS BROUGHT OUT BY AN EXPERT INVESTIGATION—HOW BEST TO CHECK A GROWING TENDENCY TO EVIL THE SUBJECT OF A BOOK JUST WRITTEN BY MR. MORRISON—CRIME AMONG MERE CHILDREN ON THE INCREASE INSTEAD OF GROWING LESS.

There is no more painful subject than juvenile depravity, nor one of greater importance, says the Chicago Tribune. Once find a means to prevent crime in the young and a great problem is solved.

The third volume in the Criminology Series, published by the Messrs. Appleton, is devoted to juvenile offenders, and is written by Mr. Douglas Morrison, the editor of the series and a gentleman of long practical experience in the care and management of criminals in England. In his preface to his volume Mr. Morrison has much to say on the general subject of crime. It is perfectly well known to every student of criminal questions, both at home and abroad, he writes, that the proportion of habitual criminals in the criminal population is steadily on the increase and was never so high as it is now. This does not speak very highly of the purifying influences of civilization and progress. We can invent machines better and more wonderful than were ever dreamed of in the philosophy of our ancestors, but we do not know how to manage our fellowmen any better than they did. We make the punishment fit the crime, but not the criminal. The enormous percentage of old offenders among the criminal population means, according to Mr. Morrison, that "as far as the criminal bulk of the criminal population is concerned, penal law and penal administration have completely broken down." The supreme if not the only object of a properly constituted penal system is to prevent the offender who has been once convicted from repeating the offense. If a penal system fails in this primary and fundamental object in three cases out of four—and this is what the returns teach us is happening at the present moment—the time has come for reconsidering the principles on which existing penal methods are based. As long as these methods remain in their present condition of inefficiency the community will have to endure the loss, disquietude and danger arising from the existence in its midst of a compact and formidable body of habitual criminals; it will have to go on spending millions per annum in protecting itself against them.

PREVENTION BETTER THAN CURE

"When a penal system fails to prevent the offender from repeating the offense the inevitable result is that a vast and expensive body of police is required to protect society against him when he is at liberty. What the habitual criminal costs the community when in prison is a mere trifle to what he costs when he is free to roam the streets. He can be kept in prisons for four or five hundred thousand pounds a year; when at liberty he costs in police protection alone between four and five millions."

The object of this Book is therefore to show how habitual crime may be diminished by better methods of dealing with juvenile offenders. From his wide experience with the criminal population Mr. Morrison is led to believe that the man who "takes to crime as to a trade" as a rule begins young. Therefore it is essential for the prevention of crime that the youthful criminal should be effectually dealt with. The question is how this may best be done. Mr. Morrison begins at once by pointing out the worthlessness of the present primitive methods, which worthlessness, he thinks, arises from the fact that their tendency is "to aggravate and intensify the adverse individual and social conditions which turn the juvenile into a criminal."

To find the causes which produce juvenile delinquency and then remove them is the only way to accomplish any real practical good. It is, he believes, to ameliorate methods of treatment that we must look for the best results in dealing with juvenile delinquents.

While these methods may do much, they cannot do all, for "it must be borne in mind that these efforts do not touch the general conditions out of which juvenile crime arises. These general conditions are the unhappy individual and social circumstances in which a considerable of the juvenile population are born and have to live. It is to an amelioration of the adverse conditions of life among large sections of the juvenile population that we must look for a mitigation of the problem of juvenile crime. So long as great numbers of the general juvenile population are the offspring of degenerate and degraded parents and have to grow up in an atmosphere of moral and material wretchedness, we shall always have a high percentage of juvenile crime. It is in these wretched and degenerate conditions of existence that juvenile delinquency has its origin, and it will always continue to flourish till these conditions are ameliorated."

ALARMING INCREASE.

The increase in the number of juvenile offenders is alarming. In France the number of juvenile offenders under 16 is unquestionably increasing. In Holland the increase has been double in the last twenty years. In Russia the number of juveniles between 14 and 21 years of age convicted before Courts of Assizes and Judges of the Peace is increasing faster than the growth of population, and was never so high as it is at present.

The statistics as to juvenile offenders in the United States are not very satisfactory. We have so many ways of dealing with young criminals. "Whether, then, we look at the Old World or at the New," says Mr. Morrison, "we find that juvenile crime is a problem which is not decreasing in magnitude with the march of civilization. Every civilized community is confronted with it in a more or less menacing form."

There is a great objection in the United States to putting youthful criminals in prisons with old offenders. We prefer to send them to reformatories or even to admonish and fine them. While these conciliatory methods are adopted in England they have others less humane. Thel still believe in the efficacy of flogging and boys are given a taste of the birch rod or of the strap.

"In the year 1893," says Mr. Morrison, "the number of children sentenced to be whipped in England by Courts of Summary Jurisdiction amounted to 2,858, and it is probable that a few more were sentenced at Assizes and Courts of Quarter Sessions. In Scotland in the same year 335 boys were sentenced to be whipped; in Ireland whipping is very rarely resorted to, and in the colonies it is a mode of punishment which is very rarely inflicted on the young. In the Colony of Victoria, for instance, only forty-four juveniles were corporally punished in the seventeen years prior to 1890, and in New South Wales no case occurred in 1890 in which juveniles were ordered to be whipped by Courts of Summary Jurisdiction.

METHODS OF PUNISHMENT.

"It must be admitted that the corporal punishment of juveniles as it exists in Great Britain is surrounded by a considerable number of safeguards. Where a child is supposed to be in delicate health a medical man must be consulted before the sentence can take effect. When a child is under 10 years of age the birch rod used for executing the sentence must be lighter than the instrument employed for older offenders. The number of strokes is also regulated by acts of Parliment. Where a child is under 12 the number of strokes must not exceed six, and where he is under 14 the number must not exceed twelve. The whipping takes place privately. It is administered by a constable, but another constable of higher rank must be present to witness it, and the parents or guardians of the child may also be present if they wish."

Denmark is the only civilized country where the whipping of girls is a punishment admitted by the criminal law. This is a distinction of which Denmark need hardly be proud. Scottish magistrates are, however, prepared to follow the example of Denmark, believing that even whipping is more humane than sending girls to prison.

"Whipping with a birch," they say, "is not a suitable punishment for girls, but so lamentable does your committee consider the results of sending young girls to prison that they venture to recommend, in cases similar to those in which whipping can be inflicted on boys, girls might be subjected to a punishment which is meted out to them in public schools, and which has been sanctioned in the case of female industrial schools—namely: strokes on the hand with a leather strap or tawse. Such a punishment would meet the case of boisterous conduct in the streets or a petty theft of coals much more fitly and with infinitely less disastrous results to the girl's future than a sentence of imprisonment."

Mr. Morrison thinks it perfectly safe to remark "that neither imprisonment nor corporal punishment possesses much value in preventing a repetition of the offense unless other conditions of an entirely different character are brought into operation."

The upshot of Mr. Morrison's observations is that individual care is what is needed to reform the juvenile offender and to prevent crime. Reformations, he admits, are well enough in their way, but the offender after he leaves them should be looked after and kept away from old associates and bad influences generally. What we really want is more university settlements, more educating and humanizing influences. The juvenile should be dealt with before he becomes an offender.

JEANNETTE L. GILDER.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

To the Editor:—The Constitution and By-Laws of the National Spiritualists' Association require that State Agents, not more than three in number, shall be appointed in each State in the Union to look after the interests of said Association and the cause of Spiritualism in general, within the borders of the several states. Provisions are also made for the appointment of a number of missionaries-at-large whose duties are fully set forth in the Constitution and By-Laws of the N. S. A. Inquiries have recently been received at this office in regard to the date of the expiration of the commissions issued to the several missionaries and State Agents mentioned above.

The public is requested to note this fact; all commissions expire annually, hence unless the commission bears the signatures of Secretary Woodbury and the writer, with the statement on its face that it expires October 21, 1897, S. E., 50, such commissions are null and void. In some instances, parties appointed to these respective offices a year or two ago, still claim to be official representatives of the N. S. A., whereas the fact is some commissions expired in October '94, others in '95, and others still in '96.

It has been the aim of the N. S. A. to issue commissions to true and tried workers who would reflect credit upon the cause of Spiritualism. In this it has been eminently successful with the exception of a very few instances where appointments have been made upon what seemed to be good recommendations, when the officers of the N. S. A. did not have personal knowledge of the applicant. Only two or three State Agents have been derelict to their duties and some four or five of the so-called missionaries. If necessary the N. S. A. will publish the names of those delinquents that the public may be thoroughly warned against them.

All commissions signed by the writer since October 22, 1896, will expire October 21, 1897. H. D. BARRETT.

AN URGENT APPEAL.

Spirit message to Carl Seymour, Philadelphia, Pa.: "To you, I, Henry Seybert, assign the work of recovering money, purposely bequeathed the medical men of the Pennsylvania University, to carry out my intentions.

"Said bequest shall not remain unheeded nor longer disregarded; therefore I, in conjunction with others, have resolved to force a final and thorough investigation of spiritual phenomena by those men, or adopt measures to compel the delivery of the money.

"Unlawful retention of said sum will not be countenanced further.

"Who, I repeat will assist the writer to recover said amount, thereby obliging the donor?

"The time is ripe for action; prove your right to head the ranks of nineteenth century thinkers.

"Know that I, Henry Seybert, am justly grieved by this long-neglected duty devolving upon you.

"Old obligations must be paid ere new ones are assumed; therefore assist in carrying out the wishes of a sincere and practical friend, who, from the other shore, awaits with interest your action in the matter. Truly yours,

"HENRY SEYBERT."

"Principles of Light and Color." By E. D. Babbitt, M. D., LL.D. A truly great work of a master mind, and one whom Spiritualists should delight to honor. The result of years of deep thought and patient research into Nature's finer forces are here garnered and made amenable to the well-being of humanity. Medical men especially and scientists, general readers and students of occult forces will find instruction of great value and interest. A large, four-pound book, strongly bound, and containing beautiful illustrative plates. For sale at this office. Price, postpaid, $5. It is a wonderful work and you will be delighted with it.

Persian history claims that the Persians are descended from Perseus and Andromeda.

FIFTEEN CENTS!

PROF. BARRETT'S ADDRESS.

Other Subjects Treated of Especial Interest.

The Progressive Thinker is to be sent three months for 15 cents to all New subscribers.

Spiritualists, keep posted in current Spiritual events.

Why remain in ignorance? Why don't you keep posted in regard to the great Spiritualistic movement? Prof. Barrett delivered an address before the National Association of Spiritualists. It was an important one, and should be read by every Spiritualist in this broad land. We have had his address (which covers three pages of The Progressive Thinker) and five other important lectures and articles embodied in one paper, which we propose to send forth to illuminate the minds of those who have not had an opportunity to read them.

The first page of this paper contains he lecture by Col. Ingersoll, given in a Chicago pulpit. It scintillates throughout.

The second page contains a highly interesting lecture by Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, on the "Dwellings of the Dead."

The third page has a splendid article on "Science versus Theology," in review of Andrew D. White's two superb volumes.

The fourth page has another excellent lecture by Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, on "Spiritual Unfoldment."

The fifth page is very suggestive throughout, and is devoted to the "Hindoo Teachers—They Will Try to Capture the United States."

On the sixth page commences Prof. Barrett's admirable address, occupying three pages. In order that all whom this notice may reach, can secure this address, as well as the other lectures and articles, we have made arrangements to have 10,000 copies printed to be sent out free to new-trial or new yearly subscribers. This paper is well worth 25 cents. Every Spiritualist who wishes to know what has been going on should carefully read it. Our regular subscribers have, of course, had the contents thereof.

We will also, in connection with this paper, send out another equally as valuable. The first page contains an excellent lecture by Virchand R. Gandhi, a learned Hindoo. The remaining seven pages contain the wonderfully thrilling narrative (founded on facts) entitled, "The Night the Light Went Out," exhibiting many of the inside workings of the Catholic Church. Besides the address by Mr. Ghandi and the remarkable narrative, "The Night the Light Went Out," the first page has an excellent communication obtained through Ouija. The second page has a startling statement in reference to the "Romish Octopus—It Is Winding Its Poisonous Coils Around Washington." The poem on the same page, "The Sad Picture of a Wrecked Human Life," is wonderfully suggestive. The third page has a striking illustration showing how the Romish Church treats heretics. This page and the fourth also have a continuation of the "Romish Octopus." The fifth page has that remarkable poem, "St. Peter At the Gate." Every freethinker should read it. It is full of excellent "points." It also contains interesting facts in reference to the Romish Church and offices. The sixth, seventh and eighth pages have the following: "Monasteries and Convents—Where Those Alive Are Entombed." "Rider Haggard and the Immuring of Nuns." This paper alone is well worth the price of a year's subscription.

Every Spiritualist in this broad land should have these two papers. Our regular subscribers have already read their contents. For Fifteen cents we will send the Progressive Thinker for three months to all New trial subscribers and also send these two valuable papers.

Bear in mind that by New subscriber we mean one who has not been on our list for at least three months. Those of our present subscribers who wish to buy these two papers can have them both now for five cents. All of our regular subscribers have read their contents.

Send The Progressive Thinker three months to some friend, and thus get him interested in the cause. Stamps taken on small orders.

VERILY, WHAT NEXT?

Under the head of "A New Programme," we announced a radical new departure from the general routine of work assumed by the average Spiritualist paper. We do not follow old established usages unless we are thoroughly convinced that they are the best, which is very rarely the case. We established the original dollar Spiritualist paper, and introduced a new era in the line of Spiritualistic journalism. Others have followed after us, but in all candor the only thing in which they have equalled us, is in the price of the paper—one dollar.

We now have three books which we send out at a nominal cost to our subscribers: The two volumes of the Encyclopaedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit-World, and The Next World Interviewed. The three volumes will be sent out to those who remit a year's subscription to The Progressive Thinker on the following terms:

The Encyclopaedia of Death and Life in the Spirit-World, when ordered singly, will be sold at 50 cents per copy. The Next World Interviewed at 35 cts. Those who order the three books at one time will get them as follows:

Vol. I. of the Encyclopaedia	$ .45
Vol. II. of the Encyclopaedia	.45
The Next World Interviewed	.35
Total	$1.25

NO. OF PAGES IN EACH BOOK.

Vol. I. of the Encyclopaedia	400
Vol. II. of the Encyclopaedia	400
The Next World Interviewed	250

Each of these books is neatly and substantially bound in cloth, and printed on fine paper, and as prices go, are well worth one dollar per volume.

Bear in mind that this Library is being formed for the exclusive benefit of our subscribers, and all orders for one or more of these books must be accompanied with a year's subscription to The Progressive Thinker. To all others the price will be one dollar per copy.

Just think of the great good that will be accomplished by this plan which we have outlined. Tell your neighbors about it, and get them to subscribe for The Progressive Thinker.

Remember, please, that in order to obtain these three books for $1.25, you must send along a year's subscription to The Progressive Thinker; the paper one year, and the three books costing $2.25. It is the subscription to the paper that enables us to send you these three books at cost.

..GENERAL SURVEY..

THE SPIRITUALISTIC FIELD—ITS WORKERS, DOINGS, ETC., THE WORLD OVER.

Bear in mind, please, that we cannot publish weekly reports of meetings. Whenever a change is made in speakers, or anything of special interest, send us a brief item, please. A great deal can be expressed in a dozen lines; but long reports will not be used. Meetings are of local interest only. We extend a cordial invitation to all speakers to send in their appointments to lecture, and general movements, which will be read by at least 40,000. We go to press early Monday morning, and items must reach us as early as Friday or Saturday in order to have immediate insertion.

Communications must always be accompanied by the full name and address of the writer, or no attention will be paid to them.

J. C. F. Grumbine finds it impossible to fill all of his engagements in the East for the season of 1897-8. Societies will please be patient. His work at the Spiritual Temple, Boston, has been very successful, speaking to very large audiences each Sunday. He continues at the temple through this month and then enters upon a return and two months' engagement in Brooklyn, N Y. His developing classes in the mental phases of mediumship have been a great success, and attention is called to Mr. Grumbine's advertisement of classes on the last page of this paper. June, 1897, is still open to any Western societies. May, 1897, he goes to Princeton, Mo., Geneseo, Ill., and Chicago.

Dr. H. C. Andrews writes from Coloma, Mich.: "Our labors are crowned with fair success, and we are ready to fill engagements during week evenings and during the next three months the Sundays of each or to officiate at weddings or funerals. Permanent address, Riverside, Mich. Box 45."

Mrs. and Dr. S. C. Burland write from Ludington, Mich.: "Our meetings every Sunday at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m. are fairly well attended—a continually changing congregation of about fifty, but the times make collections small, though the convincing work done would pay us for all trouble, were we in a position to bear the expenses. Our Wednesday circles bring more that have never thought on the subject, than anywhere I ever visited. Last week three that were afraid to stay at first, went away, not believing, but knowing the truth, and one sent two young men here Christmas day, telling them to come, it was true, and both of them were fully satisfied, for numbers of their friends from spirit-life came to them, several words being spoken in their own language by their relatives, and understood by them. Both were foreigners."

George S. Stephens writes: "We wish to correspond with any medium who may be traveling by the Pennsylvania railroad between Pittsburg and Philadelphia, who can give seances for materialization. Write to Geo. S. Stephens, Wigton, Clearfield county, Pa."

G. W. Kates and wife have served the Spiritualists of Homestead, Pa., January 3, 6, and 10. A society has been organized there, with Mr. Charles Baptie as president, and Mr. J. Dixon, treasurer. Large audiences are being attracted and much interest manifested. Mrs. Kates was called to Philadelphia to attend the funeral of her grandmother, and on Sunday, January 10, Mrs. Dr. J. W. James, of Pittsburg, gave tests after lectures by Mr. Kates. Six nights of meetings are to be held in Massillon, Ohio, by Mr. and Mrs. Kates, then to Burton and Portage, Ohio. Last of the month they resume work in Rochester, N. Y., until after the anniversary. Address them there at 55 Comfort street.

At a meeting of Spiritualists held in the Home on last Sunday evening, a society was formed with the most favorable prospects, under the management of the following officers: President, H. A. Pugh; secretary, Henry Kline; treasurer, John Sanders; pastor, John Bartscherer; leader of instrumental music, Peter Larsen; organist, Mrs. John Sanders. Will have also an addition of quartette singers. At the first regular meeting, next Sunday afternoon, Judge Thompson, of Dayton, O., will deliver the opening address. In the evening we will have a trumpet seance under the mediumship of Mrs. Phillip Wreidt, also of Dayton. The mediumship and talent of the old soldiers are remarkable. With such an array of influences it is already looked upon that the Veterans' Spiritual Society, National Military Home, O., will be the means of shedding an influence of light and morality (a long-felt want) that will be surprising among the 5,000 veterans there. Suffice it to say that the best results are already guaranteed.

The Rochester, N. Y., Spiritualists desire to hold a State Convention in their city during the next anniversary exercises, and then take active steps in preparation for the great jubilee in 1898. Address G. W. Kates, 55 Comfort street, Rochester, N. Y., for further information.

Alice R. Andrews-Kibbe writes from Stratford, New York: "It seems so strange, with all the cities and large towns on the New York Central, east of Rochester, there are no spiritual societies. I wish Brothers Will C. Hodge, Willard Hull, or L. V. Moulton, would come this way and speak for a collection until societies could be formed. It is a rich farming country, the people are intelligent, and I know no reason, if the right persons come, why meetings could not be held in all these places."

On Sunday evening, January 10, the First Society of Spiritualists elected the following persons officers for the ensuing year: Joseph Challand, president; A. H. Slayton, vice-president; T. P. Kelly, recording and corresponding secretary; C. W. Pensyl, treasurer; Levi W. Hammon, musical director; Daniel Bates, H. A. Wolf, Leo Gabler and C. H. Goodwin, directors. The society meets at Lincoln Post hall, in Topeka, Kansas. Mr. C. W. Searing is lecturer at present. Mr. and Mrs. Noyes, of California, have been there, and did good work for the cause.

J. W. Dennis writes that arrangements are under way for a camp on Oneida Lake, N. Y., in August, 1897. This camp will be located about one hundred miles north of the Freeville camp, in Tompkins county.

Pilgrim writes from Little Rock, Ark.: "After some years of sleep, with the help of the spirit-world we have reorganized and awakened again into life the State Spiritualists' Association of this grand State, meeting in the elegant parlors of dear Brother and Sister Benj. Campbell, with Brother Morean Campbell, Sister M. Campbell and others. New and old names were pledged to active work in our loved cause. In my work all over the southwest I have met with many dearly beloved brothers and sisters, but nowhere else have I ever met with nobler, better, more heaven-guided ministering spirits in the body, than in these dear friends. I want the world to know them, and just what such true Spiritualists really are. Both the Campbells are prominent railway engineers. Brother Tobez, a large wholesale grocer, is also active in work here."

H. W. Boozer writes: "In an article in issue of January 9, I am made to appear to your readers as advocating the announcement of tunes before the singing. I have never done so. I have advocated the announcement of the subjects of the songs, as a means of teaching our truths through the agency of music; am doing this now and shall continue to do so. It would be entirely unnecessary when the airs were familiar ones, and it would seem to be going much out of one's way to make such announcement, though it might be ever so harmless."

S. P. Stewart writes from New Sharon, Ia.: "We are in need of a good medium, one that would be willing to run some chances. Our people are not stingy, but they seem to want the goods before they pay for them. We have as fine a little church as there is in the city, unoccupied, and the doors are ready to swing wide open for the asking. We feel sure that a good test and slate-writing medium could do well here."

D. L. Carpenter writes: "Ft. Wayne is alive to the interests of the cause. Brother Sprague has been with us through December, and remaining for January. His soul-stirring lectures have awakened a great interest in the cause, with the assistance of that noble little worker, Mrs. Sprague. He gave a lecture at Payne, O., and I understand that he has an invitation to lecture there next Tuesday. They have organized a society of some thirty in the past few weeks. Miss Daniels, trumpet medium, of Waterloo, Ind., visits us every Friday, remaining over Sunday. It was the writer's good luck to have her at his home, and we had a good time. Captain Stevens always has a good word for all. I had a wonderful test. I wanted the address of a lady at Indianapolis, for a friend of mine, and there was only one near here that could give it to me. My spirit son came and said: 'Pa, write to Mrs. Jacobs, North Mississippi street, and it will be all right.' I met my friend next morning; he said: 'Just add No. 320, and you have all correct.' Mrs. Hibbits, of Muncie, will be with us on the 17th and 18th, and then we will have a love feast and communion with loved ones. We know they still live."

C. M. Harmount writes from Belvidere, Ill.: "On my arrival at home I find the light gone—that is, The Progressive Thinker stopped. I would as lief be out of the world, or away from civilization, or even return to orthodoxy, as to be deprived of this fountain of sparkling intelligence springing both from this and the spirit-world."

Mrs. Effie M. Post writes from Flint, Mich.: "I am very much interested in the subject of Spiritual Music. Have been reading C. P. Longley's letter. It is true, as he says, 'Longley's music is hard,' not easy like 'Nearer, My God, to Thee,' that one hears at almost every seance or circle, because we all know it. Even spiritual words to the old tunes are tiresome, and we want the music inspirational as well as the words. There are quite a number of singing books. I have all that have been published, and while the Spiritual Harp is an old stand-by, C. P. Longley's music is of a higher grade, and like all high-grade music, must be well learned—then the harmony is grand. A choir cannot expect to learn them as easily as they did the old Gospel Hymns. I believe as a rule Spiritualist societies pay too little attention to the music. Churches all try and have fine music and singing, while we are apt to say: 'We'll sing this—it's easy.' All speakers say music makes harmonious conditions; so I believe it should be chosen with care and learned perfectly. Taking everything in consideration, Longley's music is not so expensive, for as one gets used to the style it gets more pleasing. And there is much good to be had by those singing them as well as those who listen."

W. F. L. writes from St. Joseph, Mo.: "For the past six weeks we have had with us Mrs. May Goodrich, of Portland, Me. Her tests are very satisfactory, giving detailed descriptions and messages from friends who have passed over, and very often full names. She will be with us for the month of January, and then expects to go East for the remainder of the winter. We can heartily recommend her to any society."

Mrs. S. J. Grubb writes from Mankato, Minn.: "I stand all alone but undaunted, for my knowledge of the truth of Spiritualism came to me through my own mediumship forty years ago, and is a pearl of great price to me, and my constant wish is to live so that I shall never disgrace the grand philosophy of Spiritualism. I have often wished to inquire of you about Andrew Jackson Davis. He was a grand medium. I have read the three volumes of his Great Harmonia, and Nature's Divine Revelations. I took the Religio-Philosophical Journal for years, but I like your paper even better now, I think, than I did that, and could not do without it and enjoy life."

A. J. Cotton writes from Oak Park, Ill.: "I was somewhat sad because of the taking off from active work in earth-life of Mr. Putnam and Miss Collins. I read Miss Collins' lecture which she delivered just before her sudden exit, and wonder why she worked with those only who could not or would recognize only this present physical life, for it is evident to me, that she recognized a life in spirit-world outside of this body. I am glad to see that the Seybert will fund is to be looked after, as also the Girard College trustees in their hypocritical, dishonest course. Trusts, combines and dishonest legislation on financial matters cause me to be too poor in money to contribute to help to get justice in this case. I came here from my home in Vineland, N. J., to stay indefinitely, and will be glad to co-operate with all Spiritualists and Liberals in forming a circle for the development of mediums and improvement of the mind. Come, brothers and sisters, let us reason together. I will accept calls to lecture near here, or attend funerals. Will also perform the marriage ceremony, as I am legally authorized to do so. All who desire to see me on any subject, can call at Cicero Laundry, corner of Madison and Harlem streets."

C. H. S. writes: "A pleasant surprise was given Dr. Vickers Fell and his wife on December 31, 1896, at their home, East Nashville, Tenn. It was the anniversary of their wedding. A large number of their friends dropped in to see and congratulate them on their fifty years of happy married life. Several hours were spent in social converse; addresses on the golden wedding and reform subjects, which were interspersed with delightful vocal and instrumental music. Many of the selections were old pieces, familiar to them in their early life. A number of valuable presents were received by the aged couple. Dr. Vickers Fell is 77 years of age. His wife, Elvira A. Fielding Fell, is 70 years of age. They were married December 31, 1846. Dr. Fell is well known in newspaper circles. He was formerly connected with the leading newspaper at Minneapolis, Minn., and of recent years a writer on reform questions. He is still actively engaged in this work. He has long been a zealous Spiritualist; is a member of the First Spiritual Church of Nashville, and has lived in that city for years."

Mabel Kline writes from New Orleans, La.: "At Spiritual hall, last Thursday evening, January 7, Mrs. Dr. Hillegoss, of Anderson, Ind., our spiritual adviser for the month of January, answered questions from a large and interested audience. The questions were answered promptly and to the point, and at intervals loud bursts of applause were heard. She is trying to organize a Ladies' Aid Society. I consider we were fortunate in falling into the loving arms of our motherly sister. Mrs. Hillegoss is holding developing circles every Tuesday and Friday evening at 7:30, at the residence of Bro. Patterson, 1048 St. Charles avenue. These developing circles so far are said to have proven very beneficial to those inclined to be mediumistic."

Mary R. Beauvais writes from Phoenix, Arizona: "I have been a medium all my life, but I have always kept still. I have six children, and they all have good gifts. I have been a healer and a life-reader all my life. I have cured many wherever I have lived. I am proud of my many gifts. I have been at school only six months in my life. I am a musician; I have no use for written music; I play the violin, piano, organ, banjo guitar. When I play I close my eyes or go into a dark room. When I play best I want to be alone. I have only been playing the last seven years. My children can call for raps and get them. My step-child, ten years old, Sadie Beauvais, is a natural artist, and when she gets sick her mamma rocks her to sleep. Her mamma died when she was a baby. We never go to any churches, because we are happy at home. I try to be charitable, and help all who are in need. I never charge for anything I do for the poor or sick."

L. E. Hughson, secretary, writes: "The First Progressive Spiritualists' Association of Fresno, Cal., elected the following officers for the ensuing six months: President, Geo. S. Holden; vice-president, Mrs. M. E. Palmer; secretary, L. E. Hughson; treasurer, Mrs. M. A. Holden; trustees, G. F. Cooper, Mrs. G. F. Coombs, and Mrs. Wm. Degen. This society is now in its second year and has sixty-five members, and is making additions every week. There is a standing committee whose duty it is to visit all mediums who come to Fresno, and ascertain their moral standing and their mediumistic ability, and if they are not what they should be, the public is informed that we do not consider them true representatives of the cause. The Spiritualists of Fresno swear by The Progressive Thinker."

Clara M. Wilson writes from Algona, Iowa: "I want a good test medium to come here—one who would not repel the orthodox element. My brother and I think it is a great reproach for Spiritualists to fight orthodoxy all their lives, and as soon as they leave their bodies a minister must be called upon to help put it out of sight! Most of the Spiritualists are greatly lacking in the right kind of courage when it comes to laying away the bodies of their friends or themselves."

Grace E. Grinnell writes from New York City: "I would not do without The Progressive Thinker—it is most valuable to me. All I know of Spiritualism I have learned from it. I am interested in science, too, and take books out of a free library. I don't suppose the Spiritualists have a library in this city."

Mrs. S. M. Steel writes from North Amherst, Ohio: "Last night about thirty of the friends of Mrs. C. C. Bacon gathered in the parlors of Mr. and Mrs. Smith Steel, it being a successful surprise to Mrs. Bacon, when she was presented with a beautiful rug which was given as a token of their love, respect and appreciation of the good work she has done among us this winter in the form of inspirational lectures given every Sunday evening, and which will continue for some weeks yet. Refreshments were served, interspersed with an inspirational poem through Mrs. Bacon, which was very appropriate for the occasion. All pronounced it a very enjoyable occasion."

Frank T. Ripley is engaged to lecture at Marcellus, Mich., for February, instead of Toledo, Ohio.

Mrs. M. L. C. writes from Kansas City, Mo.: "Dr. and Mrs. Noyes have worked for the Spiritualists' society here for the last two Sundays and the people have been pleased with the forcible strength of the Doctor's lectures and the powerful, convincing tests given from the platform by Mrs. Noyes. There is also an attractiveness added to the work by the music and inspirational poems given by their organist, Mrs. L. Dille."

Mrs. Virginia Barrett has been temporarily stopping in this city. She will answer calls to lecture. She gives tests and psychometric readings. She can be addressed for engagements at 499 Eleventh street E., Indianapolis, Ind.

Mrs. A. L. Pettengill writes: "I visited Lily Dale last week in company with my son, Mr. Henry A. Everett, one of the best known street railroad men in this country, and the pioneer of the three-cent fare. I made the last payment on the magnificent property adjoining the Lily Dale camp, and am much relieved, and happy to be the owner of the place."

A lady will assist in work for a home in a Spiritualist family. She desires to develop her mediumship. Address Mrs. E. H. W., 40 Loomis street.

Lyman C. Howe is lecturing at Toronto, Canada. He will remain there during January, and probably longer. His permanent address is Fredonia, N. Y.

Carlos Wright, inspirational speaker and developing medium, would like to confer with Spiritualists or Liberalists in his vicinity with a view to forming developing circles or parlor meetings, for the advancement of our cause. Call on him or write to him at 242 E. 55th street, Chicago, Ill.

Aydlett Millsap writes from Magnet, Mo.: "The beautiful phenomena of Spiritualism is blooming fine here. It seems to be catching. Whenever we can get a person to investigate, we have got him. We now have a trance medium here, Mrs. Baker, formerly of Boston. We would like to correspond with a medium who thinks of coming in this direction. Here is a good opening for the right kind of a medium. When I say here, I mean the country towns generally. I was well pleased to see G. H. Walser come out with his denial of the white-livered lie, as he called it, for I knew him here in this county, and couldn't believe that he had backslid."

The following is going the rounds of the press: "It has been discovered during the past week that four pupils of the schools of Colorado Springs, Colo., are victims of a sort of malady which causes them to write backward and upside down. The school officials are baffled, and say they cannot explain this strange phenomenon, and physicians who have been consulted can give no satisfactory explanation." Of course they are mediums. The spirits are aggressive everywhere.

From Two Worlds, London, England.

COMPLIMENTS TO J. J. MORSE.

Morse's record is so well-known that we need not attempt to give details of his long and successful career as a medium. He has established a record in these record-breaking days that will be hard to beat, for he is now rapidly approaching his thirtieth year of service—continuous public advocacy of the Spiritual philosophy. How well and worthily he has labored under the guidance and inspiration of his wise and loving spirit friends and preceptors is pretty generally known—but the struggles he has had to make, the privations and sacrifices he and Mrs. Morse have had to endure and make, but very few people know or realize. Three visits to America, and continuous journeyings in all weathers, pretty nearly all over this land, a well-nigh unbroken series of public discourses on Sundays and weekdays, besides the thousand and one other duties incidental to public life—together with his frequent contributions to and connection with the Spiritual press of this country and America, and his editorial labor on behalf of the lyceum movement, on the Lyceum Banner—these things make up a life-work of earnest and sincere service to the Cause of Truth, Progress and Humanity, that has been of incalculable value to Spiritualism, and constitutes a crown of worth for the worker.

BAD OUTLOOK.

With the recurrence of Yule-tide, there comes a retrospective vision, and one cannot avoid contrasting the past with the present; and as I look over the Spiritualistic field, I must confess, the contrast is not a flattering one. Seventeen years ago our Cause in England presented a more intellectual aspect than it does to-day. Not that our teachers have deteriorated, but that owing to a growing sensationalism in our movement, a large portion of the cultured public that used to attend our meetings have withdrawn, no longer finding our platform an educational rostrum, except when some of our best speakers occupy the lecture room.

ETHICAL SPIRITUALISTS.

In the realm of scientific knowledge, we may arrive at unity: in the domain of ethics, or the what ought to be, we may join hands, while in the sphere of theological and metaphysical speculation there should be freedom of thought as wide as the universe! "In things essential, unity; in things doubtful, liberty; and in all things, charity." With some such sentiments as these, could there not be a grand fellowship of Ethical Spiritualists? There should be no barrier to such a union, and all should be willing to co-operate on such terms. In going from place to place I sense a laudable discontent with things as they are, and if the leading men and women in our cause rise to action, there is indefinite progress before us.

LYCEUMS DETERIORATING.

Our Lyceums are not, as a rule, in as good a condition as they were a few years since. If the conductors could only more readily throw themselves back to the days when they were children, and appreciate more fully the child nature, the Lyceum would be more attractive than it is now. Then, too, those who are called upon to address the little ones often forget that they are not talking to seniors. The indifferentism of parents, too, has a great influence upon the children. If Spiritualism is a vital truth to you, show its living power by making it the most revered of religions by your children; for that faith which most brightens the home and sanctifies the lives of parents will inspire children with a passionate love for it.

LIGHT OF COMING TIME.

Spiritualism has been the consolation of millions, it is the hope of the world to-day, and it depends upon us whether it shall be the light of the coming time, shining through a well-organized body of men called Spiritualists. Spiritualism will live anyhow; for if we prove unfaithful to its call, others will be chosen to rebuke our want of fidelity, and filtrating through other isms, it will reach Humanity.

ATTACKS ON ORTHODOXY RIGHT.

Spiritualists are frequently censured for their attacks on orthodoxy, and in the arguments the fact is conveniently lost sight of that the orthodox believers have been the first to attack the Spiritualists, and in accordance with their creed, condemn all Spiritualists to, well, "The place where there's no winter." It is the false, illogical creed which is attacked by the Spiritualist and not the persons whose lives, good though they are, might have been much better without the bigotry and intolerance called Christian zeal. The fact is, the orthodox faith, with the doctrines of the fall of man, the vicarious atonement by Jesus Christ, and the Resurrection of the Dead—body, bones, and all, are, thanks to Spiritualism and modern research, becoming estimated for what they are worth, instead of being implicitly believed in as a special revelation of God to man. As the Spiritualist learns, on the testimony of his spirit friends, that man was never lost, evolution supplements that knowledge by the records on the planet itself, and not by records man made and man manufactured, forged, falsified, and re-indoctrinated to suit the times; revised and re-translated, and of which no originals are in existence.

THE PERSIAN PROPHET.

The best authorities place the Persian prophet Zoroaster between 6,000 and 5,000 years B. C. Like Mahomet, he had dreams; like Jesus, he believed the kingdom of heaven or earthly paradise was at hand. God was personified as Ormuzd, and evil as Ahriman. The rules laid down in the Zendavesta, in the most ancient known language, except Sanscrit, show a beautiful moral code: to "think purely, speak purely, and act purely," leaving room for spiritual aspirations and material pleasures. Probably Moses borrowed the maxim "I am that I am," from the Zoroastrian system, or obtained it from Yehvah, his spirit guide and God of the Hebrews. Modern scholarship has helped us to understand that system, much to the annoyance of the theologian, who finds no contradictions in the biblical records.

SURVIVAL OF THE TITLE.

The doctrine of the "survival of the fittest" seems to be regarded by some people as "divinely conceived." There is a popular fallacy that in any state of society those most fitted to live by virtue of their superiority will do so. This is not borne out by the facts. According to my reading of Darwin, those most fitted to survive in their peculiar environment will live, while the others will be swept away. The gross will survive in a low environment, the higher forms of life will decay. In an exalted and pure environment, the higher forms will live, the lower grosser ones will die for want of nourishment. Where cunning, trickery, fraud, and deceit are tolerated, those exercising such accomplishments will survive and crush out the others. The "struggle for existence" in human society implies all these vices, with blood-thirstiness added. Scan the daily papers, observe their revelations, and you will see what is the nature of our environment. Observe what is going on, and you will too often find the unscrupulous man in business survive, while the honest trader is driven to the wall. Who grows rich? The greedy, avaricious, conscienceless grasper. Who becomes poor? The generous, "injudicious" giver. Who remains poor? The quiet, sensitive, spiritual-minded ones. Who too often remains out of employment? The man who thinks his friend's need is greater than his own.

HUMAN BROTHERHOOD.

Thus again is Spiritualism in strict accordance with science, social and evolutionary, in asserting that the future progress of humanity can only proceed by founding society on a basis of human brotherhood. Not a basis of "self-help" but of helping each other; in short, a co-operative commonwealth, in which the welfare of each is the care of all, the happiness of all the care of each.

From The Freethinker, London, England.

This is a very pretty story, but we can hardly accept it as an authentic miracle. Pope Leo XIII. has not yet attained to a supernatural age, and it will be time enough to talk of miracles when he has done so. When he reaches a hundred and twenty the world may begin to wonder; at present there is no room for the smallest surprise.

In round numbers, out of an expenditure of four millions upon education the denominations raise only £300,000, while the State and public sources provide £3,700,000. Surely it is time that all schools receiving so much public money should be publicly managed. The Church men have continually been crying, "Give, give," and it is time for John Bull to see what he gets in return for his cash.

The proof that hospitals existed before Christianity, and apart from it, is abundant, and may be found in the Secular Almanac for 1897. Yet we notice that the ministers, in their Christmas sermons, still persist in ascribing this and every other blessing to Christianity.

One satisfactory piece of evidence on the hospital question is that of the rock inscriptions of King Asoka, who reigned in India in the third century B. C. We notice in the Times that another of these inscriptions has just been discovered on a pillar, which records that it is erected on the very spot where Buddha was born, about eighteen miles from the site of Kapilavastu, the capital of his father, King Suddohana. The birthplace of Buddha is thus better attested than that of Jesus Christ.

Herbert Spencer's view, that gods have grown from dead chiefs, finds some countenance in the fact that a religious sect at Orissa, in the Bengal Presidency, worship Queen Victoria as their chief divinity. It has been discovered that she is also an object of worship in one of the temples at Toomloong, in Thibet. Perhaps she is considered a great Mahatma. A medallion of Napoleon was found in Central Africa, where it was worshipped as a fetisch.

Clericalism has so long been dominant in Galloway, Wigton, and the southwest of Scotland that it is refreshing to find the Stewarton Observer giving its first article to a very liberal utterance on Sabbath observance, which is calculated to make the little parish godalmighties grind their teeth.

Christian charity is seen in its native guise in Russia. The Women's Medical Institute in St. Petersburg, recently established, is forbidden by its regulations to receive any students who are not of Christian faith. A petition, signed by the Jews resident in Odessa, praying for the admission of certain women of their belief, has been rejected.

Pick Me Up says: "It is estimated that the number of slippers presented in twelve months to the unmarried clergy in the United Kindom is 765,000 pairs. In order to wear out his share of slippers, each of these clergymen would have to walk a distance of 261 miles per diem."

From Light, London, Eng.

COMPLIMENT TO HUDSON TUTTLE.

We are always pleased to see any of Mr. Hudson Tuttle's books presented to public attention in any way, and we are specially pleased to see Mr. Copley's spirited republication of the clever work on "The Origin and Antiquity of Man." The book aims high. Dissatisfied with the hitherto "vulgar aim of History," Mr. Hudson Tuttle attempts a more comprehensive generalization and more philosophical analysis of the facts. He says, "The problem we are to discuss will involve the investigation of the origin, science, and relation of language; the geographical distribution of races; the relation of man to physical conditions; a survey of the races of men, and an inquiry into the causes of deviation." That is a large proposal, and yet we have only a comparatively small book. But that is, in a way, an advantage. Mr. Hudson Tuttle is not, like Lyell or Darwin, an original investigator and experimenter. He is intuitive and industrious, and compresses demonstrations into something like assertions or principles: not so good for the student, but sufficient for those who only require a general knowledge of these vast subjects. The book is published by H. A. Copley, Canning Town, Eng.

BRIGHT AMERICAN MINISTER.

A bright American minister (S. C. Beane), speaking lately at the installation of a brother minister, put the standard very high. He is all for shortening the distance between the visible and the invisible. "The invisible world," he said, "is not a strange, fenced-off or altogether unknown country. It is the other half or nine-tenths of everything we see or touch." It is only "that part of ourselves which we have not yet explored." "In the light of to-day's knowledge it is unmanly superstition which stands appalled before any new comer or old visitant from the unseen world."

NEVER LIVED IN THE FLESH.

There are some who think that no such person as Jesus ever lived in the flesh, and we believe that even so good a Spritualist as Mr. Gerald Massey has his doubts about it; or, at all events, that he thinks Paul's chief references to Christ were cryptic or occult, referring not to an external person but to an internal principle. And there is, indeed, not a little in Paul's letters to back up that opinion. That was a remarkable saying, for instance, in one of his letters to the Corinthians, "Though we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now we know him so no more" (R. V.); as though, in some way, he gave up the person and relied on the principle, for he elsewhere and repeatedly writes of Christ being born in us; and, in a variety of ways, seems to insist upon it that the real Christ is every one's true spirit-self.

THE NEW SPIRITUALISM.

The New Spiritualism will start with the proposition that the universe is a spiritual universe and man a spiritual being; that the true man is the noumenon of the phenomenal man—a real mystery, of which we may never know anything, except that it has a separate life as a center of consciousness. It is in fact, the hidden "I am I", in each of us, the real owner of body, mind, consciousness, and everything else we call "ours;" and which we infer to be a part of the Universal Noumenon we call Deity. That is the view of man which is characteristic of Spiritualism, and it is supported by the analogies of science—the Conservation of Energy, for instance, being almost another name for the conservation of consciousness. According to this view of man, his ceasing to exist at death is the most unnatural, the most absurd, the most impossible thing imaginable, and the onus probandi falls on those who maintain that he does not continue to exist; and if the Materialist can prove that negative, he will show himself a cleverer fellow than I now think him.

WORSHIPER OF ALL GODS.

The New Spiritualism, instead of "robbing" anyone of his faith, or of his "God,"- makes him a worshiper of all Gods, a partaker of all faiths, a free member in all religions, all theologies, all churches. The New Spiritualism therefore, gives to men a true Initiation into Mysteries; but it does more than that. Like all Initiations it confers not only knowledge but power. It gives its Initiates a real power that nothing in this world can withstand. It teaches its Initiates how the world may be transformed from a den of misery into an abode of happiness, and it puts in their hands the means to make that transformation.

GREAT SPIRITUAL FORCE.

It is because the New Spiritualism will supply a great spiritual force, that it will save the world; and it will supply that force by giving back to humanity the great conception of Deity, now almost abandoned alike by religion and science; and by giving us, in place of the Allegorical Monsters of Theology, real friends, powerful friends, in the persons of those entities whom we call high or advanced spirits—beings who, compared with men, may verily be called "Gods." The New Spiritualism supplies the force that will transform the world, because it teaches every human being, no matter how guilty and degraded he may be, that since the life that animates him is part of the Great Life we call Deity, he is, not figuratively, or by anyone's mediation, but literally, and by his own right, a child of God, and co-heir in all that life has to give, whether in this world or in the next; and that if he is kept out of his heritage, somebody has swindled him, somebody has tripped him up, and knocked him down, and now sits heavily on him to prevent him rising to his feet.

A SPIRIT PORTRAIT.

Josephine died of one of those childish ailments which take off the very young with the awful rapidity of the thunderbolt. The mother became almost insane with grief. She did not possess a single portrait of her daughter, and had this illusion—strange, but so touching—that if I would only sit to the photographer as a substitute for the departed child, her grief would be assuaged.

So they took me to the photographer. The thought of the part I was going to play, of that child who had, they told me, gone up to Heaven, and whose place I was to take, overcame me—made me nervous and tearful.

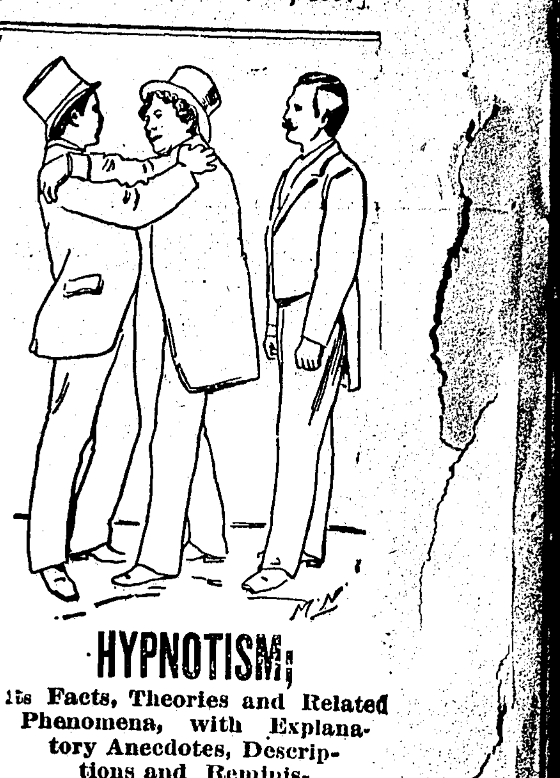
It was an April morning, blue, clear, and languid. In the work-room of the photographer, at the top of the house in St. Gudules-place, where one could hear the vibration of the church bells as if one were in the belfry itself, the heat was stifling and enervating. The sunlight was blinding and the odor of collodion overpowering. When the photographer turned the lens on me, I was almost fainting. It seemed to me that I no longer had any legs or arms or material body, that my brain was emptied, my arteries bloodless.

They took me home cold and white, my forehead damp and my teeth chattering. I was ill for a week. But the most extraordinary and marvellous thing was that the portrait so obtained was that of Josephine—her faithful likeness and certainly not mine, for on this point I insist that, in spite of her parents, there was not the slightest resemblance between us.

DR. J. M. PEEBLES QUOTED.

"Old! I am not old; but in the morning, the morning-time of eternal youth.

"True, the hairs may have whitened, but the silvered hairs are not I. The brow may have become wrinkled, but the wrinkles are not I. The knees may be weaker, stiffer than fifty years ago, but knees are not I. The hands may be a little tremulous, but the hands are not I. They are but the instruments that I use. This body of mine is not I, but the tabernacle, the tent, the house that I live in. I, the ego, the conscious myself, am not growing old. I am young, and life to me is afire with youthful hopes and towering aspirations.



"Growing old is only a delusion of the senses; the inmost soul, a divine entity, a potentialized portion of God, cannot grow old. Eternal youth is its birthright.

"Occasionally I have neglected the house that I inhabit, for the purpose of repairing the houses of others. Both duty and the law of self-sacrifice required it. There's no loss, however; "Whosoever loseth his life for my sake"—that is, for the sake of truth and human good—said Jesus, "shall find it"—find youth eternal!"

BEREAVED MOURNERS.

Mr. Thurston now contends that bereaved mourners are in a state of infectious spiritual ill-health, and likens their condition to that of a person suffering, say, from influenza. I admit that a sufferer from influenza ought not to mix unnecessarily amongst his fellow beings, because he would almost certainly infect them with the disease, and not be relieved thereof himself. With a bereaved mourner the case is quite different. By mingling with his fellows he would be likely to be cheered, and they in no wise affected unless to sympathy and tenderness—a condition to be preferred to the light gaiety which often accompanies a selfish and callous heart.

Dr. Willis Edwards writes: "On the evening of Saturday, January 23, a unique entertainment will be given at the residence of Dr. Willis Edwards, 162 Dearborn avenue. Five prominent mediums have offered their services, giving different phases of mediumship. Mrs. Nash, the noted palmist, will read hands, and every one attending shall have a reading, either through clairvoyancy, palmistry, psychology, slate-writing or phrenology. Music, vocal and instrumental. Refreshments served. Tickets 50 cents."

HYPNOTISM;
Its Facts, Theories and Related Phenomena, with Explanatory Anecdotes, Descriptions and Reminiscences.

BY CARL SEXTUS. THE BOOK IS largely a record of the facts and demonstrations which the author has seen, heard of or presented in his own experiments. The history of the various phases of the science is succinctly presented, and the various theories clearly stated. Many of the experiments described occurred in Chicago. The pictorial illustrations add much to the interest and value of the book, which will be found very interesting to the general reader, as well as helpful and instructive to the student. The work is a handsome volume of 300 pages, bound in cloth. Price, $2.00. For sale at the office of THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER.

Researches in Oriental History.
BY G. W. BROWN, M. D.
One Vol. 12mo, 407 Pages, Cloth, $1.50.

GENERAL DIVISION.
1. RESEARCHES IN JEWISH HISTORY.
2. RESEARCHES IN ZOROASTRIANISM.
3. DERIVATION OF CHRISTIANITY.
4. WHENCE OUR ARYAN ANCESTORS?

The whole comprises an earnest but fruitless search for a Historical Jesus.
In this volume the Jews are clearly shown not to have been the holy and favored people they claim to have been. The Messianic idea is traced to the Bactrian Philosopher, 2350 years B. C., and its history is outlined, following the waves of emigration, until it is fully developed into Christianity, with a mythical hero, at Alexandria, in Egypt, soon after the commencement of the Christian era.
The book demonstrates that Christianity and its central hero are mythical; that the whole system is based on fraud, falsehood, forgery, fear and force; and that its rites, ceremonials, dogmas and superstitions are but survivals of so-called paganism. It shows vast research among the records of the past; its facts are mostly gleaned from Christian authority; and no person can read it without instruction and profit, whether he reaches the same conclusions with the author or otherwise. For sale at this office.

THE LYCEUM GUIDE,
For the Home, the Lyceum and Societies.
A Manual of Physical, Intellectual and Spiritual Culture.
COMPILED BY EMMA ROOD TUTTLE.

A COLLECTION OF MUSIC AND Songs, Golden Chain Recitations, Memory Gems, Choral Responses, Funeral Services, Programs for sessions, Parliamentary Rules, Instructions for Organizing and conducting Lyceums, Instructions for Physical Culture, Calisthenics and Marching; Banners, Standards, the Band of Mercy, etc.; a book by the aid of which a Progressive Lyceum, a Spiritual or Liberal Society may be organized and conducted without other assistance. It supplies the wants of Spiritual Societies for fresh Spiritual songs, with music free from the dismal tone of the old hymnology, it furnishes a unique selection of choice readings and responses such as no other selection contains. It gives a practical system of graceful calisthenics, every step of which is made plain by engravings. It gives instructions how to make the badges and banners and instructs in marching. It shows how to establish a Band of Mercy as auxiliary to the Lyceum, and has all the most beautiful songs which have been gathered up by that movement.
The author and compiler of this Guide is eminently prepared for the task by years of devoted labor in the Lyceum. The book is the result of practical work and tested by the interest awakened in the actual session of the Lyceum.
While intended for the working Lyceum, the guide is admirably adapted to the needs of the family, supplying 76 pages of new spiritual music and words found nowhere else, except in sheet form at many times the cost. The book has been placed at the remarkably low price of 50 cents, sent postpaid.
For Sale by The Progressive Thinker, 40 Loomis St., Chicago. Also by Hudson Tuttle, Berlin Heights, Ohio.

THE TEACHINGS OF JESUS
Not Adapted to Modern Civilization, with the True Character of Mary Magdalene. By Geo. W. Brown, M. D. Price, 15 cents.

Out of the Depths Into the Light.
By Samuel Bowles; Mrs. Carrie E. S. Twing, medium. This little book will be read with intense interest by thousands. Price 25 cents.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRITUAL INTERCOURSE.
This work contains an account of the very wonderful spiritual developments at the house of Rev. Dr. Phelps, Stratford, Conn., and similar cases in all parts of the country. This volume is the first from the author directly upon the subject of "Spiritualism," and has stood the test of many years. Cloth, $1.25. Postage 10 cents. For sale at this office.

The Religion of Spiritualism,
Its Phenomena and Philosophy. By Rev. Samuel Watson. This work was written by a modern Savior, a grand and noble man. Price $1.00.

The Science of Spirit Return.
By Charles Dawbarn. Price 10 cents.

THE SOUL,
Its Nature, Relations and Expression in Human Embodiments. Given through Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, by her Guides. A book that every one who is interested in re-incarnation should read. Price $1.00.

Outside the Gates, and Other Tales
and sketches. By a band of spirit intelligences, through the mediumship of Mary Theresa Shelhamer. An excellent work. Price $1.25.

Views of Our Heavenly Home.
By Andrew Jackson Davis. A highly interesting work. Price 75 cents. Postage 5 cents.

HISTORY OF THE INQUISITION
Just the book for those seeking information concerning that most damnable institution known in history—the Roman Catholic Inquisition. Every American citizen should become acquainted with the facts so succinctly stated in this valuable record. It shows the methods used by the Romish Church to exterminate those who reject its beliefs and claims. For sale at this office. Price 25 cents.

LIFE OF THOMAS PAINE.
By Editor of the National with Preface and Notes by Peter Eckler. Illustrated with views of the old Paine Homestead and Paine Monument, at New Rochelle, also, portraits of Thomas Clio Rickman, Joe Barlow, Mary Wollstonecraft, Madame Roland, Condorcet, Brissot, and the most prominent of Paine's friends in Europe and America. Cloth, 75 cents.

THE AGE OF REASON.
By Thomas Paine. Being an investigation of True and Fabulous Theology. A new and complete edition, from new plates and new type; 186 pages, post 8vo. Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

STANDING UP FOR JESUS,
Or what the editor of the Freethinker's Magazine thinks of him. Price, 4 cents; twenty-five copies for 50 cents.

SEERS OF THE AGES.
Embracing Spiritualism, past and present. By J. M. Peebles, M. D. An encyclopædia of interesting and instructive facts. Price $2.00.

God in the Constitution.
By Robert G. Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover, with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents; twelve copies for $1.00.

LIFE, A NOVEL.
It beams with advanced thought, and is fascinating. Price, 50 cents.

WHITE MAGIC
Taught in "Three Sevens," a book of 271 pages. It is really a very interesting and suggestive work. Price $1.25. For sale at this office.

Echoes From the World of Song
A collection of new and beautiful songs, with music and chorus, in book form. By C. P. Longley. Price $1.25. Postage 15 cents.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

This department is under the management of the distinguished author, speaker and medium,

Hudson Tuttle.

Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio.

"Student," London, Eng.: Q. What are your terms for a course of lessons in spiritual science?

A. All that has been given to me on the subject is recorded in the books I have published, and the entire list is not expensive. The questions and answers in The Progressive Thinker have been lessons in spiritual science, as I have interpreted it, or has been given to me. It is free for all, and those who desire to learn more of the great problems presented by Spiritualism, have only to put their questions into form. The treatment may not be the best, and errors may occur, but the answers will be all that my own experience and inspiration can give. I have no private lessons, no patented mysteries, for Spiritualism pure and simple admits of none. What I have is free to others as it has been to me, and as this department has my best, I have nothing better to impart.

One Interested: Q. President Barrett in a late letter calls on all good Spiritualists to contribute toward a fund to prosecute the railroads in a test case, and compel them to grant half-fare passes to spiritual lecturers as well as ministers. Suppose the N. S. A. gets five or ten thousand dollars, how will it proceed to force the railroads to give passes to lecturers or withhold them from ministers?

A. There have been many knotty questions thrown into this department within the last year, but I confess that the above is one of the most perplexing. As the railroads grant passes as a favor, and there is not a vestige of law compelling them to do so, how, though backed by thousands or tens of thousands of dollars, the N. S. A. is to even start legal proceedings, I confess beyond my powers of explanation. The Hon. A. B. Richmond is a shrewd lawyer and may find a vulnerable point. Perhaps it would be well to refer the matter to President Barrett, and have him make clear how he will proceed to compel the Pennsylvania or the Lake Shore to pass spiritual lecturers over their respective lines, if they decided not to do so, or prevent them from carrying the preachers.

Mahatma, Boston, Mass.: Q. By going further into the higher degrees, is there any truth to be learned from the "masters," or the practitioners of various names, which cannot be otherwise gained, and which are superior to what Spiritualism offers?

A. The so-called "occult" knowledge of the East, of Hindoo priests, and Thibetan "masters" is in mildest phrase the twaddle of ignorant pretension, and the veriest rubbish. That there are devotees who have power to call on spiritual beings, to run here and there to their bidding, or that there are methods by which the initiate can gain such control, are unworthy even of the honor of contradiction. Of late there has been a disposition to accept the mysticism of the East, and to see in its arrogant claims and incomprehensible doctrines a mine of wisdom. It is overlooked that a belief or doctrine may be estimated in value not in direct, but inverse ratio to its age. The older any opinion or statement, the greater the probability that it is valueless. If travelers are to be believed, nowhere is there such wretched ignorance, uncleanliness, superstition and duplicity as among the priests of the vaunted monasteries of the Himalayas, and the miracle-workers of India are simply fakirs, who show the feats of legerdemain with Herrmann and Kellar. I well know that these statements will bring severe criticism, and the proof will be called for. In reply, the affirmative evidence must first appear and I ask for the evidence, beyond personal assertion, of the coming of a "master," a "mahatma," a "chela," the "astral" of the existence of the "brotherhood," of one and all the claims set up by the occultists and theosophists.

I am profoundly thankful that Spiritualism has no "divine order," or "seven degrees of mystery." I am profoundly thankful that it has not been confined within the narrow boundaries of a creed, even though that creed had been written by the angels.

I am thankful that no man or clique have controlled its career. No organization has been found commensurate to restrain and embody it—every attempt has been that of children playing at curbing the course of a river. It came without a leader, it grew apace without an organized effort, and permeated everywhere, because it struck the tenderest chords of the human heart and appealed to the hopes and aspirations of all.

It has no mysteries, no high priesthood, no holy of holies where only initiates can tread. Its "mahatmas" and "masters" and "astrals" are our own dear loved ones, ready to give us the full measure of their assistance our welfare requires.

The cultivation of our spiritual faculties, which turn toward them and make their approach and communication possible, is of more moment than all the obsolete "wisdom" of the East, and initiation into "occult" degrees.

There is one science and philosophy of life here and hereafter, that comes free to all as the sunlight, and scorns the limitations of creed, set forms of belief, and the organic efforts of self-constituted leaders. It founds no lodge, and its believers are not identified by grip or sign. Its holy temple is the wide world, its brothers are mankind, its effort is to escape from the mysteries of ignorance to the light of truth, its leaders are the independent workers innumerable, who labor in diverse ways, and the angel host.

Catholic spirits work through the Catholic channels; Presbyterian spirits return to Presbyterian friends; Methodist spirits inspire Methodist orators, and thus every church and society, and the drift of all is to receive the spiritual baptism in the measure of receptivity, growing more and more.

We should as Spiritualists, receiving more fully with deeper comprehension, rejoice with great joy, that we have not built a dam to restrain the flood, that we cannot build walls to confine it, or make a creed that will express it, or set up an organization to direct it, or inaugurate a propaganda for its extension.

Mental Student, Santa Fe: Q. If the mind depends on the brain, there should be an exact relation between them; that is, the size of the brain should show the intellectual development. Is this true?

A. It is too broad a claim that such relations between the size of the brain and mental endowment must exist. The texture, activity, circulation of the blood, and general healthfulness, have a most important influence, even more than size. The manifestations of mind are not in proportion to the size of the brain. The greater part of the brain, especially in animals, is devoted to supplying the necessary nervous currents to the organs of the body, and only that small part which forms the coronal arch is apportioned to purely mental manifestations.

Thus a whale had a brain weighing 236 ounces, or almost six times as large as the French statesman, Gambetta, whose brain weighed 40 ounces. Jumbo, Barnum's elephant, had a brain of 232 ounces. Compared with the size of its body, the brain of the whale is small; the elephant, having a body not to be compared with the whale in size, has a brain almost as large.

Although a large share of the vital functions receive their nervous force from the ganglia of the spinal cord, and go on when the connection with the brain is severed, yet all receive some assistance from the cephalic ganglia, and some are quite dependent thereon. The character of this nervous force and its functions in the process of digestion, secretion and assimilation, we may be unable to explain, but we know it must be present; that if the nerve leading to the liver is severed, there will be no secretion of bile; if the capillary extension of a nerve leading to a cell be cut off, there will be no growth. The power and strength of the body lies not in its muscles, but in its nerves. Hence the necessity of a central power-house, and relay batteries, as furnished by the brain and the spinal ganglia. As far as this is concerned, it is furnished by the base of the brain, and hence it is not so much how large the brain is as to mental manifestation, as to where it is. Is it in the spinal cord, as in the reptilians; the base of the skull, or at the top of the head?

The size of the brain in man is evidence of the above statement. The largest brains observed, may be those of great intelligence, or the reverse.

Thus the brain of an ignorant laborer weighed 78 ounces, an Indian squaw's 73 ounces, an imbecile's 70 ounces.

The average weight in ounces

From 105 English and Scotch	50.3
From 18 Germans	49.1
From 40 Germans	48.7
From 50 Austrians	47.3
From 28 Frenchmen	47.0
From 8 African negroes	45.0
From 7 African negroes	43.6

Superior intelligence is usually united with a relatively large brain, but this is not an absolute rule, as the following table will show:

Cuvier, naturalist	64.5
Abercrombie, general	63.0
Rulloff, murderer	59.5
Butler, lawyer and soldier	57.5
Spurzheim, phrenologist	55.6
Webster, statesman	53.5
Lord Campbell, jurist and author	53.5
Dr. Chalmers, divine	53.0
Dante, poet	46.0
Tiedermann, anatomist	44.0
Gall	42.0
Bishop, mind-reader	40.0
Groat, German historian	39.0

A small engine, with plenty of steam, and high pressure, will do more work than a large engine with half-supply of steam, and in a similar manner a small brain well supplied with healthy blood, has an activity unknown to a large brain, ill supplied.

A few ounces at most marks the difference between the brain of Daniel Webster and an imbecile, yet the measurement from the cavity of the ear to the top of the head would show twice the height in Webster's brain. His brain was at the summit, while the imbecile's was at the base, and simply a spinal center of physical force.

Again, the small brain of Tiedermann, or Grote, was incomparably larger in the coronal region than the largest average brain of the laborers given in the above table. Hence it is not how large the brain is, so much as where its substance is located, and the activity of temperament which supports it.

AN EXCELLENT SUGGESTION.

The following is taken from the Fort Wayne, Medical Journal:

Would not the present be an auspicious time to appeal to the incoming administration in behalf of the medical profession of America? Like the immortal and lamented Abraham Lincoln, I believe His Excellency, our President-elect, will receive suggestions from the humblest of his subjects, whether or not he may consider them worthy of being acted upon.

Be it said to the everlasting credit of the countries of Europe, and in humiliating contradistinction from that of boastful America, they have ever fostered and encouraged, regardless of national expense, original scientific research, which fact in a great measure explains the reason why after one hundred and twenty years of American independence, Europe still continues to furnish the world with the greatest men of science, and therefore the greatest scientific discoveries.

All over this beloved land of ours may be found in embryo, poverty-stricken scientists, who with the same substantial governmental encouragement accorded to European students, would render the American constellation of worthies in the field of science as brilliant as that of any other country on God's footstool.

I would therefore suggest that a governmental laboratory be established for original scientific research along the line of discovery of remedies for diseases now considered incurable, as well as along the lines of all scientific inquiry, and that a corps of the very ablest American scientists without regard to their politics, religion or professions be appointed for life.

I see no reason why the legal profession should be favored with governmental patronage to the almost absolute exclusion of the medical and theological professions. There are doctors and preachers whose judgment in the councils of our nation would carry as much weight and command as much attention as that of any equal number of lawyers, who have hitherto seemed to exclusively occupy the field.

There is no profession that has done so much for suffering humanity and received so little remuneration as the medical, and it seems to me that the time has come when it should be accorded some substantial recognition from the government both State and National.

The fact that I would not accept and do not consider myself competent to fill a place in that corps of scientists I have suggested, will relieve me of the imputation of entertaining any selfish or personal motive in making the suggestion.

We are but parts of one stupendous whole, I am but an integral part of the medical profession. Whose body the profession is, and science the soul.

It is our duty, however, to ascertain as a profession what its political rights are and then to take a decided stand in their defense. H. V. SWERINGEN.

WE WANT TO DO MORE GOOD.

And in order to do it, we should reach 1,000,000 new readers. Help us to do it. Let each subscriber get an additional subscriber. Read the announcement on fifth page, headed "Fifteen Cents," and then act in our behalf.

MORAL PHILOSOPHY.

The Kind That Is Inculcated by Spiritualism.

A Letter Addressed to J. W. Dennis, of Buffalo, N. Y.

My Dear Mr. Dennis:—On opening my well-named Progressive Thinker, of the 12th of December last, I was led, probably by the natural instinct that like likes like, to hit upon your communication of the same tone as that which characterized a few others in a former number of the same paper, pointing out the impending danger to the cause of Spiritualism, arising from an increasing class of Spiritualists who wish to churchify that great distinguishing movement of this age. It reminds me of the Old Testament story (in the Book of Numbers, xi:4,) of the Hebrews, who, after Moses had delivered them from the bondage of Egypt, had actually crossed the Red Sea, and begun the long march through the wilderness, on their way to the promised land, grew tired of the heavenly food on which they lived, and longed to go back to Egypt.

They wept sore, and said: "Who shall give us flesh to eat? We remember the fish which we did eat in Egypt freely; the cucumbers, and the melons, and the leeks, and the onions, and the garlic. But now our soul is dried away; there is nothing at all besides this manna before our eyes."

Ever since I made your acquaintance at Cassadaga, many years ago, I have been watching your career as a Spiritualist, and find that the judgment I formed of your character then was correct. There is nothing of the hermaphrodite about you; that is to say, you do not wish to combine two opposite attributes in your character; for you know too well that if a person undertakes to do so, it will be like mixing an acid with an alkali, in chemistry—there will be a momentary fizz, and then the mixture becomes a neutral.

If the usefulness of Spiritualism in the world is only to assure all men of a future state of existence, it does not pay to keep up the expensive business of printing presses, seances, lectures and camp-meetings to convince them of that simple fact, any more than it would pay to use such expensive means to convince them that they are all going to die and be forgotten; for if we are naturally immortal we will live after death, whether we believe it or not. A proposition once demonstrated to an intelligent mind to be true, cannot be made more true by additional proof, and therefore, I think the main office of seances is to give an opportunity to skeptics to investigate and satisfy their minds as they would on any other question in nature. If they become convinced of the fact that this life is only a stepping-stone to another, the next thing to do is to utilize the fact by drawing legitimate inferences from it and making it the source of well-being to the world instead of a mere curious speculation.

I hold, after much observation and study, that Spiritualism is not a form of any system, either of Pagan religion or of any of the 143 different and conflicting sects of the Christian religion, now existing in this country; but a profound system of natural moral philosophy, based upon the fact that it is as natural to live after death as it was to live before birth. The word "morals" is a neuter noun, and means the manners, habits, customs, which, at any time, prevail among mankind, and may be either good or bad. And by moral philosophy I mean that natural, and therefore certain form of truth which, when practically applied, makes association with our fellow-beings both pleasant and profitable. A philosopher, moreover, is a man who wishes to know as much as possible about his relations to the rest of the universe, besides the little speck of earth on which he lives; and in this department of inquiry speculation is allowable. In this respect he is different from the scientist whose office is that of an interpreter of as much of nature as is revealed to our vision by the telescope and microscope, as well as to our unassisted senses. Let me offer here only the bare skeleton of an argument to show that Spiritualism, as a system of moral philosophy, is superior to all others in its reforming, and especially, its preventing influence upon the lives of men.

Nearly all the vices and crimes that people commit against themselves and others are done in secret. Both the sexes behave better in the presence of each other, than when alone, because they act under the reciprocal restraint of personal observation. Notice the contrast, on the score of decency and good morals between the students of those medieval, monkish institutions called colleges on the one hand, and on the other those institutions of our advancing civilization where, as in the primal institution called the family, the sexes mingle in natural fellowship, and are educated together. They see each other as students, in undress uniform. They come there solely to obtain an education to fit themselves to grapple with and do their part in the stubborn realities of human life, and not as a fashionable watering-place, to give and receive personal attention, and to make love. Hence, it is said that, the marriages afterwards formed by the students of these family colleges, being based upon long and real acquaintance, as mere students, turn out exceptionally happy.

If any additional facts were needed to prove that it is best for the sexes to live as much together in the open as possible, we find them in the history of monasticism, where religion has done its best for long ages to improve upon nature, by separating the sexes into monkeries and nunneries, thus illustrating what they regard as the heavenly grace of chastity, and proving that celibacy is a holier institution than matrimony. But history, as written by church authors themselves, declares that, as a general rule, instead of producing models of chaste lives, these institutions were sinks of iniquity. Holy fathers without wives, and holy mothers without husbands, were the result.

Now, the moral philosophy which Spiritualism teaches, and which, when understood and believed in, is so influential in the formation of a character that will make its owner happy and useful in the world, derives a large part of its force from the fact that a man is never alone and out of sight of observers, but is constantly under the affectionate surveillance of departed friends, who feel an interest in his welfare.

Let me illustrate this by a parable. A young man, carefully brought up, has been intrusted, as a calling, with the responsibility of managing the funds of widows and orphans, in what is called a savings institution. His salary is ample enough to maintain him self and family comfortably if they practice one-fifth of the economy which the poor depositors did, who for years had been laying up their savings for the time of old age and its infirmities. But our young man has a fashionable wife and daughters, who know nothing about his business, nor any business, and who, if they ever knew, have entirely forgotten how many cents there are in a dollar. Parties, theatres, operas, etc., are indulgences which a man of wealth can allow his family to enjoy, if they like; but a man on a certain but limited salary, if he value peace of mind and conscience, must do without. But our young man is in the "swim," and when call after call is made by his family, to defray the expense of entertainments to preserve their caste in the circle they mingle with, he is too proud, like many other Americans, to say: "I can't afford it;" and before he knows what he is about, he has made a compromise with his conscience and "borrowed" so much of the widows' and orphans' money to keep up this artificial mode of life, that the inevitable consequences stare him in the face.

Women who are devotees to fashion, especially if they know their pecuniary circumstances to be a little straitened, are exposed to the deadly influence of envy, and become utterly unscrupulous in their demands for money, so that, when our cashier sees the jaws of destruction open to receive him, he is afraid to reveal his circumstances to his own wife, lest she should reveal to him that her love was only that of the hired kind. But he can yet be saved. For when a man gets into trouble, and all the world forsakes him, and he does not know whether he can trust his own wife as an adviser, his thoughts, in their wild wanderings, light upon his mother. That recollection sobers his judgment and steadies his purpose. He calls a family council, reveals to his wife and daughters his terrible condition of liability to ruin. The use of his reasoning faculties comes back to him, and he shows that by practicing a self-denying economy, and appropriating one-third of his salary towards refunding the money he only meant to "borrow," in a year or two he could get his hand out of the lion's mouth. The love his wife bears to him proves to be worthy of the name, and she and her daughters cheerfully consent to the arrangement he proposes, and they all learn by a tough but happy experience, that the secret of human happiness consists in always keeping on the sunny side of conscience and self-respect.

Now, had this young man, instead of believing that his mother had long since died and gone into complete extinction and forgetfulness, believed that she still lived and felt as much interest in his manhood as she did in his childhood—had he understood that there was a natural law, by observing which he could bring about a mutual recognition and a close communion, could he, when, in the privacy of his office, the temptation to transgress met him, have taken the first step towards experiencing the meaning of that most fearful word in English language—remorse—that biting and gnawing of conscience for a sin committed?

I like the idea which, I think, the new philosophy teaches, that every person has two selfs—his own, acting self, whose province it is to do things; and his alter ego, or other self, whose sole function in the microcosm of the body is to sit as an equity judge on the actions of his primary. A man who is somewhat acquainted with himself, and observes the operations of his own mind, often detects himself in the indulgence of thoughts and feelings which are wrong and full of tendency to evil consequences. But his individuality of character is not so intense that he cannot stop and think, else he must be adjudged to be insane. Under the influence of a strong temptation, he is contemplating the commission of a criminal act.

It seems to be true of the mental economy, that it is not the strongest motive in existence which always carries the day, but the strongest motive present, which takes advantage of his weakness. There are always in existence infinitely stronger motives to well-doing than to evil-doing; and what a man in such a case owes to himself as a conscious and responsible free agent, is, to pause and allow his alter ego to summon into his presence a different class of motives, upon which, one after another, he expatiates until, all combined, they rush into the empty scale of the balance and make the other kick the beam. The actor feels that he is perfectly free, and therefore accountable; while, as a metaphysician, he knows that his purpose has been changed by the presentation of stronger motives.

This is the way, it seems to me, the new moral philosophy works, in its influence on men when they are tempted to do wrong. I admit that the process presents the insolvable enigma how a consciously free agent can, in all his doings, act under the influence of the strongest motive, and yet be free; but, it is nevertheless true. While the scientists show that it is the environment which governs all men and other animals, a man can change it when he finds it damaging to his interests, and place himself in better circumstances. In like manner he can pause when tempted to wrong-doing, and listen to the judge, whose office it is to call in all the evidence in the case before he takes final action.

The most powerful safeguard, however, against secret concoctings of evil, and the wreck of human happiness they make, when allowed to develop into realization, is the fact that the new philosophy acts as a searchlight and reveals to the world all the secret hellholes to which bad men resort in planning and carrying on their crimes and other rascalities. It does this by teaching that the world is a stage upon which, in the drama of life, every one is an actor, performing his allotted part before an audience of interested observers and critics. The play, in all its acts and scenes, is written down with as much circumstantiality as Macbeth, or Hamlet; and now goes by the name of "Evolution;" which means that all the events of time, both great and small, including all the deeds of individual men, form an iron chain, whose links sustain to each other the relation of cause and effect; so that, if we had an instrument by which we could foresee the events of the next thousand years, as a perfect history would enable us to aftersee the past thousand, we would have a panorama representing the future to be as certain in its details as is the past.

The audience I speak of, if we can trust our senses, and confide in human testimony at all, is composed of those who, after performing their parts as actors, have graduated into the class of spectators. They were born on this planet, acted their parts in the drama of its affairs, and although they have passed into the world of spirits, still take an interest in the cause of progress, as part of a general scheme. The witnesses of this drama of life constitute a great assemblage. Still, every one preserves his individuality, and stands related to some family where his existence began. And who, of all the vast crowd now beholding the progress of the drama as it develops, is so likely to single out a son among the actors, as his own mother? And if he, from the stage, sees his mother in the crowd of observers, could anything so stimulate him with the ambition to perform his part well, as that fact?

I fancy I see the curled lip and smile of contempt on the countenance of an objector, who regards this as mere speculation. But what friend or any other person on earth is so much to a man as his mother? He is the offspring of her body and soul! There is much vapid nonsense uttered by the poets and novelists about the love that results in marriage, but in the majority of cases among human beings it is on the same level of character as that which nature has implanted in the whole animal kingdom, to propagate their kind. It is a blind instinct, and as soon as it answers its purpose, disappears from the scene. On this account, as we see exhibited in a thousand cases, the love which wives bear to their husbands turns into bitter hatred and calls for divorce. But a mother's love is not like conjugal love at all. It never ends, and it never changes its character, but is absolutely pure and unselfish.

There is a class of highly-cultivated, nominal Christians who are so charmed with the mother idea, that they join it with the paternal attribute in the character of the God they worship. I think our Saxon ancestors had this idea, too; for, the etymology of "mother" is matter, and matter is substance, or stuff, out of which nature in all its infinite forms makes everything that exists in the universe. Therefore, if a man really believes, on evidence, that his departed mother still lives and feels as much interested in his welfare as ever, and can see clearly through the veil which his vision cannot penetrate, he not only enjoys the great happiness of communion, but is under a stronger influence for good, than any religion, with its future heaven and hell, can offer.

It is very noteworthy that all the motives used by the new philosophy to promote correct living in the world are natural and honorable ones, just as praise in a parent or teacher, in contradistinction to flattery or censure, is an incentive to well-doing, either in behavior or study. They appeal to a sense of duty and the sentiment of self-respect, and are thus true to themselves and therefore cannot be false to any man. The idea of a departed mother's presence and her rebukeful love, if it were needed, could only arouse in her son a sense of shame, which is a very distant approximation to the craven feeling of fear. The religious motive, on the contrary, is always a base one. It appeals to the most ignoble weakness in the human character—its cowardice. On account of its importance, let me expatiate a little.

When a Christian court of justice wants to get the truth out of a witness, in an important case, it puts him on his oath; and before administering it, inquires if he believes in a future state of rewards and punishments. That is, a heaven of unspeakable happiness at the end of the world for those who tell the truth; and a hell of fire and brimstone for those who lie. If he says de does, he takes the oath; if he does not, he is banished from the court as an unreliable witness. But when the British House of Lords sit as a court of justice, in the trial of a peer, they still show so much of the old chivalry of their order, that they never take an oath. They testify on their honor, as giving the strongest possible guarantee to the accused and the public, that they will be impartial in their judgments. It is this manly sense of honor, in all the relations of life, which glorifies its possessor. When the Roman patriots, driven to desperation by the towering ambition of a despot, determined to rid the country of his presence, assembled at the house of Brutus to mature their plans, Cassius proposed that they should swear their resolution. But the noble Brutus replied:

"No, not on oath.
Swear priests, and cowards, and men treacherous,
Old, feeble carrions, and such suffering souls
That welcome wrongs; unto bad causes swear
Such creatures as men doubt; but do not stain
The even virtue of our enterprise,
Nor the insuppressive mettle of our spirits,
To think, either our cause, or our performance,
Did need an oath; when every drop of blood
That every Roman bears, and nobly bears,
Is guilty of a severest bastardy,
If he do break the smallest particle
Of any promise that hath passed from him."

It is a singular fact, and very instructive, that the doctrine of a personal, omniscient and omnipresent God, as held by the Jewish and Christian churches, had no general effect in making the morals of the people who believe them, good. The reason is, that these notions are dogmas, that is, mere assertions, made on assumed human authority.

When we look narrowly into the human mind and notice the process of thinking, we perceive that in the exercise of judging there is a great difference between believing and knowing. The world, for a thousand years, without the exception of a single man, sincerely believed as true, what every person now knows to be false, that the earth is flat, and the center of the solar system. So we find many who believe a certain religious dogma, as for instance, the cardinal doctrine of eternal punishment, as the doom of millions of the human family; and would fight till they died for it, as the key-stone of the arch of their theological system. But the Spanish Inquisitors belonged to the only class of men who really believed in that fundamental doctrine, for they acted as if they believed it. When they burned heretics, it was not to gratify personal hate against them, but because they were leading hundreds of others astray from the church, as the ark of salvation, into eternal ruin. Our penitentiaries have within their walls, as convicted criminals, large numbers of Christians who have professed all along that they acted constantly under the eye of the omniscient and omnipresent God. But it was all a delusion. There is no such being in existence as a personal God, who spends his time in watching the accursed race of human beings who live and act on this planet.

Now, Brother Dennis, if you were brought up as I was, to be familiar with the Bible, I know what you will be thinking of at the moment you read these lines. You will ask what I make of the first verse of the 12th chapter of Paul's Epistle to the Hebrews, where he speaks of the "great cloud of witnesses," whom he represents as looking down from heaven upon and encouraging the Christian soldier who is fighting the good fight of faith. Well, I believe in the cloud, but not in the witnesses; for they were all Old Testament saints, named in the preceding chapter, beginning with Abel, and coming down to the prophet Samuel. If you turn to the Old Testament Scriptures and read the details in the history of such—as written, remember by the pen of inspiration—you will see that, according to our present standard of morals, the most of them, although the apostle holds them up to the Christian church as models of holiness to copy after, would be sent to the penitentiary for their crimes.

A large proportion of the acts of mankind are private, and it would be justly considered an offense to perform them in the public view. But privacy is a very different thing from secrecy, which implies, even in the affairs of state, a certain amount of trickery, called diplomacy. It is for the best interest of society that there should be no secrets, no cabelling, in affairs in which all are equally interested. Except for the purposes of rest and sleep, all men, but human beasts and birds of prey, hate darkness, because they are then most exposed to harm, and rejoice in the coming of day. Therefore it is good policy to let Truth and Justice, as the ministers of good, go hand in hand, and bring out the deeds of men into the open, and before all Israel and the sun! This service is rendered by the new moral philosophy. It places responsibility where it belongs by making every man the keeper of his brother, thus ultimately making civil government the servant instead of the ruler of men.

Perhaps you think I may attach more than is due to the influence for good of the mothers of the race. But I guard my language. When I speak of the almost omnipotent power for good which a mother can exert upon a son, I mean a woman who not only feels, but is intelligent enough to understand the relations she sustains to her offspring. The terrible condition of human suffering and degradation in the world proves that; thousands of sons and daughters give evidence that they had no mothers. Like Topsy, they "just growed." They resemble ships on a stormy ocean, that have lost compass and rudder. They have no distinct purpose in life at all, but are driven about by every wind that blows, till they finally strike upon the rocks and go to the bottom.

Oh! Brother Dennis, let the Spiritualists study and understand their true vocation in the world! Let them be actuated by the noble ambition to become moral philosophers and progressive thinkers, and not backslide and degenerate into a religious sect of Egyptian garlic eaters, to be known, wherever they go, by the unpleasant odor of their breath, and the tattered dress they wear, made up of the offcast deeds of a church, now fast passing into its dotage. Fare thee well, John. SENEX.

SUPERNATURAL VISITOR SAVES A WOMAN.

The following remarkable occurrence, an absolute fact, is related by a lady visiting friends in Hartford, as it was told her by her cousin in Meerat, northwestern India. It took place in the house of the sister of the narrator. Of its absolute accuracy there can be no question. The two sisters in India are connected with families of repute and with officers in the British army in India. We give the story as the lady here related it. She is a devout member of the Episcopal church, and is incapable of misrepresenting in the slightest particular.

Her cousin, in whose house the occurrence took place, was seated at a lighted table engaged in reading, when, thinking it about time to retire, and happening to lift her eyes from the book, she was astonished to see seated in a chair before her, and between herself and the door to the bathroom, a man, a stranger to her, who calmly regarded her. It was too great a surprise for her to speak and demand who was thus intruding unbidden upon her privacy, and what was wanted. She remained for a moment in silent astonishment.

Then it gradually dawned upon her that the figure was probably not that of a person of real flesh and blood, but a visitor from the unseen world of life. She remembered having once, as a child, seen a similar figure, under circumstances which seemed to preclude the idea that it was any person still in the body, and in later years, in revolving those circumstances, she had remembered how the apparition had after a little while faded away into invisibility. Concluding that this new visitor also was not a person of flesh and blood, she sat silently gazing at the silent object, while the intruder, whoever or whatever he was, sat also in silence, steadily regarding her. Just how long this state of things lasted the lady did not accurately know, but it was probably not very long when the mysterious stranger began to vanish into a thinner and thinner personal presence, until in a moment or two he had vanished quite away.

It was the lady's hour for her evening bath, but she thought she would first let out her two pet dogs from their confinement in another room. They came barking furiously and running directly toward the bathroom. There, through the open door, the lady was horrified to see on the floor a monstrous cobra—the snake whose bite is certain and speedy death. Springing forward to save her dogs, she quickly shut the door, but not so instantaneously as to prevent her seeing the reptile turning and escaping down through a hole in the floor where the drain pipes of bathtub and washbowl went, a hole which had been carelessly left larger than was necessary.

If she had gone directly to the bathroom, as she would have done but for the intervention of her mysterious visitant, her life would undoubtedly have been sacrificed in the act.—Hartford (Conn.) Times.

"Human Culture and Cure. Marriage, Sexual Development, and Social Upbuilding." By E. D. Babbitt, M. D., LL.D. A most excellent and very valuable work, by the Dean of the College of Fine Forces, and author of other important volumes on Health, Social Science, Religion, etc. Price, cloth, 75c. For sale at this office.

"The Molecular Hypothesis of Nature." By Prof. W. M. Lockwood. Prof. Lockwood is recognized as one of the ablest lecturers on the spiritual rostrum. In this little volume he presents an succinct form the substance of his lectures on the Molecular Hypothesis of Nature; and presents his views as demonstrating a scientific basis of Spiritualism. The book is commended to all who love to study and think. For sale at this office. Price 25 cents

"Mahomet, His Birth, Character and Doctrin." By Edward Gibbons. This is No. 6 of the Library of Liberal Classics. It is conceded to be historically correct, and so exact and perfect in every detail as to be practically beyond the reach of adverse criticism. Price, 25 cents. For sale at this office.

"Hypnotism Up to Date." By Sydney Flower. In the form of dialogue and story, the author presents very successfully a condensed account of hypnotism its theory and practice up to date. Price, paper, 25 cents. Sold at this office.

"Mahomet, the Illustrious." By Godfrey Higgins, Esq. (Library of Liberal Classics.) No author was better qualified to write an impartial and honest life of Mahomet than Godfrey Higgins, and this volume is intensely interesting. It should be read in conjunction with Gibbon's work. For sale at this office. Price, 25 cents.

"The Philosophy of Spirit, and the Spirit-World." By Hudson Tuttle. A most able and interesting presentation of a most important subject. Every Spiritualist and every inquirer into the proofs and philosophy of Spiritualism should have this excellent book. Cloth, $1. For sale at this office.

"Woman, Church and State." By Matilda Joslyn Gage. A royal volume, of more than common intrinsic value. The subject is treated with masterly ability; showing what the church has and has not done for woman. It is full of information on the subject, and should be read by every one. Price $2, postpaid.

Bubbles or Medals.

"Best sarsaparillas" When you think of it how contradictory that term is. For there can be only one best in anything—one best sarsaparilla, as there is one highest mountain, one longest river, one deepest ocean. And that best sarsaparilla is ——?.... There's the rub! You can measure mountain height and ocean depth, but how test sarsaparilla? You could if you were chemists. But then do you need to test it? The World's Fair Committee tested it,—and thoroughly. They went behind the label on the bottle. What did this sarsaparilla test result in? Every make of sarsaparilla shut out of the Fair except Ayer's. So it was that Ayer's was the only sarsaparilla admitted to the World's Fair. The committee found it the best. They had no room for anything that was not the best. And as the best, Ayer's Sarsaparilla received the medal and awards due its merits. Remember the word "best" is a bubble any breath can blow; but there are pins to prick such bubbles. Those others are blowing more "best sarsaparilla" bubbles since the World's Fair pricked the old ones. True, but Ayer's Sarsaparilla has the medal. The pin that scratches the medal proves it gold. The pin that pricks the bubble proves it wind. We point to medals, not bubbles, when we say: The best sarsaparilla is Ayer's.

MOSES HULL'S BOOKS.

A List of His Noted Works.

For Sale at the Office of The Progressive Thinker.

Wayside Jottings.

Gathered from the Highways, By-ways and Hedges of Life. By MATTIE E. HULL. This is a marvelously neat book of selections from Mrs. Hulls best poems, sermons and essays, and contains a splendid portrait of the author, also a portrait of Moses Hull. Price, neatly bound in English cloth, $1.

The Spiritual Alps and How We Ascend Them.

Or a few thoughts on how to reach that altitude where spirit is supreme and all things are subject to it. With portrait. By MOSES HULL. Just the book to teach you that you are a spiritual being, and to show you how to educate your spiritual faculties. Price, bound in cloth, 40 cents; in paper cover, 25 cents.

New Thought.

Volume I. Nicely bound in cloth, 579 large, beautifully printed pages. Portraits of several of the best speakers and mediums. The matter all original and presenting in an attractive form the highest phase of the Spiritual Philosophy. Price, only $1.50.

New Thought.

Volume II. 384 pages, beautifully printed and nicely bound. Original matter. Six portraits. Cloth bound, 75 cents.

Joan, the Medium.

Or, the Inspired Heroine of Orleans. Spiritualism as a Leader of Armies. By MOSES HULL. This is at once the most truthful history of Joan of Arc, and one of the most convincing arguments on Spiritualism ever written. No novel was ever more thrillingly interesting; no history more true. Price in cloth, 40 cents; paper cover, 25 cents.

The Real Issue.

By MOSES HULL. A compound of the two pamphlets "The Irrepressible Conflict," and "Your Answer or Your Life;" with important additions, making a book of 160 pages all for 25 cents. This book contains statistics, facts and documents, on the tendencies of the times, that every one should have.

All About Devils.

Or, an Inquiry as to whether Modern Spiritualism and other Great Reforms come from His Satanic Majesty and His Subordinates in the Kingdom of Darkness. 60 pages. By MOSES HULL. Price, 15 cents.

Jesus and the Mediums, or Christ and Mediumship.

Careful comparison of some of the Spiritualism and Mediumship of the Bible with that of to-day. By MOSES HULL. An invincible argument proving that Jesus was only a medium, subject to all the conditions of modern mediumship. It also shows that all the manifestations throughout the Old and New Testament were under the same conditions that mediums require to-day; and that the coming of Christ is the return of mediumship to the world. 48 pages. Price, 10 cents.

The Spiritual Birth, or Death and Its To-Morrow.

The Spiritual Idea of Death, Heaven and Hell. By MOSES HULL. This pamphlet besides giving the Spiritualistic interpretation of many things in the Bible—interpretations never before given, explains the heavens and hells believed in by Spiritualists. Price, 10 cents.

The Quarantine Raised.

Or the Twenty Years Battle Against a Worker Ended. Price 10 cents.

Spiritualist Songster.

By MATTIE E. HULL. Thirty-eight of Mrs. Hull's sweetest songs, adapted to popular music, for the use of congregations, circles and families. Price, 10 cts., or $6 per hundred.

The Mediumistic Experience of John Brown.

The Medium of the Rockies, with introduction by J. S. Loveland. This is the history of one of the most wonderful mediums that ever lived. 167 large pages. Price, 50 cents.

The Devil and the Adventists.

An Adventist attack on Spiritualism repulsed. By MOSES HULL. Price, 5 cents.

Was John Calvin a Murderer?

Price, 5 cents.

NEW THOUGHT.

Volume I. Nicely bound in cloth, 579 large, beautifully printed pages. Portraits of several of the best speakers and mediums. The matter all original and presenting in an attractive form the highest phase of the Spiritual Philosophy. By MOSES HULL. Price only $1.50. For sale at this office.

Volume II. 384 pages, beautifully printed and nicely bound. Original matter. Six portraits. Cloth bound, 75 cents. By MOSES HULL. For sale at this office.

GLEANINGS FROM THE ROSTRUM.

BY A. B. FRENCH.

This work is one that every one should read. It beams throughout with rare gems of thought, practical as well as profound. There is sunshine and beauty in every sentence uttered. The work is dedicated to the author's favorite sister, Sarah French Farr, now passed to Spirit-life. Hudson Tuttle, of Berlin Heights, Ohio, gives an interesting sketch of the author's life.

CONTENTS:

Dedication.
Sketch of the Life of A. B. French.
William Denton.
Legends of the Buddha.
Mohammed, or the Faith and Wars of Islam.
Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon
Conflicts of Life.
The Power and Permanency of Ideas.
The Unknown.
Probability of a Future Life.
Anniversary Address.
The Egotism of Our Age.
What Is Truth?
Decoration Address.

PRICE, $1.00, POSTPAID.

THE KORAN.

Commonly called the "Alkoran of Mohammed." Translated into English from the original Arabic, with explanatory notes taken from the most approved commentators. With a preliminary discourse by Geo. Sale. Price, cloth, $1.00. For sale at this office.

CHURCH AND STATE.

The Bible in the Public Schools: the New "American" Party. By "Jefferson." Third edition. This beautiful pamphlet of 23 pages is the most thorough presentation of the Church and State question that has appeared. Price 10 cents.

ALL ABOUT DEVILS.

Or, an Inquiry as to whether Modern Spiritualism and other Great Reforms come from His Satanic Majesty and His Subordinates in the Kingdom of Darkness. 60 pages. By MOSES HULL. Price, 15 cents. For sale at this office.

GOLDEN LAXATIVE COFFEE.

SOMETHING NEW, BUT OH, SO NICE!

CURES CONSTIPATION!

Ask your druggist for it, and if they don't have it, ask them to order some of us, and they will do it.

GOES AS FAR AS 4 POUNDS OF PURE COFFEE.

A Package by Mail, 50 Cents.

Golden Laxative Coffee Co.,
AYER, MASS.

AIM AND OBJECT OF LIFE.

A Sermonette for the New Year.

"Think truly, and thy thoughts
Shall the world's famine feed;
Speak truly, and each word of thine
Shall be a fruitful seed;
Live truly, and thy life shall be
A great and noble creed."—Ila.

What more fitting time than now, the beginning of the new year, for us all to enquire what our lives are—their aims and objects, and what to live is, and what we as individuals are living for. We are so apt to judge of each other's lives, that we lose sight of what our own should be, and what real life is.

Let us review and see what has been our record for the past year. Our influence for good and evil has gone from us, out upon the sea of life, growing each day, reaching even unto the eternal shore, never more to be recalled; and if for evil—the thought to us is more than we can express—we wish not to dwell upon it. If for good, we shall daily reap the reward that comes to each soul from living not unto ourselves, but for the highest good of all. Let life indeed be to us real and earnest, let the aim and object of our lives be worthy of us; boldly assuming its duties and responsibilities, and nobly performing them—not those alone pertaining to our physical needs, but our inward soul-life.

Our spiritual growth—what of it? In order to know how to live, we must first study into the principles of life and its forces, and the relation we as individuals bear to them. Let us search into the mysterious science of life, and solve it as far as it pertains to ourselves, saying unto our soul: Know thyself. It is our right, let us claim it. We stand to-day the ultimate of all Nature's creative forces—the highest of all her works; and it is through us that this great work of creative life must be carried on.

The poet said:

"Look nature through, 'tis revolution, all;
All change; no death; day follows night; and night
The dying day; stars rise, and set, and rise;
Earth takes th' example.
Nature revolves, but man advances; both eternal.
The world of matter, with its various forms,
All dies into new life. Life born from death
Rolls the vast mass, and shall forever roll,
No single atom, once in being, lost."

Can we realize this truth and live in accordance with this divine law permeating all? Oh, the magnitude of this thought, and why do we, in our perversity and ignorance, ignore it, failing to understand, and even when we have glimpses of the truth, we wait for others to proclaim and prepare the way, that we may steer our bark, noiselessly following in the wake of those who have fought the battle of life and truth for us. Shame on us that we thus leave to others what we must do for ourselves. Begin now to review our lives and see ourselves as we are—part of the universal whole.

And the aim and object of our life here should be to carry on through our individuality this great work of perfected humanity, realizing our magnetic relation to this creative force, and how to sustain it—recognizing in each grain of sand, the pebbles on the seashore, the drop of water, the crawling worm, and thus through all grades of animate and inanimate life, this hidden, mysterious life-principle, pervading all, culminating in us, and through the same law continuing its creative power to the spirit realm, and onward, upward still.

When we contemplate this fact, and know of a truth that we are here upon earth to carry on still higher this work of creation, is it not meet we should lay aside all selfishness and ignorance, and aim to know how to live, and what life is? Realizing its importance, and having for our object the highest attainment possible to mortals, thus giving birth to an immortal, prepared to carry on still higher the design of nature's God from the beginning.

Let us as individuals keep pace with the march of progression; keep not in the background, but ever in the front, with our armor on, learning as we go the language of life as expressed in every flower and blossom upon our pathway. Sisters, let this year mark an era in our lives. Courage, ye fainting ones, borne down by your heavy burdens; the day of deliverance is near; the key of knowledge that comes to you now shall unlock your prison doors, and you shall stand forth in all the grandeur of individualized womanhood, prepared to know life as it is and to carry on in your own souls the work of life that connects you with the central forces of life in the eternal realm, and ever onward. Let us know ourselves, and our relation to this life-principle governing all; 'tis our right. Let us claim, and aim to attain.

"Life only from within proceeds, Evolving perfect whole."

MRS. E. V. WILSON.

"The Religion of the Future." By S. Weil. This is a work of far more than ordinary power and value, by a bold, untrammeled thinker. Spiritualists who love deep, clear thought, reverent for truth alone, will be pleased with it, and well repaid by its perusal. For sale at this office. Price, cloth, $1.25; paper, 50 cents.

IMPORTANT!

DR. G. E. WATKINS,

—THE—

FAMOUS CHRONIST,

OF AYER, MASS.

QUICK CURES! SMALL DOSES!

Send age, name in full and two 2-cent stamps and leading symptom, and we will send you a diagnosis of your case FREE, and we will try and make the price of treatment right to you. Remember, please, that we do not wish to take your case unless you are dissatisfied with your present treatment. Do not ask OUR opinion of this doctor or that one, because we never express an opinion, nor have we any one connected with us that is allowed to speak ill of any one or even to express an opinion. We know some doctors do so, but we do not.

The day of shot-gun prescription is past; drastic drugs in large doses will not be given ten years from now. We believe in the certainty of medicine and in specific medication, but specific medication requires specific diagnosis. He who understands the action of drugs, and who is gifted with the power of correctly diagnosing, is the successful physician to-day.

SPECIFIC MEDICINE! NO DRASTIC DRUGS!

A Book on "Chronic Disease" Sent for 2-cent Stamp.

G. E. WATKINS, M. D.,
AYER, MASS.

TESTING MEDIUMS.

An Honest Doubter's Defense.

To the Editor:—In your issue of December 26, I read an article entitled "Testing Mediums," by Maud Vaughn, in which she is pretty hard on doubters, and as I am a doubter I would like to make a few remarks in our defense.

In regard to skeptics offering $100 for a satisfactory test, she says: "If I were a materializing medium I would not take such an offer." Now I fail to see where there would be any more disrespect or dishonor in taking a prize of $100 or any other amount, of an honest doubter in one lump, than there is to take one dollar per head as they do at their regular seances.

If, as some seem to think, $100 is too insignificant a sum to accept, why don't they accept the standing offer of the New York Herald of $20,000 for a genuine materialization? There would be nothing disrespectful or dishonorable about that, and if they can really materialize the departed in one case, they ought to in the other; and it would not only materially reduce the number of doubters, but it would also reduce the number of frauds.

She further says: "I think we sometimes cater to the spirit of contrariness when we pay any attention to such offers." Now that is putting it pretty strong, for I don't think there is any person living that is a doubter from choice. There are none of us but have near and dear friends and relatives in the unknown world, and none who would not give liberally, and gladly, too, to be convinced that they still live and retain their individuality, and can return and commune with us while in this life.

All are not as fortunate as M. V. in obtaining satisfactory evidence of the reality of the existence and individuality of departed friends; so I think she ought to put it a little milder than to charge us doubters with being willfully contrary in not accepting something before we obtain the evidence necessary to conviction.

In conclusion she says: "There are so many people who are so anxious to believe that the dead will stay put, once they get them planted, that really it is love's labor lost to try to convince them to the contrary."

Now that is the unkindest cut of all, and if the charge had been made by a man instead of a lady, I would have no hesitation in saying that the charge is heartless, unjust and false, and utterly contrary to human nature.

The charge will doubtless touch a tender place in the heart of every reader, as it has in mine, for who is there of us who has not went through the heart-rending trial of burying near and dear friends, and where is there a human being so heartless that he would not rejoice to meet those loved ones again?

D. T. WILLITS.

PRACTICAL ILLUSTRATION.

A neat story is told of a Roman Catholic priest in Victoria, whose sermons are usually of a practical kind. On entering the pulpit one Sunday he took with him a walnut to illustrate the character of the various Christian churches. He told the people the shell was tasteless and valueless—that was the Wesleyan church. The skin was nauseous, disagreeable and worthless—that was the Presbyterian church. He then said he would show them the holy Roman Apostolic church. He cracked the nut for the kernel and—found it rotten! Then his reverence coughed violently and pronounced the benediction. —Exchange.

"Talleyrand's Letter to the Pope" will be found especially interesting to all who would desire to make a study of Romanism and the Bible. The historic facts he states, and his keen, scathing review of Romish ideas and practices should be read by all. Sold at this office. Price 25 cents.

DRS. PEEBLES & BURROUGHS,

SPECIALISTS IN ALL CHRONIC DISEASES.

—Depend for their remarkable cures, not upon the old drastic drug system, but upon the knowledge of diseases and their proper remedies—upon science and the finer psychic forces.

Some of their cures, like Schlatter's, are INSTANTANEOUS; in other cases months are required.

Having carefully studied all the therapeutic agencies in connection with their long medical experience, they use those best adapted to each case with unvarying success.

Hundreds are joyfully writing the Doctor: "I am better," or "I am cured." "God bless you."

THEY TREAT THE FOLLOWING:

Dyspepsia, diarrhœa, dropsy, epilepsy, eczema, erysipelas, falling sickness, rheumatism, scrofula, nervous spasm, gravel, gout, headaches, heart disease, kindey complaint, female weakness, liver difficulty, neuralgia, paralysis, bleeding piles, bronchitis, asthma, bladder affection, cancer, catarrh, pimples upon the face, uterine diseases, weaknesses of men, barrenness, insanity, drunkenness, constipation, la grippe and all chronic diseases. And further, they furnish

FREE TO ALL PATIENTS

Hygenic and Physiological literature, enabling them when cured, to remain healthy.

Correct Diagnosis Free,
By enclosing name, age, sex, leading symptom and stamp for reply.

REMEMBER TO ADDRESS
DRS. PEEBLES & BURROUGHS,
P. O. BOX 177,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND. 353tf

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

(Continued from page 4.)

the means of automatic writings, are to be believed, there is a place in the spirit-world so dark, so dismal, so filled with nameless horrors, for such as lead an evil life here, that one can give no other name to it than hell. The following are a few of the many communications I have received in regard to this horrible nether world:

"Where are you from?"
"Lost."
"What is the place like?"
"Madness everlasting."
"What do you do?"
"Drink, all the same as on earth."
"Who are you?"
"A man bewailing a most sad and lone-cursed life."

Does the above sound like a description of "the summer-land," that we hear about sometimes from Spiritualist orators? Here is another interview:

I remark: "You might as well own up what took you down." (The spirit had been personating a spirit of light, but by a test which never fails I had discovered his true status in the Spirit-world.)

"I was a selfish man, and did not care for others, and I liked to please myself. I used the men to make money, like men work them now. Little money they had; my purse was full. I had a cotton-mill. My profit was enormous, and I was a very rich man."

Again:
"What good does it do you to come to the board?"
"I like the light."
"Is it dark where you are?"
"Yes."
"What are the spirits like where you are?"
"Devils."
"What do they do to make devils of themselves?"
"Live like devils"
"What do they do?"
"They make noises and worry each other."

A spirit had reported himself from heaven, but I soon discovered his whereabouts. I asked:
"Why did you lie so?"
"For fun."
"What kind of a place are you in?"
"Dark and wicked."
"What does the board do for you?"
"O, what a question! It keeps a man awake and away from violence."
"What violence?"
"Wicked spirits in hell try to kill me."
"How do they try to kill you?"
"Shoot me."
"Can you be killed?"
"Yes."
"Do you come to life again?"
"Yes."

Is the above a description of heaven? These extracts from interviews with the Spirit-world are given for the benefit of those who believe that hell is abolished. But the point I wish to make is, that people should find these facts out by direct questioning of the Spirit-world, instead of taking many things for granted.

The writers for one of our Spiritualist papers are now in an earnest controversy whether there be animals in the Spirit-world. One leading light maintains that there cannot be, because animals have not moral natures. Another says we will be permitted our pets there; while others think other animals may be found in spirit-life, but are by no means certain. If I wanted to know whether there were horses and dogs in England, I would not reason about it, or engage in controversy on the subject with my neighbors; but would ask some man who had been in England; or, if I could find no such a man, I would write direct to the country and put my question. Why not ask the dwellers in the Spirit-world whether there be animals or no in that phase of life? They ought to know, if any one. I asked them long ago; have asked them many times, and have always received the same answer, with many particulars. What that answer is I will not say, for I want others to enter into the same investigation.

I tell you we do not realize the opportunities which this intercourse with the Spirit-world affords us. We should drop mundane affairs, and ask about spiritual ones. There is very much regarding the life to come that has an important bearing on this. Ask the condition of all kinds of spirits, good, bad and indifferent. Learn whether there is work there, or whether heaven is a perpetual Sabbath day. Inquire what they do, and ask in what way the law of progress works. Study up mediumship from the point of view of the higher Spirit-world; ask what phases of it are desirous and what ones to be avoided. Inquire what mediumship is, and how spirits can approach one class of human beings and not others. Try to learn the laws of spirit communication; how we can discriminate good spirits from evil ones; how to encourage the former to come to us, and prevent the latter. Investigate the laws of spirit approach, and find if it is possible to protect ourselves from dark spirits. My investigations are all on these lines; but there is so much to learn that I want the help of every intelligent Spiritualist.

The first half century of modern Spiritualism is nearly ended and how much do we really know of the life beyond? Let us, with the coming half century inaugurate a new line of investigation, so that when the century shall be rounded, we shall be richer in facts, and be able to dispense with our theories.

MRS. E. B. DUFFEY.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson-Barker,

AS A SPIRITUAL HEALER HAS NO EQUAL! . . . .

Rejoice and Be Glad! Herald Forth the Tidings of Good Health!

DR. A. B. DOBSON'S

Healing powers are being repeated over and over again through the mediumship of MRS. DR. DOBSON-BARKER, who, for the past year and a half has

SUCCESSFULLY TREATED OVER ONE THOUSAND PATIENTS

of all diseases that flesh is heir to, and will give you proof of her powers, by sending requirements as per small advertisement for diagnosis of your case. Here is one of her many cures:

St. Louis, June 21, 1896.

MY DEAR MRS. DOBSON:—I herewith enclose $1.16 for another month's remedies for my sister Emma. I can't tell you how much good these medicines do her and how thankful and grateful we are for having applied for them. When she began taking this last medicine, she had considerable distress in the bowels and stomach, but after a week she was relieved and we are convinced if she had not the medicine she would have had a serious sick spell as liver, stomach and bowels were in a bad condition. Now everything seems in good order; still we feel as if more medicine will eventually cure all her ailments. We thank you sincerely for prompt reply, and wish you all the success you so well merit.

With affectionate regards, very truly,
REBECCA LEVY.
3331 Laclede ave., St. Louis Mo.

PASSED TO SPIRIT-LIFE.

Passed to spirit-life from her earth home in Washington, D. C., January 3, 1897, Mrs. Mary A. Babe, aged about seventy years. A true and faithful Spiritualist for many years, and one of the most loyal members of the First Association in Washington, has gone from our midst.

Her life was one of continual exemplification of the principles of the religion of Spiritualism, being replete with good deeds quietly wrought for the benefit of the needy ones around her. She never let one hand know the deeds the other performed for others' good. Quietly, without ostentatious display she lived her life. She had many devoted friends who loved her for her own true worth, who unite their testimonials of praise to the noble friend now gone from our midst. True to her religious principles to the last, she did not forget Spiritualism when leaving earth, taking care to leave a portion of her earthly goods for the diffusion of the light of her religion among men.

Funeral services were held on January 6, Mrs. A. M. Glading, Dr. Geo. A. Fuller and Mrs. C. L. V. Richmond officiating.

Her husband preceded her entrance into spirit-life about three years and welcomed her to her spirit-home on the day above mentioned.

A good woman, a veritable mother in Israel, has gone to her reward. Peace to her enfranchised spirit.

H. D. BARRETT.

Mr. Freeman Wentworth, of Knox, Me., passed to spirit-life December 29, 1896, aged 71 years, 4 months.

He was one of the pioneer speakers of Maine, and attracted inspiration of a high order—Hosea Ballou and others of ability aided in giving discourses that were replete with original and convincing thought.

Of late years his health has had much to do in preventing him from continuing his work as a speaker, but his faith sustained and comforted him in his illness. He had no fear of the change, but longed to go, and as quietly as to healthy slumber he passed from the form, and so plainly was the impress of the happy spirit left on the pallid face that it seemed a mute assurance that Spiritualism sustained and blessed in the change called death.

X.

Passed to spirit-life from her earth-home in Anoka, Minn., Mrs. Belle F. Johnson, beloved wife of Charles H. Johnson, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Lowell. Mrs. Johnson was a firm Spiritualist in her religious belief and ever lived up to its sublime teachings in her everyday life. In the city where she resided, she was an ever-present helper to those in need, a true friend, a wise counselor, and willing assistant in every good work. Her call to the higher life came suddenly, but she entered it without fear, knowing that death is but the gateway to life eternal.

She leaves two bright boys who will sadly miss her motherly influence, a loving sister in addition to her husband and parents, to mourn her seemingly untimely transition to spirit-life. She is with them in spirit, and her love will be a benison in their home, flooding every portion thereof with sunshine.

The writer has known her for sixteen years, during which time he has found her a true and tried friend and one ever ready to do right for right's own sake. Our sympathy goes out to those who mourn her physical loss, but we know that she will give them the richest of blessings and highest instructions from spirit-life. Spirit-sister Belle, we greet thee! All hail to thine enfranchised spirit, but not farewell

H. D. BARRETT.

WHAT WE WANT TO DO.

We desire to illuminate the minds of every Spiritualist. We will therefore send The Progressive Thinker to new subscribers for three months for fifteen cents, and hope by so doing to reach 1,000,000 of Spiritualists. For full particulars in reference to this remarkable offer read the communication headed "Fifteen Cents," on our fifth page.

A Good Offer.

If you are sick and have failed to find relief, send your name and address to Dr. J. R. Craig, 1346 Market street, San Francisco, Cal., and he will send you a correct diagnosis. Stamps for reply. 378

Dr. E. J. Worst,

of Ashland, Ohio, will mail any reader of The Progressive Thinker one of his new Aerial Catarrh Inhalers with medicine enough for one year free. He will allow you three days as a trial, then if perfectly satisfied, send him $1; if not, return it to him in the original package. Catarrh, asthma, colds in the head, bronchitis and tuberculosis immediately relieved and speedily cured. Don't pay big prices for worthless inhalers. Address above. 376

"The Gospel of Buddha, According to Old Records," Told by Paul Carus. This book is heartily commended to students of the science of religions, and to all who would gain a fair conception of Buddhism in its spirit and living principles. Spiritualist or Christian can scarcely read it without spiritual profit. Price $1. For sale at this office.

"Cosmian Hymn Book." A collection of original and selected hymns, for liberal and ethical societies, for schools and the home; compiled by L. K. Washburn. This volume meets a public want. It comprises 258 choice selections of poetry and music, embodying the highest moral sentiment, and free from all sectarianism. Price, 50c. For sale at this office.

SPECIAL READING NOTICES.

Mothers will find "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" the best to use for children while teething. An old and well tried remedy.

SPIRITUALIST BADGES.

EVERY . . . . SPIRITUALIST SHOULD WEAR THE SUNFLOWER JEWELRY.

As the Sunflower turns its face towards the sun, so Spiritualism turns the faces of humanity from darkness and superstition towards the Sunlight of Truth and Progression.

PRICES:

Rolled Plate Bar Pin	$2 25
Solid Gold Bar Pin	3 50
Electro-plate Badge	75
Rolled Plate Badge, Scarf Pin or Lapel Button	1 25
Solid Gold Badge, Scarf Pin or Lapel Button	1 75
Rolled Plate Maltese Watch Charm	3 00
Solid Gold Maltese Watch Charm	8 00
Rolled Plate Maltese Pendant	3 00
Solid Gold Maltese Pendant	5 00

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE,
40 LOOMIS STREET, CHICAGO

Spiritualist Meetings in Chicago

The Church of the Soul, at Room 412, Masonic Temple, at 7:30 in the evening. Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, pastor.

The First Spiritual Society of the South Side, New Masonic Temple, 3120 Forest avenue. Services at 2:30 and 7:30. Mrs. Ada Foye lectures and gives tests.

Beacon Light Church 617 North Clark street, near Burton Place. Services at 2:30 and 7:45 p. m., conducted by Mr. and Mrs. Geo. F. Perkins.

German Spiritualist Society, Gartelman's Hall, 13th street and Ashland avenue. Services at 3 and 8 p. m.

The Spiritual Endeavor Society meets at 1 South Hoyne avenue, 7:45 p. m. Mrs. Sarah E. Bromwell, pastor.

Spiritual Gospel Temple, Hygeia Hall, Washington boulevard and Paulina St. Services at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m.

Home Spiritualist Society, 11 Ada street, at 3 and 8 p. m.

The Church of the Spirit, Willis Edwards, pastor, meets at 620 North Clark street, at 3 and 8p. m. Lyceum at 2 p. m.

People's Home Association, Bricklayer's Hall, 93 South Peoria street. Services at 7:30 p. m.

South Side Christian Spiritual Society, Kenwood Hall, 4308 and 4310 Cottage Grove avenue. Conference meeting at 3 p. m. Lecture at 8 p. m.

The Spiritualists Church of the Students of Nature meets every Sunday evening at 7 p. m., at Monsen's Hall, 1052, Milwaukee avenue, corner Lincoln street. Mrs. M. Summers, pastor.

Spiritual Advancement Society, 684 West Madison street. Services at 7:45 p. m. Dr. Hasenclever will lecture and give spirit messages, assisted by other prominent mediums.

Brown's Hall, Forty-seventh and State streets. Services at 8 p. m. Lecture and tests by Dr. Harry Abbott of California.

Society of Spiritual Truth, 887 West Monroe street. Services at 8 p. m.

The First Society of Spiritual Unity will meet Sundays at 11 a. m., 3 and 7:30 p. m., in Washington Hall, 490 Washington boulevard, corner of Ogden avenue. Mrs. Mary C. Lyman, speaker.

South Side Christian Spiritualist Society, 4308 Cottage Grove avenue. Services at 3 and 7:30 p. m. Mrs. Lee Norie Claman, pastor.

The Progressive Spiritual Church, Lakeside Hall, southeast corner Indiana avenue and Thirty-first street, G. V. Cordingley, pastor. Services at 3 and 7:30 p. m. Harry W. Miller, soloist. Children's lyceum at 1:30; Bible class at 2:30.

German Spiritual Society, Hanshman's Hall, 384 W. Division street. Services 2:30 p. m. Mrs. Caroline Drews, medium.

Mrs. Caroline Drews, German trance medium, holds services at 2:30 p. m. in Hanschmann's Hall, 384 W. Division street.

The Church of the Star of Truth meets every Sunday evening, at Wicker Park Building, in the large lodge hall, on North avenue, near corner Milwaukee avenue, North avenue and Robey street. Services at 7:30 p. m. Easily reached from all parts of the city. Max Hoffman, pastor.

Spiritual meetings at 77 Thirty-first street, South Side, every Sunday at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m. Lecture and tests by Mrs. Edith E. R. Nickless.

Spiritual Church of Love, Faskin's Hall, 3012 Archer avenue. Mrs. E. J. Hanson. Children's lyceum, 2 p. m., followed by developing circle. Spiritual science at 7:30 p. m. Tests at all meetings.

Valuable Books and Pamphlets.

We have on hand a limited number of copies of the various writings and lectures of Mrs. Maria M. King, whose name ranks high in the list of Spiritualist authors, for profundity in philosophic thought. Her elucidations of various questions pertaining to the science and philosophy of Spiritualism, as well as the related field of natural science, are truly remarkable for their depth and clearness. These books and pamphlets constitute of themselves a noble Spiritual library, of sufficient intrinsic value to worthily engage the study and thought of the wisest students in spiritual science.

Although slightly shop-worn, they are in good condition, and we offer them at reduced rates, as follows:

The Principles of Nature, as Discovered in the Development and Structure of the Universe. Material and Spiritual Magnetic Forces. Laws of Spiritual Manifestations and Mediumship. Spiritual Planes and Spheres. Given inspirationally, by Mrs. Maria M. King. In three volumes, 8vo. A remarkable work; among the greatest in the literature of Spiritualism. Price reduced from $1.75 to $1.25 per volume. Postage 12 cents.

PAMPHLETS.

The Spiritual Philosophy versus Diabolism. Two lectures by Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.

Mediumship. A chapter of Experiences. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price 10 cents.

God the Father, and the Man the Image of God. Two lectures. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.

What Is Spiritualism? and Shall Spiritualists Have a Creed? Two lectures. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.

Social Evils: Their Causes and Cure. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.

The Brotherhood of Man, and What Follows from It. Two lectures. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.

"The Occult Forces of Sex." By Lois Waisbrooker. Three pamphlets are embodied in this volume, in which questions of great importance to the race are discussed from the standpoint of an advanced social reformer. Price 50c.

FORSTER, DR. W. M,

THE NOTED MEDICAL CLAIRVOYANT OF THE PACIFIC COAST,

Will send a free diagnosis and terms for treatment to all who will send their name and address—in their own handwriting—with postage stamp for reply.

"The Pacific Coast Spiritualist" of Dec. 30, 1893, says of Dr. Forster:—

"Since his coming here he has made himself highly respected and beloved for his benevolent work, his humanitarian ideas and practices, and his straightforward course of integrity and honor."

"Dr. W. M. Forster, California's noted clairvoyant physician, is receiving commendations from far and near over his remarkables success as a healer."—Philosophical Journal.

Address,
DR. W. M. FORSTER,
1059 Market Street. - San Francisco, Cal. 333

A LOCK OF YOUR HAIR.

If SICK or AILING, send a lock of your hair, name, age, sex, leading symptom, four cents postage, and I will diagnose your case and tell you what will cure your ailments. Address

DR. J. C. BATDORF,
Dept. F., Grand Rapids, Mich. 358tf

ASTONISHING OFFER.

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, name, age, sex, one leading symptom, and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

MRS. DR. DOBSON-BARKER,
SAN JOSE, CAL., Box 132 346tf

DR. J. S. LOUCKS,

Of Shirleyville, Mass., and his band of powerful ancient spirits are effecting the most wonderful cures that have been recorded and are so acknowledged. By his clear knowledge of your diseases, aided by his marvelous spirit forces combined with his magnetic remedies, will convince the most skeptical of his wonderful power to heal the sick. Try him. Send him sex, age, name, lock of hair, and four 2-cent stamps, and he will send a diagnosis of your case free. He doesn't want any leading symptoms. Address DR. J. S. LOUCKS, Shirleyville, Massachusetts. 374

INVALIDS

WHO WILL SEND FOUR CENTS IN stamps, their disease, or symptoms, will receive pamphlet and advice FREE to cure themselves without drugs. The THOMAS BATTERY COMPANY, Cardington, Ohio. tf

PSYCHOMETRY, CONSULT WITH Prof. A. B. Severance in all matters pertaining to practical life, and your spirit-friends. Send lock of hair, or handwriting, and one dollar. Will answer three questions free of charge. Send for circulars. Address, 710 Prairie street, Milwaukee, Wis. 374tf

MRS. ELLA M. DOLE.

This medium, who is clairvoyant, clairaudient, psychometric and prophetic, can be consulted at No. 1680 North Clark street. Engagements can be made by letter. 340tf

UP TO DATE CHEMISTRY OF LIFE AND GOOD HEALTH.

A powerful and well-educated intuitional healer, who teaches and cures the sick.

Send address, lock of hair, sex, age, whether married or single, location of two leading pains, and two 2-cent stamps for free diagnosis to

DR. J. H. RANDALL,
Independent Medical College, People's Institute, Chicago, Ill. 374

MRS. B. HASENCLEVER, 684 MADISON STREET. Test and trumpet circle every Tuesday at 3 and 8 o'clock. 25 cents. Materializing seance Wednesdays and Saturdays at 8. Independent slate-writing daily. 377

OBSESSION.

Obsessing influences removed: earth-bound spirits released; haunted places freed, and the sick healed by MRS. M. BERGEN BROWN, Morgan Hill, Santa Clara county, Cal. Consulting fee, one dollar. Refer to Chas. Betts, Burr Oak, Mich. 373

F. CORDEN WHITE,

Trance, Test and Business Medium. Sittings daily, 3058 Calumet avenue, corner Thirty-first street. Flat 9. Chicago, Ill. 371tf

MRS. S. E. TRIPP,

Formerly Mrs. Gilman, of Houston, Texas, will hold seances for materialization on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings, at 3017 Wabash avenue, Chicago. Other circles by appointment. 375

MRS. L. PACKER, 750 W. VAN BUREN. CLAIRvoyant, psychometry, business medium. Three reasonable questions answered by mail, with stamp, 25 cents. 376

Seership—Guide to Soul-Light.

Its art and culture, with rules for its attainment. Lucidity is no gift, but a universal possibility common to the human family. Price $2.

EULIS. The Third Revelation of Soul and Sex. A work containing many secret and inner doctrines of the Rosicrucians. In it and by it both man and woman have not merely the road to enormous power, both mental and individual, but the grand energy of effecting wished for changes in others; also prolongation of life. Price $2.50. Address KATE C. RANDOLPH, 23 Melrose avenue, Toledo, O. 373

FINE PORTRAITS.

I will paint any spirit or any other photo in crayon, on receipt of $1.75. Enclose stamp for particulars. MRS. LOU RUSSELL, Littleport, Iowa. 376

IF YOU ARE SICK

with any form of disease, send ten cents (silver or stamps) to Dr. Craig, 1346 Market street, San Francisco, Cal., and he will send you a trial treatment of a revealed vegetable tablet. They will positively cure any disease, including stomach, liver or kidney trouble; also rheumatism and diseases of the nervous system. Testimonials will be furnished from people who have been permanently cured with one trial treatment. 377

ARE YOU SICK AND DISCOURAGED? OR ONLY what the world calls unlucky! If you are in either or both of these conditions, you had best send a self-addressed stamped envelope, and find out our methods and what we are doing. Our fees are within the reach of all, and you will do well to write to-day as this adv. may not appear again for months. Remember it only costs you 4 cents to get particulars, and in the end it may mean health, success and happiness for you. Others have found it this way. Address PROF. ROWLAND J. BROWN, 5815 Randolph street, Austin, Cook county, Illinois. N. B.—Owing to our own poor health, we thought best to discontinue treatment of others for a time, but our inner or real self has come to the front, and we are now ready for work again. 374

TO THE SICK AND AFFLICTED.

A POWERFUL HEALER AND PSYCHOMETRIST.

Send address, lock of hair and two leading symptoms for diagnosis and remit two 2-cent stamps for return.

DR. M. E. SELLEN,
Independent Medical College, People's Institute, Chicago, Ill. 377

A HOROSCOPE OF YOUR BIRTH AND ASTRAL reading of your life, with numerous suggestions pointing the way to success through the development of soul force; also a copy of "Sparks from the Infinite," and one private lesson in occultism. Send date of birth and 25 cents to URIEL BUCHANAN, PH. D., 34 Walton Place, Chicago, Ill. 374

MRS. STARR—MEDIUM, ASTROLOGER, PALMist, gives sittings daily. Inspirational music developed; other phases. 800 Sixty-third Court, (not street) Englewood. Get off at Union avenue. 376

READ WHAT W. A. RHYNARD, STAINT PARIS, Ohio, says: "My reading Jan 20, 1896, has come true in every particular—lawsuit, sickness and business. Enclosed amount for another, December 30, 1896." MARGUERITE ST. OMER BRIGGS, Psychometrist, 733 Richmond St., Cincinnati, O. Readings, $1. Readings, diagnosis and business, $2. 376

HEALTH AND POWER.

A handbook of Cure and Human Upbuilding by the aid of new, refined and powerful methods of nature. By E. D. Babbitt, M. D., author of "Principles of Light and Color," "Philosophy of Cure," etc. Price, cloth, 35 cents; Leather, 35 cents.

ASTROPATHY

THE ART OF HEALING UNDER PLANETARY LAW.

Something new and startling. This knowledge is from a higher source and is fully explained in the "ASTRAL GUIDE," which will be sent FREE to any address upon receipt of a two cent stamp for postage. Astrological students, Physicians, Healers, Nurses, Everybody MUST have the "Guide."

L. J. SHAFER, Chemist,
31 Calkins Ave.,
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

COLLEGE OF FINE FORCES

AN INSTITUTE OF REFINED THERAPEUTICS, including the Sun Cure, Vital Magnetism, Electricity, Mind Cure, and a higher science of life. Chemical affinity and basic principles developed with their marvelous applications. Students in four continents have taken the course. The college is chartered and confers the degree of D. M., Doctor of Magnetics. By a system of printed questions students can take the course and receive the diplomas at their own homes. Institution removed to 253 So. Broadway, Los Angeles, Cal. Diplomas granted under either the New Jersey or California charter. Send stamp for catalogue to

422 E. D. BABBITT, M. D. LL. D., Dean

A WONDERFUL OFFER

. . BY . . .

DR. W. F. LAY, Clairvoyant,

One of the most successful healers and diagnosticians living. The doctor has letters from all over the United States, Canada, Australia and Europe, telling of the marvelous results, after all hope in other sources have been given up, being speedily cured under his treatment. Nervous and chronic diseases of every character, peculiar to both men and women, are, by the aid of his wonderful and extraordinary power, cured.

The doctor has never failed in a correct diagnosis of any case, many times it being cases that had baffled the most renowned physicians, but was readily explained through his wonderful clairvoyant and clairaudient powers.

Each case receives the attention of himself and band, also remedies for individual case. Send three 2-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, sex, and one symptom, and by return mail you will receive a full and accurate description of your case and any advice regarding it. Through persecution on account of his marvelous success the doctor graduated in a regular school, therefore being an M. D.

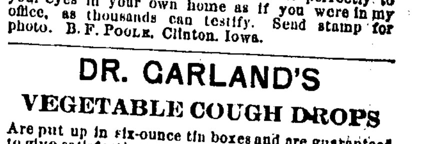
Sufferers, you that have failed to find relief, try once more and be convinced of Dr. Lay's powers and ability. Address

342tf DR. W. F. LAY, Box 918, Chicago, Ill.

HELIOCENTRIC ASTROLOGY.

A book containing instructions for making a heliocentric horoscope, together with a chart which gives the position of the planets from 1825 to 1916. The most complete work on this system ever published. Adapted for beginners or professors. One can cast and read a horoscope in half an hour. For sale by

FREDERICK WHITE, O. O. M.,
502 Fifth Ave., S. - Minneapolis, Minn.



Send the date of your birth and $1 and receive book and chart with your horoscope ready to read. Mention this paper when writing. 344tf

BETTER THAN GOLD.

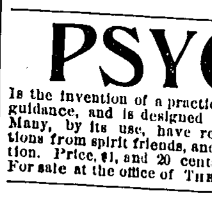
Elixir of Life Nos. One and Two

Cures all forms of stomach, liver and kidney disease; also constipation. A sure cure for that tired, worn-out feeling. Guaranteed to assist your system to health with pure, rich blood. Sufficient quantity for one month sent for $1.00.

One package of our Magnetized Compound for sore eyes or poor eyesight. Has been used and praised by thousands in all parts of the world. Sent for 60 cents, or all three sent postpaid for $1.00, with Yarma's photo and instructions how to live 100 years.

Melted Pebble Spectacles.

Restore lost vision. Write for Illustrated Circulars showing styles and prices and photo of Spirit Yarma, who developed this clairvoyant power in me. I can adjust my Melted Pebble Spectacles as perfectly to your eyes in your own home as if you were in my office, as thousands can testify. Send stamp for photo. B. F. POOLE, Clinton, Iowa.



DR. GARLAND'S

VEGETABLE COUGH DROPS

Are put up in six-ounce tin boxes and are guaranteed to give satisfaction or money will be refunded by the proprietor, Dr. M. H. Garland. Send 25 cents in stamps and receive by return mail a box of this

HOUSEHOLD REMEDY

as you will find it a blood cleanser as well as a Throat and Lung Remedy. Over 200,000 boxes sold and all recommend them. Address all orders to DR. M. H. GARLAND, 332 Sixtieth Place, Station O., Chicago, Illinois. 322tf

ORDER OF THE MAGI.

A New Badge in solid gold with blue and black enamel, with the pyramids, obelisk and sun's rays in gold. Every Mystic should have one of these beautiful emblems. Price $2. For sale at this office.

PSYCHE

Is the invention of a practical medium, under spirit guidance, and is designed to develop mediumship. Many, by its use, have received long communications from spirit friends, and express great satisfaction. Price, $1, and 20 cents extra for expressage. For sale at the office of THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER.

DR. T. WILKINS,

67 33D STREET, CHICAGO,

Treats Magnetically all Chronic Diseases, at office, or home of the patient.

CHRONIC DISEASES

A SPECIALTY.

Send your age, name in full in your own handwriting, and I will diagnose your disease

FREE OF CHARGE!

Enclose three 2-cent stamps and address

J. S. COOPER, M. D.
Chillicothe, Mo. 384

OCCULT FORCES.

A wonderful book containing valuable matter of intense interest to all who desire in any way to benefit their condition in life, a marvel of condensed thought and brilliant ideas pointing a new way to success in all undertakings through the mastery of subtile forces.

Develop your latent powers and accomplish what would otherwise be impossible. This knowledge not only increases personal influence but fortifies one against designing and unprincipled persons. Price of book 30c. or sent free for addresses of friends likely to be interested in it and the [illegible] OCCULT PUB. CO., 3574 Vincennes Avenue, P. T., Chicago, Ill. 410

The Blind Medium

Will send by letter life reading of past and future, with dates. Mail lock of hair and one dollar. Prof. H. W. Sinclair, 82 Adams avenue, Detroit, Mich. 378

Permanent Medial Development.

Send a stamped and addressed envelope to J. C. F. Grumbine, Station P, Chicago, for terms, reading, circulars, for development in clairvoyance, psychometry, inspiration and healing. Endorsed by hundreds of students. Reduced terms. The inspirational teachings and experiments by correspondence are just what you need to insure success. Psychiscopes $2. Mr. Grumbine is endorsed by the Spiritualistic press and leading societies throughout the country. The only inspirational and scientific system of unfoldment extant. Catalogue of publications of White Rose free. 364tf

MANSILL'S ALMANAC

— OF —

PLANETARY METEOROLOGY.

Weather Forecasters' Guide and New System of Science for 1897. It contains a planetary chart of each month, showing the position of the planets in the different houses in the Zodiac.

BY RICHARD MANSILL,

Author of "Geology and Microscopy Illustrated," "Cohesive Attraction and the Formation of World," "Universal Change in Natural Elements," etc. Price 25 cents. For sale at this office.

HOROSCOPES

★ FREE For Men, Women, Young People and Children.

Send at once. PLANETS AND PEOPLE,
Enclose Stamp. 169 Jackson St., Chicago.
Send 25 cents for MAGAZINE OF THE HEAVENS.

THE DIAKKA.

THE DIAKKA AND THEIR EARTHLY VICTIMS, by the Seer, A. J. Davis, is a very interesting and suggestive work. It is an explanation of much that is false and repulsive in Spiritualism, embodying a most important recent interview with James Victor Wilson, a resident of the Summer-Land. Price 20 cents. For sale at this office.

SCIENCE, SUPPLEMENTED BY AN EXALTED MORALITY, THE BIBLE OF THE FUTURE.

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER.

Progress, the Universal Law of Nature; Thought, the Solvent of Her Problems.

VOL. 15. CHICAGO, ILL., SATURDAY, JANUARY 30, 1897. NO. 375.

PACIFIC COAST THOUGHT-FLASHES.

RE-EMBODIMENT AND THEOSOPHY IN THE LIGHT OF SPIRITUAL PHILOSOPHY—AN ADDRESS GIVEN BEFORE THE FIRST SPIRITUAL SOCIETY OF SAN DIEGO, CAL., BY ERNEST S. GREEN.

It will not be our purpose in this address to antagonize anyone's theory or belief; and certainly not our purpose to speak disparagingly of the work being done by Theosophy, as a body; but we shall endeavor to point out some of the danger-signals along the pathway of the spirit, both in Theosophy and Spiritualism. Therefore, whatever my be said will be in a spirit of kindness, and for the benefit and enlightenment of those who are willing to listen, as Lord Bacon advises us, "not to believe or contradict, but to weigh and consider." However, after duly weighing and considering all that shall have been said, we are perfectly willing that they should criticise, for criticism is the advance guard of the Army of Truth.

The word Theosophy comes from two Greek words: Theos, God, and sophos, wise, and literally means knowledge of things divine. But like Christian and mental science, divine healing, and other modern cults, it is an offshoot from modern Spiritualism.

Although Theosophy has a very elaborate creed, embracing many principles to which few could subscribe, it only requires those who unite with the society to subscribe to but one, and that is, "The Universal Brotherhood of Man;" its aim being to bring all mankind to understand that an injury to one person is an injury to the whole race. But Theosophy has no monopoly upon this truth, as it is also one of the basic principles of Spiritualism to teach the universality of the race, and to show its relation to, and the harmony with, both the spiritual and material in the universe—the Eternal Cosmos.

As a rule Theosophy is not antagonistic to Spiritualism, but there are decided exceptions. The late Wm. Q. Judge, who was the head of the Theosophical movement in America, for instance, never lost an opportunity to abuse Spiritualists, both on the platform and in his journal, which was the official organ of Theosophy in the United States. One incident will, we think, thoroughly illustrate the difference of opinion among Theosophists on this point.

A THEOSOPHICAL BIGOT.

Professor Abbott Clark, a prominent Theosophical lecturer, was giving a course of lectures before the Theosophical society of San Diego, and at one of the question meetings which he held, someone asked the question: "How does Theosophy prove Immortality?" Mr. Clark replied: "For absolute proof we are obliged to go to Spiritualism." Upon Mr. Clark making this admission, which we all know to be true, a lady arose in the audience and remarked: "I want it distinctly understood that Theosophy does not in any way affiliate with Spiritualism." This simply illustrated the broad mind of the teacher and the narrow mind of the pupil.

Unlike the lawyer, who states but one side of his client's case, we believe in doing justice to all, and giving credit where it is due; hence it will be permissible to briefly state some of the principles of Theosophy before entering upon the theme of re-embodiment.

REDEEMING FEATURES.

As a branch from the spiritual tree, Theosophy has profited by the bitter experience through which Spiritualism has passed and started right by becoming an organized body. Other points in its favor, (aside from those which are also fundamental principles of Spiritualism) is its endeavor to "promote the study of Aryan and other Eastern literatures, religions and sciences."

To men of science and letters the fact cannot be concealed that many of the prominent teachers of Spiritualism are inclined to be superficial—emotional rather than profound or logical. They trust too much to the "spirit" and ignore the "letter," forgetting the words of the poet-seer who said "God helps him who helps himself"—meaning, of course, that the spirit-world would aid a sensitive according to his own attainments. As "like attracts like," those who are uneducated naturally attract illiterate controls.

What Spiritualists need is just what was suggested by President Barrett of the National Association, in one of his lectures in San Diego, viz.: A psychic school well stocked with the classic literature of the world, particularly that bearing upon psychic science and spiritual philosophy.

But as there are many schools of Spiritualists, so there are of Theosophists, and with the latter, who represent the theories taught by W. J. Colville (who is also one of the leading workers in the ranks of Spiritualism), in his excellent book entitled "Studies in Theosophy," being a course of twenty-two lectures upon the subject, we perfectly agree, with the exception of his persistent defense of the theory of repeated re-incarnations as being necessary to the development of the human spirit.

DEVACHAN, THE FOOL'S HEAVEN

However, there are a class of Theosophists who believe in such Oriental myths as a sort of "fool's heaven," as it is rightly styled by Mr. Colville, which they are pleased to call Devachan, where the spirit is supposed to go upon leaving the body and loaf for two or three thousand years until its next re-embodiment.

NIRVANA—A MYTH.

Also the theory of "astral shells" floating around in the earth's atmosphere and influencing mediums is another absurdity which those who have thoroughly investigated psychic science, including all the principal phases of spiritual phenomena, will readily admit.

Again the idea that the spirit, when its many pilgrimages upon the earth and other planets are over, will go into a state called Nirvana, where it will be absorbed in the universal spirit and lose its identity, or to use the Brahmanical expression, "be absorbed in the bosom of Brahm," is another myth, according to the testimony of all the most ancient spirits that have ever communicated, and according to the testimony of all the greatest seers of earth.

THE "ASTRAL LIGHT."

Another Theosophical fallacy is that the "astral light," or Akasa—Theosophical vernacular for luminiferous ether—is a repository of all past, present and future events; that it is "The Book of the Recording Angel," and that it keeps a record of the deeds of each individual which he will have to meet in his future life.

We hold that the memory of each individual is his "recording angel," and that the misdeeds of this life will arise to the surface when the hour of repentance and the aspiration to "come up higher" confronts the spirit. This infallible memory is what is commonly called the "sub-conscious self," and that such an unconscious mentality exists as a part of every individual there can be no doubt. It is proven in many ways, but one example will suffice to illustrate. It is this: many persons who have been rescued from drowning and other sudden disasters which threatened to immediately terminate their mortal career, have testified to the fact that the whole of their past lives suddenly arose before them in a vivid panorama, including every deed, both good and bad.

This showed the subconscious self stimulated into action by fright. The Psychical Research Society of London has also proven the existence of the subconscious self by scientific experiments with sensitives.

MODERN VS. ANCIENT REVELATION.

Spiritualism has another advantage of Theosophy, in that it has so far progressed as to be independent of ancient writings for its revelations. Theosophists are constantly laboring to find hidden meanings in the numerous impossible myths and fables of the past.

A direct revelation from the Spirit-world means just what it says, and says what it means. There is no symbolism or mysticism about it, excepting in such cases as in the time when Dante wrote the "Divine Comedy." Dante was a great reformer, and as freedom of speech was limited, it became necessary for him to write his inspirations and revelations in allegory or similitudes, in order that he might criticise the despots of Italy, both in church and state—for church and state were one at the time—without directly violating the law; although his former expressions had already sent him into exile.

When we attempt to find some mysterious meaning to all that is in the Bible or any other ancient book, in order to make it harmonize with the natural law, science and philosophy, we are simply wasting our time. If the expression has no literal meaning, it has none at all.

When it is considered that every one of the sixty-six books in the Bible contains many self-contradictions and inconsistencies, it is quite plain that it is a compound of the inspired writings and teachings of the ages, filled with interpolations and revisions by potentates, aided by priestcraft, with a view to keeping the ignorant and superstitious masses in subjection and slavery; hence we repeat that it is a waste of time to endeavor to harmonize the myths of the past with the advance thought of to-day. None of the records of the New Testament were written until over a hundred years after the last of the Apostles—the witnesses—had passed from their earthly labors; hence the inaccuracy is obvious.

DR. BUCHANAN'S BOOK.

However, some ancient spirits purporting to be the Apostles have associated themselves with Joseph Rodes Buchanan, and have assisted him in sifting the chaff from the wheat, so that we are soon to have a true history of Jesus and the Apostles, including an address by St. Paul from the Spirit-world. If this book is what Dr. Buchanan claims it will be—and we have no reason to doubt it, as his spirit guides have revealed to him some of the greatest discoveries in the medical and other sciences during his more than eighty years of life, and as he is now already in the borderland of eternity—it will be the most important work on religion since the destruction of the great Alexandrian library by the torch of fanatical vandals.

A JOHN-THE-BAPTIST FOR SPIRITUALISM.

However, Theosophy has its place (and a large place, too) in the advancement of the race in this line. It takes the religions of the various nations and peoples of the earth, and by pointing out supposed hidden meanings to the teachings of the religion of each country or class, points them to a spiritual truth (whether one was ever intended or not matters but little, so the believers in that particular religion get the light thus making Theosophy the John-the-Baptist for Spiritualism to follow and turn on more light when the people's eyes become strong enough to bear it.

VEDANTA PHILOSOPHY.

Theosophy has been the means of introducing among Spiritualists what is known as the Vedanta Philosophy, which is a decided step backward in the march of progress—at least to our method of reasoning. It is similar to the teachings of Plato, the Stoics of Ancient Greece, and the Brahmins, and holds that the highest spiritual unfoldment is only attained by suppressing the physical senses and becoming anchorites and keeping entirely apart from the world.

Experience and observation show this greatest mediums and the most highly greatest mediaums and the most highly inspired men are those who mingle most with the people and share in their joys and sorrows. The highest and best inspiration comes to those who use their own good judgment in the control of their individual natures, rather than to those who are hypnotized by the glamour of the mystic, meaningless teachings of a people who have already gone backward at least a thousand years in their civilization. We refer to the degenerate Hindoo—poetic in language, but limited in reasoning powers.

How do these Vedanta or Hindu ascetic philosophers account for the phenomenal wisdom of Solomon—said to have been the wisest man of his time—with his 700 wives and 300 concubines? The great Mohammed, with his trances and celestial visions, and many great thinkers and seers of modern times, were also accused of being lustful as well as social.

Remember we are not defending these men, but merely point them out as an opposite extreme to illustrate that celibacy, or seclusion from the world has nothing to do with spiritual development or unfoldment.

JUDGE NOT, ETC.

Another "great truth" that many Theosophists and Spiritualists alike claim to have discovered in the scriptures is this: "Judge not, that ye be not judged." We propose to both judge and be judged. Otherwise, as Col. Ingersoll says, "what is your thinker for." No one who has a clear conscience will shrink from judgment. We all believe in the golden rule taught by Confucius, and 600 years afterward by the Nazarene, viz.: "Do unto others as you would have them do to you;" at least we profess to. We court criticism, and propose to criticise.

ORIGIN OF RE-EMBODIMENT.

Now, as to the origin of this doctrine of repeated re-embodiment in the Occident: Allan Kardec, who was the first to introduce Spiritualism into France, took with him some Oriental mediums with preconceived ideas of re-embodiment, and of course their guides who came with them were of the same opinion and taught very much the same philosophy as taught by Mr. Colville today. Thus was re-embodiment and Spiritualism simultaneously introduced into the Latin countries, although they are now slowly outgrowing the former, while Spiritualism is rapidly increasing. This same Allan Kardec published a number of books on the spiritual Philosophy in French, which were since translated into the other Latin languages—Spanish, Italian and Portuguese. There are now three times as many journals published in those languages as there are in the English languages, which are exclusively devoted to Spiritualism, and you can scarcely pick up one of them—particularly those of Spain and South America—without seeing Allan Kardec quoted as authority upon some subject. Last summer we read an account in La Revista de Estudios Psicologicos, published in Barcelona, Spain, of a celebration in that city by the Spiritualists in commemoration of the "disincarnation" of Allan Kardec.

This shows that Theosophical Spiritualism, as well as Theosophy itself, is fast developing into a form of hero-worship and antiquity-worship very similar to the churches.

SCIENTIFIC SPIRITUALISM.

However, both the French and Spanish Spiritualistic press are awaking to this danger, as evidenced by an article in the current number of La Estrella Polar (the Polar Star) published at Mahon, Spain. The article to which we refer was translated from the Moniteur Spirite et Magnetique, published in Paris, and has been much quoted by other Spanish journals devoted to our cause.

The following extract contains the keynote to this timely article:

"Whoever attempts to elevate Spiritualism by any other means than those of dispassionate experimentation and rigorous observation, errs completely, for Spiritualism without science runs the danger of converting itself into one of the many religious sects, or of forming material for endless scholastical disputes."

And the article closes by again quoting Allan Kardec in this manner: "Spiritualism," said Allan Kardec, "should be scientific or nothing."

We can forgive Allan Kardec even for his theories of re-embodiment for having expressed those sentiments.

But true Spiritualism marches forward with face to the front, never looking back upon the past for its authority. Had Columbus looked over the records of the past for authority of precedents, the untutored savage would still have been monarch of this land of liberty whose leavening influence has filled the world. The fall of Christianity from its primitive state should be a sufficient warning to those who think they must look back upon the records of the past for authority.

COLVILLE ANSWERED.

W. J. Colville, in his "Studies in Theosophy," page 175, says: "We have yet to see a single answer to the central claim, that divine justice, impartial equity, is only thus displayed (referring to the theory of re-incarnation). * * * Those who oppose the theory of re-embodiment never answer the questions put to them."

This seems strange indeed. We will undertake to give a logical answer to any or all questions propounded upon the subject.

One claim is that "luck" comes as a desert acquired in a former existence. So says Mr. Colville.

This being granted, Carnegie and Vanderbilt and Pullman must have done a vast amount of good in a previous existence, to be blessed with such uncommonly good luck in this.

If eternal progression is a fact—and both Spiritualists and Theosophists agree that it is—then, according to the good deeds of these men in their past existence, which merited them so much fortune in this, they should be perfect angels of light in this annus mirabilis.

Were this theory true, we would prefer to call it eternal retrogression, in the place of eternal progression. There could be no continuous progression if a spirit were to suddenly lay aside all consciousness of his past life and again become a helpless babe with all the lessons of life to learn over again.

Another claim is that earth-life is the only means by which certain experiences are gained—experiences which are necessary for the soul's unfoldment into the higher spheres, and which it is claimed cannot be obtained by the dweller in spirit spheres.

Every spirit that we have interviewed on the subject affirms that he commenced his experiences in the spirit spheres precisely where he ended in the material world; that every experience known to the earth-plane is also found in the spirit spheres. Transition makes no marked change in the individual. It is nothing more than going to sleep sick and waking up well, as many of us have done while yet in the material form.

Paul asserts that "there is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body," and the "spiritual body" is as real to the translated spirit as was the natural or physical body. The less advanced spirit spheres are all around us, and many are in spirit life some time before they realize that they are out of the old form.

There are certain experiences which we may escape that others have endured, but for which we may have made up in some other way, so that they will never be necessary, either in time or eternity, for our unfoldment. It will be in this manner: We can feel the experiences of friends, and understand them as thoroughly as though they were our own, if we are sufficiently sensitive, which will answer the purpose quite as well as though we had actually endured them ourselves.

PRE-NATAL INFLUENCE.

But the re-incarnationist thinks he has struck us dumb when he asks: "What makes one man the superior of another? Why are not all men born equal?"

To which we reply: Pre-natal influence, environments and early training will account for this so-called "mystery of the ages." Some very interesting experiments have been made among the medical fraternity, in the interests of science, on this subject, and the results were recently made public through the medical journals. These experiments confirmed the theory that by the parents' concentrating their thoughts upon a given subject—say painting, music, science or philosophy—for a year or so prior to the birth of the offspring, no matter whether the parents had any inherent taste for that particular subject or not, the child would invariably show an amazing precocity in the line of thought or study to which the parents had devoted their attention.

Again, if the parents dwell upon material, selfish or low subjects, the child will have a tendency in that direction.

In other words, it is not so much the inherent nature of the parents that the child inherits as it is the thoughts; hence parents should learn to think right.

Spiritualism, as well as Theosophy, recognizes the fact that the quotation, "As ye mete, it shall be measured unto you again," if it means anything, has reference to life as a whole, and not to the few fleeting years of this mortal existence, although Theosophists boast that theirs is the only religion that is able to make a truism out of this saying which is attributed to the Nazarene.

We have made a careful study both of Theosophy and Spiritualism, and in our opinion Spiritualism (without re-incarnation) gives more rational answers to all the mysteries of life than Theosophy is able to give with its hypothesis of re-embodiment.

Theosophy is correct, however, in asserting that if the materialistic theology of the churches is true, this, and the other saying of the Nazarene that "As ye sow, so shall ye also reap," must necessarily be false; for according to Christian theology a man may sow good deeds throughout his mortal life, and then because he refuses to throw away his reason and be swallowed body and soul by a church founded upon unauthentic records of something which occurred, or is supposed to have been said two thousand years ago, he will reap eternal punishment.

Our theory of the evolution of spirit, as many of you are aware, differs somewhat from the theories heretofore advanced, but nevertheless based upon careful observation by some of the most advanced zoological and ethnological societies in the spirit spheres.

We hold that the formula is not from matter to spirit; neither do souls as individual entities exist before matter—before finding expression in the form.

EVOLUTION OF SPIRIT.

The great Over-soul which pervades the boundless realms of ether and every atom of matter therein, first finds expression in the mineral, the vegetable and then the amœbae, or lowest forms enters the life germ of the next higher city begins, which after transition becomes a spirit of its kind, and after a brief period in the spirit, like the caterpillar which enters its chrysalis to come forth a butterfly, this protozoon spirit enters the germ-life of the next higher order of being, and so on up the scale of animal life, after each transition remaining a longer period in the spirit spheres, until, through the revolving, involving and evolving ages, it becomes a human soul—the crowning ultimate of creation, although the unprogressive souls still retain some of the characteristics and qualities of the animal through which they have evolved.

It is the imperfect comprehension of this philosophy that has given rise to the theory of repeated re-embodiments and to Darwin's theory of evolution, both of which are erroneous, yet both based upon a truth which could never be reached from a material point of view.

When a human soul has been evolved and finds expression upon this or any other planet, with all its faculties developed, no more will it be re-incarnated upon the material plane. The lower races of the genus homo, and idiots of all types of the race, may be re-incarnated in higher types, but intelligent people, never.

From a synopsis of a lecture delivered in Portland, Ore., by Dr. Dean Clarke, as reported in The Progressive Thinker, we take the following paragraphs, which were also quoted in our article on Theosophy in the Philosophical Journal of June 6, 1896:

"'The Wisdom Religion' is but a Colossus of error, builded largely of myths and speculations, with occasional truths interposed, cemented together by

(Continued on page 8.)

PASSED TO HER IMMORTAL HOME.

MEMORIAL SERVICES OF MRS. ANNA ORVIS—BY THE GUIDES OF MRS. CORA L. V. RICHMOND, PASTOR OF THE CHURCH OF THE SOUL—SCHILLER THEATER, CHICAGO, SUNDAY MORNING, JANUARY 10TH, 1897.

Mrs. Anna Orvis, who passed to spirit-life December 31, 1896, celebrated the new year most auspiciously in casting off the old and taking on the new.

Mrs. Orvis was born in Massachusetts, September 18, 1840. Her father, Gardiner Tripp, was a Baptist minister. She was, therefore, reared in that faith.

In early life she moved to New York State, where she married Mr. John T. Riley. In 1865 she moved to Kalamazoo, Mich. In 1868, she came to Chicago. Mr. Riley died in 1870. In the spring of 1874, April 30, we believe, she was married to Mr. Geo. Orvis.

Two children survive her: Mr. Harrison B. Riley, of this city, and Miss Amy Orvis, who accompanied her mother to California and was her constant attendant through all her illness.

It was destined, seemingly, that this family should be widely severed during these last months of her earthly life. Mr. Orvis was compelled to be in Dakota, Mr. Riley and Mrs. Orvis' sister, Mrs. Marten, in Chicago, other sisters and relatives in Michigan and else where, herself and daughter in that far western land, that flowery land where she sought to regain the physical health and strength, which would not come.

Mrs. Orvis, as said before, was reared a Baptist, but for the last two score years she has been turning toward the light of Spiritualism; for the last fifteen years she has been associated with this society, of which she has been a devoted member. Her sweet voice for a long time aided us in our worship. She was a beautiful singer, but another call came to her: to work in the vineyard of spiritual truth.

By nature endowed with a very clear mind, with a very earnest and sympathetic heart, and with a strong purpose that enabled her to carry forward any work which she undertook, she heard the call which came as the result of her spiritual gifts. At first she was a very fine healer, but the gift of healing was not all; to this was added the gift of teaching; she sought to find the ways of knowledge in spiritual truth. Her earnest desire was to labor continuously in this field.

For the last few years it was noticeable that her health was failing, but it was not until about a year and a half ago she felt constrained to give up her regular work, and but few weeks before her decease that she felt she would not resume it again in earthly life.

In all that makes life beautiful, in great endeavor, in ambition tempered by aspirations for the best, and in doing well what one undertakes to do, Mrs. Orvis was pre-eminent.

You have known her, most of you, for many years; she has sympathized with your sorrows, she has strengthened you in your hours of weakness, her words under inspiration, and of herself, have helped many over troubled ways and through many trials.

She took up this work as the work of her life, the only real mission that had come to her, and not until released from her mortal form could she fully make up her mind that she was not to bear forward this work for many years in human form.

The beautiful proposition of death comes to us this morning in the light of the knowledge of our arisen sister, in the knowledge she possesses of spirit life, and of the Soul Teachings, to which she was ardently devoted as the one perfect theme of existence. Her ordination by this church and by the pastor here did not make her the mouthpiece of the spirit-world; she was chosen as such from the wish of her own heart and from the choice of the inspiration that came to her; ours was but the recognition and confirmation of that work associated in outward form with the ordination of this church.

Under the light of these teachings, with the full knowledge that you possess and that she possessed, and while we knew that you will miss her in outward form, that her place cannot be filled in human existence, that there will be a longing somewhere and somehow which cannot be supplied, still no one should mourn this change; for who could mourn her passing from this state of suffering, way out there, cared for by that loving girl, whose devotion has memorialized her? Who could mourn when you think of her trials when struggling through her labors, when she felt the approach of this infirmity? You surely cannot mourn her absence this day. Wings that are more mighty than those of steam or electricity have brought her to you; a force more rapid than anything which human ingenuity can invent has impelled her to her own; and now neither time nor space, nor disability, nor pain, nor great restlessness of mind and body can separate her more from those whom she loves.

It is a great and wonderful theme which is solved to her: she has entered into the divine mystery of life.

Next to Love, Death solves, for the time being, all propositions, all questionings. Love is greater than Death, for Love solves them for eternity.

It is, therefore, not with sorrowing hearts, it is not with downcast eyes, even though tears of tenderness will flow, it is not with oppression that you appear here to-day. You welcome her into the larger house of God's greater existence as joyfully as you welcome the bride into the loftier existence of wedded life. You welcome her as you welcome one who is now crowned in all the aspirations that life has brought with their fruition; not crowned as human hopes might have wished; not crowned as loving, earthly hearts might have desired, but crowned in the larger majesty of God's great beneficence, who knoweth the need, who understandeth the fruition.

It is much to have one's life rounded and complete, complete in so many ways as was hers. It is great to have come from religion which in some measure enthralled though it led to the larger religion that set her free. It is great to have been chosen as one of those who are God's ministers to bear the Gospel of Light and Truth; and it is still greater to have entered into that ministration with all the fervor, and earnestness, and greatness of a noble, impulsive and strong nature; but it is still greater, the greatest of all, that, in the Divine love, one is set free to take up the larger work of the skies, to be a ministrant with swifter and more potent power, to be able to come thought to thought, heart to heart, soul to soul instead of voice to ear. It is great to be considered as fitted to be one of those who shall silently bear the message of this New Dispensation over all the earth. The voice is limited in its range, but who shall limit the powers of the enfranchised spirit? Who shall declare the boundaries that it shall not pass? There is no limit save there is limit to its love; there is no limit save the limit of its knowledge. Love is abundant with her, and knowledge grows greater in that diviner life.

She entered fully into the life of the heralds of the New Day; all the quickening pulses that are thrilling the earth to-day were felt by her. She knew, as many of you do, whereof she testified, and she gladly received the light from those who minister to you here, bearing the tokens of the Divine Day that is dawning upon earth. No voice was unrecognized by her: she saw in all the various forms of thought the evidences of the spirit and of this new light, and she felt that the bearing forward of this light was the one supreme work of her life.

Now that message can be borne with greater and more perfect power. Now the voice will not falter, and the physical form, for lack of strength, will not have to cease work. It is laid away for the more beautiful raiment of the spirit, for that which quickens the thought and sends the pulses of the heart unto every one who loves her.

Just think of the tardiness of the message by mail; think that electricity may sometimes be belated, but thought never. In your heart-beats she is closer to you now than ever before, in recognition of all your kindly ministrations while she was here, and your remembrances when she was away. The tokens which came to you, many of you, on the glad New Year; those fairy-like remembrances, the work of her hands, gathered from the sea-side, are but as reminders of that which she wrought in your lives in sweet memory.

How beautiful it was, that with the closing of the earthly year the earthly life closed. That the New Year brought her the last great triumph: the New Year of Peace. Longing to worship with you here during all those months of illness and absence, naught keeps her from you at this moment. It is not death that you memorialize, but life immortal; and here, beside us, as one of the worshipers, one of the ministrants, her arisen spirit rejoices with great and perfect rejoicing for being set free; rejoices as only one can rejoice who knows the bondage of earthly illness and the great freedom of the spirit.

Oh! when your spirit beats, as hers did, against the prison bars of earthly suffering, longing to be free to do the Master's work. How often did she say: "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" Still the body would not rise.

Now, here in the clear light of this glorious Sabbath: with the glad song of the new life upon her lips; with the great praises that flow out as an anthem from her spirit; with the full measure of immortal life to bear to you; with the great and wonderous tides of life flowing towards each of you who knew her and loved her, flowing toward all the earth; with the baptism of the New Dispensation of Truth upon her; with such glory and supreme gladness as makes all earthly joy to fade and pale, who, unless he or she were recreant to this perfect light, could wish her back in mortal form?

Clothed upon with youth; shining in the raiment woven of her goodly deeds, her loving thoughts, her beautiful aspirations, there is the supreme, glad song of recognition for one and all.

Your hearts will turn to the lone one out in Dakota, whose tender devotion to her and whose love was such as you have witnessed; and all know, owing to stress of outward circumstances, he could not be with her during these last months of mortal life.

Your hearts will turn tenderly to the fair young girl in the West, who does not sit idle and mourn, who knows of the light into which she has entered, but who still misses the human presence, the tender mother-love. It is sometimes difficult when a mother and daughter are together to tell whether they are mother and daughter or sisters. Sometimes they change places—and this young life took upon herself much the position of the mother, the aspect of the older; and ministered to her mother in a loving way as though she had been a babe. She will miss that loving care and responsibility; but rest assured that the seeds of the New Life, the Gospel of the great Truth which her mother taught, and which she as a young girl has heard all these years in your church, sustains her now. She does not idly mourn.

The noble boy, who has made the last months of his mother's life more easy to be borne, the son in this city will miss her, and will say, now that she has gone: "I wish it could have been my fortune to have spent more time in her presence." Also the kind sister, to whom, across the barriers of silence, she would wish to speak and thank her for her kindness. All this will occur to you, but in the great sweep and fullness of life that has come to her, you are forbidden even to make this shadow. You can say, "We sympathize with them in their loss, but we rejoice with them that she has entered into the larger possessions, she can pour upon them greater love, for the devotion of her life is still for them and for the truth."

To the loved of the congregation here, to all who are here, her love comes to you in the fullness of this perfect hour, and she praises the Giver of all, for your love, which gave her strength and encouragement to go forth in her work, and for what she received at this shrine and altar, but above all for that which comes to her now in the great and deep recognition of your spiritual love. She abides with you.

So, beloved, these tokens of sweet flowers
Bring back recurrent memories of years;
Flowers that she loved, resplendent in those hours
When, without sickness or haunting human fears,
She went forth teaching the gladness from on high,
The message, that the soul can never die.

But the tributes of external flowers must fade
Beside the memories of the olden-time.
Beside the blossoms that your love has made,
The love and tenderness of life sublime.

Now, oh Death! thou hast sapped her outward life;
Thou hast taken all that could decay on earth below:
Sickness, and pain, and care, and earthly strife,
But into that new life thou canst not go,
Nor rob sweet memory of one blessed flower,
Nor take from her arisen spirit one blest dower.

She is alive; her precious thoughts pervade
These flowers you place here; but earth's barriers divide—
A brighter glory comes, that she hath made;
Her placid brow is crowned with blossoms that abide,
With lilies and roses of immortal bloom,
With amaranth, heavenly fair, above earth's tomb.

Take all thou canst, oh Death! the shadowed form,
The sorrow and the care of the human state,
But the pure lifeglow from God's presence warm
Abides, immortal, blest and uncreate;
Thou hast no part in that great life, oh Death!
She now hath entered: the immortal breath.

Conscious of the brooding love, the life and power,
The wonderous glory, the perfected dower,
These shall abide, and every living hour
Shall bless you with the soul's transcendent power.

O Thou Infinite Soul! Thou Mother Love, Thou Father Wisdom; we praise Thee for all Thy gifts, for the fleeting birth and gifts of earthly life, for the shadow and the joy of human existence, for the great love of human life, and the larger birth of immortal consciousness, for that which abides beyond time and sense; for the glorious fulfillment of what the earth has promised unto the spirit, and for that which enters into the human state, pervading it and lighting up its shadows with the knowledge of immortality. May her arisen soul-presence abide with those who love her, and may the light of that matchless sphere of those teachers who are hers, those companions who are hers, enter into the companionship of these loved ones who abide, until at last all shall be joined in that larger congregation of the spirit where truth is perceived and love is known forevermore. May each one be blest: the companion of her life, may he not feel all alone; the dear daughter, the son, the sisters, the friends all, and may they abide in the consciousness of her love and of her ministrations, until the shadows of life pass away and they enter into the possessions of immortality. Amen.

IT JUST FILLS THE BILL.

To the Editor:—I take three spiritualistic papers. I get good, and lots of it, out of all; but The Progressive Thinker just fills the bill. It does me as much good as a good square meal. As an educator it can not be beat. Through the personal teachings of W. H. Bach and The Progressive Thinker, I have had the nonsense knocked completely out of my head. My feet are on solid ground, and with these two good friends to stand by me, I defy the world. Whereas, I was once blind, now I see. Why, the world is full of music to me. Spiritualism has made my life one of gladness, and what is better my whole family feel it too; in fact, we are all happy! All is Sunshine! There are no clouds. We take the facts as we find them. What we don't understand we don't worry over, but wait until such time as it will be made clear to us. The trouble with the majority of investigators is that they begin with the most difficult phase of spirit phenomena first, without preparation or understanding of first principles. I advise all beginners to attend lectures first. Prepare the mind to investigate without prejudice, and then much that is dark and uncertain will become as the noon-time, clearly presented and clearly received. The majority of people expect a medium to bring their friends to them. I don't. I am the one to attract those friends to the medium, and then if they can communicate with me I am thankful; if not I can but feel that we have all done the best we can. My friends never fail me when it is possible to come to me, so I am always content in that knowledge.

May your life be as full of prosperous sunshine as mine has been through the agency of The Progressive Thinker.

GEORGE T. LAMONT.

The Goths first came into notice in the second century, marching southward across the Danube from the great plains of Central Russia.

SPIRITUALISM AND RELIGION.

The Tree Is Known by Its Fruits.

Thus Is Spiritualism Shown Not To Be a Religion.

"A tree is known by the fruit it bears," was said by one of the greatest, if not the greatest, teachers that ever spake through man. Then the only way one can decide whether Spiritualism is a religion is to compare the fruits of each. If they do not harmonize in both the teachings, the manner of teachings, and the results—if Spiritualism seeks and finds truth which frees one from evil, and the religionists seek and find error which is the cause of all the evil in the world—if Spiritualists are found to be living more in harmony with the divine law of Love than those who profess religion, then how can it be said that Spiritualism is a religion?

History and statistics abound with the "fruits" of both Spiritualists and religionists, and one need not be misled in conclusions. Religionists are those who believe in the tenets taught by some church, of which there are one thousand and thirty-five in the United States called Christian; besides there are the Jewish, Mohammedans, and many others in European and Asiatic countries. And there are many men and women who have had and believe in the teachings of the church, who are not members of any established church and yet are religionists.

Spiritualists are those who, from knowledge received from observation, believe in spirit communion with and through men and women, and in the truth of life as gained from a search after knowledge of the Law of Being. In other words, Spiritualism is a philosophy; it is a practical demonstration of Truth, founded upon knowledge. It is the evidence or proof of that immortality which religionists teach, but which they accept by faith alone. Spiritualists believe, based upon knowledge and from analogy, that a knowledge of the great "Law of Being, of the Truth of Life" may be obtained from those on the other side of life, and who have from actual experiences for many thousands or, perhaps billions of years, the wisdom of countless ages that "shall guide us into all truth, and show us things to come."

Religionists believe (without experimental knowledge, and do not reason from analogy) that at sometime in the long past, ranging from the time of Moses to the time of Jesus of Nazareth, there was a revelation to man of all that he is ever to know while in this life, and that no more can or will be added at any time for the enlightenment of man. Spiritualists believe from experimental knowledge and from analogy that if there ever was a revelation to man by any spirit, the same or more and different knowledge can be transmitted to and through mortal instruments for guidance into all truth that can and will free the human race, who accept and live the truth received, from all evil; and that they may be "shown things to come" that they may not go blindly through this life and stumble in the darkness and suffer; that the same laws of inspiration and revelation exist now and at all times that existed nineteen hundred or four thousand years ago, and under right conditions men and women can and do receive the influx of thought from the great Master "over there" and can give it forth to the world the same as any time in the past, and that all that have ever inspired man with a knowledge of truth and love are ready, willing and anxious to do so now at any time, and do at all times when the opportunity affords.

But, it will be asked, what is philosophy? and from whence did it originate? It is from the Greek and means "a love of wisdom," and originated with that great philosopher, Pythagoras, who preferred it rather than that of "sophists" who were "fallacious reasoners" and taught for money—the same as the teachers of religion do at the present time. The word "philosophy" was appropriated by Socrates, who made it a distinctive appellation of his teachings, in contrast with the arrogant designation of the "sophists."

Many definitions have been given to the word "philosophy" by both ancient and modern philosophers, some of which are: "The knowledge of things divine and human;" "the part of human learning which has reference to reason;" "the science of things, evidently deduced from first principles;" "the science of effects by their causes and the causes by their effects;" "the science of connecting principles with Nature;" "the science of truth, sensible and abstract;" "the science of the origin of the Ego, or mental self;" "the substitution of truth—the necessary truths of reason, in the place of the oversight of popular opinion and the error of psychological science;" "the science of the first principles, namely, that which investigates the primary grounds and determines the fundamental certainty of human knowledge generally;" "the science of ultimate principles and laws of Nature, and their mutual relations;" "the science of the reason of things;" "the explanation of the phenomena of the universe;" "the thinking consideration of things;" "the science of principles;" "the search for true knowledge, or wisdom, as distinguished from belief or opinion on the evidence of the senses;" "to acquire true wisdom."

Aristotle said that, "as sciences deal with distinct departments of existence, there must be a science which deals with the reality that underlies them all," and that, "philosophy was equivalent to a knowledge of things in their origin or cause, and be applied to the sagacity or disposition best adapted to solve the problems of life."

Socrates, who first popularized the word "philosophy," heard an "internal voice" from his early childhood, of which he often spoke, and which he implicitely obeyed. This "voice" was to him an instructor, and thus he became the greatest teacher or "philosopher" of his or any other age. So closely did he ally himself with his "teacher" that he was accused of worshiping a demon unknown to the mythology, and for which he was tried and condemned to drink the fatal hemlock. By and through this great "teacher" that he called the "internal voice" he called philosophy down from heaven, as he said, and introduced it into the cities of his day, compelling men to inquire concerning life and morals and things good and evil.

Before the priestcraft held sway the ancient Egyptians had their "temples of truth" where, in the silence, they communed with those great teachers, whom the Christ called "spirits of truth," from the other side of life, and thus they learned the truth of life, the law of being, and became the most civilized of any nation then extant. They had no religion, but were philosophers in the true sense of the word.

Through the great philosophers of ancient times, thousands upon thousands of books were written on the philosophy of life and placed in the Alexandrian Library, and which the priests of religion so feared that they caused its destruction. Besides many writings are securely locked in the great pyramids of Egypt that still hold the secrets of that ancient and occult philosophy.

The Christ, some of whose teachings are contained in the Gospel of John, never taught a religion in any manner. There were at that time the Jewish and the Pagan religions, whose priests were despised by the Christ and whom he called hypocrites, vipers, and whited sepulchers, full of dead men's bones and all uncleanness. The Pagan priests were no better; but practiced deception upon the people until they could no longer hold them in ignorance, because of the Greek and Roman philosophers who were fast spreading the truth of Gnosticism, when the Pagan priests, to stem the tide of the philosophers and continue themselves at the head of an unholy priesthood, appropriated many of the writings of those philosophers and Gnostics, interpolated many of their own ideas, to fit their own religion, and promulgated it as a revelation from God for the guidance of men; and then stamped out the teachings of the philosophers of that time and established the religion that is now called Christian.

Spirit communion with and through man is the rock upon which the Christ sought to establish the true church; and had that manner of teaching been established and continued, the entire world, long ere this, would have been at peace, the brotherhood of man would have obtained, and the prayer: "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven," would have been answered centuries ago. The kingdom and the will of the Father is Love, which is to prevail among men and women as it does where all is harmony and love.

Spiritualists are a progressive people, and many millions have climbed the rough and rocky Alps of Truth in mental and spiritual unfoldment and stand with folded arms and uncovered heads in the ambient sunshine of eternal love, drinking deep of that Fountain from which "cometh every good and perfect gift," and are "guided into all truth, and shown things to come." Many millions are on the way up those Alps, and many millions have just started; and while it has been not quite fifty years since the tiny rap at Hydesville announced the advent of a New Era, that rap, soft as it was, has encircled the earth, counting its devotees by the thousand millions. Religion has been taught in the United States for nearly four hundred years; and yet there are not so many adult religionists in this country as there are adult Spiritualists with less than a half century operation.

As soon as religion obtained through the priests of the Roman Catholic church, the philosophy of Spiritualism that had spread so rapidly for about four centuries before the establishment of the Catholic church at the time of Constantine, was stamped out by the killing in the name of religion of the instruments of the great masters from the other side of life, and during the reign of priestcraft for twelve hundred years following the establishment of the Catholic church there were, as estimated by Victor Hugo and other reliable writers, more than ten million men and women burned at the stake and otherwise murdered by religionists, because they were suspected of being the instruments of the angel world for the transmission of truth to man.

In the latter part of the eighth century, at the solicitation of Pope Adrian I., Charlemagne established with the sword the Catholic religion among the Saxons and Lombards, killing all who would not accept that religion and be baptized into that church, slaying at one time at Verdun nearly 5,000 who preferred death to the Catholic religion. It took thirty-two years to establish the Catholic religion among the Lombards and Saxons, besides destroying millions of lives; but it was done, and that is the religion we have in this nation today.

In August of the year 1672, in France, one kind of religionists rose in a single night, by concerted action, and murdered about 60,000 of another kind of religionists. And now we find the religionists of Turkey seeking to destroy other religionists of Armenia. In all nations where religion rules generally are large standing armies for offensive or defensive action, and the more religion a nation has, the larger the armies and the most brutal. Spain is entirely under religious domination, and the brutality of her soldiers is beyond the art of language to portray. When Gen. Weyler left Madrid for Cuba to subjugate a long-suffering people, he was "blessed" by the Bishop of Madrid and sent on his way with the blessings of the Catholic church; and when he arrived in Cuba he was again "blessed" by the Bishop of Havana and sent on his mission of oppression and massacre.

The Israelites had religion, and they drenched the earth with human blood from Egypt to Canaan, at the command of their God; and are yet the oppressors of all the world for the sake of material gain.

From a careful examination of the "beliefs" of penitentiaries in the United States, Canada, England, Ireland, France and Germany, it is found that about ninety-five percent of the men and women incarcerated therein for offences believe in religion of some kind; and that ninety-eight per cent of those executed for capital offences also believe in religion. On the other hand there are not quite one percent of such persons in prison who are Spiritualists.

In the saloon business in the United States about seventy-five per cent are owned and operated by religionists, many of whom are members in good standing of some church. In this city are eight wholesale whiskey houses, seven of which are owned by members of the Catholic church and one by a Jew.

The Catholic church, from which all Protestant churches came, and whose God they ceremonially worship, positively asserts in its literature that it does not and cannot progress, for the reason, as is claimed, that at the time of the commencement of its religion, all was "revealed" to them by God that was necessary for man to know for his existence here and an entrance into heaven. It believes in and teaches a "vicarious atonement" for the redemption of sinners, and an intercessor and advocate between man and the Creator, that man may escape merited punishment which the "law of being" demands for the commission of evil. The philosophy of Spiritualism teaches that "as you sow, so shall you reap," and that there is naught but self-atonement for the commission of evil.

Spiritualism is no more a religion than white is black; and to be a hypocrite and fawning sycophant, to curry favor with judges and courts, is an absurdity that has no parallel in ignorance.

CHARLES HOWELL.

Grand Rapids, Mich.

The Japanese alphabet is said to be a modification of the Chinese system, but much simplified.

WHAT IS LIFE?

Life, Matter, Spirit, and Their Inter-Relations.

A Clear and Able Philosophical Essay.

There is little doubt that this question has been asked by every thinking and investigating person that has ever existed on this earth. There is also little doubt that few, if any, have been able to formulate an answer at all satisfactory to themselves. For this there is no good reason.

Man depends and relies wholly upon his five senses for all information and the establishment of every fact—the answer to every question.

Life being a substance that the senses cannot detect, all information in regard to it is necessarily derived from the phenomena produced by it. But are we not as capable of judging and determining what any substance is from the phenomena that it produces, as we are from coming in contact with it through either or all of our senses? For at last the reasoning power of man must judge of everything from phenomena.

We behold a horse, but the impression made on the retina of the eye is a phenomenon. And we must judge of the horse by that phenomenon. We place our finger on a coal of fire and receive the impression of heat; but that impression is only a phenomenon of heat, and we must judge what heat is from that phenomenon. Thus it is with all our senses. So that in the final analysis all our judgments, conclusions, and facts are reached by and through phenomena.

Is it not reasonable to conclude that we are as likely to form wrong opinions and judgments from one set of phenomena as from another? Especially if we give to each class of phenomena as careful and attentive investigation and as critical and unprejudiced thought.

We know that man was deceived by the phenomena of the material world and that the false judgments were adhered to for centuries; and that they who first discovered those errors were denounced as heretics and enemies of their race. From the phenomenon of the "rising and setting of the sun" (so-called) and the local appearance of the earth's surface, man judged that the earth was flat and that the sun went around or through it. And it ook centuries of thought to overturn this false judgment. But to-day, we comprehend how unreasonable and absurd that judgment was.

We frequently hear unthinking persons proclaiming that "it is easy enough to tell what matter is, for we can see and feel it, taste, touch and smell it; and we can weigh it. But no one can tell what life is for it is not subject to these tests. Yes," they added, "we can analyze matter and separate it into its elementary parts."

I concede, my boasting friend, that you know considerable about matter; about what you call its properties; about separating and uniting some of its compounds; about what you call its specific gravity; about what you call its chemical affinities; about what you call its law of attraction, or gravitation. But, if I say to you that what you call specific gravity, chemical affinity, and gravitation do not belong to matter in its final analysis, you are astounded and you immediately pronounce me a fit subject for the proper asylum. So be it! Let us see! I hold in my hand a bar of steel, I place on the table before me a needle, or nail; I hold the bar of steel one inch above the needle; the needle does not move. I now take a common horse-shoe magnet, and, presto, I draw it the length of the bar of steel, and I now hold the bar one inch above the needle and your law of gravity, as pertaining to matter, is annihilated, for the bar of steel now reaches down an unseen hand and picks up the needle and, holds it fast, notwithstanding the big earth is pulling with your law of gravity in an opposite direction. What is it? The steel bar weighs no more; its specific gravity is the same; its other properties are unchanged. Yet something has been added to the bar; but this something cannot be detected by the senses except by the phenomenon of picking up the needle. Was it matter that was added to the bar? Who says no? Who dare say yes?

Some scientist stands up and says, "it is the force of magnetism."

But what is force? What is magnetism? Webster says that force is "that physical property in a body which may produce action or motion in another body, or may counteract such action." Now, what is a physical property? Webster says, "property is a peculiar quality of any thing; that which is inherent in a subject, or naturally essential to it; called by logicians an essential mode." Webster also says that, "physical pertains to material things."

So we have, according to Webster, a "material quality." Now is that true? I think not. I think that the steel bar answers the same purpose in relation to this substantive force, magnetism, as the pail does to the water or fluid that it may contain. It holds it. It may hold it, or it may not hold it. It will not hold it unless it is poured into it, nor does the pail naturally hold water. Neither is the water a property of the pail any more than this "substantive force" is a property of the steel bar.

I define "substantive force" as spirit. Could it exist without matter? I answer yes. But it could not be brought to our knowledge so easily without matter. Its phenomena in connection with matter proves its existence. Light and electricity are substantive forces, spirit. Comprehended by us more readily through and by their phenomena in and upon matter, but they are not matter. They are a species of substance; so is matter a species of substance; but the characteristics of matter are so variant from the characteristics of spirit that they cannot be classed together.

Substance is a word broad enough to embrace all things that exist, and includes matter, spirit, and life. Webster says, "Substance in a general sense, means being; something existing by itself; that which really is or exists; equally applicable to spirit or matter."

Spirit is distinct from matter and life. Life is distinct from matter and spirit. Why do I assert this?? Because life is endowed with consciousness, and matter and spirit are not. Paul was right when he said, "There is a natural (material) body, and there is a spiritual body." II. Cor. xv: 44.

Matter may be defined as the inactive substance of space; spirit as the active substance of space; and life as the conscious substance of space.

Our material body is like the steel bar—it holds the spiritual body. It is the spiritual body that acts and by reason of its action moves the inert, material body.

Again. The spiritual body is like the steel bar, for it holds the conscious life substance. The conscious life substance directs the spiritual body when and how to exert its activity, its force upon the material body.

I raise my hand to my head. The "I" represents the conscious life substance. The "I" or "conscious life substance" does not move or raise my hand to my head, for the reason that life can not come in contact with matter; but it has a servant that it can come in contact with, and that servant is my spiritual body; and my spiritual body can come in contact with my material body. It is my spiritual arm and that raises my material arm and hand to my head.

Let us see if I am correct.

I—that is, my conscious life substance, put you into a hypnotic sleep or condition. What is hypnotic sleep? It is the breaking of the connection between the life substance and the spirit body. Now, instead of having your life substance coupled or connected with your spiritual body, I connect my life substance with it through my spirit body. And, behold, I suggest or command, and is my spiritual arm and hand that raises and moves your material body accordingly.

Let me illustrate: Here is a train of cars with the engine attached and the engineer in the cab holds the throttle lever. If he pulls the lever the train moves as he desires. He is not the force, however, that moves the train; but he can control and direct that force.

This train of cars in its completeness, with steam up and the engineer in the cab-house, fairly represents a human being. The engineer represents the "I" or life substance; the heat (which is spirit) separating and expanding the particles of water and steam, represents the spiritual body of the human being; and the engine and cars the material body of the human being.

I will now step into the cab-house and persuade the engineer to let go his hold of the throttle lever and allow me to take hold of it. Now I have the train hypnotized. The regular engineer has no power to move his train. In other words he has severed connection. His circuit is cut off.

This analogy holds good throughout all nature. Wherever matter is moved you may be certain that it occurs through the agency of spirit. It is the motive power of all space.

As spirit substance is the motive power of all space, so is the conscious life substance the directing and controlling power of all space. I mean by this that life is all the directing and controlling power there is in space.

Life and spirit and matter have ever existed and ever will exist. They cannot be created or annihilated. The relation that exists between them is what we call natural law, or nature's law. This law cannot be suspended or violated. Equal relations ever produce equal effects, or, in other words, like relations ever produce like effects.

B. F. SLITER.

Grand Rapids, Mich. Box 335.

LAW OF EVOLUTION.

Illustrations of Mental, Moral and Spiritual Dynamics.

Evolution is the law of progress. And if evolution is true of one thing, it is true of all things; true of the mental as well as the material. No one doubts for a moment that the mentality of man is growing, expanding, his intelligence constantly becoming broader and stronger, but a pessimistic view of the morality of man shows us that goodness and virtue do not keep pace with his wisdom.

The power of kings has receded, but the plutocracy of the gold power now wields the sword of oppression, and they play a winning game with the nation's bread against the helpless poor, and from the topmost round of the nation's ladder, to the pickers of the garbage pile, we find the same game played, and the poorer and weaker are always the losers.

Thieving and robbery have become a science, for stealing by strength of law is a theft, just as much as stealing by muscular strength; and he that steals a hundred thousand in a day by the manipulation of that wheel of fortune called the Board of Exchange is a thief just the same as he that puts his hand into his neighbor's pocket and takes a dollar therefrom; for each has taken unto himself that which was his brother's. And then as we glance at the social evil, the question is, is it getting less, or is it growing and spreading and fastening its fangs upon society from the highest unto the lowest? We find no difference in the amount of social impurities, in the different strata of society, the only difference is that the higher, the more deeply is it covered with society polish, silken and broadcloth veneering and gold gilding.

These things are not arguments but facts. And so as a pessimist, I sit down in despair and with bristling hair and blearing eyes I exclaim, "Civilization is a farce, and all leads unto iniquity."

But as a firm believer in the best ultimate good, I know that the iniquity of the human heart is being manifested in its acts to-day as never before; as also, is the story of man's life, and a record of his thoughts written upon the lineaments of his face. The time is nearly past when rascality and licentiousness can be hid by a sanctimonious garb. Why? Because it is the law that as a man progresses he must become spiritualized and every one shall know him for what he is. If every one's spiritual nature were developed they could read their associates as easily as a printed page. Proof: A sensitive, a medium of to-day, can read the inmost secrets of his companions. And if there is a stumbling-block before you, a chasm in the highway, or pitfalls of any kind, we must first know they are there, before they can be removed.

Give to the world the knowledge of a wrong, of any evil system, and prove the source from whence it came; and the world (or the inhabitants thereof) will right it, for the world (or the inhabitants thereof) is God.

Oh! ye would-be reformers! Spend not your time in the cure, but dig to the bottom of the iniquitous pit—prove that it is there and how it came there.

Uncover wickedness and shame everywhere—in the political, the religious and the social circle. Shake it abroad before the eyes of man, and let its stench defile the air. And never you fear about the how of reformation, for the inherent good, the divinity of man will rise and from out the scums of pollution will come purity. And the deeper and blacker the pollution, the purer and brighter the result.

Just as the beautiful, pure water lily that rests upon the breast of the lake, making glad the very air itself, has its source in the murky mud beneath, and the deeper mud, the more filth there is, the larger, the brighter, the purer the lily.

MRS. E. M. HULL.

According to Blair, the first alphabet was invented by Memnon, King of Egypt, about 1822 B. C.

CONSUMPTION

TO THE EDITOR: I have an absolute Cure for CONSUMPTION and all Bronchial, Throat and Lung Troubles, and all conditions of Wasting Away. By its timely use thousands of apparently hopeless cases have been permanently cured.

So proof-positive am I of its power to cure, I will send FREE to anyone afflicted, THREE BOTTLES of my Newly Discovered Remedies, upon receipt of Express and Postoffice address.

Always sincerely yours,

T. A. SLOCUM, M.C., 183 Pearl St., New York.

When writing the Doctor, please mention this paper.

BIBLE SPIRITUALISM.

A Succinct Resume of Scripture Evidences of Spiritualism.

A Friendly Letter to a Baptist Brother.

Mr. J. C.—Dear Sir:—Your favor of recent date received and highly appreciated. You refer to many facts which I recognize to be true, but I don't know that I construe them as you do. I don't object to facts from the Bible, but I want all the facts before forming an opinion.

Let me call your attention to a few Bible statements. Beginning with the advent of the Christian dispensation, I notice that Joseph was informed in a dream of Mary's conception. The wise men in the East saw a star and had its signification explained to them by spirits or angels, and after they visited Christ they were warned in a dream to not report to Herod, but to depart by another way. Again we find Joseph warned a second time in a dream to take the child to Egypt; and after the death of Herod, Joseph was warned the third time to return with the child to Judea.

Do you think the angels ever appeared to people in dreams? They certainly did in those days. Has God lost his power, or man his capacity for dreaming? If so, when did this occur?

I could refer to other dreams, before and since that time, which had their signification, but think this is sufficient to prove that the higher powers may sometimes impress us in dreams. Did you ever have a dream that impressed you notwithstanding your persistent efforts to cast it off?

Do you mean by rejecting Spiritualism to reject everything beyond this material body? How about the spirit that materialized in the form of a dove and talked in an audible voice at Christ's baptism? Can spirits assume different forms? Also the spirit that impressed or led Christ into the wilderness, and on the Mount of Transfiguration Moses and Elias materialized, and they had never been resurrected—for Christ was to be the first resurrection.

You will find the old Bible full of materialized angels and spirits, and before Christ's ascension he materialized in different forms; and later we find that spirits materialized and appeared to the apostles in different forms. They visited the disciples in prison, broke off their shackles and opened the prison doors. They appeared to Saul on his way to Damascus and spoke with an audible voice. Is not this sufficient on materializing before and after Christ?

When did materialization cease—or has it ceased? I read of it occasionally now, and that is the only evidence I have of it in those days.

Now, concerning the phenomena of the early Christian period, it seems to have been about the same that had been practiced from the earliest ages of which we have any record up to that time. Christ and his followers were able to cure all manner of disease, talk in unknown tongues, cast out unclean spirits, etc. This they did by command and by laying on of hands and in various other ways. We admit that the disciples failed on some occasions, but when they carried the matter to Christ, he told them that the conditions were not sufficient, that this kind of spirits could only be cast out by fasting and prayer. And this is not all—others who were not followers of Christ did the same thing, which induced Christ to say: "If I cast out devils by Beelzebub, the prince of devils, by whom do your sons cast them out?" And on one occasion the disciples reported to Christ that they had found others who were not his followers casting out devils, and that they forbade them. Christ said: "Forbid them not, for a man that can cast out devils in my name is not a man that can speak lightly of me."

Now, I would ask, were these dreams and materializations, and other wonderful works done in accordance with natural law, or were God's laws violated to produce these phenomena? You would certainly not charge God with violating his own laws. Then have Nature's laws changed since then?

When Christ had fulfilled his mission in the flesh, and was giving his last commands to his disciples, he said: "These signs shall follow them that believe: In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents, and if they drink any deadly thing it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover. Verily, verily I say unto you, he that believeth on me, the works that I do he shall do also, and greater works than these shall he do." Now I ask, do you believe this?

Did he mean what he said? If so, where are the people that do these things? It is claimed that they are being done all over this country. Why may we not do them? Do we not ask aright, or do we not pray aright? Christ instructed us to enter our closets and pray in secret. Why would not his way be as good now as the modern praying-bee? May we not depend too much on the church? Will not many come from the East and the West and sit down in our Father's kingdom?—and we understand that the kingdom is a spiritual one. When asked when the kingdom of God should come, Christ said: "The kingdom of God cometh not with observation, for behold the kingdom of God is within you." Not a place, but a condition. Then how shall we enter that condition or kingdom? "Flesh and blood cannot enter the kingdom." Then must we leave this flesh and blood out? Certainly. "That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the spirit is spirit, not flesh and spirit both. When you get in the spirit condition or kingdom you will realize that death is only a new birth. Thus death is swallowed up in victory. "O, Death, where is thy sting? O, Grave, where is thy victory? But you may have the spiritual strength of the inner man or ego renewed by spiritual communion, and the oftener the better.

This new birth changes death into a continuity of life. Hence no man is dead, nor will any die. When Moses stood before the burning bush, God said: "I am the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob." Christ refers to this passage and repeats it to prove that Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were not dead, for he says: "God is not the God of the dead, but the God of the living." Then these good old patriarchs were not dead, but were in a spiritual condition, and could have materialized at any time, like old Moses and Elias did at the transfiguration, or like old Samuel did when the lady (witch) of Endor held a materializing seance for King Saul. In fact, every one we have heard from seems to have been very much alike. Why, then, should we differ from others?

Now, if the Bible proves anything, it proves that those who have passed through the change called death are not dead, but have life more abundantly. Then shall we remain in the spirit-world just as born into it. All nature suggests evolution. Shall we say, then, that the spirit of man has reached its final goal? That there it is to remain forever in a state of idleness?

If we have a reward, in what will it consist? Will there be no progression there? If everything is now and always has been a monotonous fixture there, why did Christ go to prepare us a place? And if Sodom and Gomorrah are already eternally damned, how can it be more tolerable for them in the judgment than for Chorazin and Bethsaida? We only note a sin that cannot be forgiven either in this world or the world to come, and that is sinning against the Holy Ghost; and that particular sin I will not be accountable for, for I am ignorant of what it is.

The tolerable chance of Sodom and Gomorrah in the judgment, and the idea of forgiveness in the world to come suggest to my mind evolution.

By examining the Acts of the Apostles, we find that on the day of Pentecost they spoke in different languages, without having previously studied them, and that the prophets were not only until John, but they continued in the church after Christ's ascension. See Acts xi:27 and Acts xiii:1.

In Paul's letter to the Corinthians, chapters xii and xiv, he writes concerning the spiritual gifts that they are practicing down at Corinth, the gifts of prophecy, healing, discerning of spirits, working miracles, speaking in tongues, and the interpretation of tongues. He recommends them to cultivate the gift of prophecy and the discerning of spirits as it was more edifying to the church, and if one unlearned or an unbeliever comes in and has the secrets of his heart told him, he is more apt to be convinced. Is not this spiritual doctrine?

Why, my dear sir, Paul was held in such esteem as a healer, that handkerchiefs were sent out from his body to the sick, and they were healed—something like Spiritualists do at the present day. Yours very truly,

Graham, Tex. C. P. BENSON.

SPIRITS OF ANIMALS.

Are They Immortal?—Some Very Striking Experiences.

To the Editor:—Seeing by Dr. J. M. Peebles' "Pen Flashes" that he and many others do not believe that animals have an existence in the spirit world, I would like to give the many readers of your paper an experience, as told me, by an old gentleman, which he had when a boy.

I have every reason to believe he told me the truth, as he never told me one untruth in these many years of our acquaintance.

When he was a boy, about twelve years of age, he lived with his parents near Cincinnati. One night he and his father were returning home from a neighbor's, about dusk, and as they neared where the road forked a large dog ran in front of them, and his father kicked at it, and as he did so he was astonished to find his boot pass through the air, as the dog had vanished.

Now what was it if not the spirit of a dog? The church people would say, perhaps, it was the Devil—as they think he can take on any form he chooses, but Spiritualists should be more reasonable.

I will give another experience, of a lady who is now in the spirit-world. Her daughter, then fourteen years of age, was a trance medium. A spirit friend had two lions, which she often brought with her, and the lady told me she often saw them. One day she had to attend to some business for her husband, and her daughter accompanied her. The people upon whom they were to call lived in a mansion around which was a beautiful yard surrounded by a stone and iron fence. The people had a very vicious dog, and no person could enter the yard without danger of being attacked and bitten by the savage animal, unless he was chained to his kennel. On this day the dog was unchained and in the front part of the yard. As the lady and daughter approached the gate the daughter was entranced and she spoke to the mother saying; "Fear not; open the gate and go in, for the lions are with you." She opened the gate and entered. The dog immediately started toward them, he had taken but a few steps when he suddenly stopped, turned about, and with a terrible howl fled with all his might around the mansion.

The people in the house, hearing the howl of the dog, came rushing out greatly excited. The dog had disappeared, but there stood the lady and her daughter in front of the porch. They immediately inquired if the dog had attacked them. The lady said no, but related the circumstances of the two lions being with her as a guard. The people would not believe, but went in search of the dog, and he was found in his kennel at the back part of the yard, doubled up and trembling like an aspen.

Now I would like to ask Dr. Peebles for an explanation.

Recollect, Mr. Editor, there is more in our philosophy and science than Dr. Peebles or those whom he has mentioned dream of.

I will give you one more. Near the beautiful city of R— lived a gentleman named Capt. Loucks. He had a large ranch and a beautiful home. He was a very agreeable and sociable man and his hired help always sat at the same table with himself and family.

The old gentleman (to whom I have referred above) one day with his wife and daughter called upon Capt. Loucks and his family. The Captain was an outspoken materialist and my old friend with the Captain were soon discussing the pros and cons of futurity. The dinner hour came and some twenty persons were seated around the table in the large dining-room, and as it was in the balmy month of June the windows were all open, the day being bright and beautiful. In the center of the table was a silver butter-bowl with a raised arch handle and under this the semblance of a maltese cross. The company were very agreeable, harmonious and sociable. All at once to the surprise of the company a beautiful canary bird came flitting apparently from the ceiling and perched itself underneath the silver bowl. All saw it, and Capt. Loucks suddenly spoke up and said: "That is my poor dead wife's canary bird Tommy." At this the bird chirped and spreading its little wings flew upward toward the ceiling and vanished.

Capt. Loucks became a Spiritualist and to the day of his death believed in progression and Spiritualism.

I will ask: Are principles eternal? and if so, why may not man have use for canary birds in the spirit-world as well as here?

If we are to judge by principle, then there is many an animal with four legs that is possessed of more principle than scores of animals that I know of that are in possession of but two legs.

A man's soul is only immortal when it has the necessary habiliments to make it so.

There are to be found many spiritual monstrosities on the spirit side of life, and they are generally found to be of the genus homo.

MACIE B. MILLER.

There are many alphabets syllabic in character, having a separate sign for every syllable in the language.

The To-Morrow of Death

...OR THE...

Future Life According to Science.

BY LOUIS FIGUIER.

TRANSLATED FROM THE FRENCH BY S. R. CROCKER.

A VERY FASCINATING WORK.

This fine volume might well have been entitled Spiritualism Demonstrated by Science. It is written in that peculiar interesting style in which French writers excel when they would popularize scientific subjects in adaptation to the needs of the general reader. The author is not a Spiritualist—he even mentions Spiritualists as "devotees of a new superstition," etc., etc., in which he manifests the unanimus of the "scientific class," yet he says again: "There is a true and respectable idea in Spiritualism," and regards as proved "the fact of communication between superhumans and the inhabitants of Earth;" and he goes on to relate instances of fact in evidence. There is, to a Spiritualist, a manifest discrepancy in the author's ideas, but the well-read mind will readily select and arrange the pros and cons, and out of the whole will find not only good mental culture, but much valuable information. The author holds the theory of reincarnation. Price $1.50. For sale at this office.

MAN

—IN THE—

PAST, PRESENT, AND FUTURE

A POPULAR ACCOUNT OF

Results of recent scientific research regarding the origin, position and prospects of mankind. From the German of

DR. LUDWIG BÜCHNER,

Author of "Force and Matter," Essays on Nature and Science," "Physiological Pictures," "Six Lectures on Darwin," Etc.

"The great mystery of existence consists in perpetual and uninterrupted change. Everything is immortal and indestructible—the smallest worm as well as the most enormous of the celestial bodies,—the sand grain or the water drop as well as the highest being in creation, man and his thoughts. Only the forms in which being manifests itself are changing; but Being itself remains eternally the same and imperishable. When we die we do not lose ourselves, but only our personal consciousness. We live on in nature, in our race, in our children, in our deeds, in our thoughts—in short, in the entire material and physical contribution which, during our short personal existence, we have furnished to the subsistence of mankind and of nature in general."—Buechner.

One vol., post 8vo., about 350 pages, vellum cloth, $1.

Mahomet, the Illustrious.

BY GODFREY HIGGINS, ESQ.

This work is one of the Library of Liberal Classics No author was better qualified to write an impartial and honest life of Mahomet than Godfrey Higgins, and this volume is intensely interesting. It should be read in conjunction with Gibbon's work. For sale at this office. Price, 25 cents.

HISTORY OF ATHARAEL,

LIFE IN THE STONE AGE. THE history of Atharael, Chief Priest of a Band of Aryans. This pamphlet, containing 91 pages, was written through the mediumship of U. G. Figley, and is intensely interesting. Price 30 cents. For sale at this office.

THE REAL ISSUE.

By MOSES HULL. A compound of the two pamphlets, "The Irrepressible Conflict," and "Your Answer or Your Life;" with important additions, making a book of 160 pages all for 25 cents. This book contains statistics, facts and documents, on the tendencies of the times, that every one should have. For sale at this office.

Why She Became a Spiritualist.

Twelve lectures. By Abby A. Judson. This book should be read by every Spiritualist. Price $1.00; postage 10 cents.

Origin, Development and Destiny of Man.

A Scientific and Philosophical Treatise, by Thos. P. Fletcher.

CONTENTS: The Beginnings; Fundamental Principles; Formation of Constellations, Systems, Suns, Planets and Satellites. The Origin of Meteors and Comets; The Organic Kingdom; The Origin of Man—His Attributes and Powers; The Soul—How it Receives and Imparts Knowledge; How the Soul Receives Its Highest Impressions; The Record Book, or The Heavenly Ether; How to Cultivate the Sixth Sense; The Finer or Spiritual Body; Growth and Degeneration; Morality; Spiritualism Proved by the Bible; The Bible and Christ; The Summary: "What Must We Do to Be Saved." For sale at this office.

Price, Cloth, $1.25. Paper, 50c

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE,

—OR—

THREE-FOLD POWER OF SEX.

BY LOIS WAISBROOKER.

This is one of the author's most useful and instructive books. This work should be read by every man and woman. Price, 50 cents. For sale at this office.

AN EXCELLENT WORK.

The Rationale of Mesmerism

BY A. P. SINNETT.

This excellent work treats of the following subjects:

I. Old and New Theories.
II. The Mesmeric Force.
III. The Real Literature of Mesmerism.
IV. Side-Lights of Mesmeric Phenomena.
V. Curative Mesmerism.
VI. Anæsthetic Effects and Rigidity.
VII. The Nature of Sensitiveness.
VIII. Clairvoyance.
IX. Mesmeric Practice.

The price of this admirable work is $1.25. All book advertised in THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER are

For sale at this office.

ATLANTIS.

The Antediluvian World. Illustrated.

BY IGNATIUS DONNELLY.

THE QUESTION OF A ONCE-INHABITED but now submerged part of this globe known as Atlantis, is one of much interest. The data gathered from ancient and modern sources—from classical authors—from traditions, legends and mythologies; from the deep sea investigations of modern scientists and antiquarian researches in the mounds and the ruins of ancient cities found on the American continent—are here arranged in compact, literary form, in this very interesting volume. The book possesses especial interest to Spiritualists because of its affording corroborative evidence of the genuineness and truth of the statements purporting to be given by spirits of ancient Atlantians concerning the fact of an Atlantis and a great people of the name, once existing on this earth. For sale at this office. Price 2.00.

EDITH BRAMLEY'S VISION.

A thrilling appeal to all who are interested in learning how the great forces of the Roman Catholic Church are seeking to control all movements pertaining to human progress that are in opposition to their dogmatic religious teachings. Price 15 cents. For sale at this office.

COMMON SENSE.

By Thomas Paine. A Revolutionary pamphlet, addressed to the inhabitants of America in 1776, with explanatory notice by an English author. Paper 15 cents.

TREE AND SERPENT WORSHIP

By A. S. Hudson, M.D. Price, 15 cents.

THOMAS PAINE'S

Examination of the Prophecies

A consideration of the passages in the New Testament, quoted from the Old, and called Prophecies Concerning Jesus Christ. Price 15 cents.

PULPIT, PEW AND CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener. One of her brightest, wittiest and strongest lectures against the Bible. Every woman should read it and know her friends and enemies. Price 10 cents.

THE KORAN.

Commonly called the "Alkoran of Mohammed" Translated into English from the original Arabic, with explanatory notes taken from the most approved commentators. With a preliminary discourse by Geo. Sale. Price, cloth, $1.00. For sale at this office.

An Interesting Page of Varied Thought.

MUSIC AND SONG.

Music Books and Song Books and Their Uses.

Both Kinds Ate Useful by Adaptation.

The aim of this article is to make more clear the distinctive difference between music and song, with their mode of construction and the adaptability of each to our song service. In every direction is felt the need of a greater degree of spirituality of showing the world that Spiritualism is a religion as well as a philosophy; and to make us more devotional and aspirational the workers on the spirit side of life are now making their best endeavor.

This is nowhere shown more than in the line of music for public, seance and home uses. These of the beyond realize that teaching and demonstration must go hand in hand, and that, to harmonize both, music must play its magic part. Also that in doing so, the latter shall also be a great teacher of our truths, concentrated, sweetened and made effective by the poet's art; so that, while philosophy unlocks the prison of ignorance with the key of oratory, music like an angel's hand reaches down its caress to the bruised and wounded heart pleading for our gospel's consolation.

Musicians tell me it is much the practice of writers to fancy some verse they see, and compose the melody to fit. That this method is wrong is readily seen. The melody is fixed, while the verse changes: portions of the former may be sad and plaintive—again it rises in its exultation, and it may end in a cry of triumph. How natural to make the words and ideas correspond with these changes!

But if this is reversed, every verse, to make adaptation, must require a new melody. Here is seen the appropriateness of a method which can be illustrated in a limited way from "Old Melodies Spiritualized," which is a song book—not a music book. Observe the change from the sweetly plaintive to triumphant joy in the third line of the four verses of "Peace, a Savior," corresponding with the air, "Last Rose of Summer." Read "Invocation" to "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep;" The wife's heart-break to "Jeannette and Jeannot." The Funeral Hymn, Maternal Love, to "Suwanee River;" All will know," to "Old Black Joe." Behold the forms come and go in "Materialization"—air:" Where the roses ne'er shall wither;" "No fear of death," to "Nellie Gray;" Our religion, to "Bratle Street." The world of phenomena, to "Old Oaken Bucket." "The lost are found," and "Now we know" are as ringingly expressive as any songs that have been unversally sung. How well fitted are "The re-discovered land," and "Immortal life," to the "Star Spangled Banner" and the "Marseilles Hymn." Where are words like "The two forces" for "Storm the Fort?" or "Spirit visitants" for "Oft in the still night?" Really there is no place to stop, but this must pass.

It seems a necessity to tell something of this song book, its conception and production. We had failed to make use of the much and so good writers had given us. We did not agree as to what we should use. Most localities lacked organization and needed something to sing at sight, without training. In view of this, noble efforts were made with words to old hymns. These failed for general use, through the dislike of our people to use music which made the service of those who had so bitterly antagonized us; and because their popularity was gained more from their teaching theological falsehood than from their excellence.

One method remained comparatively untried: To use secular in place of sacred music. These contain the finest melodies man's musical genius has conceived. For this reason they have been seized by the material world to help build success. They have been avoided by the religious world, so-called, for the reason that the I-am-holier-than-thou spirit was so strong to render such use practicable.

The idea of "Old Melodies Spiritualized" is to utilize these in the interest of the great nineteenth-century revelation; and the obstacle to their use seems to be the same as has debarred our Christian friends from their use; for the excuse has been made of inappropriateness, and assertion that words cannot be adapted to such for our use.

Now, the claim I make is not that they are as appropriate, but that they are more so; and it is because of their superiority that this collection is published. As to the why of this excellence, the melodies themselves are the best. J. J. Watson has told the readers of The Progressive Thinker that but few, very few airs have immortalized themselves through their excellence, and all who know of musical composition are aware of the using over and interweaving the strains of these to make popular the present day creations in both song and opera. And to this excellence is added the proper construction of fitting the words to the melody.

The worry of the Christian about things profaned by the world's use comes to some of us from the use of negro melodies. Do the objectors know that these productions of Stephen Foster are in no case the results of negro genius? This great musician whose work will live forever, had the most profound love for humanity. The colored man was then the oppressed: his heart went out in sympathy and he made these songs to lighten the sorrows of the slave.

Yet while we claim that our foundation is a love for humanity, it seems we can be ashamed of Stephen Foster's exquisite musical creations because those for whom they were composed made them household airs. And our objectors voice the opinion that new words cannot be successfully adapted to old tunes. The incorrectness of this is proven, by demonstration actually made every Sunday before what is known as the Band of Harmony in this city, by a male quartette of trained singers, with lady pianist, who from singing the average song service of the day, here enter into their work from the fascination which goes with the superiority of the old melodies, with a zest and interest surprising to see, and resulting in a rendering that deeply impresses all who hear. Those who have extensively heard society and camp singing cannot say too much in praise of it; so that I cannot but think truth would be the gainer if experiment took the place of opinion.

There are two modes of vocalizing—by note and by ear. A musician desires excellence in music as a science. As a lover of truth I desire the most possible for my truth in song. I love the exactness of harmonies, but I love truth more; the latter being paramount to all else. Music by note is rigid in regard to time and all that pertains to it as written. Articulation must be somewhat defective, and little attention can be given to the utterance as punctuated, the words being subordinate. In music by ear the truth, principle, sentiment or idea is predominant, to which the music is so fitted or sung as to give the former the greatest power and effect. Music by ear is a form of elocution by which extraordinary results are attained in appeals to the intelligence and especially to the emotions of the hearer.

With this explanation of the office of music in our song service, it will be plain that music books are designed for those who sing by musical science, and that song books are made for those who sing by ear. Where organizations exist, with experts in this science for choirs, music books for the popular taste are a necessity. But a large portion of the field is without organization or systematized effort. Here the song book is the one for those with voices who sing by ear.

I am also made to appear as offering songs (not music, I use the words always to represent words, not notes) which are entirely suitable for entertainments for use in public meetings. I have advertised the collection as containing songs for several uses, presumably selected for the occasion. What might be entirely appropriate for an entertainment might not be in good taste for a lecture, while the seance-room, public or private circle, each makes its own demands for words and thought corresponding.

In closing let me say I do not share the prevailing opinion of writers, that a book can be made which will suit all and be universally used. There are insurmountable difficulties to unanimity of action, which space does not allow mention of here. For this reason and that societies may have opportunity to fully investigate all that has been done to supply a song service, I wish editors of all our spiritual papers would print a list of all the publications—both music and song books—that have been made, with price and name of publisher, as a help to all who are seeking for the best music as an ally to our blessed gospel of consolation.

H. W. BOOZER.
Grand Rapids, Mich.

A LUCID STATEMENT.

PRESIDENT BARRETT EXPLAINS CERTAIN MATTERS PERTAINING TO RAILROADS—"EQUAL RIGHTS FOR ALL, AND SPECIAL PRIVILEGES TO NONE," IS HIS MOTTO.

To the Editor:—"One Interested," in the issue of The Progressive Thinker of January 23d, asks Brother Hudson Tuttle how President Barrett can compel the various railroads to do justice to the Spiritualists speakers in the matter of half rates. Brother Tuttle generously turns the questioner over to me with the request that I furnish the desired information.

Does not Brother Tuttle realize, also his interrogator, that the Inter-State Commerce Law expressly provides that no discrimination shall be made in favor of any particular party in the matter of reduced railroad fares? Such is the fact, and because of that fact the Spiritualists have a clear case against the several railroads for unjust discrimination against the speakers upon the Spiritualist platform. I want to be rightly understood in this matter. I am opposed to half rates for all ministers, nuns, Y. M. C. A. Presidents, and other recipients of such favors, be they Catholics or Protestants in their religious beliefs. This will include Spiritualist speakers as well as those of other denominations. "Equal rights for all and special privileges to none," is my motto. Why, then, should our Spiritualists be alone excluded from the privileges granted to others who are no more entitled to them than our speakers are? By taking a case before the Inter-State Commerce Commission, we can prove unjust discrimination, and obtain a decision in our favor. If the railroads still ignore our claims, and violate the law as interpreted by the court, we can take the case to the highest judicial tribunal in the land for adjudication. We can continue this line of work, until the several Passenger Associations either do away with half-rate privileges voluntarily, or the law-making bodies of the land do so for them. In brief, we can agitate this question, and keep the railroad officials constantly aware of our existence, until they will be glad to do us justice one way or the other.

I note, with extreme pleasure, the reference to my call for contributions to the N. S. A. treasury to the extent of five or ten thousand dollars for the purpose of doing a certain kind of work. "One Interested" kindly infers that I wish that money for the purpose of testing the half-rate question. Such an inference betokens great wisdom, and is in keeping with many similar wise expressions from others in the past few years. If "One Interested" will re-read my article, he will see that I do not mean the half-rate question alone. I referred to the Seybert will in special terms and wish to see that will tested in the courts of the land. I believe that Mr. Seybert's bequest has been willfully perverted from the intent and purpose for which he generously designed it. Through this perversion, "One Interested," if he is a Spiritualist has been injured. Mr. Seybert designed his bequest to the upbuilding of Spiritualism in the world, hence every Spiritualist on the globe was a Seybert beneficiary, and is entitled to his rights under the law. These rights have been flagrantly violated, and the N. S. A. seeks redress. In this laudable work, it asks and has the right to expect the co-operation of every true Spiritualist on the earth.

The question of half-rates is but a side issue as compared with the Seybert will, yet both trend in the same direction—the deprivation of the Spiritualists of America of their legal and constitutional rights. We have a remedy at hand, if we will but use it. My former letter outlined the course of action necessary, and I can but repeat the same here. Let one thousand others join me in giving ten dollars each to the N. S. A., and the half-rate question, the Seybert will, and all other questions affecting the rights of Spiritualists can be determined by the courts of our nation in a very short time. My ten dollars will be ready, in fact, are waiting responses from such philanthropists as "One Interested," and other workers, in one of the few practical attempts to do something to benefit the cause of Spiritualism. Come forward, my friends, and prove your Spiritualism by your devotion to it in a financial way, as well as in quizzical, and satirical reflections upon those who are honestly trying to do what you have so long left undone.

H. D. BARRETT.

"Religious and Theological Works of Thomas Paine." Contains his celebrated "Age of Reason," and a number of letters and discourses on religious and theological subjects. Cloth binding, 430 pages. Price $1. For sale at this office.

NOT THE TRUE PROPHET

MOHAMMEDAN VIEW OF JESUS CHRIST AND OF CHRISTIANITY—ISSA BEN MIRJAM—THE MYSTERY AROUND THE LIFE OF JESUS STILL DEEPENING.

The following description of the legends and opinions of the Mohammedans is by a writer who has spent much time in Turkey:

The Mohammedans, says the writer, are true and zealous worshipers of Issa ben Mirjam, Jesus, the Son of Mary—and blasphemy against him is punished with thirty lashes. Numerous legends are related about him. One allegory tells the story of three men who walked a long distance across the country and on the way found a treasure, and resolved that one should take a little of it, go to the city and buy meat for their dinner. This was done. But the man who was sent to the city poisoned the meat that those who ate of it might die and he remain sole owner of the wealth. When he returned to his companions with the food they killed him in order not to be obliged to divide it into three portions, ate the poisoned meat and died.

"Thus the world serves all who seek its treasures," says Issa ben Mirjam.

The world came to Issa ben Mirjam in the form of an old woman, who wanted to marry, and Issa talked with her and asked her how many husbands she had had. "So many, master, that I could never number and name them." Issa ben Mirjam then asked: "Did these husbands die, or did they cast you off?" "They did not cast me off," the woman answered. "I myself strangled, murdered, crushed them."

"Then," answered Issa ben Mirjam, "I marvel that you obtained new lovers, since they saw how you treated the others."

Here is another legend: God wanted to give the world, which had fallen into misery and sin, a deliverer who, in love, wisdom and virtue, would illumine the dark path for mankind, to lead them from error into the right way. And God said to Gabriel: "Go down to the earth and see if thou canst find mortals who are worthy of a son who is to enlighten the world." And Gabriel did as God commanded. He searched the world from end to end till he found Jussuf and his wife Mirjam. When he told God of them the Lord gave him His commands.

That night Gabriel entered the house of Jussuf, where Mirjam lay asleep alone. Jussuf was not at home, for he worked in Nazareth from Sabbath to Sabbath. The angel Gabriel laid a rose which he had gathered in Paradise by Mirjam, and when she awoke from her slumber she found a beautiful boy at her side. "Christians," so say the Mohammedans, "pray to Issa ben Mirjam and celebrate the great prophet's birth as their highest festival; but those who call themselves by his name do not understand him, cannot correctly understand him, because he was a genuine Moslem, and therefore not akin to them, but a good oriental whom only an oriental can truly comprehend, interpret and follow. It is not difficult to obey his teachings, to live according to his will; a good man does so voluntarily.

"But to the Christians," so the Moslems say, "this is not a matter of course, for they act in all respects contrary to their own prophets, abandon and kill each other and hate those of a different faith." "This is unnatural," the Mohammedans say. "The Christians must have another prophet, a false one, besides Issa ben Mirjam. Allah knows who it is."

Issa ben Mirjam tells them: "But I say unto you that ye resist not evil, but if anyone smites thee on the right cheek turn to him the other also." "Did you ever see a Christian do so?" ask the Moslems. "Any Greek or Catholic Armenian? Or even an English missionary? Or the European ambassadors or consuls? No! Never! Not within the memory of man. Neither among us, nor in their own country. This must be because they do not obey Issa ben Mirjam, but the second, the false prophet, who teaches: Avenge every insult; avenge it doubly and trebly. Wash out every offense with blood! Your honor and your profit demand it. Require tenfold compensation for every insult. If it is not instantly granted send your warships to the cities on the seacoast and shatter and destroy everything as far as your marvelous guns will fire. For what else do you have them?"

"Issa ben Mirjam also says: "Love your enemies, do good to those who hate you and persecute you."

But the other, the false prophet, to whom the Christians listen, says: "To forgive is weakness; you must avenge and punish. Whoever forgives makes himself dishonorable, contemptible and ridiculous."

Issa ben Mirjam seeks the company of publicans and sinners because he has pity on them.

But the false prophet says: "Thrust the sinners from you, that you may not be defiled; repulse them utterly. Maintain your dignity. Woe betide him who has compassion on those who have once been led into any sin! Woe betide him who does not hold aloof, who does not behave arrogantly. He himself shall be numbered among the outcasts."

Issa says: "Behold the fowls of the air, they sow not, neither do they reap, yet your Heavenly Father feedeth them."

The false prophet, whom the Christians love and whom they obey, says: "What are you doing, you sluggards, you idlers! Go to work from morning till evening. You must cheat and toil to gather as much as possible. And the more you have the more you must try to get." Whoever has not been caught has people say of him, "He went through the world honestly! A self-made man! A man of honor! There is no higher goal!"

Yes, the Christians, it is true, call themselves by Issa's name, but only because their prophet has no good one which they could bear. They celebrate the day of Issa's birth because they do not exactly know, or will not confess, the origin of the other, the false prophet. On the one day, Christmas, on which the Christians celebrate the birth of the good oriental, Issa ben Mirjam, everything which the latter said and taught usually seems to revive. The noisy false prophet then keeps silent a few hours and Issa has his full power. But how different everything is at once in the villages, the cities and throughout the whole land. Everything seems changed, everyone wants to give and bestow. People become kind, gentle, loving to one another. The poor are remembered and sought. Many a man feels an impulse to forgive, and goes so far as to speak a kind word to his foe. All this happens during the few hours when Issa ben Mirjam is master in the land, speaks, and is obeyed. What a people the Christians would be if they did not have the other, the false prophet. They would then be almost as good as we ourselves!

"Talleyrand's Letter to the Pope" will be found especially interesting to all who would desire to make a study of Romanism and the Bible. The historic facts he states, and his keen, scathing review of Romish ideas and practices should be read by all. Sold at this office. Price 25 cents.

SOUL-GERM THEORY.

Some Thoughts to Pose the Philosophers.

An Object Lesson—Deductive Reasoning.

Deductive reasoning seems to prove that the advocacy of "soul-germs" emanating without selfhood and prior individuality, from a central source, is inadmissible in theory, and undoubtedly as vague in fact; and I will here endeavor to treat with comparative analogy instead of metaphor, although it adds strength and lustre to our language, while at times it borders on the "Latin masses" to hearers who know but the rudiments of the Anglo-Saxon; and I will give my individual ideas, and let them float or sink according to their worth.

1st. If the dual soul-germs emanated from a central source of life, and incarnated in physical forms, why do we find the mismating and inharmony in the great majority of marital relations here, if love attracts its corresponding love, and thought echoes thought?

2d. If these soul-germs were sent here into the physical forms, without individuality or selfhood, would they not enter the spirit-world devoid of the same? Or, in other words: If individualized existence commenced at conception, would it not end at death? But we have positive proof through all historic ages, and more especially for the last five decades that it does not.

3d. Where is the spirit who controls the media, or the mind who controls its subject, while exorcizing their power? Are they not within the physical organization?

4th. Supposing that "spirit" is the same in whatever organism it controls, and could control an organism already trained, could it manifest through the organs of a mute or an infant as well? If not, then we see that the spirit of a sage or a savage would be powerless, and we could but judge them by their works, irrespective of all former experiences.

5th. Why do we find from a certain parental stock such diversity in the minds of their offspring—some are bright, some aged, some dull, etc.,—if they were all equally endowed and from the same source?

6th. If an individual spirit who had passed through physical experiences, as is supposed of all those who communicate to mortals to-day, could control a medium at the age of twenty, why could it not take control of one at the age of ten, five, one, or at one minute old, and hold such control?

7th. If the theory of reincarnation is objectionable to some, we see a concurrent emergency even with the learned ones in therapeutics and physics, who feel themselves at times unable to cope with modern diseases, and renew their schooling and severe training often at an advanced age; then why should there not be need of earthly lessons for the wobbly Briton and the thousand of primitive tribes who once trod this earth in a barbaric state?

8th. Remembering that spirit (a truly individualized being) occupies no physical space, and loses no individuality, but wholly depends upon form to act through; then, if acting through an imperfect organism, its work will be correspondingly imperfect; if through the organism of a babe, it might be a babbling, incoherent sound; if through the most perfect form that physical life can furnish, we may expect grand possibilities, if such spirit is correspondingly aged in experience to master his advantages, considering surrounding conditions and exigencies appertaining.

In comparative analogy I find that a figtree will serve my purpose for an illustration; and remember that a positive and a negative is requisite in reproduction of the species throughout Nature's domain. Then, by being admitted, we have here the parental stock of an August figtree; and also, we will appropriate a tiny bud from an adjoining earlier figtree; and by inoculating this tiny scion into this parent stock, we will receive the fruit of said scion in kind, governed in part by climatic conditions and condition of the parent stock. The scion being the life or soul, it will act out its selfhood, subject to parental conditions and future care and training. The scion which we appropriated might have been immature (like an inexperienced soul), and it might have been the one most perfect on the tree (like an aged and experienced soul); but in either case, the life of the scion will prove its own selfhood if conditions and nourishments (parental nobility and health, and right training), are afforded it.

In the economy of nature we find that primitive tribes, physically weak infants and stunted forest growth are hourly crowded out of existence by stauncher and healthier descendants—the ranker trees and the people better adopted to the age. The stunted tree, the weakling babe and the primitive races may lose their identity, but their essence or soul never. The decay of the stunted forest will appear in the life of nobler trees, and in all justice the primitive races and the child who passed beyond the veil minus earth experience, must have an opportunity to learn by actual experience the life of that age. Again, as we have ascertained through spirit communion that the aged minds in Wisdom's spheres are the actual leaders who, in a great measure, shape the destiny of our planet; now, how would it be possible for them to be infallible guides if they had not passed through those different experiences? What would a man know of poverty if reared and petted in the lap of luxury? and what would any man know of the chemical laws governing, if he never had practical experience therein?

If the "soul-germ" theory is a fact, then according to statistics, upwards of thirty-five million souls are born on this planet every year; and if all the countless stars are suns, and each has a solar system with inhabited planets like our own, and the propagation was drawn from that central source of life, it would take more figures than were ever written, placing them one after another, to describe the amount. Now in Nature's vast storehouse, science finds no such an act as "creation;" and if the germ theorists intend to convey the idea that when spirits advance into sublimity they are swallowed up in that central source of life, robbed of their individuality, and sent another round, then where is the progress?

In daily life we often hear the expression, "If I had my life to live over again I would do differently." This is expressed after they, through experience, have learned a better way; and when men after having passed through life's vicissitudes make such expressions, then would it be improbable for more advanced spirits to wish and desire another experimental course on earth after they see what failures they made, and how much more useful their lives would be for their own progress as well as for the advancement of others? The thoughts of such probabilities are far grander to contemplate than the starting at nil, and ending in a sublime nothingness, as far as selfhood is concerned.

C. J. JOHNSON.
Pocatello, Idaho.

THOUGHT FLASHES.

(Continued from page 1.)

ingenious sophistry and whitewashed and gilded by the magic art of a most consummate enchantress and adventuress.

"As Madame Blavatsky is the oracle from whom this strange conglomerate of ideas has come, we may first question her reliability and veracity.

"As to her truthfulness, many of her best friends and followers and even her consociates in the fabrication of the system admit that she was a falsifier at times; and as to her reliability as a teacher, her books contain so many plagiarisms (over 2,000 in "Isis Unveiled" alone), so many forgeries and garbled quotations (at least 160 in "Isis Unveiled"), so many misstatements (at least 120 in regard to Hindooism and Sanskrit literature), and so many errors in regard to important subjects; as for instance, over sixty relating to Buddligion and literature, seventy-five regardligion anl literature, seventy-five regarding Christianity and the New Testament, thirty about the classics, twenty-five on Egyptology and twenty more relating to Persia and Zoroastrianism—so says Wm. Emmette Coleman—that altogether they prove her utterly unreliable.

"And as to her Mahatmas, undoubtedly they are myths. Sumangula, a chief priest of the Buddhists, declared his disbelief in their existence, to Moncure D. Conway. Sir Edwin Arnold, who conversed with many learned Pundits, found no proof of their existence. Sir W. W. Hunter says Koot Hoomi whom she (Mme. B.) claimed as her chief authority, is not a Sanskrit name or word. Originally she wrote it "Cotthume," a compound of Olcott and Hume, two of her consociates.

"Furthermore, Wm. Emmette Coleman, one of the ablest and most erudite of Oriental scholars in this country, says there is scarcely an item in the 1,500 pages of "Secret Doctrine" which he cannot point out in the published literature of the world, though she claims to have received it direct from Mahatmas, and he has traced their pretended teachings to the following sources, viz.: About one-fourth to Modern Spiritualism; one-third to Brahmanism and Buddhism; one-third to Paracelsus and Eliphas Levi; and the remainder to science, Gnosticism, Kabbalism, Neo-Platonism, Rosicrucianism, and other forms of mysticism. (Exit Mahatmas.)

"Again the Madame's authority is impeached by her many self-contradictions. In "Isis Unveiled" she says the "elementals" never evolve into men," while in the "Secret Doctrine" she says "they are all future men." O, Consistency, thy other name was not Blavatsky!"

Many other contradictions were cited in Dr. Clarke's discourse, but the one quoted should suffice here.

BLAVATSKY A BOGUS MATERIALIZING MEDIUM.

We admit that both Mr. Coleman and Dr. Clarke were rather severe in their estimate of Mme. Blavatsky, but in the light of the following corroborative letter by a lady who was in a position to know whereof she speaks, published in the Philosophical Journal of July 4, the charges seem to be well founded.

After a brief reference to our article in the journal, the writer says:

The statements regarding Mme. Blavatsky personally are confirmed by acquaintances who were on social terms with her when in New York.

Mrs. J. C. Hales, her son and his wife accompanied Mme Blavatsky to a materializing seance in Brooklyn, N. Y., where Mme Blavatsky officiated as the medium, calling forth spirits arrayed in fleshy integuments. She then was an avowed Spiritualist. Shortly after, she announced her Theosophical dogmas, entered upon an actual campaign denouncing Spiritualism and declared the impossibility of the return of the "dead." Olcott joined her.

William Fales, a young lawyer occupying rooms near Olcott, in the same building, conveyed to Olcott's room, on several occasions, "Mahatma" letters, which letters Olcott exhibited to other fellow occupants of the building, all of whom were let into the joke, and enjoyed it hugely. Olcott himself was made so happy that the joker left him undisturbed to the full enjoyment of his mysterious intercourse with the Great Unknown.

In Boston I heard Mrs. Besant and Claude Wright several times, Mr. Judge or The Great Master and several speakers of lesser magnitude. I read widely two years or more—one year Mme. Blavatsky's India Journal—and left it all for the plain, simple truths embodied in Spiritual Philosophy.

In the same city I heard Mr. Mazoomdar, a native of India and a delegate to the World's Religious Convocation. Speaking of the doctrine of re-incarnation, he said that no such dogma existed in India outside of an ancient belief that a wicked man at death became incarnated in that species of animals to which he most closely approximated in earth-life. It might be a tiger, a wolf, a serpent. That re-incarnation, as taught by Theosophy, was a myth, having no existence.

Mr. Mazoomdar further said that for many years he had spent six months of each year in the mountains of Thibet. He there had met saintly men and scholars, but had been unable to learn of the existence of a Mahatma.

Mr. Mazoomdar is widely known as an author and the head of a great religious movement in India, embracing the higher spiritual truths of Christianity.

Further, with respect to the doctrine of re-incarnation, from different sources and through varying channels, I am told by spiritual friends that re-incarnation finds no place in the spiritual economy.

COUNTERFEIT.

It would appear from this letter that the Madame attempted to counterfeit the phenomena of materialization, was caught and exposed by Spiritualists, and in revenge established a rival religion.

However, no harm has been done to Spiritualism, but on the contrary Theosophy has proved a valuable auxiliary to lead people gradually to the light, who might be blinded by the sudden glare of Spiritualism. The present speaker confesses that he was led to the Spiritual light by the circuitous route of Theosophy.

CONCLUSION.

Having delved deeply in all the great religions of the world for spiritual light, we were about to give up in despair, when we saw the first faint gleams of the full sun-burst of immortal day in Spiritualism.

Theosophy points for its authority to the crumbling ruins of the darkness of antiquity, or to mythical Mahatmas, contenting itself with the few gems that glitter in the mire of decaying ages.

Spiritualism also accepts those gems, but adds to them the breathing, burning inspirations and revelations of this "age of ages telling;" mingling the old truths of the past with the revealed truths of the present which are being daily demonstrated, and by the aid of clairvoyance, which should be the birthright of every child of earth, we behold that "old things are passed away, and a new heaven and a new earth" are revealed to us.

Instead of believing in dead astral shells floating around in interstellar space, Spiritualism demonstrates that "All the boundless universe is Life"—and that there is no death.

When Theosophy discards its Blavatskyan sophistries and Spiritualism discards its superficial crudities, then will the two blend together into one harmonious body that will constitute the religion of the future—a religion that will teach all mankind that they are brothers and sisters, thus relegating crime and poverty to the past and establishing a heaven upon earth.

With such a grand psychic religion and such harmonious conditions, angels could walk and talk with men as of yore; sickness, suffering and sorrow would pass away, and death would be but a calm repose from which we would awake in the Morning Land of Eternal Life.

A LIVELY GHOST.

To the Editor:—Some time ago Philadelphia Spiritualists were in a fever of righteous indignation at an edict sent forth by the city officials, spurred on by the clergy, that Spiritualism was to be stamped out—killed root and branch. The work was begun—the ax of justice (?) swung vigorously for a time and the chips flew in every direction.

Last Sunday being the first in the New Year, we were determined to take a look at the supposed corpse and see if it really was dead. In the course of the day we visited the three principal places of gathering in this City of Brotherly Love, and we want to say right here, friends, that if Spiritualism has been killed, it has resurrected the liveliest ghost we ever saw.

By virtue of its gray hairs and good deeds we will begin with the First Association of Spiritualists. This old (we had almost written ancient) society was organized and chartered away back in the morning of Spiritualism, when being a Spiritualist meant something more than dropping a ten-cent piece in the collection basket, listening to an eloquent lecture and going home with your head up and your soul fired with the consciousness that there are millions of Spiritualists in the United States, hundreds of flourishing societies and an N. S. A. located in the very center of the heart of liberty.

In those times it meant a species of martyrdom—a taking of (if not your life) at least your respectability, into your own hands. It meant social ostracism, business blight and numerous other inconveniences; and this first and oldest society in the country stands to-day crowned with the glory of triumph over the storms and reverses, the trials and difficulties that must be met at the outset of every new movement.

Upon reaching the hall of this association on Sunday evening, we found a splendid audience listening to a most eloquent discourse on the New Woman, by W. J. Colville, known not only in our country, but in foreign lands, as an author and speaker of wonderful ability and power. We were surprised at the great number of young people present, drinking in the truth as it fell from the lips of this inspired speaker.

Having satisfied ourselves that here, at least, Spiritualism was alive and vigorous, we hastened over to Brother Lock's Association, and found it literally jammed with people—old and young and middle-aged. Professor Lockwood, the eminent student of nature's forces, was demonstrating to his delighted audience the philosophy of corelations; and later on California's wonderful medium, Mrs. Maggie Waite, gave indisputable evidence of the truth that we live as individual identities after the chemical change called death.

In the afternoon we visited Columbia Hall, in the upper part of the city, where the Spiritual Association has met for the last three years. There we found that charming lady, Mrs. A. C. Barry, as speaker of the day. Her New Year's address, "The Old and the New in Religion" seemed to go right to the hearts as well as the understanding of that fine, intelligent audience, while the eager faces and beaming eyes gave evidence of the fact that, if they never thought so before, they were now convinced that Spiritualism was the highest epitome of all that was good, beautiful, practical and worthy man's attention in this age that demands that religion shall be scientific rather than theoretic.

No, friends, Spiritualism is not dead in Philadelphia or elsewhere. It is alive. It is spirit. It comes from God, and you cannot kill God. Priests may howl, Legislators may enact laws, but in vain; and to quote the words of our talented sister: "The masses are calling for more light, and light is coming, it is here. This light of the spiritual phenomena and philosophy is stealing in through the stained glass windows of the churches and making its silent but potent influence felt right in the congregation, and the time is coming when the churches will be obliged either to accept this spiritual gospel and preach it from the pulpit or close their doors forever. The world is moving onward according to the law of progress, and all men in time will arise in recognition of laws and relations higher than those recognized by the multitudes in the past." Amen and so be it.

PHILADELPHIA.

VERY SIGNIFICANT.

The Progressive Thinker leads. It publishes more reading matter than any other dollar Spiritualist paper on this green earth. It was the only Spiritualist paper that had enterprise enough to publish President Barrett's address before the National Convention at Washington. It covered three pages of the paper. It now proposes to send out 1,000,000 copies of the paper containing his address.

Read the announcement on fifth page, headed "Fifteen Cents," for particulars.

"Cosmian Hymn Book." A collection of original and selected hymns, for liberal and ethical societies, for schools and the home; compiled by L. K. Washburn. This volume meets a public want. It comprises 258 choice selections of poetry and music, embodying the highest moral sentiment, and free from all sectarianism. Price, 50 cents. For sale at this office.

"The Gospel of Buddha, According to Old Records." Told by Paul Carus. This book is heartily commended to students of the science of religions, and to all who would gain a fair conception of Buddhism in its spirit and living principles. Spiritualist or Christian can scarcely read it without spiritual profit. Price $1. For sale at this office.

"The Occult Forces of Sex." By Lois Waisbrooker. Three pamphlets are embodied in this volume, in which questions of great importance to the race are discussed from the standpoint of an advanced social reformer. Price 50 cents.

"Social Upbuilding, Including Co-operative Systems and the Happiness and Ennoblement of Humanity." By E. D. Babbitt, LL. D., M.D. This comprises the last part of Human Culture and Cure. Paper cover, 15 cents. For sale at this office.

THE PSYCHOGRAPH
—OR—
DIAL PLANCHETTE.

This instrument is substantially the same as that employed by Prof. Hare in his early investigations. In its improved form it has been before the public for more than seven years, and in the hands of thousands of persons has proved its superiority over the Planchette, and all other instruments which have been brought out in imitation, both in regard to certainty and correctness of the communications received by its aid, and as a means or developing mediumship.

Do you wish to investigate Spiritualism?
Do you wish to develop Mediumship?
Do you desire to receive Communications?

The Psychograph is an invaluable assistant. A pamphlet with full directions for the Formation of Circles and Cultivation of Mediumship

with every instrument. Many who were not aware of their mediumistic gift, have, after a few sittings, been able to receive delightful messages. A volume might be filled with commendatory letters. Many who began with it as an amusing toy, found that the intelligence controlling it knew more than themselves, and became converts to Spiritualism.

Capt. D. B. Edwards, Orient, N. Y., writes: "I had communications (by the Psychograph) from many other friends, even from old settlers whose gravestones are moss-grown in the old yard. They have been highly satisfactory, and proved to me that Spiritualism is indeed true, and the communications have given my heart the greatest comfort in the severest loss I have had of son, daughter, and their mother."

Dr. Eugene Crowell, whose writings have made his name familiar to those interested in psychic matters, writes as follows: "I am much pleased with the Psychograph. It is very simple in principle and construction, and I am sure must be far more sensitive to spiritual power than the one now in use. I believe it will generally supersede the latter when its superior merits become known."

Securely packed, and sent postage paid from the manufacturer, for $1.00. Address:

HUDSON TUTTLE,
Berlin Heights, Ohio.

HERESY,
...OR...
LED TO THE LIGHT.

A Thrilling, Psychological Story of Evangelization and Free Thought. It is to Protestantism what the "Secrets of the Convent" is to Catholicism.

BY HUDSON TUTTLE.

The distinguished author, Hudson Tuttle, requires no introduction to the readers of The Progressive Thinker, but the following headings of chapters will show them what they may expect from the book:

Contents:—An Idyl—Fordham—Building the Church—The Evangelist—Blood—The Saloon—The Lost Daughter—Law—The Harvest of Souls—Jane Grey—The Mother of Cain—Evolution—Stella—The Cell—Death—A Step Forward—The Home Circle—The Double Role—Heresy—Annette—The Bank Robbery—Liberty—All is Well That Ends Well—The New Church—The New Way; Led to the Light.

Every chapter is devoted to one idea, and the whole presents so many tableaux moving onward to the climax. The fiendish career of the revivalist is contrasted with the character of the honest minister and the thinking agnostic. The steps by which a preacher emerges from the church, and the difficulties he meets are graphically presented. The new church and progressive lyceum evolved out of the old, form an interesting study to those seeking new methods.

It is a beautiful volume of 223 pages, and the price in accordance with our new departure, is 30 cents, postpaid, or five copies for $1.25. For sale at the office of The Progressive Thinker.

THE MEDIUMISTIC
Experiences of John Brown,
The Medium of the Rockies, with an introduction by
PROF. J. S. LOVELAND.

This book should be in the hands of every one interested in Spiritualism.

Chapter 1, Notoriety; Early Mediumship. Chapter 2, The Heavenly Mansion. Chapter 3, Removal to California; Return of His Guide. Chapter 4, Remarkable Tests. Chapter 5, His Work as a Healer. Chapter 6, Leaves the Body. Chapter 7, Visit to the Spirit Land. Chapter 8, Methods Used by Spirits to Communicate; How to Conduct a Circle. Chapter 9, Miscellaneous Articles. Chapter 10, A Strange Experience. Chapter 11, Remarkable Manifestation of Spirit Power. Chapter 12, New Experiences—Illustrative of Prophetic Visions. Chapter 13, The First Break in the Atlantic Cable Shown to John Brown. Chapter 14, Unseen Opposition. Chapter 14, Ola-podrida.

For sale at this office. Heavy paper cover, price 50 cents.

THE UNKNOWN LIFE
—OF—
Jesus Christ
—BY—
NICOLAS NOTOVITCH.

TRANSLATED FROM THE FRENCH.

Since the writing of the New Testament no book has appeared of as great importance to Christianity as the Unknown Life of Jesus Christ.

This volume, written by the discoverer of the manuscript, contains a thrilling account of the privations and perils encountered in his search for it, a literal translation of the original manuscript, and lastly a critical analysis of what it contains.

This work contains 185 neatly printed pages, and is published on the basis of combining cheapness and excellence. Price, neatly bound, one dollar. Paper cover, price 25 cents, postage 5 cents.

Address this office, 40 Loomis St., Chicago, Ill.

LIFE IN TWO SPHERES.
A Fascinating Work.

The readers of The Progressive Thinker will remember the story under the above title, by Hudson Tuttle, which was published in its columns. At the time, constant inquiries were made as to its appearing in book form. This wish has now been gratified. It makes a volume of 243 pages, in style and form like the "Convent of the Sacred Heart," with a finely-engraved likeness of the author on the cover. The scenes of the story alternately shift from earth to the spirit spheres, and the philosophy of Spiritualism, the occupation and modes of life of spiritual beings, are presented in the pleasing form of narrative.

The following are the chapter-titles: Introduction; The House of the Sage; Home of the Miser; The Low Societies; Hades; Christmastide in the Spheres of Light; Christmastide and the Golden Gate; The Unhappy Marriage; Easter Day in Heaven; A Visit to the Earth; The Change Called Death; Coming to the Knowledge of the Light; The Society Again Visits Earth; The Forsaken and Despised; Discussion; A Visit to a Distant Globe; Reunion in the Spirit-world; Contentedness Not Goodness; Address of the Sage.

It is a book the Spiritualist will be delighted with; a book in which the investigator will find answers to ever-recurring questions; a book which will interest the church member, nor repel the most prejudiced. The price in paper is 50 cents; muslin $1; postpaid.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A New Edition, Profusely Illustrated.

"I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find nothing in it trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all, that under the appearances of fable, there may appear some latent truth, obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observation of the vulgar."—Voltaire.

Contents: "The White Bull," a Satirical Romance; "Zadig, or Fate," an Oriental History; "The Sage and the Atheist;" "The Princess of Babylon;" "The Man of Forty Crowns;" "The Huron, or Pupil of Nature;" "Micromegas," a Satire on Mankind; "The World as it Goes;" "The Black and the White;" "Memnon, the Philosopher;" "Andre Des Touches at Siam;" "Bababec;" "The Study of Nature;" "A Conversation With a Chinese;" "Plato's Dream;" "A Pleasure in Having no Pleasure;" "An Adventure in India;" "Jeannot and Colin;" "Travels of Scarmentado;" "The Good Brahmin;" "The Two Comforters;" "Ancient Faith and Fable."

One volume, post 8vo, 480 pages, with portrait and 82 illustrations. Extra vellum cloth, $1.50; postage, 15 cents.

"Voltaire's satire was keen and fine-pointed as a rapier."—Magazine of Am. History.

"A delightful reproduction, unique and refreshing."—Boston Commonwealth.

DEATH AND THE AFTER LIFE.

By Andrew Jackson Davis. Something you should read. Price 75 cents.

The Progressive Thinker.

Published every Saturday at 40 Loomis Street

J. R. FRANCIS, Editor and Publisher.

Entered at Chicago Postoffice as second-class matter.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER will be furnished until further notice, at the following terms, invariably in advance:

One year $1.00
Clubs of ten (a copy to the one getting up the club) 7.50
Thirteen weeks ..... 25 cts
Single copy ..... 5 cts

REMITTANCES.

Remit by Postoffice Money Order, Registered Letter, or draft on Chicago or New York. It costs from 10 to 15 cents to get checks cashed on local banks, so don't send them unless you wish that amount deducted from the amount sent. Direct all letters to J. R. Francis, No. 40 Loomis Street, Chicago, Ill.

CLUBS! IMPORTANT SUGGESTION!

As there are thousands who will at first venture only twenty-five cents for THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER thirteen weeks, we would suggest to those who receive a sample copy, to solicit several others to unite with them, and thus be able to remit from $1 to $10, or even more than the latter sum. A large number of little amounts will make a large sum total, and thus extend the field of our labor and usefulness. The same suggestion will apply in all cases of renewal of subscriptions—solicit others to aid in the good work. You will experience no difficulty whatever in inducing Spiritualists to subscribe for THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER, for not one of them can afford to be without the valuable information imparted therein each week, and at the price of only about two cents per week.

A Bountiful Harvest for 25 Cents.

Do you want a more bountiful harvest than we can give you for 25 cents? Just pause and think for a moment what an intellectual feast that small investment will furnish you. The subscription price of THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER thirteen weeks is only twenty-five cents! For that amount you obtain one hundred and four pages of solid, substantial, soul-elevating and mind-refreshing reading matter, equivalent to a medium-sized book!

TAKE NOTICE!

☞ At expiration of subscription, if not renewed, the paper is discontinued. No bills will be sent for extra numbers.

☞ If you do not receive your paper promptly, write to us, and errors in address will be promptly corrected, and missing numbers supplied gratis.

☞ Whenever you desire the address of your paper changed, always give the address of the place to which it is then sent, or the change cannot be made.

SATURDAY, JAN. 30, 1897.

CHURCH ENTERTAINMENTS.

Rev. W. Bayard Hale had an article in a late number of the North American Review, entitled "Another Year of Church Entertainments," wherein he tells of the amusement-loving and tireless effort of the churches to provide fun at a minimum cost to the humblest and poorest Christian people, in the way of "Female Minstrels, Dog Shows, the Dance of Wood Nymphs, the Brownie Drills, and kindred joys." He says for monumental godlessness, not made endurable by the saving grace of humor, or the slightest suggestion of common decency, but for groveling baseness and depraved vulgarity the Trilby Parties, otherwise Foot Socials, also known as Ankle Auctions, stand at the head of church entertainments. He tells of exhibitions of that character by the Methodist Episcopal churches, of the Protestant Episcopal churches, etc. It seems the Boston Sunday Journal, and the New York Herald sensationally illustrated these "tantalizing" displays of nude feet and ankles whose owners stood behind the curtains. They were auctioned off by the deacons to good churchmen as living pictures, with privilege to the purchaser to take the owners to supper.

Cotillion parties and round dances are exhibitions of gross lewdness, according to the average churchman; but such shameless displays of vulgarity were never heard of, or thought of in terpsichorean circles. Is it not closely akin to the washing of feet by a magdalene, and the drying of them with the hair of her head, as told in Bible story?

FREE FIGHT AT A REVIVAL.

A dispatch of the 12th inst., from Little Rock, Ark., shows what a powerful instrumentality revivals are for gaining recruits for heaven. The telegram says:

"In a Baptist church at Yellow Bayou, in Chicot county, last night, one man was killed, another fatally wounded and several badly hurt. A revival was in progress at the church. Last night Rev. Henry Walker, the pastor, read a chapter in the Bible and Deacon Austin Williams passed the plate for the offering. As he set the hat, containing a few small coins, upon the pulpit, the preacher made a remark which Williams did not like and he slapped Walker in the mouth. Walker attacked the deacon, knocking him to the floor with a cane. A free fight ensued, in which partisans joined, using razors and clubs. Walker, with his razor, cut Williams' throat, killing him instantly. A negro, name unknown, received a fatal cut, and about a dozen others were slashed more or less painfully. Several arrests were made, including Walker, who is under a heavy guard to prevent being lynched."

STEALING FOR THE GLORY OF GOD.

John D. Rockefeller has made munificent donations to church institutions, and stands at the head of the millionaires of the world in aid of his creed. His wealth, invested in churches and schools of learning, is protected by government, but it does not pay any portion of the cost of such protection. It has just developed how the magnate manages to escape taxation for the glory of God and the upbuilding of his kingdom.

In an action brought against the millionaire by Rev. Dr. Potter, of the Tabernacle Baptist church, to recover a back income of $9,000, alleged to be due the church, Rockefeller was put on the stand as a witness. Asked:

"Who was the real owner of the lease obtained from St. Mark's church?"

"I was."

"But it was held in the name of the church; why was that?"

"The reason for that," replied Mr. Rockefeller, "was to escape taxation. If I had held the lease in my name the property would have been taxed. If the church held it it was exempt from taxation."

It is by steals like these the church prospers, as do its largest contributors.

A NEEDED LAW.

"There is a strong probability," says the Chronicle, "that a bill seeking to tax all church property in the State will be introduced at this session of the Missouri Legislature soon after it gets down to business. For several years past there has been a reform organization in St. Louis which has sought to compel all religious societies to pay taxes upon all property held by them, and a bill embodying that idea is now said to be almost ready for submission to the general assembly."

GREAT TEMPERANCE REFORM.

The Grand Lodge of Masons of Minnesota has just adopted a resolution barring all who sell intoxicants from membership in its jurisdiction; and another for the expulsion of all persons engaged in the vile traffic. If the several benevolent orders in all the States would join hands, and act harmoniously together in this direction, they would complish what the churches are powerless to do.

A HEATHENISH CUSTOM.

They who would employ any form of baptism, either sprinkling, pouring, or dipping, as a stepping-stone to admission to any spiritual organization, whether known as a society, or miscalled a church, cannot have traced the origin of the rite; for had they done so they would have rejected it as unworthy of repetition in this age of enlightenment. Professors in colleges, priests, bishops and laymen have taught the rite originated with Christianity, hence their effort to perpetuate it. The facts are, it was an old Pagan custom. It was borrowed by Christians just as was nearly every other rite, symbol and festival now practised by the church, from Egyptian, Grecian and Roman mythology, antedating Christianity many hundred years.

Cleansing by water must have commenced with the beginning of the race. The origin of the custom, necessarily, antedates all history. The first we know of any people they practised lustrations for purposes of cleanliness. The Encyclopaedic Dictionary says:

"It is scarcely too much to say that lustrations or symbolic purifications is to be found in every form of faith. . . . Lustrations by sprinkling with water is the most common form, but it was also affected by fumigations, and by passing through fire; and Mahomet, failing water, commanded his followers to use fine sand."

The Grecians and Romans, who made animal sacrifices to their gods, as did the Jews, thought the blood of the animals slain on the altar had special cleansing qualities, so in process of time blood was substituted for water. The Latin poet, Prudentius, represents the pagan priests as causing a pit to be excavated. This was covered with planks bored full of holes, so the blood of the goat, bull or ram sacrificed on them might trickle through upon the person beneath who wished to be regenerated, and walk in newness of life.

This sprinkling with blood is commended by Paul, Hebrews xii:24, as better than that practised by Abel. In 1st Peter i:2, it is mentioned as the "sanctification of the spirit unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ." And in Hebrews ix:12, 13, it is shown how greatly superior for purifying purposes is the blood of Christ than is the blood of bulls and goats.

The whole idea of sprinkling with water by the churchmen, as an emblem of purification and regeneration, had its base in the nasty heathenish habit of sprinkling the candidate on admission to fellowship, with sacrificed blood. Paul, Hebrews ix:22: "Almost all things are by the law purified with blood; and without shedding of blood is no remission."

In these better times, when we are discarding the foolish flummery of bygone ages—when purifications were made by walking through fire, the sprinkling with blood, and more lately the substitution of water—cannot some method be devised which will give no hint or trace of a sanguinary origin, on admission into spiritual circles? This aping the churches, whose foundation rests on bloody sacrifices, ill becomes those whose faith is spirit-born, and is in no way dependent on the blood of bulls, or goats, or lambs, or rams, or crucified gods, or emblems drawn from these barbarian practices, though that emblem is water itself.

CHRISTIANS FIGHTING CHRISTIANS.

The following is a late news dispatch from Jerusalem, to which the attention of Christian readers is earnestly directed:

"Constantinople, Jan. 10, 1897.—Official advices received from Jerusalem state that there has been further trouble among the worshipers at the church of the Holy Sepulchre. It appears the Roman Catholics were opposed to members of the orthodox Greek church entering the church by a certain door on the evening of January 6, the day observed by the orthodox church as Christmas. The Greek Christians insisted on their right to enter. The result was, the two factions became involved in a serious fight, which did not end until the Turkish authorities intervened to restore order. Some of the combatants were badly injured, but it is not known whether any were killed."

It is fortunate the "Holy Sepulchre" is in the keeping of Mohammedans. Give the control to either Protestants, Roman or Greek Catholics, and a war of extermination would soon follow. Each faction would heed the direction of the Master to him who had no sword: "Let him sell his garment and buy one." From the quotation it is clearly inferential, that it is better to go naked than without a sword when there are enemies to conquer.

THE CHURCH WANTS THE GLORY

As we suggested recently, the church is now coming to the front in support of national arbitration to prevent bloody wars. For full fifteen hundred years the church has given laws to the world. It gained legislation in most European countries in aid of the Inquisition, and only reversed that legislation when overruled by evolution. Now Cardinal Gibbons, recently interviewed, expresses himself unqualifiedly in favor of arbitration between England and America, and hopes all nations will enter into similar treaties.

Whilst the churches were slumbering, and doing nothing in favor of this measure, a class of reformers whom these Christians designated Infidels, were active in arousing interest on this subject. They have succeeded in accomplishing the beginning of a mighty reform, which is to inaugurate an era of perpetual peace with all the world. It is very questionable if President Cleveland, or Secretary Olney knows the origin or the principal movers in this mighty stride towards the disarmament of nations, to which they have given their powerful influence. We are glad to see the churches rallying to the support of the measure, and yet we know they will claim all the honor of its accomplishment.

A SENSELESS FANATIC.

A crazy fanatic by the name of Lambert has broke into the Kansas Legislature, and is exposing his greenness by introducing a bill to prevent women from riding on bicycles, or astride on horses. The women of the East are making mirth of this Western solon, and well they may. Quoting Paul on fashions has lost its efficacy; hence now attempts at prohibitory legislation. It was only a few centuries ago men wore skirts, as women and priests now do. They changed their attire to meet the needs of civilization, and to adapt themselves to their new environment, just as the women are now doing. As well attempt to force the Gothic architecture into general use again, as to declare by law what people shall ride and how, as Mr. Lambert proposes.

As a general rule the alphabets of the Semitic races run from right to left, those of the Aryan from left to right.

OLLA-PODRIDA.

A Dish of Many Choice and Toothsome Meats,

Served to Our Readers by Moses Hull.

To the Editor:—I am informed that the Spanish get up a dish of a dozen or two kinds of meat, and as many kinds of vegetables and call it olla-podrida. Well, I feel just like serving up a kind of mental olla-podrida to your readers to-day. I have thoughts enough, such as they are, on various subjects to fill a volume as large as Webster's Dictionary. But I am a merciful man, and will spare your readers.

SETTLED.

We have at last got settled—comfortably settled in Stoneham, Mass. Stoneham is a suburb, eleven miles north of Boston; a beautiful and a very healthful place to live. Though we found some of what people call "bad luck," in getting fixed up for living, we are comfortably settled, and are as happy as we deserve to be. We have plenty of work to do within easy reach of home, which was one of our principal motives for coming here. The fact is, I am getting to be an old man, and the older I get the more of a home-body I become. We like our home here and seem to be as much at home as if we were to the manor born.

THE WORK.

Since I have written you, I have spoken in Philadelphia, Pa., Bridgeport, Conn., and Stoneham, Boston and Haverhill, Mass. Audiences have been as large and the interest as deep as could have been expected. The fact is, hard times have compeled many societies to either suspend operation or take up with such speakers as were able and willing to go for almost no pay.

Frauds have done their share toward injuring Spiritualism. The fact is, we began many years ago to offer high premiums for first-class tricksters; now we are reaping the harvest. I am convinced that it is not in the power of the enemies of Spiritualism to injure it; it is those inside who are doing the mischief.

The world and Spiritualists have for years demanded more than any medium could do legitimately. The result has been here in the East, as it is in the West, many good mediums have been compelled to supplement their manifestations with some things which were not purely spiritual, or to leave the field to those who had less mediumship, as well as less conscience than themselves.

MR. AYER AND CHURCH TAX.

I seems that the officers of the law have levied a rather heavy tax bill against Mr. M. S. Ayer's Spiritual Temple. Mr. Ayer, of course, refuses to pay it. He justly claims that if other church property is exempt from taxation, his should be. The result will be that the fight on the taxation of church property is to be renewed, and on somewhat different grounds from those on which former similar battles have been fought.

Mr. Ayer has already gained one victory before the courts. He has compelled them to acknowledge that his seances were religious meetings. If even the manifestations were all tricks his meetings were religious. The people had not met there to deceive each other, and the presence of a trickster among them would no more destroy or change the character of their meetings than the presence of a scoundrel in the pulpit would prove that all his hearers are scoundrels.

Mr. Ayer is acknowledged by everybody, so far as I can learn, to be a man of intelligence, energy and means. That he is thoroughly conscientious I think no one will deny. He is not a man to be trifled with. This is a fact certain ones have learned to their sorrow. Mr. Ayer runs his own meetings, at his own expense, and pays all his bills without asking help from anybody, and he has a perfect right to conduct them after his own plan. The Spiritualists will stand by him in his fight before the courts, and, if need be, before the legislature.

THE BANNER OF LIGHT.

Of course, every Spiritualist knows the Banner of Light; and everyone who has seen it during the last thirty years knows, at least, through his editorials, Mr. John W. Day, Mr. Colby's successor. All will be sorry to learn that he and the good old Banner have dissolved partnership. Mr. Day was not born in the Banner office, but Mr. Colby took an interest in him when he was quite young, and he has almost grown up in the office. I think he never worked anywhere else except while he was down South assisting Uncle Sam about putting the rebellion down. I have not heard who is to succeed Mr. Day, but Mr. Rich, the president of the Banner of Light Publishing Company, is not the man to put anyone in there who will lower its tone.

THAT NEW PAPER.

I see a new spiritual paper has been launched in Cincinnati; I am sorry. I am a wet blanket medium for all new Spiritualist papers. The epidemic of starting new Spiritualist papers seems to be very closely related to that of starting new societies and camp-meetings. Honest, good men undertake them, but they cannot live. I am neither a prophet nor the son of a prophet, but I will here record the prediction that the papers now in the field cannot all live. I think 1897 will see some of them go to the wall.

BIBLE CLASSES.

Now don't laugh. I have opened a Bible class in the city of Boston; and I am to open others in Boston, and other places in the near future. My present class is small, but is composed of ladies and gentlemen of energy; and you would not believe how much and how fast they are learning. All are deeply interested, and to some of them the Bible already seems to be a new book. The fact is, the church supposes the Bible to be its book. The Bible is thrown at Spirttualists every day; it is used as the weapon par excellence against Spiritualism. It is not the churches' book at all; on the contrary, it is our book. It is a very easy job to drive the average Christian entirely out of the Bible, which he supposes was made expressly for him to use as a weapon against Spiritualism.

OUR TRAINING SCHOOL.

All this reminds me that it is only four months until our Spiritualist workers' training school is to begin at Mantua, Ohio. While I have talked with many who want to be scholars, I have not found over fifteen persons who say positively that they will be there. I do not know how it is with the association which has the school in charge, but I am getting anxious over the matter. I do not feel much like going to Mantua, and taking with me two or three good teachers, and working forty-five days for only a dozen or so of pupils, when it would be just as easy to teach fifty or a hundred. I wish all who would like to avail themselves of the benefits of that school would write me here.

THAT POLYCHROME BIBLE.

I see "X-Ray" makes some reference to Prof. Welhausen's translation of the Psalms. I have looked forward with pleasing anticipations to the time when that new Bible should come out. There are forty as good Hebrew scholars, and as honest men as there are in the world at work on that Polychrome Bible. More than that—they have no fear of the church or of the older Bibles before their eyes. When that Bible comes out the world will hear something drop.

I have read the new translation of thirty of the Psalms, and know whereof I speak. In many instances the difference is as radical as can be imagined. In the first place the Polychrome justly throws every word out which is printed now in italic letters, and adjusts the other words so that it reads more sensibly without them than it did with them. There is a great change in the punctuation, which in not a few instances entirely alters the sense of the text.

I will give but one instance. I will try to reproduce the 4th, 5th and 6th verses of the 19th Psalm just as they are in the Bible; then I will reproduce parts of them as near as I can from memory, the way they are to read in the new Bible:

4. "Their line is gone out through all the earth, and their words to the end of the world. In them hath he set a tabernacle for the sun,

5. Which is as a bridegroom coming out of his chamber, and rejoicing as a strong man to run a race.

6. His going forth is from the end of heaven, and his circuit unto the ends of it: and there is nothing hid from the heat thereof."

Please observe the versification. Prof. Welhausen has changed all this, but the most radical change is, as nearly as I can remember, as follows:

"In them hath he set a tabernacle for the sun, which, as a bridegroom coming out of his chamber rejoiceth. As a strong man to run a race his going forth is from one end of heaven and his circuit unto the ends of it."

It will be discovered that in the old version the end of a sentence and the end of a paragraph comes in the middle of a sentence. It destroys the meaning by making the bridegroom come out of his chamber to run a race; whereas the new makes the sun rejoice as a bridegroom, and run a race as a strong man.

THE SEPTUAGINT.

I have no Hebrew Bible, and could not read it if I had one; but I am the owner of a Septuagint Bible, and lately I have been examining it with more care than ever before. You know what the Septuagint is, but some of your readers do not; so I will stop and tell them. It is the Old Testament as translated into Greek by seventy learned Jews, to be placed in the Alexandrian Library, under one of the Ptolemys, in the third century before the Christian era.

Speaking of the Christian era, reminds me that many think that the Bible teaches that Jesus was and is the only Christ. That is not so; even the New Testament will not justify that idea. The Septuagint Bible speaks of as many as twenty other Christs beside Jesus, each one of them as genuine a Christ as Jesus is supposed to have been. Saul, David, Solomon, Rheoboam, Hezekiah, and many others are in the Septuagint, the original from which our Bible was made, called Christ. Where you read "the Lord's anointed," in our Bible, the Septuagint every time reads Jehovah's Christ.

By the way, the term Jehovah is not to be found in the Polychrome Bible; nor is the word Lord, as applied to Jehovah, in the old Bible. The word is always left untranslated. It always comes out in the capital letters, JHVH, as in the original. I have not seen the new translation of Psalm cv:15, where it says: "Touch not mine anointed and do my prophets no harm," but if it would do any good I would swear that the Septuagint reads: "Touch not my Christs and do my fortune-tellers no harm." I have just looked the matter up; I prophesy that the Polychrome will justify that translation.

I gave this version of the text in a debate over a quarter of a century ago, and it was only by the miracle of the weather being so cold that the friends of the Bible as it is could not get them, that I escaped a dose of eggs laid by stale hens. Now one would travel a great way before he would find a minister who would have the temerity to dispute that rendering.

ARBITRATION.

Well, John Bull and Brother Jonathan have at last shaken hands; they have set the ball in motion which it is hoped will bring about that era foretold by the Judean mediums, when men should beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks, and the nations shall learn war no more. Every question will at last have to be arbitrated, and I have always wondered why arbitration could not do its work as well before any blood was shed as after. Now that arbitration has actually come, I feel to sing:

"It must be now de kingdom's a comin',
And de year ob jubilo."

Why could not the nations have learned that a thousand years ago? It has learned it now; let us rejoice.

Horace Greeley was not far wrong when he said: "The worst use you can put a man to is to hang him." It looks almost, if not quite as bad, to send him down to the battlefield as a mark for enemies to shoot at. I hope now the States of this Union will rapidly follow the exeample of England and America, and quit hanging men because they have killed somebody. Why should governments make brutes of themselves because a brute kills a man or a woman? O, that we were civilized; but we are gradually—very gradually reaching toward civilization.

Brother Francis, I do not want to occupy your whole paper, so I'll stop.

MOSES HULL.

OVER IN CANADA.

A Canadian archbishop ordered the faithful to stop reading a paper known as L'Electeur, which offensively declared that the church ought to let the State alone. In one village in Charlevoix county the local priest went to the postoffice and ordered the postmaster to give up all copies of that paper addressed to the people in the place and burned them. The postmaster did not like to obey, but he felt under the circumstances he must, so he allowed the mails to be rifled without a struggle and the property was destroyed.

Put God in our Constitution and just such priestly usurpation and tyranny will be rampant all over this country.

MASS MEETING.

There will be a mass-meeting of Spiritualists in Brooklyn, N. Y., at Historial Hall, Feb. 3d and 4th, afternoons and evenings. It will be under the auspices of the National Spiritualist Association. Judge A. H. Dailey, chairman.

The German alphabet, as now employed, is a modification of the Caroline, or the style introduced by Charlemagne. The Roman letters, represented by the plainest of our capitals, were used until the latter part of the sixth century.

SOLON AND MARY.

A SEQUEL TO "Mary Anne Carew," Wife, Mother, Spirit, Angel.

BY CARLYLE PETERSILEA,

AUTHOR OF "THE DISCOVERED COUNTRY," "MARY ANNE CAREW," "PHILIP CARLISLIE," "OCEANIDES," ETC.

COPYRIGHTED BY CARLYLE PETERSILEA.

CHAPTER III.—Continued.

LIONS ON GUARD.

SOLON AND MARY VISIT DANIEL THE PROPHET, WITHIN THE HEAVENLY SPHERES.

Now the natural angelic world, like the natural earthly world, exists; and angels have nothing to do with the formation of it any more than man has with the formation of the earth or the natural forms within it. Great eternal laws exist over which angels have no control. Angels do not create the light of the sun, neither do they create the heavens nor the earths, neither themselves; they but obey eternal laws which change not, nor ever can change; they but try to understand these laws and conform in wisdom to them. For instance; they did not create, neither can they change the great law of magnetic attraction; but they, by understanding it, can make great use of and be guided by it. They did not create light, but a great unchangeable natural law did; neither did they create form; but a natural law did; but they can copy all forms, whatsoever, which come under their observation, yet they cannot put soul or will-power into them; therefore whatever we invent here is art and not nature, just as it is on earth; we but make use of nature or material already at hand, yet it is not necessary that we perform manual labor in order to clothe our inventions; we but draw into ourselves wisdom, love, and soul-power; wisdom, by understanding and conforming to great natural laws; love, by understanding and conforming to the great law of magnetic attraction, which holds all forms together; soul or will-power, which is the ruler of wisdom and love or guiding principle. Now for an example:

Mary, my love, or magnetic counterpart, who is wedded to me through the great law of magnetic attraction, according as like attracts like, says to me as we walk in our beautiful garden:

"Solon, do not you think this would be a lovely spot on which to erect an arbor?"

Our minds or souls being in perfect unison or equilibrum, her thought being my thought, there is but one thought, wish or desire; that is, I could not possibly desire something entirely different or opposed to her thought or desire; next, we must construct our arbor, give it form, size and color; but our materials are so exquisitely fine that they consist of magnetism, which is a fine, pale, amber flame, and the various colors which are seen within light. Now we must first construct the arbor entirely within our minds, and there must it receive its first clothing.

"Why?" you ask. Because our will or soul-power attracts to our thought a suitable amount of elementary magnetism wherewith to clothe it; likewise by our will-power we project the thought or push it away from us as a separate form or entity, upon the spot where we desire it to stand, and by a great natural law pertaining to the soul the magnetism which we have thus clothed our thoughts with attracts and holds in their various shades the colors in which we wished our arbor to appear; the vines, leaves and flowers wherewith we wished to deck it; and so of all other inventions or works of art, we have but arisen in the scale of the great universal laws which govern all things. On earth a man or woman desires an arbor. He or she concludes just what kind of one is wanted. Now they dwell lower down the scale; they are within coarser elements called material, yet the word is not advisedly used, for all things are material, both earthly and heavenly, the difference, as I have already shown, being entirely that between fine and coarse, or dense and heavy and porous; they must draw coarse materials, such as wood, to their aid, and must construct their arbors with hammer, nails and paint; it takes them, perhaps, days before completed. We, on the contrary, can construct an arbor of exceeding beauty and durability, in, perhaps, thirty seconds of earth time, according to the amount of will or soul-power we possess, or according to our love and wisdom; and thus of all other constructions or inventions. Manual labor is not necessary with us. Most exquisitely elegant buildings are thus created by us and in a correspondingly short space of time. Our buildings appear just as we desire them to appear, either of marble, granite, or precious stones, and in whatever form we desire them to be constructed, and they are as tangible and real to all angels as men's houses are to all men.

When we visit earth we are earnest to desire what will benefit man most, then we invent within our souls that which he needs; from thence we project our thought or invention upon the camera of his sensitive brain; being in sympathy with him he causes the thought or invention to be clothed with coarse material substance, otherwise in his present condition it would be of no use to him. And thus man goes on step by step, not yet understanding the power which guides him.

Men hold the same position toward angels that children hold toward their parents and teachers.

A mother says to her child: "Come here, my darling, and let me show you how to do this piece of work." The same principle carried higher obtains with man. The mother is visible to her child; the angel is not visible to man, and it is far better so for if the angels were objective or visible to man, their teachings would have to be given to the exterior instead of the interior. Then again there would be dissatisfaction, antagonism and even war, as there is between mankind, they being objective to each other. The angels being invisible, silent and intangible to man, they work with and for him, silently, wisely and well, without the obstructions that would otherwise be thrown in their way.

We had now visited three of the wisest and best men who had ever lived on earth; Benjamin Franklin, Sir Isaac Newton, and Daniel, or Belteshazzer. Neither of these men, nor their teachings, had ever caused war or bloodshed of anykind. They had given nothing to the world but pure love and wisdom; nothing but what would increase man's progress in the knowledge of science and benefit him in every conceivable way, and they were still at work for man as industriously as ever. As soon as Franklin had gained some great truth whereby electricity could be made more servicable to man, then he put himself enrapport with a sensitive child of earth whose body and brain could serve him best, and through this instrument or channel give to men the improvements which they most needed. Thus man has now his electric cars, electric lights, the telephone, and soon other great inventions too numerous to mention will be given.

Perhaps some may say: "Edison invented these things." Well, Benjamin Franklin does not care, so long as man receives the benefit. It is not for Franklin's glory, or for Edison's glory, but for man's best good. He who wishes to be glorified is not a fit subject through whom to give great truths to the world; but he who is meek and lowly, thinking not of himself or his own glory, but with his mind fixed intently on the great principles or truths that are to benefit the world; in other words, he who would find his true life must lose it, and he who thus loses his life will surely find it to his intense happiness.

Think you not that Franklin is intensely happy, when he sees the great amount of good which the world has, and will, receive through his efforts in its behalf? and so of Newton and Daniel.

CHAPTER IV.

BEETHOVEN CASTLE.

My sweet Mary now said: "Solon, I greatly desire that we put ourselves en rapport with one of my children who still remains on earth."

Her wish was my wish, and soon we were with the much-loved one; and this child, or man as he had now become, was a sensitive or instrument through whom the great composers and masters in music could work, as Franklin could work through Edison and others.

Working with and through him, we found Beethoven, Chopin, Schubert and many other musicians, still striving to render good unto the world which would raise man and make him better and happier.

We were attracted to the great composer Beethoven; for he was one of the most active of all who were in sympathy with Mary's son.

On perceiving that my Mary had been the mother of this young man, he turned to us with the utmost urbanity—we must here say that he, like all other angels, was accompanied by his other self or female half; but in writing this message to man we shall be obliged to use the pronoun he, otherwise earthly savants will accuse us of using bad grammar, which to them is of far more importance than eternal truth; the husk is to such more than meat; the outside must be decked in fine array, no matter how filthy or empty within; but earthly language has no words whereby we can talk of the oneness of two forms, female and male blended together; therefore when men talk of God they always say He, as though the female had no part whatever in the constitution of that which they call God, and as their thoughts have ever been thus, they have no words whereby an angel can be specified except through the words he or she; thus we labor under difficulties to make ourselves properly understood.

The angel Beethoven turned to us with great urbanity, and instantly divining that we wanted to become acquainted, for the sake of wisdom and love, they invited us to go with them to their angelic abode. This invitation gave us great joy, and together we commenced our flight, nor paused until we entered what at first seemed to us a vast cathedral, so vast, indeed, was it that hours might be spent in walking around it near the walls. It was circular in form; the dome corresponded in vastness to the circular wall. To a child a very large room appears vast; not so to a man, however; a man's sight could not have taken this large building in at once, but with angels it was otherwise; and Beethoven alone had covered the wall of this vast cathedral with written music—literally covered it everywhere, and all the music which he ever wrote when on earth was arranged in one tier at the base, and all thereafter had been added, tier upon tier, until this vast structure was the result. Here were congregated a great many angels, lovers of music, those who could understand the great soul of the grand master.

The angel Beethoven ascended a platform and addressed the multitude there assembled; the following were the sentiments expressed:

"You will all observe that the base of this building is composed of the music which was written by me when on earth; you also observe that the music then and there composed is imperishable, although here it is but the rough-hewn base to that which was to follow—which has followed as you see—but how rough, coarse, and unsightly, compared to the superstructure; yet it contains the elements of strength on which to rear better and more perfect harmony. Ah! my soul even then caught the scope, breadth, depth and grandeur of the eternal heavens, and when deaf to all earthly sounds, still I heard the angels singing, caught the notes and penned them, as well as I could. Many, many times was my spirit caught up out of my body, and I glided with them singing or endeavoring to sing their grand, perfect songs and joyful sonatas, their anthems of praise; but, oh! how sadly I fell short, for I had not then arrived at an angel's estate.

"Poor, crawling worm that I was! But the worm must first crawl that the butterfly may soar, and when at last my wings were grown how gladly I left the worthless shell to become the soaring spirit and now the completed, rounded angel. My songs and sonatas now rival my compeers; the rough base has been crowned by the polished, the clear, the harmonious, the ethereal; corresponding with the granite, the marble, the crystal, the pearl, the diamond; to gold, silver and all precious stones; for you will observe that no two pieces of music composing this structure are exactly alike."

We observed that many of the angels were copying music from the walls, songs and sonatas which they liked best, or portions of them; we also knew that these angels would carry their music to some one on earth who was their medium, sensitive or instrument, and give as much of it through such an one as possible; also, inspire performers to outrival themselves, that the men of earth might be drawn up out of their grosser natures into the heavenly, the angelic, the harmonious; that they might catch the grandeur and depth of eternity, "and," continued the angel Beethoven:

"Music is but trying to express through sound that which is unutterable in any other way.

"A soul looks on the ocean and enters into sympathy with its great depths, its vast expanse, the immutable laws governing it, its surging, heaving billows, the great storms by which it is agitated, the grandeur of its calmness, the overarching heavens, the great ships sailing on its bosom, the screaming of sea birds and petrels, and that soul tries to give vent to its sympathy with all this in corresponding sounds; or it may take one or each as a theme, and then sing of this theme in various notes or strains, and the nearer it approaches nature the more perfect the music. For instance, if one can imitate a storm so true to nature that one's hearers are made to shudder with fear and for a time seem to be transported to where such a storm is taking place, then has one accomplished the end and aim of one's endeavors; then has one become a true musician, and great. If one can describe sorrow or joy so true to nature that one's hearers weep or laugh in sympathy, then is one an interpreter of human emotions; likewise, if one can enter into sympathy with the hosts of heaven or the angels, and sing with them their joyful anthems of love and wisdom, and also transport one's hearers until they too catch the angelic strains, one will have arrived at a great altitude and cannot expect to do much more while yet on earth.

"My dear Solon," he said, turning to us, "I am impressed that you design to write a book that men on earth may read, and for your own pleasure and instruction, as well as for the purpose of giving to earth knowledge concerning heavenly things, you are visiting many angels, who when on earth were great discoverers, scientists, musicians, or reformers; therefore, give this message from me to any on earth whom it may concern—that an interpreter or performer of music should try to the utmost to understand the true meaning of a theme; that is, he should by playing the theme over and over again while practicing, find out what the composer meant, what episode in nature or what emotion of the human soul he was trying to imitate; one can tell by giving suitable expression how one's own soul is affected, what is meant, and afterwards in all variations one should to the utmost try to express or imitate nature, that part of nature meant to be expressed by the composer. How often, when we visit earth, do we listen to players trying to give our compositions to an audience, without in the least comprehending what is meant, and their performance falls like dead weights of sound upon their hearers, having no soul or life, for the player gives it none, not comprehending that it has any. To the player the music has so many notes in juxtaposition to so many other notes, to be played in such and such time, divided so and so, a lifeless thing without a soul. How often we turn away sorrowful, hardly recognizing our own compositions that were written and composed under the most intense sympathy and excitement with the subject in hand; and now from Louis von Beethoven say: Man has a spirit; man has a soul; man becomes an angel. I have not seen God as a personality in form like a man. I am in eternity. I am an angel. I am still writing and composing music. I am happy as the angels are happy. I am joyful as the angels are joyful. I am not as on earth one half alone, but have found my true mate and am joined into oneness with her, as the angels are joined; that the ears of my soul are opened to catch the faintest whisper of nature; that I have a beautiful temple erected by mine own endeavors, that is as plain and palpable to the angels who surround me and are my companions, as my written compositions are to men—that I shall not cease in my endeavors and to what heights I may yet attain eternity knoweth, I cannot as yet tell.

"My last earthly sonata was written at a time when my soul was struggling to free itself from the body or shell, and is the language of a soul striving to throw off earthly shackles; or like a bird trying to fly with broken wings; falling back with languishing moan, then starting up afresh with painful struggles; but the sonata, like to what my soul then suffered, falls back without reaching the goal, falls back with sobbing moan to earth. The nearly wornout body in painful weariness sighing for the then unattainable—the heavenly—the angelic—leaving the theme broken off, as it were, between the two worlds; nearly done with one, not fully comprehending the other. I have finished that sonata here. I have improvised another upon it. I have made it the base of a grander, nobler theme, and my theme, immortality, eternity, everlasting life, love, wisdom:

"Triumphant swell the strains; gladness and joy re-echo the sounds; the white feet of angels tread the mazy rondos; their delicate hands hold wreaths of never-fading flowers wherewith to crown inspiration; their sweet lips and smiling eyes sing of hope, courage, earnest endeavors and activity; they glide swiftly along polished avenues of light and truth; they plunge downward toward earth, its ignorance and suffering; they rise more slowly, being weighted down by its notes of woe, its false and discordant sounds; these must all be made to at length harmonize; and this must be their mission and work. They rise into greater, grander heights of love and wisdom; their strains are more and more joyful still, until at length they whirl in a grand circle around the great white throne which forever stands a symbol projected from them interiorly as an outward semblance of that which is within them, the ultimatum or throne of peace, purity, wisdom and love, whereon wisdom and love sit crowned as one,—a very God indeed, for to these attributes all angels bend the knee; to these attributes all angels shout their anthems of praise, with thrills and trills of ecstacy.

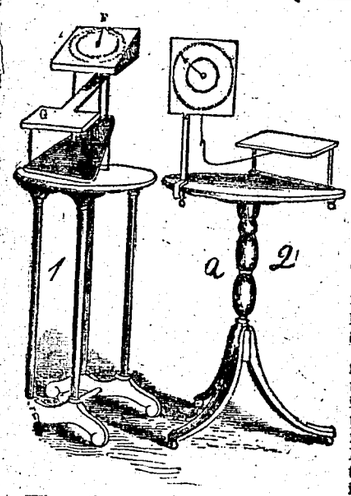
(To be Continued.)

DISHONEST PREACHERS.

"There is no getting away from the fact," says the Galesburg Mail, "that nearly 500 clergymen have been placed on the black list by the railroads, because they have abused the half-rate privileges the companies have given them. They will not be trusted with such privileges again." Instead of conserving public morals by exemplary habits, if the truth could go before the country, the clergy would be found as guilty of immoral habits as are the rest of the race.

JESUIT PLOTTINGS.

It is well known that during the last few years large numbers of the Catholic clergy have deserted the ancient faith and have identified themselves with the Church of England. The Church Review, London, says the numbers are decidedly on the increase. Is it not possible this is a Jesuit movement, having ultimately in view the absorption of the English church by the Catholics? Gladstone's expressed desire to see the two bodies reunited, and the Pope's conciliatory letters looking in that direction, have meanings not understood by everybody.



The Cherokee alphabet, invented by Sequoyah, George Guess, contains eighty-five characters.

SPIRITUALISM SCIENTIFICALLY DEMONSTRATED.

BY PROF. ROBERT HARE.

His Remarkable Researches Made in the Early Years of Spiritualism.

Directly Edited and Revised by Him, Now in Spirit-Life.

When the process commenced, the hand of Mrs. Hayden was resting on the lever in the usual position, but was subsequently lifted, so as to allow Mrs. Eustis, as well as myself, to see between it and the wooden surface, without creating any apparent abatement of the power of indicating the requisite letters.

While the process still proceeded under these conditions, Mrs. Eustis, having placed her hand upon the surface of the board lever, alleged that she felt it imparting motion to her hand.

Dr. W. F. Channing has since informed me that Mrs. Eustis's account of these manifestations, as given to him, coincide with those given to him by me.

But as respects the selection of letters without the assistance of the eyes of the medium, I have had many instances of this being done, although the facility of its performance is various, not only with different media and with different spirits, but likewise when the spirit and medium are the same; it varies with the state of the medium. I sat more than an hour with an accomplished medium, during an excessively hot evening, without receiving any communication; in consequence, as I supposed, of the effect of the heat upon her organism.

The interposition of water contained in a glass vase, upon the board part of the lever actuating the index, so that the hands of the medium can touch nothing but the water, has an effect analogous to the lifting of the hand as above described, since the only difference in the conditions is, that in the one case there is air, in the other water, interposed.

It has been stated that, by the interposition of water, the power of actuating the index was paralyzed; yet merely warming the water enabled the manifestation to proceed, so as to empower the spirit to spell such names as were called for.

In one instance, I took a book from my pocket which the medium had never seen, and opened it at a page where the heading "Publisher's Preface" was conspicuous, without allowing the medium to see anything more than the back of the book. Holding the page exposed to the disk, the spirit spelt out "Publish—," and then seemed unable to proceed. Meanwhile, the medium called to her little son to be quiet; forthwith the deficient letters, ers, were supplied, so as to finish the word "Publisher's."

The medium alleged that her mind was imbued with the idea that the word "publishing" was coming forth, and with a view to aid the spirit, lent some muscular aid to the letters necessary to complete that word; but attention to her child causing her mind to be withdrawn, the spirit immediately selected the letters above indited. On the same occasion I opened the same book, keeping the back toward the medium, opposite to an engraving of Jefferson: immediately, Jefferson was spelt out.

On my way to Boston, I visited Mrs. 'Ann Leah Brown, formerly Miss Fox. At about eight in the morning, I found her under very unfavorable circumstances: Mrs. Brown had been watching the previous night with a sick child. Nevertheless, considering me as an advocate of the cause of truth, a short sitting was given to me, during which my faithful spirit sister manifested herself by comparatively loud knockings.

On my return from Boston, I called again on this interesting medium, and then saw a table, situated at the distance of more than a foot from her person, which was quiescent, make a movement to and fro of at least eight inches. Moreover, as I sat on the opposite side of an intervening table I felt unexpectedly a slight touch against my leg as if by human finger.

During this visit, Mrs. Brown created much interest by giving a brief account of the trials which herself and her sister had undergone, being on the one hand urged to give their services to the community, as the means of promoting truth, while on the other they were treated as imposters or jugglers. The impression left on my mind was extremely favorable as respects Mrs. Brown's sincerity in her Spiritualism and in her goodness of heart.

In consequence of her invitation, I attended a circle at her house a few days subsequently, when I saw, in addition to all the usual manifestations, the following for the first time: Under a table around which the party was seated, a sheet of paper was deposited on the carpeted floor. A pencil was placed upon the paper. Soon after, on examination, I found my name scrawled thereon.

Two small bells situated upon the floor beneath the table were rung, and subsequently it was found that one of them had been lifted and seated on the other.

My spirit sister has since informed me that my name was written upon the paper by my spirit friend William Blodget.

While at Boston, having read to a friend a communication from my father through a writing medium, I placed it in one of my pockets, and proceeded to the Fountain Inn. When there, I felt for it without success. Unexpectedly, I went to Salem by the cars, and returned the same evening. On undressing myself the scroll was missing, and I inferred that it had been lost between the place where it had been read and the inn above named, where I felt for it unsuccessfully. On going next morning to Mrs. Hayden's, and my spirit father reporting himself, I inquired whether he knew what had become of the scroll. It was answered, that it had been left upon the seat in the car on my quitting it at Salem.

Inquiring of the conductor, who was on duty in the car where it had been left, he said that it had been found on the seat, was safe at Portland, and should be returned to me next day. This promise was realized.

On one occasion, sitting at the disk with Mrs. Hayden, a spirit gave his initials as C. H. Hare. Not recollecting any one of our relations of that name precisely, I inquired if he were one of them. The reply was affirmative. "Are you a son of my cousin Charles Hare, of St. Johns, New Brunswick?" "Yes," was spelled out. This spirit then gave me the profession of his grandfather, also that of his father, and the fact of the former having been blown into the water at Toulon, and of the latter having made a miraculous escape from Verdun, where he had been confined until his knowledge of French enabled him to escape by personating in disguise an officer of the customs. Only one mistake was made in referring to my English relatives, respecting an uncle's name. Other niquiries were correctly answered.

Subsequently, the brother of this spirit made us a visit in Philadelphia, and informed us that the mundane career of his brother Charles Henry, had been terminated by shipwreck some few years anterior to the visit made, as mentioned, to me.

No one being present beside myself, and the medium ignorant of Latin, my father spelt out upon the disk the words he had pointed out to me in Virgil more than fifty-five years ago, as expressive of the beating Entellus gave Dares, as described by Virgil—"pulsatque verisatque;" also the word which so much resembles the sound of horses' hoofs trampling on the ground, "Quadrupedante."

A spirit of the name of Powel tendered his services, and undertook to spell Cato, but instead of that name, Blodget, my friend, occupied the disk, and spelt his own name, and afterward Cato. On the same occasion Blodget spelt out and designated words without the medium [illegible] the alphabet.

The employment of letters to express ideas neither existing in the mind of the medium nor in mine, cannot evidently be explained by any psychological subterfuge. The name Blodget being indicated by reference to the alphabet, instead of Cato, which was promised, precludes the idea that it was learned from the mind of any mortal present.

It must be manifest that the greatest difficulty which I had to overcome during the investigation of which the preceding pages give a history, arose from the necessity of making every observation under such circumstances as to show that I was not deceived by the media.

But having latterly acquired the powers of a medium in a sufficient degree to interchange ideas with my spirit friends, I am no longer under the necessity of defending media from the charge of falsehood and deception. It is now my own character only that can be in question.

Upon this the occurrence of the manifestation to which I am about to allude rests.

The fact that my spirit sister undertook at one o'clock, on the 3d of July, 1855, to convey from the Atlantic Hotel, Cape May Island, a message to Mrs. Gourlay, No. 178 North Tenth street, Philadelphia, requesting that she would induce Dr. Gourlay to go to the Philadelphia Bank to ascertain the time when a note would be due, and report to me at half-past three o'clock; that she did report at the appointed time; and that on my return to Philadelphia, Mrs. Gourlay alleged herself to have received the message, and that her husband and brother went to the bank in consequence. With the idea received by the latter, my sister's report coincided agreeably to his statement to me. All this proves that a spirit must have officiated, as nothing else can explain the transaction.

The note clerk recollects the application, but does not appear to have felt himself called upon to take the trouble to get the register, which was not in his hands at the time. Hence the impression received by the applicants was not correct, but corresponded with the report made to me by my sister, which differed from the impression on my memory, and of course, was not obtained from my mind.

The apparatus of which the above cuts afford a representation are spiritoscopes, under modifications to which I resorted subsequently to the contrivance in which Pease's dial is employed. For Pease's "dial," disks are substituted, resembling those originally employed by me, as represented in Figs. I. and II. These last mentioned, however, were made to revolve under the index; while in Pease's apparatus the index revolves, the disk remaining at rest. The advantage of having the disk to revolve is, that the letter is always to be looked for, within the same space; whereas in operating with the other the eye has to follow the index through all its rapid movements.

(To be Continued.)

OLD MAN RESTORED TO YOUTH.

Kankakee, Ill., Jan. 16.—John Adams, who lives at Tuckerli, a little village in Kankakee County, is growing younger every day. He is now 85 years of age, and until very recently he was more feeble than most men of his time of life. But during the past few months a remarkable change has taken place. While before he was nearly blind, he has now recovered the entire use of his eyes, and is able to read the smallest print with great ease. His teeth had all gone, but recently he has cut an entirely new set and has suffered as much in the process as any baby while teething. He was nearly bald, with a small fringe of white hair around his head, but recently his hair has grown again. It is of a dark brown color, and seems to be growing very rapidly. The effect of the changes is to make him appear to be not more than 35 years of age.

JOHN ADAMS.

His face as yet is unchanged, but Mr. Adams believes that in course of time it will also be rejuvenated. As it is, his wrinkled skin and his snow-white beard form a remarkable contrast to the rest of his head.

Another strange feature of the case is that Mr. Adams is becoming stronger. While he was, until recently, even more feeble than most men of his years, he has become quite strong and can lift a cow with ease, and is one of the most athletic men in his neighborhood.

Physicians are at a loss to account for the remarkable transformation. Mr. Adams himself cannot give any reason for it. He has been following the same routine of life for years, rising at 5:30 o'clock every morning and breakfasting at 6. Mr. Adams does not use tea, coffee or any stimulant and does not smoke tobacco. He is five feet nine inches in height and weighs 198 pounds. Before he began to grow younger in appearance he weighed only 112 pounds.

F THE APPARATUS USED BY PROF. HARE IN HIS INVESTIGATION OF SPIRITUALISM.

MUSIC IN NERVOUS DISORDERS.

The value of music in the treatment of certain forms of nervous diseases has before now been called attention to by physicians. One advantage perhaps of this therapeutical agency is that in the event of its doing no good it is not likely to do harm. In a recent number of the Gazette Medicale attention was drawn to the remarkable result attending the administration of music to a little girl of three, who was afflicted with serious nervous disorders, resulting in epilepsy and paroxysms of fear, which kept her awake all night. The ordinary remedies including bromide of potassium, were tried without any effect, and at last the physician recommended the mother to play some soft, rather melancholy music to her daughter before putting her to bed. Chopin was recommended, especially the waltzes in the minor key. The remedy worked like a charm, for it is said that from the night the child went to bed under the influence of music she lost all her nervous symptons and slept without waking until morning. In order to prove that this was not the result of mere chance, the music was omitted on one evening, and the child passed a night of misery, not so intense as before the adoption of the treatment, but still very marked.

"Hypnotism Up to Date." By Sidney Flower. In the form of dialogue and story, the author presents very successfully a condensed account of hypnotism, its theory and practice up to date. Price, paper, 25 cents. Sold at this office.

MARVELOUS SPIRIT MANIFESTATIONS.

EXPRESS RAILWAY TRAIN NUMBER—WHAT BEFELL IT AND ITS BRAVE ENGINEER—PHANTOM VICTIMS OF THAT FATAL OPEN SWITCH—TRAIN WRECK IN THE GALT HOUSE—TRACK UPON THE SURFACE OF THE WATER—NUMBER 7 ASCENDS AND DESCENDS MT. HOLYOKE IN SAFETY.

A second conference of investigators seeking the cause of mysterious phenomena was held in Just a week after that already recorded, says the Cincinnati Enquirer. Mr. Lawrence Nolan was the first gentleman to give his experience, and his narrative is graphic and interesting.

"As some of you know," he began, "my father was a locomotive engineer. Among my earliest remembrances is a ride with him when his engine was hauling a freight train. The Superintendent saw me on this trip and told father it was against the rules to permit a child to ride upon a locomotive, and so this source of pleasure was afterward denied me.

"Three years after this occurrence father was given a passenger express, and then I enjoyed the privilege of riding upon his train as often as it suited me. I could see my parent at every considerable stop and we thoroughly enjoyed this companionship. It was interfered with when I reached my ninth year, for then I was placed at school; but no holiday came that found me absent from my father's train.

"All trains were required to stop at the town where we lived, for another road crossed our line there, and for probably half the runs it was a water station. I had a sympathetic teacher who permitted me to go every day and pass a word with father at his stopping point, and both enjoyed even this brief communion as

THE EVENT OF THE DAY.

"We had kept up this practice for near two years, when it was abruptly terminated without the fault of either.

"One dark day in November I went out for this little meeting of two or three minutes, and waited till the time passed for the train to arrive. I waited 10 minutes more, and then something prompted me to step into the telegraph office and make inquiry. A little knot of people were discussing something, but they stopped talking immediately on my entrance. The telegraph operator was startled when I confronted him.

"'Where's No. 7?' I asked.

"'Behind 22 minutes,' he said.

"'For what reason?'

"'Unavoidable detention.'

"I knew this was not a good answer, but would have gained nothing by saying so. Instead I said;

"'Then it ought to be here in five or six minutes?'

"'Probably not,' he answered, 'for the track is obstructed, and it will take them considerable time to clear it.'

"'What occasioned the obstruction?'

"I returned to the school, reported my disappointment, and begged permission to go out again after a recitation then about due.

"'You are at liberty to go now,' said the teacher, in a tremulous voice, 'and you need not return till

YOU SEE YOUR FATHER.'

"These words have rung in my ears ever since they were pronounced. I returned to the station for additional information. 'Nothing further received,' the operator said. Then I walked up and down the track in short circuits for an hour. 'No more news yet. Another hour and the reply was the same. Darkness had come on and I felt like going home, but what could I say to mother? I wandered down the track to a street crossing and sat upon the curbstone to think. People were constantly passing and in a few minutes I heard one say:

"'Poor Tom Nolan! What will Larry do without him?'

"'And his wife—it'll break her heart,' was the response.

"Instantly I was upon my feet. 'What has happened to Tom Nolan?' I asked. 'He is my father. Tell me all about it.'

"'Why—why,' stammered one of the men, 'they say he was hurt in an accident, but may be it's not true. Don't get frightened till you know certain.'

"I felt that it was true and lost no time in returning to the telegraph operator. He said father was among the injured, but he would give no details, pretending they were not yet received. I decided then I must go home and tell mother the substance of what I had heard and started to execute this resolution.

Our house was on the main street, but in the outskirts of the town. Near it was a narrow street, which terminated in the great thoroughfare, with a strong stone fence on either side—a place to excite fear in the darkness. On the night I am describing its than ever before, and a creeping fear came over me as I stopped and gazed into it. For the moment I was fascinated, and then I thought I discerned a distant light. This impression was soon made a certainty, and the light was approaching at great speed, with a motion of rapid and eccentric vibration. It came with a rush, but noiselessly. Suddenly the impression reached me that I was looking at the headlight of a locomotive. Five seconds later I discovered the outline of a long train of passenger coaches, all alight and bearing down toward me at a fearful speed, but there was no rail track on that street. At the moment this idea animated my thought the light threw its rays upon bright rails which were apparent continuously only a few feet in advance of the train, and appeared to end in short sections, but were renewed as the train advanced with bewildering rapidity.

GLOOM SEEMED MORE DENSE

In less space than required to mention it, the headlight streamed full upon me and at the same instant I recognized the locomotive as No. 26, the machine that always hauled No. 7, my father's express; and then his familiar face came into view, and he stood in his accustomed attitude, with his hand upon the throttle! What could it mean? This was the momentary thought as the train came opposite me, and then I saw it swerve suddenly, leave the main track and dash itself to fragments down a steep embankment, which in reality was not there, for the side of the street then reached by the express was occupied by the house and grounds of a banker, and his lawn was his pride. It was as beautifully terraced and well kept as any I have ever seen, and the idea of an embankment there was preposterous; but the train had run and was destroyed, and it came instantly to my comprehension that what I had seen was the reproduction of the accident that had on that day destroyed my father.

INTO AN OPEN SWITCH

"The light that a moment before had irradiated the scene went out in a deeper darkness, stunning to the eyes, and at first I saw nothing. Thought was benumbed. I felt helpless, and leaned for support against a fence. People passed without giving me notice, and luckily so, for I was out of my self, and coherent response would have been impossible. After an interval, which seemed to me long, but subsequent information proved it to have been very short, I heard a familiar voice calling my name. It was that of the superintendent of the Sabbath school I attended. He was on his way to my mother's house to offer words of consolation to her and myself, for he supposed us to be grieving over the ill news which everybody in town except those most interested had received. That father was dead had passed into a certainty with me when I saw the vision of the wrecked train; but mother was in ignorance of the great calamity that had thrust itself into her life so brutally. The good superintendent told me the story of the accident, and recommended that I keep it from mother till next morning. Father's night home was the next succeeding this. The sad news was kept from mother till the last moment, and then broken to her very gently.

SHE HAD DREAMED

almost a duplicate of my vision, and all day had felt that ill news would come, making the shock less sudden than otherwise it would have been.

"I have made the first vision circumstantial for the benefit of the remainder of my story. At every anniversary of my father's death this same vision has recurred, and at other intervals it has come with all its original force and startling impressiveness. Once on an anniversary occasion I was out in a boat with three companions on Indian River, Fla., and, having gone too far, night overtook us before we could get back to Tilman, where I was stopping. The date which marked this day had just occurred to me when I saw upon the western shore of the river the familiar express, propelled by Engine No. 26, and it bore down upon us at lightning speed. By their calm demeanor I knew that my companions saw nothing unusual, but, while this was grateful to me, my excitement was never more intense, threatening to attract attention before the final catastrophe. I saw the rails gleaming under the headlight, as in former occurrences, and when the express left the land and glided along on the surface of the river this phenomenon continued. Steel rails upon the water, bearing a long train of cars full of passengers, was an anomaly to even the

MOST VIVID IMAGINATION.

It leaped through the night, throwing out illuminating gleams in every direction, but noiseless as death, and, passing within thirty yards of our craft, it swerved from the straight course and ran into the inevitable open switch. As usual, my father stood in the cab with one hand on the throttle, but now there was a happy smile upon his face, as if he were engaged in congenial diversion. As usual, the vision was instantly submerged in the illimitable hiatus of mystery.

"Two years following this event I was on Mt. Holyoke, Mass., on the well-remembered anniversary, and, while sitting at the supper table with friends there I felt the usual premonition of my only vision. I never have this feeling of uncontrollable restlessness at any other time, and it is invariable in giving me notice as to what I must look for.

"Those who have visited Mt. Holyoke need not be told that the space upon its summit would fail to accomodate an ordinary railway train in a state of repose, and that such train could not move 200 feet in any direction without pitching down into the Valley of the Connecticut. There is just room enough for a small hotel with verandas projecting over precipices on three sides, and on the fourth side are two or three small buildings for storing food and fuel, and an abyss called

THE BOTTOMLESS PIT.

"Those who can remain upon this pinnacle an hour or two without becoming dizzypated and tumbling off are permitted to record their names in the red book kept for the behoof of distinguished visitors, and Bostonians sometimes gain this honor at the imminent risk of their lives.

"I had no doubt of the ability of my phantom train to traverse Mt. Holyoke, but I had tired of the catastrophe that followed its every appearance, and felt that some variation which would exclude the scene of death and destruction would be grateful. Excusing myself, I stepped out upon the veranda and saw the train flying up the eastern acclivity with the speed of the wind. Not as usual was its course straight ahead, but instead it wound around rocks and chasms with curves as graceful as those of a bird in its flight, throwing out luminous jets that bathed the mountain side in scintillant glory. Up it came and gained the summit with a fairy-like bound—this great impetuous force, the shadow of a power that has conquered infinitely more civilization than all the armies of the world—and now I looked for the dreaded catastrophe. At the foot of the declivity on the western slope flows the staid Connecticut, 3,400 feet below my point of vantage, and I shuddered at the plunge in prospect. But there was no time for regret. As never before had happened, my father waved his hand to me and I heard from his lips the old phrase, 'All's well,' accompanied by a bright smile.

"Then away went the train down the steep incline, making its way to the bottom by the same tactics that had marked its ascent, gained the track of the Connecticut River Railway and steamed away in the direction of South Hadley as if racing with fate. Was this finale in response to my desire? I think it was, for never thereafter was I called upon to witness the closing scene of the tragedy that darkened my life. All other particulars of the vision came in a form considerably modified twice a year, at times other than on the anniversary day, and these I do not know how to anticipate. Undoubtedly they have a purpose and use, and at some time I will

KNOW THEIR LESSON.

"That which came to me in Cincinnati had a humorous event. One evening I was standing at Sixth and Vine talking with a friend, and just as we parted I spied the headlight of old 26 coming down Vine, but afar off, beyond the canal. It was soon over the bridge, however, and came tearing down the busy thoroughfare in its old breakneck way. Nobody tried to escape from its track and nobody was hurt, notwithstanding the fact that men, women, children, even street cars, were frequently beneath its quick revolving wheels.

"I imagine it ran from the canal to the office of The Enquirer in about ten seconds, but it had not made even so much of its way when I started to run along Sixth in the direction of Walnut. At Fountain court I looked back and saw the locomotive partly turned into Sixth street and at a stand! The fiery eye of the engine seemed fixed on me, and I continued running, now in panic. Fearful of that which as a boy I saw with no emotion but grief, I made strenuous exertions to escape it—to fly from that which no other person saw. At Walnut street I again looked back, and now the train was moving slowly in my direction. Soon it increased its speed a little, and when I had almost reached Main street it was close at my heels. I turned and ran into the Galt House for protection. It turned at the same time, and I saw it run into the basement of that popular hotel as plainly as I ever saw anything in my life. But it is useless to look for it there now, for since that time I have seen it at Quebec, at Pike's Peak and San Francisco.

"I admit that I am a nervous man, with occasional spasms and many cranky notions; that I have been pronounced insane by a board of quacks, and by the highest medical authority in Cincinnati as sane as the average man; that my business ventures have been invariably successful, and that I have accumulated money enough to live on my income and have a little left for the entertainment of friends and the relief of the needy."

A REVENGEFUL SPIRIT.

"My experience has been large and varied," said a gentleman who is known to possess mediumistic powers, "but there is a little in it which psychic students would set down as extraordinary. One incident occurs to me illustrating the malevolence of an evil spirit, which I have never known to be excelled. Perhaps it is worth telling.

"A lady whom I have known since she was a child became, through circumstances she could not control, an important witness in a murder trial. She is one of the most modest, sedate, retiring and sincere among all the ladies I know, and the idea of going upon the witness stand made her sick for several weeks previous to the trial. What she knew of the facts in the case grew out of her selection as the custodian of certain documents which the murderer committed his crime to obtain, but the real connection I have forgotten. The man was convicted and executed.

"From a mutual friend the lady learned of my mediumistic powers, and out of curiosity she came to me for a sitting. We held the slate together, in the usual way, but it was several times snatched from our hands and thrown upon the floor. At length we heard writing by vigorous hand. Upon examination we found the slate filled with a message from Sam Eldersmith.

"'Oh, I don't want it,' protested my sitter. That is the murderer against whom I testified.'

"'May I read it?'

"'Certainly, but not aloud.'

"A wise precaution. I read it, and of all the foul language I ever saw or heard this specimen was the most vile. The lady saw my confusion and hastened to relieve it.

"'I am sorry,' said she, 'to have you annoyed by this scoundrel, but he is determined to pursuse me. I went to Mrs. J. last week and tried to get a message from a friend, but this bad man interfered and prevented communication with others. And he wrote the most absurd and disreputable words. Of course he has done the same way now and must forego the satisfaction of an acceptable message.'

"She was annoyed by this demoniac spirit till the day of her death, and I think he had much to do in hastening that event."

T. P.

SPIRITUALISM IN CANADA.

To the Editor:—The Methodist Church here at South Parkdale, three miles out of the business center, is said to be mortagaged for $75,000. Last Sunday evening a collection taken at the church raised $2,500 for the Lord! Spiritualists may take lessons of the Methodists yet. The authorities are too pious to let electricity work on Sunday, so no street cars run on "the Lord's day." But let us score one for the Baptists. They are in the van of progress in some ways. The Baptist church here insisted on being taxed, like all other property, and they paid $1,250 taxes this year, voluntarily, while all the other churches shirked all they could; and then coerce people to stay within hearing of pulpit thunder, because they cannot get away—without they walk. Having no work to do in the United States, I concluded to migrate, and am on the soft side of Lake Ontario, where I find a class of Spiritualists capable of appreciating philosophy as well as phenomena, and I hope to help them in their laudable efforts to educate the people to think and reason on religion as well as other topics.

Brother Henderson, president, is a man of fine qualities, and devoted to the cause, and his wife has done valuable work as a medium for forty years, and still keeps a center of spiritual gravity at her home, where the angels of earth, and heaven meet on reciprocal terms every Sunday evening.

Mrs. McDonald, well and widely known as a progressive educator and large-minded reformer in many movements, has recently taken a hand, and is an active member of the new society, organized by Mrs. Loe Prior. Mrs. Guthrie is full of the Holy Ghost and healing power; fine forcible, sensible, spiritual and magnetic and her hands are "a quickening power." Mr. Robbins, chairman of the working committee, is full of energy, and efficent in his work. A good combination, so far as I can see, is at the spiritual helm, and I hope the work will broaden into a permanent and growing power to be felt all the year around, and in every part of the Dominion. I like Toronto and its people, so far as I have come into their spheres, and in summer it must be a delightful place to live. Canada is as free as the United States from all unhealthy relations with the Mother Country. I had formed the notion, in some way, that it was dominated by Catholicism, and taxed by Great Britain—neither of which is true: but church influence is strong, and moulds the political element mostly to its will, but it is not Catholic here, not nearly so much as in the United States. Here, Irish policemen are not Catholics. Tonight the mercury is 10° below zero, and it is reported 20° below in Buffalo! Yours for the good we all may do.

LYMAN C. HOWE.

PASSED TO SPIRIT-LIFE.

Mrs. Margaret Mathison passed to the higher life January 14. She was born in the State of New York, in the year 1813. She moved to Grand Rapids at an early day. She leaves an only sister, Miss Sarah E. Williams. Both sisters were pioneers in the cause of Spiritualism, and are known and loved for what they have done. Margaret was fully prepared for the change called death, and committed herself into the hands of the dear ones that have been her constant companions during her long and useful life.

"They called her from the better land,
And one bright spirit led the way;
She saw the angel's beckoning hand,
And felt she could no longer stay.
O, white-robed peace! thy gentle cross
Gave to her trusting heart no pain,
And that which is our earthly loss
Is unto her eternal gain."—Poems of Progress.

Mrs. Lindsay, of the West Side Society, preached the funeral sermon.

WE WANT TO DO MORE GOOD.

And in order to do it, we should reach 1,000,000 new readers. Help us to do it. Let each subscriber get an additional subscriber. Read the announcement on fifth page, headed "Fifteen Cents," and then act in our behalf.

FIFTEEN CENTS!

PROF. BARRETT'S ADDRESS.

Other Subjects Treated of Especial Interest.

The Progressive Thinker is to be sent three months for 15 cents to all New subscribers.

Spiritualists, keep posted in current Spiritual events.

Why remain in ignorance? Why don't you keep posted in regard to the great Spiritualistic movement? Prof. Barrett delivered an address before the National Association of Spiritualists. It was an important one, and should be read by every Spiritualist in this broad land. We have had his address (which covers three pages of The Progressive Thinker) and five other important lectures and articles embodied in one paper, which we propose to send forth to illuminate the minds of those who have not had an opportunity to read them.

The first page of this paper contains the lecture by Col. Ingersoll, given in a Chicago pulpit. It scintillates throughout.

The second page contains a highly interesting lecture by Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, on the "Dwellings of the Dead."

The third page has a splendid article on "Science versus Theology," in review of Andrew D. White's two superb volumes.

The fourth page has another excellent lecture by Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, on "Spiritual Unfoldment."

The fifth page is very suggestive throughout, and is devoted to the "Hindoo Teachers—They Will Try to Capture the United States."

On the sixth page commences Prof. Barrett's admirable address, occupying three pages. In order that all whom this notice may reach, can secure this address, as well as the other lectures and articles, we have made arrangements to have 10,000 copies printed to be sent out free to new-trial or new yearly subscribers. This paper is well worth 25 cents. Every Spiritualist who wishes to know what has been going on should carefully read it. Our regular subscribers have, of course, had the contents thereof.

We will also, in connection with this paper, send out another equally as valuable. The first page contains an excellent lecture by Virchand R. Gandhi, a learned Hindoo. The remaining seven pages contain the wonderfully thrilling narrative (founded on facts) entitled, "The Night the Light Went Out," exhibiting many of the inside workings of the Catholic Church. Besides the address by Mr. Ghandi and the remarkable narrative, "The Night the Light Went Out," the first page has an excellent communication obtained through Ouija. The second page has a startling statement in reference to the "Romish Octopus—It Is Winding Its Poisonous Coils Around Washington." The poem on the same page, "The Sad Picture of a Wrecked Human Life," is wonderfully suggestive. The third page has a striking illustration showing how the Romish Church treats heretics. This page and the fourth also have a continuation of the "Romish Octopus." The fifth page has that remarkable poem, "St. Peter At the Gate." Every freethinker should read it. It is full of excellent "points." It also contains interesting facts in reference to the Romish Church and offices. The sixth, seventh and eighth pages have the following: "Monasteries and Convents—Where Those Alive Are Entombed." "Rider Haggard and the Immuring of Nuns." This paper alone is well worth the price of a year's subscription.

Every Spiritualist in this broad land should have these two papers. Our regular subscribers have already read their contents. For Fifteen cents we will send the Progressive Thinker for three months to all New trial subscribers and also send these two valuable papers.

Bear in mind that by New subscriber we mean one who has not been on our list for at least three months. Those of our present subscribers who wish to buy these two papers can have them both now for five cents. All of our regular subscribers have read their contents.

Send The Progressive Thinker three months to some friend, and thus get him interested in the cause. Stamps taken on small orders.

VERILY, WHAT NEXT?

Under the head of "A New Programme," we announced a radical new departure from the general routine of work assumed by the average Spiritualist paper. We do not follow old established usages unless we are thoroughly convinced that they are the best, which is very rarely the case. We established the original dollar Spiritualist paper, and introduced a new era in the line of Spiritualistic journalism. Others have followed after us, but in all candor the only thing in which they have equalled us, is in the price of the paper—one dollar.

We now have three books which we send out at a nominal cost to our subscribers: The two volumes of the Encyclopaedia of Death, and Life in the Spirit-World, and The Next World Interviewed. The three volumes will be sent out to those who remit a year's subscription to The Progressive Thinker on the following terms:

The Encyclopaedia of Death and Life in the Spirit-World, when ordered singly, will be sold at 50 cents per copy. The Next World Interviewed at 35 cts. Those who order the three books at one time will get them as follows:

Vol. I. of the Encyclopaedia	$ .45
Vol. II. of the Encyclopaedia	.45
The Next World Interviewed	.35
Total	$1.25

NO. OF PAGES IN EACH BOOK.

Vol. I. of the Encyclopaedia	400
Vol. II. of the Encyclopaedia	400
The Next World Interviewed	250

Each of these books is neatly and substantially bound in cloth, and printed on fine paper, and as prices go, are well worth one dollar per volume.

Bear in mind that this Library is being formed for the exclusive benefit of our subscribers, and all orders for one or more of these books must be accompanied with a year's subscription to The Progressive Thinker. To all others the price will be one dollar per copy.

Just think of the great good that will be accomplished by this plan which we have outlined. Tell your neighbors about it, and get them to subscribe for The Progressive Thinker.

Remember, please, that in order to obtain these three books for $1.25, you must send along a year's subscription to The Progressive Thinker; the paper one year, and the three books costing $2.25. It is the subscription to the paper that enables us to send you these three books at cost.

..GENERAL SURVEY..

THE SPIRITUALISTIC FIELD—ITS WORKERS, DOINGS, ETC., THE WORLD OVER.

Bear in mind, please, that we cannot publish weekly reports of meetings. Whenever a change is made in speakers, or anything of special interest, send us a brief item, please. A great deal can be expressed in a dozen lines; but long reports will not be used. Meetings are of local interest only. We extend a cordial invitation to all speakers to send in their appointments to lecture, and general movements, which will be read by at least 40,000. We go to press early Monday morning, and items must reach us as early as Friday or Saturday in order to have immediate insertion.

Communications must always be accompanied by the full name and address of the writer, or no attention will be paid to them.

E. R. Kidd writes from Canton, Ohio: "Thinking that a little news from the greatest advertised town in the country during the last presidential campaign might be of interest to your many readers, and especially so, in this part of the world, I beg permission to say a few words in behalf of Spiritualism here. We are gradually but surely recovering from the set-back given to our cause a year ago by one H. T. Stanley, an account of which was published in The Progressive Thinker. Notwithstanding the strong opposition here, Spiritualism is steadily gaining ground. The clergy of this city would be surprised, did they know, what a large number of their flocks were looking elsewhere than in the church for light, and proof of immortality. We have within our ranks here, Mr. and Mrs. Tiffany, formerly of Montpelier, Ind. Mrs. Tiffany is a grand woman as well as an excellent trumpet medium. Being a good, true, honest and pure woman, her guides likewise are such. So also, can the pure denizens of the spirit-world use her to communicate with their friends of earth. How often is it the case (and it's only too true), that the strong physical medium is not what he should be in a moral sense, thereby barring out the more pure and angelic friends on the spirit-side of life, shutting the door as it were, for it is impossible for them to come within his aura. Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Kates have been creditably serving the Massillon Society (our sister city) all of this week, and as I understand, with success. Next week we hope to have them in Canton."

S. H. Ewell writes from Romeo, Mich.: "The Island Lake Camp Association is making arrangements for its third annual camp, which will begin on Thursday, July 29, and end on Tuesday, August 31—five Sundays. The attendance the second year was double that of the first year, and there is every prospect of the attendance this year being double that of last year. The following persons are the officers: S. H. Ewell, director and president; Wm. Murray, director and treasurer; Effie F. Josselyn, director and secretary; A. Anscomb, A. G. Brown, Richard Bartlett and A. B. Smith, directors."

Mrs. Amanda A. Cate writes from Haverhill, Mass.: "My sojourn at Bridgewater was a very pleasant one. The guides gave a parlor lecture Sunday evening, January 3, at the home of Miss O'Neil, one of your subscribers. It was the first meeting of the kind ever held in Bridgewater. The subject was, 'What Is Spiritualism, and Its Mission to Humanity?' The audience consisted of Episcopalians, Unitarians, Swedenborgians, with here and there a pronounced Spiritualist. I never met a more appreciative audience or one more in sympathy with this great truth. Many thanked me for the good the lecture had done them, and for the light it had given them on the subject; for several had never heard a Spiritualist lecture. One gentleman—an Episcopalian—told me he was a great deal more of a Spiritualist than when he came into the room. You see it is the truth that all are seeking, call it by what name you may, and all are Spiritualists at heart. Kindly correct through your paper the name signed to my article on 'Obsession' in issue of January 16. It should be Mrs. Amanda A. Cate."

Georgina McIntyre, mystic healer and teacher of occult science, receives those who are interested in these subjects, at her home, 1891 Washington boulevard, every Thursday, from 2 to 5 and from 8 to 10 p. m. These meetings are made enjoyable with music and recitations, and with refreshments in the evening. All are welcome.

A grand mass-meeting of the National Spiritualists' Association will be held in the First Spiritual Temple, corner Exeter and Newbury streets, Boston, Mass., on Tuesday, February 2, 1897. Morning, 10:45; afternoon, 2:30; evening, 7:45. Harrison D. Barrett, president of the N. S. A., will preside. All are invited to come and hear the speakers, the mediums, the singing, the great organ. Come and see the finest temple. Come and have a social time with your friends. Seats free all day and evening. See particulars in the Banner of Light. J. Browne Hatch, Jr., State Agent N. S. A., chairman of arrangements.

In the Canton (Ohio) News-Democrat, E. R. Kidd mentions various views of heaven and hell, as held by noted men, and says: "Modern Spiritualism teaches quite a different doctrine, and instead of the Spiritualist having an opinion, a belief, a hope, concerning this 'heaven and hell,' and the proper definition of these important words, he has a knowledge of their true meaning. Heaven is a condition and not a locality. So, also, is hell a condition. Man, by his thoughts and acts and deeds, can have heaven within him; likewise a hell within his soul. Pure thoughts, kindly acts, loving and consoling words, are God-like, therefore good. God means good; therefore if man lives a God-like life, he is good, for God is good and is within him. Upon the other hand, if man lives a wicked life, the devil (hell) is within him. The hellish condition (called hell) is the result of evil deeds, evil thoughts, and immoral habits, and cannot be hidden in spirit-life. You are just exactly what you are, and there is no possible way of hiding it. Some linger in this condition (hell), for years and years; others see their error and grow out of it. Humanity was not responsible for being brought into this world, and the same supreme power that brought us into the world will care for us in the next. We will be assigned to our stations where we rightfully belong—the result of the deeds done while living in the flesh. The ministering angels will lend a helping hand, and by their angelic guidance, many a poor, unfortunate is led out of darkness (hell) into the light (heaven)."

Thomas M. Locke, president, writes of the Philadelphia Spiritualists' Society, Handel and Hadyn Hall, northeast corner of Eighth and Spring Garden: "We have with us during this month Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood, of Chicago, and Mrs. Maggie Waite, of California. This combination is drawing crowded houses. So anxious are the people to listen to the grand scientific truths demonstrated by Brother Lockwood, and the phenomena given by this most wonderful instrument in the hands of the spirit-world, Mrs. Maggie Waite, that we find it impossible to accommodate the crowds that come to hear them. We recognize Brother Lockwood as one of the ablest expounders of our philosophy on the platform to-day, and predict a grand future for him. The time has come when the thinkers of this age, demand not only speakers of his type, but a demonstration of the same, in such a way that it appeals to their common sense and reason. And we have no hesitation in pronouncing Mrs. Maggie Waite to be one of the grandest test mediums on our platform to-day. Prof. Lockwood and Mrs. Waite have both become great favorites with our people, and we hope to have them both with us again in the near future."

M. E. H. writes: "To me the sprinkling of infants is absurd and of no use to infants or adults. The Man of Nazareth said: 'Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such are the kingdom of heaven.' Infants are as free from sin as the virgin snow from dirt."

Flora S. Jackson writes from Milwaukee, Wis.: "In a late number of your paper you copied from the Milwaukee Sentinel an article describing Mr. F. Corden White's experience in meeting on the street the materialized form of Mr. M. M. Bostwick, the lecturer for the Milwaukee Ethical Society, a few hours after his death. A few days ago I went to an independent slate-writing medium—a stranger to me, and only lately come to our city. I gave no names. With other messages was the following, the conditions being strictly test: 'Dear Friends—Am doing well and getting strength. Have done my best to show myself. M. M. Bostwick.' This would seem to be in corroboration of Mr. White's experience, and I send it as a proof that a strongly individualized spirit does not even need rest or sleep after passing through the change called death."

Henry Stevens writes from Keithsburg, Ill.: "I am only an investigator, and yet I find The Progressive Thinker intensely interesting. How Spiritualists can get along without such a paper is more than I can understand, and yet there are some ancient Spiritualists who do not consider a Spiritualist paper of any benefit. We have not very many Spiritualists in our little city at present. If at any time a medium should chance to come this way, we would be pleased to entertain them for a few days. We have had a magnetic healer, Dr. G. H. Beal, of Rockland, Ill., here for a short time and he did some excellent work."

I. L. VanWinkle writes from Farmington, Wash.: "We have some startling spiritual manifestations here near my town, but it is little understood by the people and but few seem willing to speak of it. There is a young girl about fourteen years of age, at her mountain home near here, that has been in a singular condition for the past three months or more, apparently dead, taking no nourishment, and apparently blind and without feeling. Still she reads any print, though she cannot see it, and will at any time tell the time of day, and tell of wonderful things."

Sara L. Hard, M. D., secretary, writes: "Spiritualism in Denver is weekly presented in its higher philosophical teachings in most able manner by Dr. G. C. B. Ewell. This is his third year successively in this city, and demonstrates the double advantage of continuous work, in the progression and constantly increasing higher demand for advanced thought in his audiences, and his own development and growth in inspirational power. Respect for the latter day dispensation is also gaining ground, in being held year after year as a philosophy or truth to live and die by. His discourse on Sunday morning last, on 'Human Life,' was pronounced by his auditors a masterpiece above all his previously eloquent, inspiring efforts. In the evening his subjects are taken from the audience and lectures are supplemented by tests, which grow startlingly direct and accurate from month to month. 'Better than Slater,' was heard from the audience not long since. The Lyceum and Ladies' Aid form a prominent feature of the work of the First Spiritual Church, of which Dr. Ewell is pastor. It is hoped the responsibility and demands of a true, pure, elevating philosophy will be rooted and abide with Denver Spiritualists."

E. J. Bowtell writes from Massillon, Ohio: "G. W. Kates and wife have just completed a most successful series of meetings under the auspices of the Spiritual and Religious Association of this city. The attendance on each occasion was large and the results perfectly satisfactory in every way. The lectures, whether given by Mr. or Mrs. Kates, were exactly fitted to the needs of the people and were most favorably received. The tests were convincing. January 24 I resume my own lectures for this association in the evening. Sunday afternoons and Saturday evenings I speak in Canton. I am open for engagements on other evenings of the week within moderate distances and shall be glad to receive calls for camp-meeting work. Address 402 S. Market street, Canton, Ohio."

Mrs. H. L. Bigelow writes: "The First Spiritual Union of San Jose has engaged Georgia Cooley for the present month. Her lectures (trance) are good, also her character readings and tests from the platform give good satisfaction. Our morning meetings and lyceum are growing more interesting every Sunday. Sister Seal is still with us, lending a helping hand whenever opportunity presents. As a speaker and test medium she is excellent, and has made some wonderful cures through her healing powers. She gives daily sittings in her rooms, as also do Sisters York and Saine. There are others whose work is in another direction. Sister McMeekin is holding a public meeting for healing through the mental power, which is largely attended."

E. W. Sprague closes his engagement at Fort Wayne, Ind., January 31, and goes to Philadelphia for February. Address for engagements 965 Grove street, Meadville, Pa.

W. A. R. writes from Cleveland, O.: "We have two new mediums whom I must not forget to mention: Mrs. Nellie C. Mosler (the Maggie Gaule of Cleveland), whose tests never fail to be recognized, and she often gives from thirty to forty from our rostrum at one seance. Then we have Mrs. May Dorn, whose materializing seances are not excelled by anyone, who is giving seances Sunday evenings and Wednesday afternoons at her residence, 18½ Dexter Place. Many who visit her rooms come away satisfied, having, as they assure me, met their friends from the other side."

Ella Woodward writes from Toledo, Ohio: "The First Alliance of Progressive Thought Spiritual Society of Toledo is honored this month by the services of Dr. Adah Sheehan, of Cincinnati, Ohio. Enough cannot be said in praise of this talented lady. She places our philosophy on a scientific basis that the most skeptical dare not question. The subject of 'Mediumship' was handled by her in its true light. Dr. Sheehan has been called back to her home on business, but will return to speak to us Sunday evening on 'The Needs of the Hour,' from a spiritual standpoint. Would that the whole world could hear her."

R. M. Mulvany gives his views as follows: "Soul, spirit and body are distinct each in themselves. The Soul is the personality, the I am that has no beginning or ending; it is the divine principle. Spirit, or the astral body, is a clothing of the soul, in which the soul dwells for a period of time, and which is drawn from the spirit essences of this earth, and which has its beginning in form, at the same time and with the mortal body, but does not end with that body, but may continue for ages, or until it has fulfilled its mission. The mortal body has drawn from the material world and serves the soul as an instrument through which it may gain its material experience."

Frank T. Ripley has been engaged by the New York Spiritual Camp at Freeville, N. Y., for the whole season, as speaker and platform test medium

A subscriber writes: "There was a large and interested audience assembled at the People's Home Spiritual Society, at Bricklayers' Hall, 93 Peoria street, on the 17th inst. Services were opened by the well-known medium, Dr. White, he being the speaker. Subject, 'Hold Fast to That Which Is Good,' followed by H. M. French in his remarkable tests which were most convincing proof of the spiritual existence of the departed loved ones. These meetings are under the charge of G. L. S. Jenifer, who is an earnest worker in the cause."

G. W. Kates and wife may be addressed until April 1, at 97 Edinburgh street, Rochester, N. Y. They will hold there a special observance of the Forty-ninth Anniversary of Spiritualism, and on March 29 and 30, endeavor to organize a New York State Association of Spiritualists.

S. M. H. writes: "I heartily coincide with W. H. Bach on the question of music. I don't think we as Spiritualists have any right to pick up tunes that first started in variety shows, such as 'The Sidewalks of New York,' and others. It is high time we took a decided stand in the matter, and put such out. If we can't have anything uplifting in the way of music, we had better keep mum."

G. W. Kates writes: "Mrs. Kates and myself have served the Spiritualists of Massillon, Ohio, in a seven nights' series of meetings in the opera house. We had large audiences every night and the meetings seem to have stirred the little city and created a widespread interest. A local society has been organized there, with Mr. A. Y. Gordon as president. Good workers passing that way will find a pleasant place to labor and have earnest assistance. The proper local workers with whom to co-operate must come forward in every locality and the friends there appreciate this fact. Massillon is certainly a promising little city for the cause of Spiritualism."

Dr. E. B. Craddock writes from Concord, N. H.: "Wake up, New Hampshire! The medical bloodhounds are after your mediums. A bill is in the legislature to block the wheels of our God-given instruments, and thus deprive us of the many blessings we so much enjoy from our spirit friends. Two years ago they met with a set-back, and the bill was laid over for this session, to gain more strength. Now, friends, if you love your cause and respect your belief, experiences and the truth, help them now. Of course it will rest on a few to work like slaves for the coming generation. Now help them by sending books, pamphlets, or anything pertaining to the cause, as by helping them you help yourself. Call on your representatives, and make your impressions on them for liberty."

A spirit writes the following through Mrs. Maria Robinson, of this city: "Oh, friends, let us one and all make a happy band, joining the hearts of our spirit friends in true spiritual work with us. Frail instruments are we, held by a mighty power. May God bestow his blessings upon us, that we may use that for the good of mankind. May each word fall, if but a tiny seed, on fertile soil. Let the truth of Spiritualism spread over this mighty land. May many a burdened, weary heart beat in sympathy with those who mourn, helping each loved one by the mighty power of prayer. As bands are forming to assist us in our material work, may we also assist them in the spirit work."

Mass convention under the auspices of the National Spiritualists' Association and the Michigan State Spiritual Association, on February 5, 6 and 7, 1897, at Lansing, Michigan, in the Star Theater, corner Washington avenue and Ottawa street. February 5, 9 a. m., meeting of board of trustees, and various committees, at Star Theater, informal reception of visitors, etc.; 2 p. m., call to order by the president; address of welcome by Judge Q. A. Smith, of Lansing; response by the vice-president, Mrs. Abbie E. Sheets, of Grand Ledge. 7:30 p. m., opening address by Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, of Chicago, introduced by Prof. H. D. Barrett, of Washington, D. C., president of the National Spiritualists' Association. February 6, 9 a. m., conference, conducted by Dr. A. B. Spinney, of Reed City, led by Martha E. Root, of Bay City; 2 p. m., addresses by Anna L. Robinson, Port Huron, and Mrs. Julia M. Walton, of Jackson; 7:30 p. m., addresses by Mrs. Nellie S. Baade, of Detroit, and Eva Payne Hopkins, of Owosso. February 7, 10:30 a. m., addresses by Celia M. Nickerson, of Lansing, and Dr. A. B. Spinney, of Reed City; 2 p. m., addresses by L. V. Moulton, of Grand Rapids, and Martha E. Root, of Bay City; 7:30 p. m., address by Prof. H. D. Barrett, president of the N. S. A., and closing by L. V. Moulton, president of M. S. S. A. All intending to come should write in advance to the secretary, Mrs. May F. Ayres, 129 River street, Lansing, Mich.

Mrs. C. Catlin writes encouragingly of the good work being accomplished by the Band of Harmony and Church of the Soul under the ministrations of Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond. The Band of Harmony never stood on so lofty a platform as at the present time. She speaks of the Church of the Soul as follows: "Ever since the reorganization there has been a growing feeling among the members that a change to the evening would not only benefit the society, but would accommodate our friends better than the morning service, many of them being so placed that domestic duties have made it impossible for them to attend in the morning. The only reason that could be urged against this change being that in order to do so, we must give up the theater, as of course we could not lease it for an evening service. After due deliberation, however, and consultation with the members of the council and church, the trustees decided to make the change, and on Sunday, January 17, we held our first meeting in our new home, Union Hall, 412 Masonic Temple, which if not so pretentious as Schiller theater, is exceedingly comfortable, home-like and quiet, the only thing being that it is not quite large enough. Last Sunday evening it was well filled, and our friends must be promptly on time in order to get a seat."

The friends of the late Father Williams are requested to meet at National Hall, No. 681 W. Lake street, at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m., January 31, 1897. Mrs. S. F. DeWolf and others will officiate. The Continental Singers will sing.

"Just the Same" writes: "I prize The Progressive Thinker very highly, and lend mine to all who will read it. I would be glad to know it was in every house in our land, for no person can read it carefully without being benefited by the purity of its teachings. Long live The Progressive Thinker. May good spirits strengthen and sustain Brother Francis in the noble efforts he is making to shed heaven's light unto the souls in darkness in earth-life."

Lucinda B. Chandler, that well known and earnest worker, will deliver a lecture on the evening of February 2nd at the Peoples' Institute, corner Van Buren and Leavitt street. Wm. Bourgeouis will furnish music, all are welcome.

THE MAGNITUDE OF THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER.

Anyone who will casually glance over The Progressive Thinker will be surprised at the vast amount of reading matter we publish, and furnish for one dollar. Commence at the first page, for example, and just glance over the "heading" of each article, and you will wonder how such a rich feast can be furnished for the sum of only two cents. We publish by actual measurement made in linear inches (and the same width of column and same kind of type) over twenty-five feet more of reading matter than our contemporary, the Light of Truth. Just imagine a column of reading matter twenty-five feet in length, and then you can readily perceive how we crowd into The Progressive Thinker such a vast amount of varied reading matter. These twenty-five feet are equivalent to two large pages of our paper. We cannot only publish highly interesting extracts from leading dailies touching on the spiritual phenomena, and the news in reference to Spiritualism the world over, but we can also give besides more miscellaneous reading matter than any other dollar Spiritualist paper. Carefully analyze the paper. Read on the first page the "Pacific Coast Thought Flashes," by Ernest S. Green. Then peruse the funeral sermon by Mrs. Richmond, over the remains of Mrs. Anna Orvis, and then consider what G. T. Lamont says.

Then pass to the second page and carefully examine "Spiritualism and Religion," "What Is Life," "Law of Evolution," "Bible Spiritualism," and "Spirits of Animals."

Now open the third page—a highly interesting page of suggestive thought, by H. W. Boozer, President Barrett, C. J. Johnson and others.

Then you come to the fourth page, with various items and articles of interest, including the interesting narrative by Carlyle Petersilea, and the able article by that patriarch in the cause of Spiritualism—Moses Hull.

Now turn to the fifth page and read what Prof. Hare and Lyman C. Howe say, and then pass to the "Marvelous Spirit Manifestations," taken from the Cincinnati Enquirer.

Now glance over the "General Survey" on the sixth page, and see what is being said and done the world over.

The seventh page comes next with its rich store of thought, and then the eighth page, with its interesting items and advertisements.

With such a feast is it any wonder that The Progressive Thinker still flourishes, being the only Spiritualist paper in the United States, that was not run at an actual loss during the year just closed.

From The Freethinker, London, England.

James C. Douglas says, in the Journal of Dental Science: "The parish monthly nurse of Churchman, Gloucestershire, used invariably, after public baptism, to wash out the mouth of the infant with some of the remaining sanctified water as a safeguard against toothache."

The physical slave has no bodily freedom; the mental slave no intellectual freedom. The chattel slave was procured for a monetary price; the owners of mental slaves purchase them with religious, political, and other falsities. Fear of hell is the religious slave-driver's whip and bloodhounds, which prevent mental slaves from seeking their intellectual and spiritual freedom.

General Booth has a new plan for raising the needful. A farmer might set aside a field and say that whatever it produces shall go into the Lord's treasury—that is, into Booth's exchequer. A cottager might say: "That hen shall be consecrated; her eggs and chickens shall be used for the kingdom." A beekeeper might select one hive, a shopkeeper one article of sale, and a laboring man some portion of his time. Even a corner of a gold mine might be set aside in the same way. Booth is not above taking the output of "a gold mine altogether." Of course not. Whoever thought he was? No doubt he would rather have a gold mine than any number of consecrated hens.

A Northern clergyman has adopted the early Christian method of saluting his flock—that is, the female portion of it—irrespective of time or place. The younger the choir-girl, the more unctuous the kiss. On his parochial visits he slobbers over any female present, and on a recent visit an objecting new woman hauled off and dealt out such a sounding thwack that the old gentleman's eye went into mourning for a week.

Bishop Moorhouse is fond of dilating upon the horrible effects of secular education in Australia. The question was last year submitted to the direct vote of the people, and by an overwhelming majority they decided to retain it. We now read that the executive of the National Scripture Education League, at a meeting held recently, presided over by the Bishop of Melbourne, unanimously agreed to abandon the idea of endeavoring to secure the introduction of Scripture lessons into the State-schools by a plebiscite of the people. Holy Joe will probably endeavor to secure his ends in some less open way.

Marie, Countess of Caithness and Duchess of Pomar, set the way in believing herself an incarnation of Mary, Queen of Scots; and a few years ago it was said in a spiritist paper that there were no fewer than six incarnations of this lady living at the same time, including Mrs. Besant. One of these Marys is now being searched for by the French police. She got a wealthy old lady to believe that she, the elder one, was an incarnation of Elizabeth, who had to expiate the beheading of Mary by giving pecuniary reparation to her former victim. The reincarnated Mary claimed a nephew of the reincarnated Elizabeth as her Bothwell, and the pair made off ostensibly to Scotland. Not receiving any news from Holyrood palace, Elizabeth sagely came to the conclusion that she had been robbed, and Bothwell and Mary are both wanted.

Some ingenious person has made an anagram on the word "Congregationalist," the letters being used to bring out "a scant religion."

Professor Elliot Coues, who is somewhat given to religious vagaries, has lately emerged from the toils of Theosophy, and celebrates his emancipation by the following remarks: "My compliments to the Theosophists of North America, or as many as can be found, and I want to give them some sound, wholesome advice. First, those who wish it can remain fools; second, let them get unfooled if they can; and, third, turn fakirs if they must. I have investigated the question of Theosophy, in both its psychological and its ethical aspects, and the conclusion I have reached is that it is a vile, wicked humbug."

The Lagos Weekly Record says the natives who are Moslems are less superstitious than those who are Christians. "And in respect to polygamy, they all practise it—the Moslems openly, the Christians covertly. If polygamy is a sin, then the Moslems commit one sin openly, while the Christians, by practising a deception, commit two."

"Prohibited in Canada" is printed on the top of our New York contemporary, the Truthseeker. That journal is principally circulated through the mail, and the late Postmaster General of Canada, being a good bigoted Christian, took it into his head to confiscate all copies sent into the Dominion. There is now a new Postmaster-General, and we hope to hear that he has altered this disgraceful state of things. People don't pay the head of the Post Office to tell them what they shall read. His business is to carry and deliver, and not to cry "Stand and deliver!" to decent editors.

From Two Worlds, London, England.

MOZART'S EVIDENCES.

I say, therefore, put the whole world together, all the personal experience of mankind, and their ideas will always transcend their actual performance. I will take the idea of music, of harmony. Consult Mozart, and what does he say? He says he "seems in the inward expanse to hear the most magnificent strains of abounding harmony, and all he does when he writes or performs them is simply to try to imitate them." Ask him, "Did you ever succeed in making a perfect imitation of what your soul heard?" and he will tell you, "No; very far from it."

THE REALMS OF PURE TRUTH.

How is it with the artist—does he succeed in completely transferring to the canvas the idea that informs his soul? His idea exists in the realm of pure thruth, and cannot be perfectly transferred to the canvas. The painting on the canvas or the musical composition is only an effort to reduce the intuitions of perfect beauty and of perfect harmony to expression; to subject to the conditions of time and space those divine laws of the infinite Excellence which live properly only in the bosom of Supreme Love.

THE LIGHT OF WISDOM.

Hence these sublime principles of the reason, viz.: Justice, Love, Law, Light, Harmony, Liberty, Beauty, Perfection—these are not inductions out of the facts, out of the objects of experience. They are the spontaneous revelations of the divine perfections that exist in the substance of which we are composed. Hence the only substance in us is that intelligence, which, operating from within through the senses, fills the body with light, compared to which the light of suns and stars is dim indeed. It is that light of wisdom which illumines the pathway of planets and holds worlds in order and orbit.

WHO ARE INSPIRED.

All great poets are inspired. Writers who stir the chords of the human soul, dip their pens in the fountains of inspiration. Orators, who sway their auditors as the breeze sways the boughs of the pine tree, are breathing in and pouring out upon their hearers the streams of living inspiration. Mediums, under spirit control, not only come en rapport with their controlling band, but through them, with the minds with whom they breathe, in concert from the higher sources of inspiration, and, under favorable conditions, they can rise to the upper heights of seership and scan the horizon of the distant future.

TRUE INSPIRATION

comes when the medium and the exalted spirits meet midway along the mountains of progress extending from the earth sphere to the sphere of wisdom; there, for the time, in harmonious rapport, they blend soul with soul and thought with thought until the two worlds become one. This road of progress may be a long and wearisome way to the sensitive medium before he reaches those grander elevations where the blended harmonies of the different spheres mingle to form the inflowing stream of living inspiration, yet it is attainable, in a degree at least, to mediums who put forth all their energies to ascend those beautiful heights, and who will not allow any obstacle to turn them from their purpose.

SELF MUST BE SUBMERGED.

This thought should literally inspire all mediums to renewed efforts, to awakened energy, to increased diligence and added zeal, that they may overcome all obstacles which impede their progress, free themselves from errors which drag them down, and, seeking only for the pure, the true and the noble, rise into communion with those spheres of Spirit-life which are ever illuminated by the sun of wisdom and watered by the living streams of divine inspiration. To attain this condition, self must be submerged in the general weal, the two sides of life with their relations and bearings one upon the other, must be carefully considered, the powers and possibilities of spirit closely calculated, and then, in the superior state of ecstatic delight and spiritual exaltation, the medium will be borne on the wings of light to bathe in the fountains of living inspiration, where the human becomes infilled with the divine, and the incarnated divinity becomes "one with the Father."

UNVARNISHED STATEMENTS.

Many times has it been asked and written, "What has Spiritualism done for us?" I think a much more pertinent question is, "What have Spiritualists done for Spiritualism?" Do they support it? Where are our hospitals, homes, temples? Yes, where? We do not support the meetings as they should be. The spiritual papers are not in all homes as they should be. Many Spiritualists send their children to orthodox churches and Sunday schools, and when they are grown they look upon their parents as a "little off" when they try to tell them of another faith. Do we support our mediums? We use them when we need a word of advice or encouragement, but when we do not need their services do we concern ourselves whether they have the comforts and necessaries of life? Do we think whether they need a cheering word, whether their hearts are sore and lonely with none to comfort? The best is not too good for an honest, genuine medium. They can give us more comfort than ministers can give their flock, and we should certainly take as good care of them as the ministers receive.

From Light, London, Eng.

DARK, UNDEVELOPED SPIRITS.

On Sunday, November 8th, in accordance with the wish of my spirit guides, I held in my own room the first of a series of prayer meetings, at which I was the only mortal present. The others present were darkened (or undeveloped) spirits, how gathered together I know not, but unquestionably with me in considerable numbers. For an hour I alternately gave short addresses to and prayed for them. At the end of this time I held out my hand, asking any who were desirous of rising from their present condition to grasp the right hand of friendship I offered them. Three did so, another following later in the day, and a fifth a day or two later. I saw nothing, but I felt what I cannot describe, viz., their conditions, and very terrible the experience was. It was such as to leave not the slightest doubt on my mind of the reality of the contact, and of the fact that I had been the means of arousing in these poor, darkened spirits a desire for the light.

APPEAL TO SENSE OF FAIR PLAY.

Having thus succeeded in my first attempt, I have held these meetings weekly ever since. For the first three weeks I made my own conditions as positive as possible. I was somewhat uncertain of my ground and feared I might be one of those who "rush in where angels fear to tread." Latterly I have grown bolder, and I now pursue a course of conduct that a missionary in one of our lowest slums might be expected to adopt. I appeal to a sense of fair play, and I ask those who are willing, to give me a hearing, and to restrain any violent spirits who might wish to do me an injury. Nor do I forget the help my band of guides affords me. So for the last three weeks I have made myself receptive to control, and have allowed the awakening spirits to use me as a medium of their first prayer to the Eternal Spirit, if they found such a course would help them on.

INTERESTING EXPERIENCE.

I will give my experience of one afternoon when five spirits, one after another, responded to my invitation. The first of these could only utter the words "Oh, God! Oh, God! Oh, God!" and throw my head forward on my hands. The next cried, "Help! help!" the third asked for light. The fourth tried hard to entrance me, a course of proceeding that I resisted to the utmost, and in the battle of wills which ensued I came off victorious. I was under the impression that no harm was intended, but still I dared not allow myself to be entranced. Inspirational control is the utmost limit of power I can consent to, and surely should suffice for the wants of all.

A CURIOUS VISION.

Last came a female spirit, who for some minutes held me without speaking. During this time a vision presented itself to me of a dungeon, empty, and with the door open. At last she spoke in accents of intense entreaty, as follows: "O God! help me! through the sacrifice of Christ upon the cross, let me be saved, and through His atonement let me come to Thee." While these words were being uttered the vision changed to one of blue and silvery clouds softly floating in the air, and then the spirit left. With a short prayer for help to be given to all, and a hope that the belief of the last visitor in the atonement might not be too rudely disturbed, and that she might be allowed to progress somewhat before she was disillusioned, I rose from my knees to receive the hand-shakes of those who preferred encouragement by that means.

A PURE AND LOFTY SPIRIT.

The experiences of the following Sunday were varied by the visit of a pure and lofty spirit who, using me as a medium gave utterance to a beautifully-expressed prayer for the spirits present. On this occasion I was very much shaken by the intensity of feeling shown by some of the spirits. On several previous afternoons I had been left panting and exhausted at the close of the meetings.

GENERAL EFFECT OF THE WORK.

It may be of interest for me to state the general effect of this work on myself. So far it has not had the slightest deleterious effect of a permanent nature, all the unpleasant phases disappearing in a very few hours. I do not, however, think I could possibly attempt more than one meeting (and that of only an hour's duration) in a week. The strain is not confined to the actual time of meeting, and I am more or less affected during the whole day, but not to the extent of preventing my addressing a meeting in the evening, although my power is greatly impaired. What danger there may be of being overborne by mischievous spirits, or by revengeful spirits who may combine to prevent good being done, I have no means of estimating. I am willing to risk it, and I do not believe that any permanent stop can be put to the work.

DARK SPIRITS.

I have used the term "darkened" in alluding to the class of spirits I am endeavoring to influence. To my mind "undeveloped" is not a sufficiently expressive term, and I hesitate to use the word "evil" to spirits who, though the reverse of good, yet possess within them the divine spark, which, if they can only be induced to develop it by their will power, will increase and shine forth, to be met from the outside by ministering angels, who will help them in their progress. I believe that an effort in this direction will turn much influence that is now used for the promotion of vice and wrong doing of every kind in this world to equally powerful influence for good, and be a valuable help towards the establishment of the reign of righteousness on earth. Who will help?

WHY REMAIN IN IGNORANCE.

You should read Col. Ingersoll's masterly address. You should read Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond's two lectures on "Spiritual Unfoldment" and "The Dwellings of the Dead." You should read about the Roman Octopus and "The Night the Light Went Out," and above all you should read President Barrett's Address before the National Convention of Spiritualists.

For full particulars read the announcement on the 5th page headed "Fifteen Cents."

JUST PUBLISHED!
AUTOMATIC WRITING
[SO-CALLED], WITH OTHER
PSYCHIC EXPERIENCES
—BY—
SARA A. UNDERWOOD,
With Half-tone Portrait and Specimen Pages of the Writing.
Handsomely bound in Cloth. Price, $1.50. Postage 10c extra.

JESUS AND THE MEDIUMS,
—OR—
CHRIST AND MEDIUMSHIP.
Careful comparison of some of the Spiritualism and Mediumship of the Bible with that of to-day. By MOSES HULL. An invincible argument proving that Jesus was only a medium, subject to all the conditions of modern mediumship. It also shows that all the manifestations throughout the Old and New Testament were under the same conditions that mediums require to-day; and that the coming of Christ is the return of mediumship to the world. 48 pages. Price, 10 cents. For sale at this office.

Real Life in the Spirit-Land.
Given inspirationally by Mrs. Maria M. King. You will not become weary while reading this excellent book. Price 75 cents.

WHAT WOULD FOLLOW
The Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents; twelve copies for $1.00.

CHRISTIANITY A FICTION.
The astronomical and astrological origins of all religions. A poem by Dr. J. H. Mendenhall. Price 50 cents.

The Myth of the Great Deluge.
By James M. McCann. A complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible story of the Deluge. Price 15 cents.

RELIGION OF THE STARS
By O. H. RICHMOND,
G. M. of the Order of the Magi, Chicago.
BOUND IN CLOTH WITH GOLD side, and containing 320 pages. This splendid book, just issued, contains nineteen full Temple lectures upon occult subjects, together with other articles from various newspapers, relating to the great work. It contains all the old Temple lectures issued in 1892, and three others on the HUMAN SOUL, which are alone worth the price of the book. This wonderful book is unique as an Evangelist of Science and Truth. Price $1.25, postpaid, to any address. For sale at this office.

INGERSOLL'S ADDRESS
Before the New York Unitarian Club. The first time in the history of the world that a Christian Association ever invited a noted infidel to lecture before them. The lecture is a grand one, and was received by the Club with continuous applause from beginning to end. The pamphlet contains 12 pages, beautifully printed. Price 6 cents; ten copies, 50 cents.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA.
Identified as the Christian Jesus.
A wonderful communication, explaining how his life and teachings were utilized to formulate Christianity. Price 15 cents. For sale at this office.

THE GODS.
By Col. R. G. Ingersoll. A pamphlet of 40 pages. Worth its weight in gold. Price 20 cents.

A VALUABLE WORK.
Researches in Oriental History,
Embracing the Origin of the Jews, the Rise and Development of Zoroastrianism and the Derivation of Christianity; to which is added: Whence Our Aryan Ancestors? By G. W. Brown, M. D. One of the most valuable works ever published. Price $1.50.

AN EXCELLENT WORK.
DEATH AND THE AFTER-LIFE.
The "Stellar Key" is the philosophical introduction to the revelations contained in this book. Some idea of this little volume may be gained from the following table of contents: 1—Death and the After Life; 2—Scenes in the Summer-Land; 3—Society in the Summer-Land; 4—Social Centres in the Summer-Land; 5—Winter-Land and Summer Land; 6—Language and Life in Summer-Land; 7—Material Work for Spiritual Workers; 8—Ultimates in the Summer-Land; 9—Voice from James Victor Wilson. This enlarged edition contains more than double the amount of matter in former editions, and is enriched by a beautiful frontispiece, illustrating the "formation of the Spiritual Body." Cloth 75 cents. Postage 5 cents. For sale at this office.

THE HISTORICAL JESUS
And Mythical Christ. By Gerald Massey. 130 pages, 12mo. Price 50 cents.

POEMS FROM THE INNER LIFE
By Lizzie Doten. These poems are as staple as sugar. Price $1.00.

Children's Progressive Lyceum.
A manual, with directions for the organization and management of Sunday schools. By Andrew Jackson Davis. Something indispensable. Price 50 cents.

E. V. WILSON'S BOOK.
The Truths of Spiritualism
E. V. Wilson was one of the pioneers of Spiritualism, and was noted as a speaker and test medium. He did a grand work for the cause, and this book narrates many of his striking experiences during his labors.
Purchasers will find it intensely interesting, and will render kindly service to his widow who was left in straitened circumstances.
The book contains 400 pages, and is sold for $1. Address MRS. E. V. WILSON, 91 South Locust street, Valparaiso, Ind.

THE World's Sixteen Saviors,
—OR—
CHRISTIANITY BEFORE CHRIST.
BY KERSEY GRAVES.
New and startling revelations in religious history which disclose the Oriental origin of all the doctrines, principles precepts and miracles of the Christian New Testament, and furnishing a key for unlocking many of its sacred mysteries, besides comprising the History of Sixteen Oriental Crucified Gods. This wonderful and exhaustive volume will, we are certain, take high rank as a book of reference in the field which the author has chosen for it. The amount of mental labor necessary to collate and compile the varied information contained in it must have been severe and arduous indeed, and now that it is in such convenient shape, the student of free thought will not willingly allow it to go out of print. But the book is by no means a mere collation of views or statistics; throughout its entire course the author—as will be seen by his title-page and chapter-heads—follows a definite line of research and argument to the close, and his conclusions go, like sure arrows to the mark. Printed on fine white paper, 380 pages. New edition, revised and corrected, with portrait of author.
Price $1.50. Postage 10 cents. For sale at this office.

The Influence of the Zodiac
UPON HUMAN LIFE.
BY ELEANOR KIRK.
This is the only book which states the simple principles of the Zodiac in simple terms, making the entire matter clear to the averge understanding.
This volume indicates the location, characteristics and influence of each sign of the Zodiac, giving the days which each sign governs, and the gems and astral colors associated with each.
The diseases of the body, how to cure them, and the faults of character incidental to the different domains.
The methods of growth for each human being.
The domains from which companions, husbands and wives be selected.
The characteristics of children born in different domains, and the conditions to be observed in their care and education.
The personal ability and talent of the individual with reference to domestic, social and business success.
This work is the result of profound research, and in its preparation the author has been largely assisted by J. C. Street, A. B. N.
Bound in Special Cloth. - - Price, $1.
For Sale at This Office.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW;
Or Self-Justice.
By Lois Waisbrooker. Many have read this book, many have re-read it, and many others, out to read it. It should be read by every man and woman in the land. It shows the falsities rampant in society in matters of moral and social import, and the wrongs that flow therefrom to innocent victims of social ostracism. It contains a fine likeness of the author. Fine cloth, 280 pages. Price $1.00

THE QUARANTINE RAISED.
Or the Twenty Years Battle Against a Worker Ended. By MOSES HULL. Price 10 cents. For sale at this office.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

This department is under the management of the distinguished author, speaker and medium,

Hudson Tuttle.

Address him at Berlin Heights, Ohio.

R., Arcadia, Fla. Q. What is the best way to cultivate the dream phase of mediumship?

A. While at times those not sensitive during their waking state are extremely so during sleep, and receive impressions in the form of dreams, it would seem that the phase is spontaneous, and too complicated to admit of being cultivated understandingly. Sleep instead of being the simple state it is generally supposed, is one highly complex, and dreams partaking of its character are yet more so. Only when exceedingly distinct are they of value. Hence this form of impressibility is not the most desirable, and it is better to cultivate those which yield more certain results.

C. B. L., Express, Ore.: I have just been reading a statement regarding the condition of the peasantry in India. It would seem that their lot is deplorable indeed; and the worst part of it is that they have no ambition to improve it. That country is said to be the cradle of the human race, and they have had all the past ages to better their condition; and what I want to know is, what power is it that prevents their advancement?

A. There are two forces which are always present in the process of evolution, whether of animals or of man, physically and mentally; one the conservative power of heredity, the other the change of environment.

Before the migration of the Indo-European people over the Hindu Kosh, Caucasian Mountains, the primitive Aryan race was one, as is proven by the kinship of the Germanic languages with the old Sanskrit. The hordes which poured through the mountain passes and swarmed over the wilderness of Europe were the best, the bravest, the strongest and most restless of that early race.

The date of this immigration was prehistoric, and even pre-traditionary. This migration and the origin of races is fully explained in my little book on the "Origin and Antiquity of Man," and is too broad a subject to admit of more than mention.

Ages afterward, the Iranic, or Persian people, or the progenitors of this race, swarmed from the parent hive in Central Asia, and the remaining hordes moved southward into the Indian peninsula, there to meet preoccupying Turanian tribes, the descendants of which yet occupy the inaccessible jungles and mountain fastnesses. While the European hordes met a diversified climate and the conflict of opposing tribes, and grew strong by the warfare which constantly brought the most brave and strong to the front, the Hindu people spread themselves over a vast continent almost homogeneous in its conditions, with a climate and soil that made labor almost unnecessary, and where practically there was no opposition. They soon acquired a religion which taught submission instead of manly conflict, and that religion became crystallized into a language known only to its priests. The enslavement of caste grew out of the skillful selfishness of the priests, and at length all desire for better conditions died, and the monotonous environments unchanging from generation to generation, contributed to this atrophy of intellect. True, now there is no desire for better living. The laboring class of Hindustan represent one of the oldest and least changed races. Their age prevents their advancement. It would be as reasonable to expect an old farmer or a mechanic, who had all his life of seventy years labored at his separate occupation, to suddenly change to a poet, lawyer or statesman. They are held by the adamantine chains of heredity, the bequest of thousands of generations of ancestors, and as long as their surroundings remain the same there can be no expectation of change. Even harshly assailed by such obstacles as opposed the primitive hordes on their entrance of Europe, it is doubtful if they would not perish before yielding. The new element in this complex problem, is the conflict with a superior race—the English.

"In this struggle the inferior race is at a greater and greater disadvantage. It may be stated with the force of law, that these inferior races will ultimately disappear before the superiorly endowed white race, from all those regions of the earth where this race can dwell. The decree is unchangeable—advance or perish. Philanthropy, with praiseworthy motives, has engaged in teaching the children of the wild, forcing them in a few years over the distance the white race has been countless centuries in passing, but the results are not encouraging. Savage children are quick to learn, but at puberty they meet with a change, the savage coming into the ascendancy, and it is found that their civilization exists only in name."—"Origin of Man," page 208.

Minnie E. Maynard: Q. Will you please inform me the cause of the Northern Lights?

A. The cause of the Aurora Borealis or Northern Lights has been the subject of conjecture, and no theory has been demonstrated as true. It has been conjectured that there is a periodicity in the brightness of the light and that it has a direct relation to the tremendous convulsions in the sun; revealed by its spots. That it is of electrical origin is proven by the electrical disturbance which always attends the manifestation of the lights. The height in the atmosphere at which it occurs has been estimated from five to five hundred miles. It will thus be seen that the air at those heights is very attenuated, at the latter so much so as to exceed that of any vacuum that can be produced by artificial means. The effect of electricity in producing light when passing through a rarefied atmosphere has been experimentally shown by Tesla. In the dense lower atmosphere, near the earth's surface, strata of air of different temperatures and degrees of moisture, mutually become charged by induction, and terrific winds, lightning and rain follow. In the higher regions, strata of different temperatures affect each other electrically, and the soft illumination of the rarefied air is the result. Such at present is the most tenable theory, and one toward which the facts have slowly converged. That these aerial currents are produced by the magnetic currents of the earth, is shown by the center of the arch or corona of the aurora always being at the earth's magnetic pole, and here probably is the key to the relations between the disturbances in the sun and the display of lights, for the magnetic needle often indicates the coming disturbance before the spots on the sun appear.

"Lex," Detroit, Mich.: Q. In view of the great disturbance in business, expense and many other considerations, would it not be best to lengthen the term of office of the President of the United States to six or eight years?

A. This question has been more or less seriously broached ever since the foundation of this Republic, but recently has been more emphasized. There has been a slow but distinctly marked reversion to the old forms of monarchy, and suppressed longing for the titles and privileges of an effete aristocracy. The first step toward a life-president is a lengthened term, and a president for life is a king, with more power than any ruler of the great powers of Europe are possessed of.

The Constitution of the United States stands forth as the most remarkable instrument of its kind ever framed by the mind of man; when we consider how it was framed, and the time which gave it birth, it would seem that the unaided human mind could not have devised it. It provided for contingencies that did not then exist, and a balance of the powers of the government not only for the time and for a few millions of people, but for all time and untold millions. It was original in its design. There was nothing to pattern after. The republics of the past had nothing to give. The statesmen on the spirit-side co-operated with those on this, and in a religious age, and a nation of bigoted Puritans, the Constitution was adopted, in which the name of God or Christ does not appear, and religion receives no recognition.

The length of term of office of the President, and the powers conferred by that office, were discussed at length, and everything that can be said to-day on either side was well said then. The members of the Constitutional Assembly, just escaped from a merciless monarchy, after seven years of bloodshed, feared the recurrence of such rule in the president they would elect, and hedged the office with safeguards.

Four years is too long a term for a bad president, and re-election extends the term of a satisfactory officer. Four years allows the incumbent to become intrenched behind his dependent appointees; in eight, if so designing, he could defy the votes of the people.

A free people must be educated, and the campaign is a wonderful educator, and the time and money spent is well invested.

There have been several presidents whose terms expired none too soon; we tremble to think of the consequences had not Buchanan been succeeded by Lincoln. Had he had a single year more, the nation would have been bound hand and foot to the dictatorial power of an oligarchy, and free institutions would have become unknown—and probably most thinking people will agree that, whatever may be the character of the incoming president, the sooner the present incumbent is relegated to private life the better for the nation.

It was wise in the framers of the Constitution to make its amendments so difficult. There is ample time for discussion and information, and there must be a grievous error or demand to have an attempt to amend succeed. The hand of the partisan and marplot cannot ruthlessly destroy, and the stability awakes our reverence and admiration. The change to a longer term, however specious the pleadings, and the agencies brought forth, has one meaning and can have only one. It means a first step taken toward despotism, a first step toward the destruction of the republic. The same reasoning that would lengthen the chief magistrate's term, would apply to the representatives and senators, and life-senators means a House of Lords, with all the deficiences of that body and few of its desirable qualities. These forebodings may bring a smile of scorn to those who believe in the strength of the nation, yet never was prophecy drawn from a clearer array of facts. Liberty is the most precious boon a people can enjoy, and against its insidious foes there must be ceaseless watch and guard.

NEW BOOKS.

The Prophets of Israel. By Prof. C. H. Cornill.

This constitutes No 23 of The Religion of Science Library—a series of most excellent and scholarly productions issued by The Open Court Publishing Company, Chicago. Carl Heinrich Cornill is Doctor of Theology and Professor of Old Testament History in the University of Konigsberg. He opens with a chapter on "The Meaning of Prophecy," followed by one on "The Religion of Moses," then discusses the prophets seriatim, whose names and works are found in the Old Testament. After reading the very liberal views and radical, though appreciative judgment of the author, tinged as they are with the German quality of thoroughness of research and profound study, one can but be surprised to learn that he is an orthodox Christian. Certainly his fearless yet reverential handling of his subjects reminds one of the writings of Renan. His style is pleasing, and the subject matter will prove very interesting to all Bible students. It is nicely printed and bound in stiff paper covers, and will be sent from this office for 25 cents.

Ancient India: Its Language and Religions. By Prof. H. Oldenberg. Religion of Science Library, No. 22.

Ancient India is a subject of unusual interest to all scholars, especially since the World's Congress of Religions, and more especially now since the appearance here of missionaries representing the religious cults and faiths that have their incipience in the Orient.

This handsome volume treats of The Study of Sanskrit; The Religion of Veda; and Buddhism. Much of quaint and curious Oriental lore is epitomized in these pages, and every page shows the handiwork of the patient scholar and thinker. The Open Court Publishing Company is doing a commendable work in publishing the excellent series of which this volume is a part. The series would form a valuable addition to any scholar's library. This volume, in stiff paper covers, sent from The Progressive Thinker office for only 25 cents.

GOOD WORDS FROM MASSACHUSETTS.

To the Editor:—I think your generous offer to new subscribers will be very effective in spreading the light and truth in dark places. The more I read The Progressive Thinker the better I like it, and the same opinion is expressed by the other new subscribers here. I think it very important for a Spiritualist to take and read a paper devoted to the cause, for it helps one so, and it is such a rare treat to hear from the able writers and mediums from all over the United States, that it enables one to study and penetrate in ways we could not think of alone. I shall help to get subscribers whenever I see a chance. W. O. SWEET.

West Mansfield, Mass.

"The Prophets of Israel." By Prof. C. H. Cornill, of the University of Koenigsberg. A scholarly and appreciative historical review of the prophets of Israel and their works. For sale at this office. Paper covers, 25c.

WHAT SPIRITUALISM AND RELIGION MEAN.

Religion and Spiritualism Are Placed Side by Side.

Spiritualism Means Spirituality; Religion Means Bondage.

From the earliest known ages to the present time men have believed in eternal life.

The ancient bible of the Brahmans (which dates back some four thousand years) is existing proof of the fathomless ages in which men have believed in the immortality of the spirit. The Buddhist of China, the ancient Druids of England, France and Germany, the Pagans of Egypt, Greece and Italy, and the American Indians all believed in a life after death. The age when men did not believe in eternal spirit-life (if there was such an age) is buried in the past beyond our knowledge.

A belief in eternal life, without any knowledge of the laws which force our eternal existence, has been the cause of the many false theories called religion.

Spiritualism or natural spirituality was replaced by religion; and through the power it received from the absurd belief in the "divine right of kings" its debasing systems have been fastened upon every nation on the globe.

All systems of religion have been founded upon the material and unreal, which has caused the adherents of religion to reject the natural and spiritual laws of life.

From the day the first god was imagined, and the first wooden god made, men have been worshiping false theories and false gods. The leading systems of religion have become national, and the masses of mankind are forced by monarchs to accept and support a religion.

Ignorance has been forced upon the masses of men, which has caused them to submit to bondage, and forced them to relax their efforts to free themselves from the rule of priests and kings.

When the intellect of man was quickened by the invention of the printing press, he longed to be free to choose for himself the road to eternal happiness; but it was too late—the kings and priests had usurped the power and all other men were their slaves. Centuries were spent in war and devastation, by men who sought to regain their lost right—to think for themselves and to rule themselves; but priestcraft had fastened upon the despot as well as his enslaved subjects, superstition, and all were bound to the false and inhuman systems of religion.

Religious lies have perverted our natures, and the old pagan god is fastened upon our minds, and clings to our every utterance.

To-day the masses of men (who have been kept in ignorance by the lying and deceitful priests of religion) are forcing upon the intellectual portions of mankind the abominable doctrines called religions. We are forced to believe in the Pagan god, kneel and pray to an unknown god, worship it without any reason for so doing, cease to use our intellect, and pretend to believe what we know is not true, or become an exile in our own land, and an outcast to our friends and countrymen.

Religion means force, oppression, slavery, ignorance, mental destruction, and the suppression of the spiritual and humane instincts of man's nature.

Men have been forced to ignore the good, the true, and the innate spiritual, and to accept the base, unreal and degrading. They have been compelled to renounce their reason and understanding, and to bow down to the kings of souls—who are the debauched and licentious kings, czars, emperors, sultans and popes, who style themselves the heads of God's churches.

Religion has so dwarfed the intellects of its adherents, that it has caused them to become inhuman fanatics whose only spirituality consists in believing in creeds, cursing heretics, and praying to an Almighty God, who is so wise and so powerful that no one can know anything about him.

In this, our bonsted free land, priestcraft has stamped the date of the birth of a Pagan god on our papers, books, coins and tombstones. It has placed the Roman book (which was written by the popes) in our public schools, courthouses, polling-rooms and halls of legislation. It has forced us to maintain (by the exemption of church property from taxation) all Christian churches, schools, prisons [nunneries], and properties of all sorts and kinds. It compels us to observe its Sabbath and demands that we shall have a Christian minister to officiate at the funerals of our loved ones, or have their memories as well as our lives dishonored. It has forced us (the Spiritualists) to call our temples Christian churches, our mediums divines, and our services worship, or forego the protection of the State.

No words can express the debasing influence religion has had upon the human race. Like a wild beast that holds its prey between its fangs, the heads of religion hold the human race. There seems no escape—no spot on earth where the mind may be free to think and the tongue at liberty to speak the sentiments of the soul, or the intellect free to learn the beauty and harmony of the natural or spiritual facts which would lift us all as intelligent beings to a higher plane of life.

All religions have been a curse to mankind; and while we should abhor them all, as systems that retard civilization of all, not one is to be more feared than the ferocious Christian religion. Of all the religions that have been invented in the history of the world, not one can equal in brutal savagery the crimes which have been the outcome of its barbarous doctrines. Every intelligent man and woman should shun its name as well as its pernicious doctrines; for no good has ever come out of Nazareth. For nineteen centuries Christianity has fostered ignorance and slavery, hindered civilization, opposed science and invention, and taught men to hate each other.

When we observe the spread of the Christian religion among the distant unchristian nations, our hearts are wont to sink in despair, for we note with sorrow the selfish and deceitful natures of the Christian kings and nobles, beside the more truthful and unpretending emperors and nobles of unchristian lands.

We cannot forget the race that Christian men (in our own land) loved as slaves, but despised as freemen. We are forced to reject any and all things pertaining to a religion (even its name) that taught and still teaches that slavery was a divine institution, and today stamps in letters of gold the word "South" as an affix to the name of many of its churches.

Who can care for the soul of a man, who cares not for his body?

We view with grief daily the uncivil and inhumane treatment of workmen by their Christian employers, who pretend to believe that those workmen are their brothers.

Sometimes savagery seems to be growing and civilization retarding; but we who are permitted to live in caves, if we do not express our thoughts, know that our silent spirit can and will carry freedom to the minds and bodies of the oppressed of every nation on the globe.

I am aware that the facts I have stated are well known; but I reiterate them to arouse the forgetful minds of some of our good sisters and brothers, who do not see the danger of Spiritualism merging into a religion.

If the professors of Spiritualism hope to replace faith by facts and mystery by knowledge, they must place Spiritualism upon a foundation of facts. Bibles and religion must be relegated to the museum as relics of superstition, ignorance and barbarity. Spiritualism is not void of facts to build it a magnificent foundation, which can rest securely upon the eternal laws of nature. We have the answer to the question: Do we continue to live? But we must have the solution of the question in all its parts, if we would avoid the danger of Spiritualism becoming a priestly religion.

Religion is in reality a disease, which has been feeding upon the brain of man for centuries; if we would eradicate this fatal disease from the human system, we must find that which will destroy all its tiny microbes, and then, and not till then, can we restore our minds to a healthy condition. To retain a part of a dogma, will cause us to partake of the whole.

When we use a word it is well to know its universal accepted meaning; for we cannot alter the meaning of a word by its application according to our separate idea of its meaning. The word religion (according to Webster's definition) relates to faith, God and worship. Webster defines the word in these words: "Religion, as distinct from virtue or morality, consists in the performance of the duties we owe directly to God, from a principle of obedience to His will. Hence we often speak of religion and virtue as different branches of one system, or the duties of the first and second tables of the law.

"Religion, in a comprehensive sense, includes a belief in the being and perfection of God, in the revelation of His will to man, in man's obligation to obey His commands, in a state of reward and punishment, and in man's accountableness to God; and also true godliness or piety of life, with the practice of all moral duties."

Spiritualism cannot include or comprehend any one of the Pagan ideas, that teach of gods, devils, worship or faith; and hence it can never (according to the accepted meaning of the word) be a religion.

Through man's own organism and intellect alone can he learn of the spiritual nature that dwells within him. His god, if he has one, will be just as large as himself, and will be governed by himself.

A religion demands a priest; but Spiritualism has no use for a priest or mediator. Every man is his own medium. The mediums' powers of discernment and their developed perceptions are of use only to those who are doubtful of an eternal existence. They are the primary teachers, and to those who have reached that goal, or knowledge they are to their spiritual well-being of no more use.

When the student of Spiritualism has reached that degree of knowledge wherein eternal life to him is a fact, he naturally begins to seek for the reason why he should live forever. A fact without a reason for its existence does not satisfy the intellect of men. When our reason grasps a fact, the fact will lead to knowledge, but when our senses perceive a fact, without any reason for it, the fact may lead us into the material and unreal path of life. There are many questions which the professors of Spiritualism are bound to answer if they would give the reason for the knowledge they profess to have, and verify by reason the truth of an eternal life. Among the many are the following:

1. How can an organism arise from inanimate matter, which can see, hear, talk, and feel love, and yet cannot feel pain?

2. What use is knowledge in this life, to the spirit-life, if unborn babes and born idiots become endowed with knowledge in the spirit-life?

3. Is knowledge in this life necessary to better our conditions in the next life?

4. Can the spirit form of an infant grow in the spirit-life?

5. Does the spirit form of a full-grown man remain the same size or the same as in this life?

6. How can men enter full-grown bodies, and babes enter growing bodies?

7. Where is the spirit of a mortal when the mortal is incarnated or controlled by another spirit?

8. If mortals can be controlled by spirits, are mortals responsible for the deeds done in the earthly body?

9. Have fishing-worms, insects and microbes eternal life?

10. How can the clothes of a spirit form, rocks, houses and trees, have spirit forms or eternal existence, which have not living spirits?

These questions are all very simple and should be answered by our teachers, with direct answers—their opinions will not do—the answers must be given, and they must agree with the laws of nature, harmonize with reason, and be founded upon facts which are beyond dispute or contradiction.

The laws of the universe are perfect, and every question the intellect is capable of asking, the intellect is capable of answering. From the era of Modern Spiritualism to the present time, mediums have been teaching all kinds of conflicting theories. They have been permitted as teachers to teach anything they believed was true, no matter how opposed to reason or absurd their ideas may be. This is very detrimental to the spread of Spiritualism, and a scandal to its beautiful truths. If we would place Spiritualism upon a scientific basis we must call a halt to the many irrational doctrines of many of our well-meaning but ignorant mediums.

Spiritualism (like any other science) should be taught the same by all its teachers, and then our temples would become universities wherein all men could glean the truth and study the facts relative to the immortality of the spirit.

While organized religion exists, organized Spiritualism will be a necessity; but let us have our society free from worn-out creeds and the dangerous doctrines, gods, devils, prayers and mysteries.

We as individuals may believe as we please, but our teachers should only teach that which is drawn from facts, and which accords with reason. The individual must be free to believe as the intellect dictates, then liberty will free the mind, and facts the intellect convince.

Therefore, let us have a platform of principles as broad as the world, and as unsectarian as the Constitution of the United States; then we may invite to our temples the Infidel, Atheist, Jew, and Materialist as well as the Christian, for one is as much our brother as the other, and no creed of ours can keep them from joining a society that requires but one obligation—morality.

Let us invite especially, those who are free from creeds, that they may aid us in our labors for spiritual liberty as well as temporal liberty.

Let us no longer honor men for their religion, color, wealth, learning or high position, but for their good deeds and human sympathies.

Let us stamp liberty of conscience upon our history, and its emblem, our flag, upon our most sacred belongings, as the emblem of the highest power that can make and keep men the grandest beings of the universe. Let us not cease our labors until the date of the birth of liberty is stamped upon our books, records, tombstones and coins; and liberty of conscience and the equal rights of men and women are established in every land and by every nation on the globe.

Let freedom be our sacred song
Our souls from earth to free,
And truth the only altar
Whereon to bend the knee;
Then Spiritualism like music,
Will ripple o'er the land,
And millions of glad voices
Will make the chorus grand.

W. F. WILD.

THE ETHEREAL BODY.

Answers to Questions of Alcinous.

I will now endeavor to reply to some of the questions of Alcinous in The Progressive Thinker of October 31, which I have not considered in previous communications.

The seventh question is: "What change, if any, immediately takes place in the astral body at the death of the earth instrument, the body?"

As I understand, in the substance of the astral body no immediate change. The one is merely liberated from the others. The instant after transition the ethereal body is in itself the same as it was the instant before. It is the thought-body, constructed by many acts of thinking during earth life, and carries over with it the thought of that life from the first down to the last But no sooner does the spirit become conscious of its changed condition and environments than a new chain of thoughts arises within it, and these commence the evolution of another spiritual body which will express itself through the astral and produce changes in it which correspond with those which the astral itself produced on the earth body during the mundane life.

In this life the prevailing character of the thoughts of each individual, whether home spiritual or more material, is stamped upon his form and features, generates his magnetic aura, and even exercises a controlling influence over the elements of his flesh and blood, making him physically as well as otherwise, more of an angel or more of a brute. In like manner, in the next stage of existence the greater spirituality or materiality of the thoughts of the spirit will cause the astral to become more refined and beautiful and surround it with a lighter and more brilliant aura, or will keep it in a heavier, grosser state, which will prevent its ascension from the atmosphere of this world, and cloud it with emanations of a darker color.

The eighth question is: "What purpose in nature do those mature yet miniature human and animal forms serve? They seem to be a quarter of an inch, a half-inch to an inch high, and with proper proportions."

This, as also the two following questions, may be better understood if read in connection with the statement made by Alcinous near the commencement of his letter: "For the past year the writer has been able to see much of the phenomena of life in the ethereal space, and view the wonders like one in an unknown country." This statement, in conjunction with the fact which has become known to me that some clairvoyants see these minute objects while others do not, suggests a possible explanation which I will give for whatever value it may contain, although not myself convinced that it is correct. All size is relative. We say that an elephant is a large animal and a mouse a small one, unconsciously comparing them with other animals which we have seen with our own eyes. We have never seen with the eyes of others and do not know how large or how small these animals may appear to them. We can only judge from the language used concerning them that their relative proportions are the same to all. What we behold clairvoyantly we insensibly compare with what we see physically. Our standard of measurement is the physical eyesight. This may correspond with the spirit sight in one person and in another it may not. If your correspondent clairvoyantly sees only objects of this minute character, this does not appear to be an improbable explanation in his case. If he also sees others of the same apparent size as his fellow mortals it will not suffice.

These small beings may be the souls of future men and animals awaiting opportunities of embodiment, containing all the potentialities of times to come, but not yet clothed in matter visible on the physical plane of existence. Or they may be thought-forms projected from human minds and seen by another human mind vibrating for the time being in harmonious relation with them.

The ninth question: "Are they different from the human entities, these life forms that appear to be three inches, some six inches, others twelve inches tall and yet having human forms," seems to have been replied to in the last answer. With regard to the tenth: "According to psychic measurements is there a gradation of heights from the little human mite to that of an adult spirit in height?" it is only necessary to say that matter always occupies space, has dimensions, and therefore gradation of height. This applies to all spheres and conditions of existence. It is constantly asserted by returning spirits that children grow in spirit-life, in stature as well as in spiritual development. This is far from asserting that in higher existences the degrees of dimension may not become subject to the will. But this more properly belongs to the remaining questions, to which I will attempt replies at some future time. E. J. BOWTELL.

A STARTLING FACT.

The Progressive Thinker was the only Spiritualist paper that had the enterprise to publish Prof. Barrett's address before the National Association Convention of Spiritualists We have his address, covering three pages, and five other fine addresses and articles, one by Col, Ingersoll, grouped in one paper, and we want to send out 1,000,000 of them. It is worth ten times its weight in gold.

Read the article on 5th page headed "Fifteen Cents."

"The Religion of the Future." By S. Weil. This is a work of far more than ordinary power and value, by a bold, untrammeled thinker. Spiritualists who love deep, clear thought, reverent for truth alone, will be pleased with it, and well repaid by its perusal. For sale at this office. Price, cloth, $1.25; paper, 50 cents.

"Angel Whisperings for the Searcher After Truth." By Hattie J. Ray. A volume of genuine poems, of such fine moral and spiritual tone that all will be pleased and benefited by it. For sale at this office. Price $1.

A REMARKABLE DOCTOR BOOK

HAS JUST BEEN ISSUED, ENTITLED

THE NATURE CURE

BY PHYSICAL AND MENTAL METHODS.

A BRIDGE FROM THE OLD TO THE NEW; THE DAWN OF A NEW DAY IN MEDICAL PRACTICE. A CLEAR, SHORT-CUT TREATISE ON THE CAUSE AND CURE OF DISEASE.

By MARVIN E. CONGER, M. D.
Assisted by ROSA C. CONGER, M. D.

The title page is suggestive of important changes in the methods of curing the sick and maintaining health.

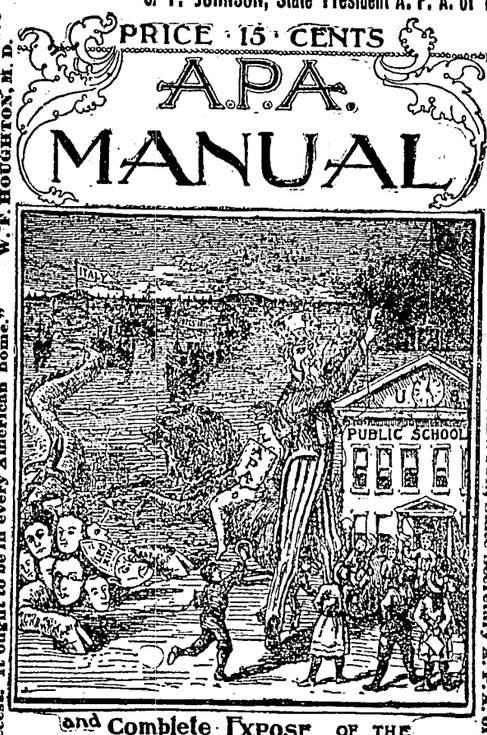
THE NATURE CURE is divided into twelve chapters, as follows:

First—Introductory.
Second—Cause of Disease.
Third—Food and Drink.
Fourth—Exercise.
Fifth—Fevers; Cause and Treatment.
Sixth—Disease Inflammatory.
Seventh—Epidemic and Chronic Disease.
Eighth—Baths.
Ninth—Women and Children. (By Rosa C. Conger, M. D.)
Tenth—Useful Recipes.
Eleventh—Object Lessons and Tables.
Twelfth—Miscellaneous Health Suggestions.

Read their definition of medicine: "Any method or remedy that will remove or modify pain without injury, and restore the sick to a normal condition is practical medicine."

The new and better methods of curing the sick and preventing disease, have never been so clearly stated in plain English, for the plain people, as in NATURE CURE.

It is claimed for this book that it is the most complete doctor book ever published, and sold at the lowest price. It is claimed that disease is not a technical, mysterious, theoretical condition or subject, but only a fact that all may understand. More experience, study and time have been expended to evade and pervert the truth, and deceive the people for obtaining money, than to teach the truth and save life and health. THE NATURE CURE reaches the case of this important subject.



The book has 370 pages, is strongly and handsomely bound in cloth for $2.00, and will be mailed upon receipt of price.

ADDRESS THIS OFFICE, 40 LOOMIS STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

"The A. P. A. MANUAL contains much interesting and instructive matter and a wide circulation of the same will no doubt prove highly beneficial as a literary agent and will assist greatly in arousing sleeping Protestants to the true conditions that surround them. I should like to see it given a wide circulation."
C. P. JOHNSON, State President A. P. A. of Illinois.

PRICE 15 CENTS

A.P.A. MANUAL

and Complete EXPOSE OF THE PRINCIPLES & OBJECTS OF THE AMERICAN PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION

(COPYRIGHTED.)

"I have examined the Manual for the A. P. A. I think it is a valuable document for reference, history and light shedding information upon the darkened side of the question. I feel sure it will have a tendency to lift the veil of ignorance from the people at large with which the A. P. A. is enshrouded. Yours truly, H. F. BROWER, Past Supreme President and State Pres. of Iowa."

"Your A. P. A. Manual received, read and reread, and am happy to say that I have examined the Manual and find a 'multum in parvo' volume of most important matter that I ever read, and it ought to be in every American home." W. F. HOUGHTON, M. D. Will I hope that the same will be freely distributed by our Councils."

"I have examined the Manual of the A. P. A. and I can freely say it is one of the best collections of information among our members and among the people at large with which I am familiar. I feel sure it will be productive of much good. Yours fraternally, J. A. DEARBORN, State President of Missouri."

"I have examined your A. P. A. MANUAL and find it a valuable compendium of facts, figures and statistics, and as a missionary document it is worthy of a large circulation. Printed matter is the best missionary we have, and I hope your Councils will make liberal use of it. Yours truly, W. H. NEWTON, State Secretary A. P. A. of Illinois.

Illustrated Edition contains 80 pages. Sent on receipt of 15 cents 2 copies for 25 cents postpaid. The MANUAL sells at sight.

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

"THE LANGUAGE OF THE STARS."

A Primary Course of Lessons in Celestial Dynamics.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "THE LIGHT OF EGYPT."

This important primary work is the first practical exposition of the Astro-Magnetic forces of Nature—in their relation to man—that has yet been issued by the American press. It contains fourteen special lessons, embracing each department of human life, in such plain, simple language that a child can understand the elementary principles laid down. And in addition to these lessons is an Appendix, containing a full explanation of all technical and scientific terms in general use upon the subject, thus forming a brief, yet practical Astro Dictionary. This work is illustrated with special plates.

For Sale at This Office. Price, Fifty Cents.

CELESTIAL DYNAMICS,

Being a Normal Course of Study in the Astro-Magnetic Forces of Nature.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "THE LIGHT OF EGYPT," "THE LANGUAGE OF THE STARS," ETC.

A magnificent and complete course of Astro-metaphysical study embodying Vital Principles of Life, Mental Force, Sickness and Disease. With the only true and really Scientific method of treating the sick successfully.

Mental Healers, Meta-physicians, and all who practice the Healing Art Divine should give "Celestial Dynamics" a thorough and impartial study, and thus learn the real cause of their frequent failures.

No Astro-Student can afford to be without this work, if he would understand the Meta-physics of Astrology.

This work was specially prepared for publication to meet the demands of a large and very earnest class of people who cannot afford to pay for a regular course of instruction under a qualified teacher. And those who can afford this privilege will find the work an invaluable text-book to their studies.

The Price is One Dollar Only, and is within reach of all who seek light. For sale at this office.

CHURCH AND STATE.

The Bible in the Public Schools; the New "American" Party. By "Jefferson." Third edition. This beautiful pamphlet of 32 pages is the most thorough presentation of the Church and State question that has appeared. Price 10 cents.

THE AGE OF REASON.

By Thomas Paine. Being an investigation of True and Fabulous Theology. A new and complete edition, from new plates and new type; 186 pages, post 8vo, Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

GOLDEN LAXATIVE COFFEE.

SOMETHING NEW, BUT OH, SO NICE!

CURES CONSTIPATION!

Ask your druggist for it, and if they don't have it, ask them to order some of us, and they will do it.

GOES AS FAR AS 4 POUNDS OF PURE COFFEE.

A Package by Mail, 50 Cents.

Golden Laxative Coffee Co.,
AYER, MASS.

NEWS FROM BOSTON.

Mr. Ayer Wins in Court, Also the Tax Case.

Notes About Workers, Societies and Lyceums.

To the Editor:—It is with feelings of gladness that I send you a few lines to let your readers know that the cause of Spiritualism in Boston is on the gain. Mr. M. S. Ayer, at the trial in the court against the raiders, won the case, and the raiders were fined $50 each; and now the board of assessors has granted Mr. Ayer the abatement of the tax that had been put upon his Temple—and this is as it should be, unless they tax all church property. The meetings at the Temple are well-attended, and no trouble is being made. Mr. Keeler is holding seances to full houses, both morning and evening, and Mr. J. C. F. Grumbine is having large audiences in the afternoon.

During the month of December, the Boston Spiritual Temple, that meets in Berkeley Hall, had for speaker Prof. Wm. M. Lockwood of your city, and large audiences, and grand lectures were the order of the day. The Spiritualists of Boston believe Professor Lockwood to be the grandest scientific lecturer that stands upon the platform. The Professor did not only please the adults, but he spoke to the children, of the Boston Spiritual Lyceum—and were they pleased? Well they were delighted, and want him to come again. He is, however, to come again, for he has been re-engaged by the Boston Spiritual Temple, for December, 1897. During this engagement Professor Lockwood will establish a school for scientific teachings, and he is sure of a large class.

I must say one word in regard to the Lyceum question, as so much has been said of late, in your valuable paper. I see a quotation made by Mr. Bach that is credited to me. Well, it is the truth. And I take the same stand that Mr. Bach does in regard to the progress of lyceums.

For the past twenty-five or more years, there has been a lyceum in Boston, and during that time the lyceum had been largely attended, and for a short time there were two lyceums in operation, as at present; but were then, as well as now, slimly attended. At the time the old Boston Lyceum met in Mercantile Hall on Summer street (that was before the Boston Fire in 1872) the attendance was large. The lyceum at that time had twelve well filled groups of scholars, of all ages, from three years to twenty-one years. But the lyceum changed hands or officers a great many times, and at last it was closed for one or two seasons.

About seven years ago a few strong friends of the lyceum cause re-organized the lyceum, and there has been a lyceum in Boston ever since; but have the meetings been largely attended? No—only on special occasions. The Spiritualists in general do not seem to care whether their children attend the lyceum or not.

This is not as it should be. There may be seventy lyceums in the United States, and there may be 170. but I will venture to say that not more than ten of them have a membership of 100; when in such cities as Chicago, New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Denver, Washington, Baltimore, Cleveland, San Francisco, Boston and many of the other large cities there should be one or more lyceums with a membership of 1,000 or more. I really cannot see where the lyceums have progressed. There seems to be an interest started of late, and I only hope that it will be kept up. We have two good lyceums here in Boston, and I am always glad to hear of a new Lyceum, being started. Help the good cause along by sending your children.

I would like the address of every Conductor of a lyceum in this country, and wish they would send their address to me. Yours for the grand cause,

J. B. HATCH, JR., Conductor.
74 Sydney st., Dorchester, Mass.

A Good Offer.

If you are sick and have failed to find relief, send your name and address to Dr. J. R. Craig, 1346 Market street, San Francisco, Cal., and he will send you a correct diagnosis. Stamps for reply. 378

Dr. E. J. Worst,
of Ashland, Ohio, will mail any reader of The Progressive Thinker one of his new Aerial Catarrh Inhalers with medicine enough for one year free. He will allow you three days as a trial, then if perfectly satisfied, send him $1; if not, return it to him in the original package. Catarrh, asthma, colds in the head, bronchitis and tuberculosis immediately relieved and speedily cured. Don't pay big prices for worthless inhalers. Address above. 376

"Encyclopedia of Biblical Spiritualism: or a Concordance of the Principal Passages of the Old and New Testament Scriptures which prove or imply Spiritualism; together with a brief history of the origin of many of the important books of the Bible." By Moses Hull. The well-known talented and scholarly author has here embodied the results of his many years' study of the Bible in its relations to Spiritualism. As its title denotes, it is a veritable encyclopedia of infomation on the subject. Price $1. For sale at this office.

IMPORTANT!

DR. G. E. WATKINS,

—THE—

FAMOUS CHRONIST,

OF AYER, MASS.

QUICK CURES! SMALL DOSES!

Send age, name in full and two 2-cent stamps and leading symptom, and we will send you a diagnosis of your case FREE, and we will try and make the price of treatment right to you. Remember, please, that we do not wish to take your case unless you are dissatisfied with your present treatment. Do not ask OUR opinion of this doctor or that one, because we never express an opinion, nor have we any one connected with us that is allowed to speak ill of any one or even to express an opinion. We know some doctors do so, but we do not.

The day of shot-gun prescription is past; drastic drugs in large doses will not be given ten years from now. We believe in the certainty of medicine and in specific medication, but specific medication requires specific diagnosis. He who understands the action of drugs, and who is gifted with the power of correctly diagnosing, is the successful physician to-day.

SPECIFIC MEDICINE! NO DRASTIC DRUGS!

A Book on "Chronic Disease" Sent for 2-cent Stamp.

G. E. WATKINS, M. D.,

AYER, MASS.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF BAND OF HARMONY.

The Band of Harmony, auxiliary to the Church of the Soul, announces the following program and places of meeting for season of 1897:

Ladies' meeting at 3 p. m.; ladies and gentlemen at 7:30 evening.

Program for the afternoon sessions: General testimony concerning the life and works of the Inspiring Intelligence for the day. Address by the one whose name is announced, through the mediumship of Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond. Tea and social conversation.

The program for the evening session will be of a varied and interesting nature, consisting of answers to questions from the company, by Mrs. Richmond's Inspirers; a brief address on topic selected by those present; musical selections; addresses by mediums; poetic readings of personal character, by Ouina; elocutionary readings etc.

Jan. 7th, with Miss A. Carlin, 23 East 37th street, flat B. Inspirer, Kate Field; subject, "The Social Question."

Jan. 14th, with Mrs. Scott, 1009 West Congress street. Inspirer, Louisa M. Alcott; subject, "Education of Children."

Jan. 21st, with Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, 3802 Ridge avenue, Rogers Park. Inspirer, Gail Hamilton; subject "Experience in Spirit Life."

Jan. 28th, with Mrs. Lamadeau, 7748 South Peoria street. Inspirer, Harriet Beecher Stowe; subject, "Spiritualism as Now Seen."

Feb. 4th, with Mrs. Hinkley, 584 Park avenue, West Side, Inspirer, Myra Bradwell; subject, "Woman in the Professions."

Feb. 11th, with Mrs. Whiting, 1261 Palmer street, Ravenswood. Inspirer, Amy Post; subject, "Spiritualism; The Fox Sisters—Then and Now."

Feb. 18th, with Mrs. Gieselman, 7725 Union avenue. Inspirer, Lucy Stone; subject, "Woman's Individuality."

Feb. 25th, with Mrs. Lewis, 37 Ashland Boulevard. Inspirer, Lucretia Mott; subject, "Woman Sufferage."

March 4th, with Mrs. Richmond, 3802 Ridge avenue, Rogers Park. Inspirers, Phebe and Alice Carey; subject, "The Lesson of the Tree We Planted."

March 11th, with Mrs. Catlin, 286 Homan avenue. Inspirer, Helen Hunt Jackson; subject, "The Possible Purity of Romance."

March 18th, with Mrs. De Wolf, 440 Englewood avenue. Inspirer, Florence Nightingale; subject, "Ministry to Those in Suffering."

April 1st, with ——. Inspirer, Margaret Fuller; subject, "The Higher Humanity."

April 8th, with Mrs. Haire, 8250 Houston avenue. Inspirer, Elizabeth Barrett Browning; subject, "The Crown of Life."

April 15th, with ——. Inspirer, Joan D' Arc; subject, "True Heroism."

April 22nd with ——. Inspirer, Hypatia; subject, "The Philosophy of Life."

April 29th, with Mrs. Richmond, 3802 Ridge avenue, Rogers Park. Inspirer, Victoria Colonna; subject, "The True Madonna."

Other places of meetings to be filled later. Places always subject to change. Varied program for evening services.

WHAT WE WANT TO DO.

We desire to illuminate the minds of every Spiritualist. We will therefore send The Progressive Thinker to new subscribers for three months for fifteen cents, and hope by so doing to reach 1,000,000 of Spiritualists. For full particulars in reference to this remarkable offer read the communication headed "Fifteen Cents," on our fifth page.

"Poems of Progress." By Lizzie Doten. In this volume, this peerless poet of Spiritualism may be read in her varied moods, "from grave to gay, from lively to severe." It is a book to be treasured and richly enjoyed by all who love genuine poetry, and especially by Spiritualists. The volume is tastily printed and bound. Price $1.

DRS. PEEBLES & BURROUGHS,

SPECIALISTS IN ALL CHRONIC DISEASES.

—Depend for their remarkable cures, not upon the old drastic drug system, but upon the knowledge of diseases and their proper remedies—upon science and the finer psychic forces.

Some of their cures, like Schlatter's, are INSTANTANEOUS; in other cases months are required.

Having carefully studied all the therapeutic agencies in connection with their long medical experience, they use those best adapted to each case with unvarying success.

Hundreds are joyfully writing the Doctor: "I am better," or "I am cured." "God bless you."

THEY TREAT THE FOLLOWING:

Dyspepsia, diarrhœa, dropsy, epilepsy, eczema, erysipelas, falling sickness, rheumatism, scrofula, nervous spasm, gravel, gout, headaches, heart disease, kidney complaint, female weakness, liver difficulty, neuralgia, paralysis, bleeding piles, bronchitis, asthma, bladder affection, cancer, catarrh, pimples upon the face, uterine diseases, weaknesses of men, barrenness, insanity, drunkenness, constipation, la grippe and all chronic diseases. And further, they furnish

FREE TO ALL PATIENTS

Hygenic and Physiological literature, enabling them when cured, to remain healthy.

Correct Diagnosis Free,

By enclosing name, age, sex, leading symptom and stamp for reply.

REMEMBER TO ADDRESS

DRS. PEEBLES & BURROUGHS,
P. O. BOX 177,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
853tf

THE HISTORY

Of a Case Which Is But One of Many Hundreds Treated with Success.

Month after month and day after day the thinking, progressive public get more weary of the old drug system. We are more highly educated and our bodies are more refined than our ancestors, and the drastic practice of those olden days would kill nine-tenths of those upon whom it is practiced today. It is the educated physician with unquestioned psychic powers who has the best success. Dr. J. A. Burroughs possesses these qualifications, and the following communications demonstrate the success which he is achieving along the lines of advanced healing. Every mail brings similar communications. His psychic treatment is a pronounced feature of his practice.

South Pittsburg, Tenn., Dec. 15, 1896.
Drs. Peebles & Burroughs:—I am suffering with pains in my arms and shoulders, shifting from one place to another. Perhaps the pain will be in my arm, and in an hour it will be in my hip or back. It is always more acute just before a change in the weather.
MRS. MARY M. DOWNING.

South Pittsburg, Tenn., Dec. 24, 1896.
Drs. Peebles & Burroughs:—I have received your diagnosis and feel that you have described my case better than I could have done myself.
MRS. MARY M. DOWNING.

South Pittsburg, Tenn., Jan. 4, 1897.
Drs. Peebles & Burroughs:—Very much to my surprise, I have not had a neuralgic pain since receiving your diagnosis. Before that I had not been free from pain for over three months. The medicines are doing me a great deal of good.
MRS. MARY M. DOWNING.

South Pittsburg, Tenn., Jan. 13, 1897.
Drs. Peebles & Burroughs:—Only a line this morning to say that I am still improving under your treatment. Am entirely free from the rheumatic pains.
MRS. MARY M. DOWNING.

Drs. Peebles & Burroughs do not strive to get great numbers of patients; in fact refuse many every day. They treat only such cases as they can cure and give those their closest and best attention. They use medicines, but these are the purest and best obtainable, and are from the oldest and most reliable manufacturing chemists in this country. They believe in roots and herbs, but think the patient has not the facilities to prepare them with sufficient accuracy to obtain the best results. Their treatment is not based upon chance or guess-work in any way, but is strictly scientific and psychic. Write them for a correct diagnosis of your case, giving name, age, sex and one leading symptom. Address Drs. Peebles & Burroughs, Indianapolis, Ind.

SOUTHERN CASSADAGA CAMP

The building epidemic at this place remains unabated, and the sound of hammer and saw is waking the echoes over the lakes and among the pines. The apartment house built by the association for the accommodation of those wishing to do light house-keeping, is completed. Each room is to be furnished with good bed, one comfortable, table, chairs and rocker. The kitchens have one stove each, two sets of stove furniture, two tables, cupboards, pails, brooms, dish-pans and dust-pans. One kitchen serves for two rooms. All other equipments must be brought by those renting the rooms.

Dr. H. H. Brigham, of Fitchburg, Mass., is building a large house for renting purposes. Each room will be supplied with heater, and oak chamber set. They will be large and pleasantly located in close proximity to the Hotel Cassadaga.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Palmer have returned from their European trip, and have the foundation laid for a cottage. They say the City of Paris does not compare with this place in attraction for them.

The speakers engaged: C. Fannie Allyn, George P. Colby, H. A. Buddington, W. W. Tatum, Carrie E. S. Twing, and W. F. Peck. Mrs Colby Luther will locate here for a number of months. We hope to hear from her if her health permits. A representative from the N. S. A. will visit us. It is not yet decided who. Every phase of mediumistic talent will be represented on the grounds. A. Campbell, the well-known spirit artist and slate-writer is expected. He will remain several months. The weather is delightful, and the outlook for a successful meeting is auspicious.

EMMA J. HUFF.
Cor. Sec., S. C. S. C. A.

"Voltaire's Romances." translated from the French. With numerous illustrations. These lighter works of the brilliant Frenchman, and invincible enemy of the Catholic Church, are worthy of wide reading. Wit, philosophy and romance are combined, with the skill of a master mind. Price $1.50. For sale at this office.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson-Barker,

AS A SPIRITUAL HEALER HAS NO EQUAL!

Rejoice and Be Glad! Herald Forth the Tidings of Good Health!

DR. A. B. DOBSON'S

Healing powers are being repeated over and over again through the mediumship of MRS. DR. DOBSON-BARKER, who, for the past year and a half has

SUCCESSFULLY TREATED OVER ONE THOUSAND PATIENTS

of all diseases that flesh is heir to, and will give you proof of her powers, by sending requirements as per small advertisement for diagnosis of your case. Here is one of her many cures:

St. Louis, June 21, 1896.
MY DEAR MRS. DOBSON:—I herewith enclose $1.15 for another month's remedies for my sister Emma. I can't tell you how much good these medicines do her and how thankful and grateful we are for having applied for them. When she began taking this last medicine, she had considerable distress in the bowels and stomach, but after a week she was relieved and we are convinced if she had not the medicine she would have had a serious sick spell as liver, stomach and bowels were in a bad condition. Now everything seems in good order; still we feel as if more medicine will eventually cure all her ailments. We thank you sincerely for prompt reply, and wish you all the success you so well merit.
With affectionate regards, very truly,
REBECCA LEVY.
8331 Laclede ave., St. Louis Mo.

NEW MULTIFLORA ROSES.

With seed of these new Roses, plants may be had in bloom in 60 days from time of sowing. Plant at any time. They grow quickly and flowers appear in large clusters, and in such quantity that a plant looks like a bouquet. Perfectly hardy in the garden, where they bloom all summer. In pots they bloom both summer and winter. From a packet of seed one will get Roses of various colors—white, pink, crimson, etc.—no two alike; and mostly perfectly double and very sweet. Greatest novelty this year. Fresh Seed 25c. per pkt.—or for 40c. we will send

1 pkt. New Multiflora Roses. All colors.
1 " Moss Verbena. Exquisite novelty.
1 " Japanese Chrysanthemum. All colors.
1 " Weeping Palm. Highly ornamental.
2 " Pansy, 1 New Scarlet, 1 New Giant Mixed.
1 Resurrection Plant. A great curiosity.
1 bulb Spotted Calla. Exceedingly lovely.
1 " Montbretia. Intensely brilliant.
2 " 1 Rain Lily, 1 Variegated Tuberose.
6 " Fancy Gladiolus. All different colors.
10 " Oxalis. Mixed colors. Also,

Our great 144-page Catalogue, and the MAYFLOWER Monthly Magazine for a year (64 pages and colored plate each month, devoted to Flowers and Gardening). Worth $1.50, but for trial

All the above for 40 cts., postpaid.

Or send us 10c., and the names of 5 or 10 people who cultivate flowers and purchase seeds or plants and we will mail you pkt. Rose Seed and Catalogue.

OUR CATALOGUE of Flower and Vegetable Seeds, Bulbs, Plants, and Rare New Fruits is the finest ever issued; profusely illustrated. Several colored plates, 144 pages. Sent FREE to any who order or who expect to, later.

JOHN LEWIS CHILDS, Floral Park, N.Y.

"Ancient India; Its Language and Religions." By Prof. H. Oldenberg. The subject is of unusual interest at the present time, and it is here treated in a way to interest and instruct all readers. For sale at this office. Paper, price 25c.

"Human Culture and Cure, Marriage, Sexual Development, and Social Upbuilding." By E. D. Babbitt, M. D., LL.D. A most excellent and very valuable work, by the Dean of the College of Fine Forces, and author of other important volumes on Health, Social Science, Religion, etc. Price, cloth, 75c. For sale at this office.

"Right Living." By Susan H. Wixon. The author shows a wise practicality in her method of teaching the principle of ethics. She illustrates her subject with many brief narratives and anecdotes, which render the book more interesting and more easily comprehended. It is especially adapted for use in Children's Lyceum. In the hands of mothers and teachers it may be made very useful. Young and old will be benefited by it. Cloth $1. For sale at this office.

"The Priest, the Woman, and the Confessional." This book, by the well known Father Chiniquy, reveals the degrading, impure influences and results of the Romish confessional, as proved by the sad experience of many wrecked lives. Price, by mail $1. For sale at this office.

"The Bridge Between Two Worlds." By Abby A. Judson. This book is dedicated to all earnest souls who desire, by harmonizing their physical bodies and their physical bodies with universal nature and their souls with the higher intelligences, to come into closer connection with the purer realms of the Spirit-World. It is written in the sweet spiritual tone that characterizes all of Miss Judson's literary works. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 75 cents.

"History of the Inquisition." Every citizen of our country should read this concise history of that Romish churchly institution known as the Inquisition. The animus of Romanism against all institutions, beliefs and parties not in conformity with the ruling powers of the Romish hierarchy is plainly shown in these statements of veritable history. The devilishness and murderous malignity of the "Holy Inquisition" is scarcely paralleled in all the world's records of inhuman atrocities. It is for sale at this office, and will be mailed postpaid for 25 cents.

"The Dead Man's Message," an occult romance by Florence Marryat. The author's wide experience in Spiritualism and her study of occult science have prepared her to write this romance, which will be found laden with gems picked up in the course of her investigation and studies. Cloth $1. For sale at this office.

"Mediumship and Its Development, and How to Mesmerize to Assist Development." By W. H. Bach. Especially useful to learners who seek to know and utilize the laws of mediumship and development, and avoid errors. Price, cloth, 50 cents; paper, 25 cents.

"The Woman's Bible. Part I. The Pentateuch. Comments on Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy." The contrast between the thoughts of these brave women and the thoughts of the orthodox world during all time past, is very striking. Keen analysis, ripe scholarship and fearless adherence to the right, characterize this very interesting effort of some of the brightest minds of to-day. For sale at this office. Price 50 cents.

"The Fountain of Life, or The Threefold Power of Sex." By Lois Waisbrooker. One of the author's most useful books. It should be read by every man and woman. Price 50 cents.

A new edition of "Three Sevens," by the Phelons, is just issued. The May Arena says: "The gist of such books as Dr. Phelon's 'Three Sevens,' and other works descriptive of or alluding to the various occult societies, which seem to have existed for ages, has never, until recently, been said so openly and plainly that 'he who runs may read.'" Cloth $1.25, postpaid. For sale at this office.

"Religion of the Future. By S. Weil. Cloth, $1.25; paper, 50 cents.

SPECIAL READING NOTICES.

Mothers will find "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" the best to use for children while teething. An old and well tried remedy.

SPIRITUALIST BADGES.

EVERY.... SPIRITUALIST SHOULD WEAR THE SUNFLOWER JEWELRY.

As the Sunflower turns its face towards the sun, so Spiritualism turns the faces of humanity from darkness and superstition towards the Sunlight of Truth and Progression.

PRICES:

Rolled Plate Bar Pin	$2 25
Solid Gold Bar Pin	3 50
Electro-plate Badge	75
Rolled Plate Badge, Scarf Pin or Lapel Button	1 25
Solid Gold Badge, Scarf Pin or Lapel Button	1 75
Rolled Plate Maltese Watch Charm	3 00
Solid Gold Maltese Watch Charm	5 00
Rolled Plate Maltese Pendant	3 00
Solid Gold Maltese Pendant	5 00

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE,

40 LOOMIS STREET, CHICAGO

Spiritualist Meetings in Chicago.

The Church of the Soul, at Room 412, Masonic Temple, at 8 o'clock in the evening. Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond, pastor.

The First Spiritual Society of the South Side, New Masonic Temple, 3120 Forest avenue. Services at 2:30 and 7:30. Mrs. Ada Foye lectures and gives tests.

Beacon Light Church, 617 North Clark street, near Burton Place. Services at 2:30 and 7:45 p. m., conducted by Mr. and Mrs. Geo. F. Perkins.

German Spiritualist Society, Gartelman's Hall, 13th street and Ashland avenue. Services at 3 and 8 p. m.

The Spiritual Endeavor Society meets at 1 South Hoyne avenue, 7:45 p. m. Mrs. Sarah E. Bromwell, pastor.

Spiritual Gospel Temple, Hygeia Hall, Washington boulevard and Paulina street. Services at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m.

Home Spiritualist Society, 11 Ada street, at 3 and 8 p. m.

The Church of the Spirit, Willis Edwards, pastor, meets at 620 N. Clark street, at 3 and 8 p. m. Lyceum at 2 p. m.

People's Home Association, Bricklayer's Hall, 93 South Peoria street. Services at 7:30 p. m.

The Spiritualists' Church of the Students of Nature meets every Sunday evening at 7 p. m., at Monsen's Hall, 1052 Milwaukee avenue, corner Lincoln street. Mrs. M. Summers, pastor.

Spiritual Advancement Society, 684 West Madison street. Services at 7:45 p. m. Dr. Hasenclever will lecture and give spirit messages, assisted by other prominent mediums. Admission 25 cents.

Brown's Hall, Forty-seventh and State streets. Services at 8 p. m. Lecture and tests by Dr. Harry Abbott, of California.

Society of Spiritual Truth, 887 West Monroe street. Services at 8 p. m.

The First Society of Spiritual Unity will meet Sundays at 11 a. m., 3 and 7:30 p. m., in Washington Hall, 490 Washington boulevard, corner of Ogden avenue. Mrs. Mary C. Lyman, speaker.

South Side Christian Spiritualist Society, 4308 Cottage Grove avenue Services at 3 and 7:30 p. m. Mrs. Lee Norie Claman, pastor.

The Progressive Spiritual Church, Lakeside Hall, southeast corner Indiana avenue and Thirty-first street, G. V. Cordingley, pastor. Services at 3 and 7:30 p. m. Harry W. Miller, soloist. Children's lyceum at 1:30; Bible class at 2:30.

German Spiritual Society, Hanshman's Hall, 384 W. Division street. Services at 2:30 p. m. Mrs. Caroline Drews, medium.

The Church of the Star of Truth meets every Sunday evening, at Wicker Park Building, in the large lodge hall, on North avenue, near corner Milwaukee avenue, North avenue and Robey street. Services at 7:30 p. m. Easily reached from all parts of the city. Max Hoffman, pastor.

Spiritual meetings at 77 Thirty-first street, South Side, every Sunday at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m. Lecture and tests by Mrs. Edith E. R. Nickless.

Spiritual Church of Love, Faskin's Hall, 3012 Archer avenue. Mrs. E. J. Hanson. Children's lyceum, 2 p. m., followed by developing circle. Spiritual science at 7:30 p. m. Tests at all meetings.

Valuable Books and Pamphlets.

We have on hand a limited number of copies of the various writings and lectures of Mrs. Maria M. King, whose name ranks high in the list of Spiritualist authors, for profundity in philosophic thought. Her elucidations of various questions pertaining to the science and philosophy of Spiritualism, as well as the related field of natural science, are truly remarkable for their depth and clearness. These books and pamphlets constitute of themselves a noble Spiritual library, of sufficient intrinsic value to worthily engage the study and thought of the wisest students in spiritual science.

Although slightly shop-worn, they are in good condition, and we offer them at reduced rates, as follows:

The Principles of Nature, as Discovered in the Development and Structure of the Universe. Material and Spiritual Magnetic Forces. Laws of Spiritual Manifestations and Mediumship. Spiritual Planes and Spheres. Given inspirationally, by Mrs. Maria M. King. In three volumes, 8vo. A remarkable work; among the greatest in the literature of Spiritualism. Price reduced from $1.75 to $1.25 per volume. Postage 12 cents.

PAMPHLETS.

The Spiritual Philosophy versus Diabolism. Two lectures by Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.

Mediumship. A chapter of Experiences. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price 10 cents.

God the Father, and the Man the Image of God. Two lectures. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.

What Is Spiritualism? and Shall Spiritualists Have a Creed? Two lectures. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.

Social Evils: Their Causes and Cure. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.

The Brotherhood of Man, and What Follows from It. Two lectures. By Mrs. Maria M. King. Price reduced from 25 cents to 20 cents.

HEALTH AND POWER.

A handbook of Cure and Human Upbuilding by the aid of new, refined and powerful methods of nature. By E. D. Babbitt, M. D., author of "Principles of Light and Color," "Philosophy of Cure," etc. Price, cloth, 25 cents; Leather, 35 cents.

FORSTER, DR. W. M,

THE NOTED

MEDICAL CLAIRVOYANT

OF THE PACIFIC COAST,

Will send a free diagnosis and terms for treatment to all who will send their name and address—in their own handwriting—with postage stamp for reply.

"The Pacific Coast Spiritualist" of Dec. 30, 1893, says of Dr. Forster:—

"Since his coming here he has made himself highly respected and beloved for his benevolent work, his humanitarian ideas and practices, and his straightforward course of integrity and honor."

"Dr. W. M. Forster, California's noted clairvoyant physician, is receiving commendations from far and near over his remarkables success as a healer."—Philosophical Journal.

Address,

DR. W. M. FORSTER,
1059 Market Street. - San Francisco, Cal.
383

A LOCK OF YOUR HAIR.

If SICK or AILING, send a lock of your hair, name, age, sex, leading symptom, four cents postage, and I will diagnose your case and tell you what will cure your ailments. Address

DR. J. C. BATDORF,
Dept. F., Grand Rapids, Mich.
358tf

ASTONISHING OFFER.

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, name, age, sex, one leading symptom, and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

MRS. DR. DOBSON-BARKER,
SAN JOSE, CAL., Box 132 346tf

DR. J. S. LOUCKS,

Of Shirleyville, Mass., and his band of powerful ancient spirits are effecting the most wonderful cures that have been recorded and are so acknowledged. By his clear knowledge of your diseases, aided by his marvelous spirit forces combined with his magnetic remedies, will convince the most skeptical of his wonderful power to heal the sick. Try him. Send him sex, age, name, lock of hair, and four 2-cent stamps, and he will send a diagnosis of your case free. He doesn't want any leading symptoms. Address DR. J. S. LOUCKS, Shirleyville, Massachusetts. 384

INVALIDS

WHO WILL SEND FOUR CENTS IN stamps, their disease, or symptoms, will receive pamphlet and advice FREE to cure themselves without drugs. The THOMAS BATTERY COMPANY, Cardington, Ohio tf

PSYCHOMETRY, CONSULT WITH Prof. A. B. Severance in all matters pertaining to practical life, and your spirit-friends. Send lock of hair, or handwriting, and one dollar. Will answer three questions free of charge. Send for circulars. Address, 710 Prairie street, Milwaukee, Wis.

MRS. ELLA M. DOLE.

This medium, who is clairvoyant, clairaudient, psychometric and prophetic, can be consulted at No. 1690 North Clark street. Engagements can be made by letter. 340tf

UP TO DATE CHEMISTRY OF LIFE AND GOOD HEALTH.

A powerful and well-educated intuitional healer, who teaches and cures the sick.

Send address, lock of hair, sex, age, whether married or single, location of two leading pains, and two 2-cent stamps for free diagnosis to

DR. J. H. RANDALL,
Independent Medical College, People's Institute, Chicago, Ill.
378

MRS. B. HASENCLEVER, 684 MADISON STREET. Test and trumpet circle every Tuesday at 3 and 8 o'clock. 25 cents. Materializing seance Wednesdays and Saturdays at 8. Independent slate-writing daily. 377

OBSESSION.

Obsessing influences removed: earth-bound spirits released; haunted places freed, and the sick healed by MRS. M. BERGEN BROWN, Morgan Hill, Santa Clara county, Cal. Consulting fee, one dollar. Refer to Chas. Betts, Burr Oak, Mich. 373

F. CORDEN WHITE,

Trance, Test and Business Medium. Sittings daily. 3058 Calumet avenue, corner Thirty-first street. Flat 9. Chicago, Ill. 371tf

MRS. S. E. TRIPP,

Formerly Mrs. Gilman, of Houston, Texas, will hold seances for materialization on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings, at 3017 Wabash avenue, Chicago. Other circles by appointment. 375

MRS. L. PACKER, 750 W. VAN BUREN. CLAIRvoyant, psychometry, business medium. Three reasonable questions answered by mail, with stamp, 25 cents. 376

Seership—Guide to Soul-Light.

Its art and culture, with rules for its attainment. Lucidity is no gift, but a universal possibility common to the human family. Price $2.

EULIS. The Third Revelation of Soul and Sex. A work containing many secret and inner doctrines of the Rosicrucians. In it and by it both man and woman have not merely the road to enormous power, both mental and individual, but the grand energy of effecting wished for changes in others; also prolongation of life. Price $2.50. Address KATE C. RANDOLPH, 23 Melrose avenue, Toledo, O. 379

FINE PORTRAITS.

I will paint any spirit or any other photo in crayon, on receipt of $1.55. Enclose stamp for particulars. MRS. LOU RUSSELL, Littleport, Iowa. 376

IF YOU ARE SICK

with any form of disease, send ten cents (silver or stamps) to Dr. Craig, 1346 Market street, San Francisco, Cal., and he will send you a trial treatment of a revealed vegetable tablet. They will positively cure any disease, including stomach, liver or kidney trouble; also rheumatism and diseases of the nervous system. Testimonials will be furnished from people who have been permanently cured with one trial treatment. 377

TO THE SICK AND AFFLICTED.

A POWERFUL HEALER AND PSYCHOMETRIST.

Send address, lock of hair and two leading symptoms for diagnosis and remit two 2-cent stamps for return.

DR. M. E. SELLEN,
Independent Medical College, People's Institute, Chicago, Ill.
377

ADVICE FREE!

Are you afraid of human beings that dress in purple and fine linen and have swell bank accounts? Banks are sometimes shaky. Perhaps you are sick or what the world calls unlucky, or maybe just discouraged. Wouldn't it be as well if you would brace up and call your real self to the front? Our advice is that you write us to-day and find out our methods and what we are doing. You can find out by sending a stamp or a self addressed stamped envelope, whichever plan suits you. No postal cards. We can't read them; they belong to the rag man. If you investigate this adv., it may in the course of time, mean, health, success and happiness to you. Others have found it this way. PROF. ROWLAND J. BROWN, 5815 Randolph St., Austin, Cook Co., Ill. 375

MRS. STARR—MEDIUM, ASTROLOGER, PALMist, gives sittings daily. Inspirational music developed; other phases. 800 Sixty-third Court, (not street) Englewood. Get off at Union avenue. 376

READ WHAT W. A. RHYNARD, STAINT PARIS, Ohio, says: "My reading Jan 20, 1896, has come true in every particular—lawsuit, sickness and business. Enclosed amount for another, December 30, 1896." MARGUERITE ST. OMER BRIGGS, Psychometrist, 433 Richmond St., Cincinnati, O. Readings, $1. Readings, diagnosis and business, $2. 376

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

One hundred and forty-four propositions, theological, moral, historical and speculative; each proved affirmatively and negatively by quotations from Scripture, without comment. Price 15 cents.

The Development of the Spirit

After Transition. By the late M. Faraday. The origin of religions, and their influence upon the mental development of the human race. Transcribed at the request of a band of ancient philosophers. Price 10 cents.

COLLEGE OF FINE FORCES

AN INSTITUTE OF REFINED THERAPEUTICS, including the Sun Cure, Vital Magnetism, Electricity, Mind Cure, and a higher science of life. Chemical affinity and basic principles developed with their marvelous applications. Students in four continents have taken the course. The college is chartered and confers the degree of D. M., Doctor of Magnetics. By a system of printed questions students can take the course and receive the diplomas at their own homes. Institution removed to 253 So. Broadway, Los Angeles, Cal. Diplomas granted under either the New Jersey or California charter. Send stamp for catalogue to 422 E. D. BABBITT. M. D. LL. D., Dean

A WONDERFUL OFFER

..BY...

DR. W. F. LAY, Clairvoyant,

One of the most successful healers and diagnosticians living. The doctor has letters from all over the United States, Canada, Australia and Europe, telling of the marvelous results, after all hope in other sources have been given up, being speedily cured under his treatment. Nervous and chronic diseases of every character, peculiar to both men and women, are, by the aid of his wonderful and extraordinary power, cured.

The doctor has never failed in a correct diagnosis of any case, many times it being causes that had baffled the most renowned physicians, but was readily explained through his wonderful clairvoyant and clairaudient powers.

Each case receives the attention of himself and band, also remedies for individual case. Send three 2-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, sex, and one symptom, and by return mail you will receive a full and accurate description of your case and any advice regarding it. Through persecution on account of his marvelous success the doctor graduated in a regular school, therefore being an M. D.

Sufferers, you that have failed to find relief, try once more and be convinced of Dr. Lay's powers and ability. Address
342tf DR. W. F. LAY, Box 918, Chicago, Ill.

HELIOCENTRIC ASTROLOGY.

A book containing instructions for making a heliocentric horoscope, together with a chart which gives the position of the planets from 1825 to 1916. The most complete work on this system ever published. Adapted for beginners or professors. One can cast and read a horoscope in half an hour. For sale by

FREDERICK WHITE, O. O.M.,
503 Fifth Ave., S. - Minneapolis, Minn.

Send the date of your birth and $1 and receive book and chart with your horoscope ready to read. Mention this paper when writing. 344tf

BETTER THAN GOLD.

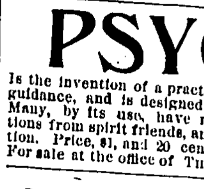
Elixir of Life Nos. One and Two

Cures all forms of stomach, liver and kidney disease; also constipation. A sure cure for that tired, worn out feeling. Guaranteed to assist your system to health with pure, rich blood. Sufficient quantity for one month sent for $1.00.

One package of our Magnetized Compound for sore eyes or poor eyesight. Has been used and praised by thousands in all parts of the world. Sent for 60 cents, or all three sent postpaid for $1.00, with Yarma's photo and instructions how to live 100 years.

Melted Pebble Spectacles.

Restore lost vision. Write for Illustrated Circulars showing styles and prices and photo of Spirit Yarma, who developed this clairvoyant power in me. I can adjust my Melted Pebble Spectacles as perfectly to your eyes in your own home as if you were in my office, as thousands can testify. Send stamp for photo. B. F. POOLE, Clinton, Iowa.



DR. GARLAND'S

VEGETABLE COUGH DROPS

Are put up in six-ounce tin boxes and are guaranteed to give satisfaction or money will be refunded by the proprietor, Dr. M. H. Garland. Send 25 cents in stamps and receive by return mail a box of this

HOUSEHOLD REMEDY

as you will find it a blood cleanser as well as a Throat and Lung Remedy. Over 200,000 boxes sold and all recommend them. Address all orders to DR. M. H. GARLAND, 332 Sixtieth Place, Station O., Chicago, Illinois. 322tf

ORDER OF THE MAGI:

A New Badge in solid gold with blue and black enamel, with the pyramids, obelisk and sun's rays in gold. Every Mystic should have one of these beautiful emblems. Price $2. For sale at this office.

PSYCHE

Is the invention of a practical medium, under spirit guidance, and is designed to develop mediumship. Many, by its use, have received long communications from spirit friends, and express great satisfaction. Price, $1, and 20 cents extra for expressage. For sale at the office of THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER.

DR. T. WILKINS,

67 33D STREET, CHICAGO,

Treats Magnetically all Chronic Diseases, at office, or home of the patient.

CHRONIC DISEASES

A SPECIALTY.

Send your age, name in full in your own handwriting, and I will diagnose your disease

FREE OF CHARGE!

Enclose three 2-cent stamps and address

J. S. COOPER. M. D
Chillicothe, Mo.
384

OCCULT FORCES.

A wonderful book containing valuable matter of intense interest to all who desire in any way to benefit their condition in life, a marvel of condensed thought and brilliant ideas pointing a new way to success in all undertakings through the mastery of subtile forces.

Develop your latent powers and accomplish what would otherwise be impossible. This knowledge not only increases personal influence but fortifies one against designing and unprincipled persons. Price of book 30c. or sent free for addresses of friends likely to be interested in it and who are ... free.

OCCULT PUB. CO., 3574 Vincennes Avenue, P. T., Chicago, Ill. 410

The Blind Medium

Will send by letter life reading of past and future, with dates. Mail lock of hair and one dollar. Prof. H. W. Sinclair. 82 Adams avenue, Detroit, Mich. 378

Permanent Medial Development.

Send a stamped and addressed envelope to J. C. F. Grumbine, Station P, Chicago, for terms, reading, circulars, for development in clairvoyance, psychometry, inspiration and healing. Endorsed by hundreds of students. Reduced terms. The inspirational teachings and experiments by correspondence are just what you need to insure success. Psychiscopes $2. Mr. Grumbine is endorsed by the Spiritualistic press and leading societies throughout the country. The only inspirational and scientific system of unfoldment extant. Catalogue of publications of White Rose free. 364tf

MANSILL'S ALMANAC

—OF—

PLANETARY METEOROLOGY.

Weather Forecasters' Guide and New System of Science for 1897. It contains a planetary chart of each month, showing the position of the planets in the different houses in the Zodiac.

BY RICHARD MANSILL,

Author of "Geology and Microscopy Illustrated," "Cohesive Attraction and the Formation of World," "Universal Change in Natural Elements," etc. Price 25 cents. For sale at this office.

OCCULTISM TAUGHT BY MAIL. BOOKLET AND first lesson free. Enclose stamp. Uriel Buchanan, Ph. D., 84 Walton Place, Chicago, Ill. 376

OLD MELODIES SPIRITUALIZED—A SONG Book (words only) for the home, circle, seance and lecture room. With each book is a practicable way of use for those who sing by note. 35 cents. Address H. W. BOOZER Grand Radids, Mich 378

DR. JULIA A. YALE.

Twenty years practice of Medicine and Magnetics. Her band of spirit healers is unsurpassed. Cures when others fail. No case that cannot be relieved. Consultation free. 48 S. May street, Chicago, Ill. Letters inclosing stamps answered. 376

RUPTURE SURE CURE at home book free. Dr. W. S. Rice box 89, Smithville, N.Y. 367 13tcow and Head Noises relieved by using Wilson's Common Sense Ear Drums. New scientific invention; different from all other devices. The only safe, simple, comfortable and invisible Ear Drum in the world. Helps where medical skill fails. No wire or string attachment. Write for pamphlet.

DEAFNESS

WILSON EAR DRUM CO.,
234 Trust Bldg., Louisville, Ky.
1122 Broadway, [Room 250] New York.

HOROSCOPES

★ FREE For Men, Women, Young People and Children.

Send at once. PLANETS AND PEOPLE,
Enclose Stamp. 169 Jackson St., Chicago.

Send 25 cents for MAGAZINE OF THE HEAVENS.

SCIENCE, MORALITY, SUPPLEMENTED BY AN EXALTED THE BIBLE OF THE FUTURE.

THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER.

Progress, the Universal Law of Nature; Thought, the Solvent of Her Problems.

VOL. 15. CHICAGO, ILL., SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1897, NO. 376.

THE OCCULT FACULTIES IN MAN.

A Lecture Delivered by Hon. Loren A. Sherman, Before the Anthropological Society, Cleveland, Ohio.

A LECTURE BEAMING WITH RARE GEMS OF THOUGHT—SCINTILLATING THROUGHOUT, AND WORTHY OF THE PERUSAL OF EVERY THOUGHTFUL MIND—WORTH MORE THAN THE ONE DOLLAR YOU PAY FOR THE PROGRESSIVE THINKER ONE YEAR; THE LEADING SPIRITUALIST PAPER.

"The occult faculties in man." This is the first part of the subject I am asked to discuss tonight. What is an "occult faculty?" The word is defined as something hidden. An occult faculty must therefore be some power in man not apparent; something of the possession of which he is ignorant; something which he must seek to find.

Are there such faculties in man? Doubtless every person, at one time or another, has discovered in himself some undeveloped faculty, an ability to do something not previously suspected. But if such development was only through the physical senses, the faculty brought out would hardly be called occult. It was not really hidden before, but simply overlooked, not called into use. I shall therefore consider the term occult as intended to designate only such faculties as may be shown to possess which enable him to perceive independently of the physical senses, or to perform physical acts without apparent physical cause.

THE SIXTH SENSE.

Has man the so-called "sixth sense?" Is it possible for him to become conscious of anything exterior to his own ego except through the physical senses? A little more than a year ago I heard a man, designated as "professor," in a scientific lecture delivered in a Christian church, before an audience made up largely of members of Christian churches, declare with absolute positiveness that there was nothing in mind reading or telepathy; that no man ever had or ever could become conscious of the unspoken thoughts of another. He had been investigating for fifteen years, he said, and had found that alleged mind reading was all a fraud. And this declaration was applauded by a considerable portion of that Christian audience. I wondered at the time if those people, assembled in a Christian church, and professing the religion of Jesus Christ, had rejected the Bible and its teachings.

In Matthew, ninth chapter, fourth verse, I read as follows:

"And Jesus, knowing their thoughts, said, wherefore think ye evil in your hearts?"

And in Matthew, xii, 25:

"And knowing their thoughts he said unto them."

And in John, iv, 29, the woman of Samaria said:

"Come see a man who told me all things that ever I did; can this be the Christ?"

And in many other passages of the gospels Christ's power to perceive the thoughts of other minds and knowledge possessed by them not in their minds at the time is specifically declared. Peter and other apostles are also reported to have perceived the unspoken thoughts of other men.

In the same town where the declaration was made that thought transference and mind reading are impossible, not over six months before, some hypnotic experiments were undertaken in a public hall, during the course of which a boy while in hypnosis was told to visit the residence of a gentleman present. This man bears the title of general, earned during the war, and could not have been suspected of collusion with the boy, who, he said, had never been in his house. This boy, while hypnotized, reclining in a chair twenty feet distant from the man whose residence he was told to visit, described its interior correctly; gave the ages of persons whose pictures were on the walls; described a lady in the house; was told to ask her name and gave it correctly as he said she replied to him; told what kind of fuel was used in the kitchen; gave the titles and correct descriptions of books in a bookcase, and in other ways appeared to observe correctly the details of the house and its furnishings and to talk to its only inmate at the time as readily as though he had been there in person. If this boy in hypnosis did not read the mind of the only person present who knew the details described by him, how did he get the information? It must have been by the actual projection of his perceptive consciousness to the house described, which would be a much more remarkable thing than mind reading.

It should hardly be necessary in these days to cite facts or present phenomena before an intelligent audience proving the actuality of thought impression by one mind upon another; yet the case referred to shows that skepticism and ignorance touching the simplest psychic facts still prevail to a large extent.

OCCULT FACULTIES.

I shall not undertake to enumerate all the occult faculties possessed by man, but will confine my references in the main to those I have myself seen demonstrated. As to the power of one mind to read or become aware of the unspoken thoughts of another there cannot be the slightest question, and if the learned professor of whom I have spoken had honestly investigated the subject for fifteen years without meeting with a case of thought or mind reading, he was most unfortunate. In scores of cases my thoughts have been read perfectly by persons possessing the faculty of thought perception highly developed. On one occasion I said to a lady, "Can you tell me what I am thinking of now?" I had in mind a friend who sometimes played the violin, and thought, "I wish he were here to play for me." Almost immediately the lady said, "You thought you would like to have your friend (naming him) here to play on the violin for you." In other cases my thoughts have been read to the extent of half hour's conversation.

EXPERIMENTAL TELEPATHY

and thought transference upon a scientific basis has been carried on in England quite extensively. The summing up in one series of experiments will be sufficient for this demonstration. Mr. Malcolm Guthrie in 457 experiments found the following results: Perfectly successful 237, partially successful 82, misdescriptions 68, nothing perceived 70. Success by chance equal to this proportion would not be one in a thousand, and scarcely one in ten thousand. Nor can there be a doubt that every person possesses the faculty of thought perception, but in most people it is weak and undeveloped. No person of normal mental power is wholly deficient of any faculty possessed by any other person.

If we seek for the simplest form of thought perception we shall find it to be common with nearly every person, although not generally fully understood or appreciated. Can any one always tell the sources of his thoughts or why they come to him? You think of a friend you have not seen for months or years, perhaps, and he unexpectedly appears before you. Why were your thoughts turned toward him? Manifestly, in view of the demonstration of thought reading experimentally, because his thought was directed to you, and yours responded. And again you find your thoughts directed toward some friend not present, without apparent reason. A day or two later perhaps you receive a letter from him written at the time your thoughts were directed to him, showing, in that case, that his thought of you awakened in your mind thoughts of him.

Scientists tell us that the phenomena of light demonstrate the existence of some element or form of energy which the physical senses cannot perceive. This supositious element is called the luminiferous ether. This ether, scientists say, is more subtile than the thinnest gas, while having the nature of a solid, and fills and permeates the entire visible universe. No one has ever seen the ether, nor has anyone heard, tasted, smelled or touched it; yet men who do not acknowledge the possibility of perception except through the physical senses tell us that it must certainly exist. Granting that it does, we may imagine this ether to be the medium through or by which thought is transmitted, as light and heat are brought to us from the sun and other heavenly bodies through space apparently empty. And to become aware of the unspoken thought of another there must be harmony of vibrations. This is a theory; but whether it be correct or not, the fact of thought transference is demonstrated beyond question. This power of thought perception and mind reading is one of the occult faculties of man, the first and most important.

AN OCCULT FACULTY OF WHICH

there is positive proof, which I shall place second in importance, is the power to perceive distant scenes and events. The existence of this faculty is just as clearly proved as that of mind reading and thought transference. I have already referred to one case where it was demonstrated in public. The experiments on that occasion were conducted under my own personal direction, although I did not act as the hypnotist. Emanuel Swedenborg possessed this faculty in a remarkable degree, and frequently exercised it. Immanuel Kant, the philosopher, relates a specific case, occurring on Saturday, July 19, 1759. Swedenborg was on that day at Gottenberg, at the house of William Castel, with a party of some fifteen persons. He left the room for a short time, about 6 o'clock, and when he returned was greatly excited. He said a fire had broken out at Stockholm and was spreading rapidly. As it progressed he said that the house of a friend whom he named had been burned, and continued to report the progress of the fire until it was extinguished. Gottenberg is 300 miles from Stockholm, and at that time there were no means of communication more rapid than relays of horses. On the subsequent Monday messengers arrived from Stockholm bringing news of the fire, which occurred exactly as Swedenborg had seen it in his clairvoyant vision.

HYPNOSIS.

Thousands of similar cases occurring within the last half century are recorded. A friend of mine residing in the city of Detroit made a series of experiments a few years ago with boys in hypnosis, by which he demonstrated that their perceptive intelligences could go from place to place, reporting correctly their observations of things as they existed at the time and events then occurring; and that frequently they could perceive past events and things as they had previously existed. And furthermore, that while in this condition of clairvoyant hypnosis the subjects could hold conversations with persons at distant points and obtain correct replies. In the course of my own investigations I have had scores of demonstrations of clairvoyant perception, though not often of the power to hold conversations with persons at distant points and report them correctly.

VISITING CLAIRVOYANTLY.

On one occasion I asked a woman possessing psychic power, whom I had met but once before, and whose home was in a city many miles distant from mine, to visit my residence clairvoyantly and report to me her observations. After a few seconds she reported her arrival there, and proceeded to describe correctly and in detail the hallway and adjoining rooms, with their furnishings, and continued until nearly every room in the house had been visited. No mistakes were made. At one point she spoke of an easel standing in the corner of a room, and said there was a child's picture on it. I said no, and asked for a description of a picture I knew to be there, which she then gave correctly. The next day, upon my return home, I found that a child's picture was at the top of the easel above the one I had known to be there, just as she had stated, notwithstanding my denial of the fact.

At the time of this sitting, which was from 8:30 to 10 o'clock in the evening, I supposed my wife and daughter to be in the library of my residence, together with a lady friend who was a guest. I asked the clairvoyant to tell me who she saw in the house. She said a lady was sitting in the library reading a newspaper. I pressed her to tell me who else was there, to which she replied that she could see no one. Afterward she reported that the lady had turned out the light and gone up stairs. A little later she said this lady, giving a description answering to that of my wife, had gone to bed; also that she found a young woman asleep in another room. The hour when this statement was made was 10 o'clock. It did not agree with my own thought, as my daughter seldom retired at so early an hour, and I believed the young lady guest was in the house. I learned, however, on reaching home the next day, that the psychic had been right and my thought wrong. My wife first said that she had been sewing during the evening, and not reading, but afterward remembered that she had taken up the evening paper for a few minutes before leaving the library. My daughter was not well and had retired early; and the young lady guest had spent the evening and night at the home of a friend.

In this sitting it was therefore clearly demonstrated that the perceptive consciousness under some circumstances and conditions, can go out to distant points, make correct observations, and report them. While much that the psychic told me could have been accounted for as mind reading, that theory would not explain her correct report of current happenings unknown to me, and against my thoughts as to the facts.

I have had many other personal experiences of like character, some even more positive than this in their demonstration of projected consciousness. As in the case of thought transference, there can be no doubt of facts. The human ego, in its perceptive consciousness, has the power to project itself, or to be projected, to points distant from the body, and to observe independently of the physical senses. This power I shall designate as man's second occult faculty.

A THIRD OCCULT FACULTY

which I have seen demonstrated to a limited extent is usually called psychometry. The commonly received theory regarding the operation of this faculty is that every material thing absorbs into itself, or holds around itself, potent images of events, individuals, things and thoughts with which it has been associated. I do not wish to be understood as fully indorsing this theory. The fact is, however, that some psychics, and in rare cases persons in hypnosis induced by the suggestion of a second person, are able to perceive the history of articles placed in their hands, even to the extent of describing correctly the personal appearance and mental characteristics of the person most closely connected with it, and his customary surroundings. For example, I once saw a woman standing before an audience in a public hall, take a pocket-knife whose owner she did not know, and heard her describe the place of business of its owner, his ordinary daily surroundings, personal appearance and characteristics. This man was in the audience, and was one of many who had sent up articles for the psychometrist to experiment with. He was a personal friend of mine, and I knew him to be entirely unacquainted with the psychic, who had arrived the same day from a distant city. He acknowledged the reading to be correct in the main, as did some others in the audience who had sent up articles for other readings. Collusion or fraud was out of the question, and it was manifest that by some means the psychic became conscious of facts otherwise unknown to her, closely associated with the articles taken into her hands and pressed to her forehead. Without authorizing or detailing further observations, I will hold it to be demonstrated that the psychometric faculty is an actuality.

Of something the same character, it may be assumed, is the perception of characteristics in individuals. The faculty of intuition is acknowledgedly possessed by all; and in some people it is developed to a high degree. I have met men and women who were able not only to name the personal characteristics of strangers with a great degree of accuracy, but frequently to report correctly many of the important events of their lives. I have some doubt if the perception of events and characteristics psychometrically or by intuition should be credited to a distinct faculty or the human consciousness, but it will do no harm to so class it.

I am myself uncertain regarding a

PROPHETIC FACULTY IN MAN;

but that in some manner the shadows of coming events are sometimes cast before, I have had positive evidence. In many cases where correct forecasts of future occurrences are made, I am convinced that it is by the reasoning power of man's primary consciousness, his real self, which many students of psycho-physics are pleased to call the sub-consciousness. As man reasons from cause to effect through his physical mind, which makes use of the senses, the nerves, the ganglia and the brain, so the primary consciousness, which operates independently of the bodily organs, perceives existing facts and conditions and judges results therefrom. It would be comparatively easy, for example, for a skillful physician to predict the early death of a person apparently in good health who might have some organic disease sure to result fatally, could he see the condition and workings of the entire anatomy. The independent man, the mind which reads the thoughts of others, is able to perceive many things which are hidden from the physical senses, and upon the knowledge thus obtained may foretell an event with an accuracy which would give it the appearance of a real prophecy. Under another clause of the topic assigned to me I shall discuss this feature of psychic phenomena further.

A REMARKABLE DREAM.

But some occurrences that have been reported to me do not seem to be explainable on the theory of cause and effect. Especially is this true of a remarkable dream experienced by a gentleman who was associated with me in business at one time, as reported to me by his mother, a lady of liberal education and high character. One morning at breakfast her son said he had had a remarkable dream, or rather, that he had passed through a mental experience which appeared to be a physical reality. In this dream or vision he had seen a woman with whom both his mother and himself were well acquainted, a near neighbor, crushed and killed beneath a railroad car. He described the scene in detail as it had appeared to him, so that it was distinctly remembered by all members of the family who heard the story. A few months later the disaster actually occurred just as it had been seen in the dream or vision, to the minutest detail of the surroundings. It was purely an accident, and manifestly not the result of a cause acting at the time of the dream. Other like causes have been reported to me, where the circumstances were such as to exclude the theory of coincidence. However, the evidence I have been able to collect is not sufficient to warrant the positive conclusion that man has a prophetic faculty, and I shall not, therefore, give it specific place.

THE FOURTH AND LAST OCCULT

faculty I shall enumerate is the power of many to cause physical results without apparent physical cause. It is not counted a strange abnormal thing that I should be able to raise my arm thus. Physiologically the source of the physical energy which causes the movement of my arm is the oxydation of the food I eat, causing heat, which is transformed into motion. But supposing death to come by drowning, or some other sudden means which does not change the tissues and organs of the body chemically or otherwise, why is it that the fire which creates this physical energy within us cannot be relighted? If life and intelligence, like physical energy in living creatures, are but the results of physical processes, they should not be crowded out of the body so easily, or the physical machine should move on without them. But it will not. When the potency of the real man is removed the machine stops forever, and the energy of oxydation uncontrolled by the life principle, soon resolves itself into its unorganized elements.

The heat of the sun, operating upon the atmosphere and the waters which are held upon the surface of the earth by the energy of gravitation, causes motion in those fluids of such potency that all other energy manifested upon the earth dwindles into insignificance beside them. Physical energy independent of living organisms is therefore entirely normal. But there is a class of phenomena quite out of the normal, involving movements of physical bodies and the performance of physical acts, without touch, which are clearly attributable to the influence of the mentality or the magnetic force of living persons.

My first personal observation of phenomena of this character was some twenty years ago. By invitation I called upon a man having psychic powers, with a friend. We sat in his room at the hotel, in full daylight, and found that he was able to read questions we had written on slips of paper which were folded into pellets and had never passed out of our sight or reach. One of these questions he read while the pellet was in the gentleman's hand, and told him that on opening it he would find the answer written across its face. And so he did, in the simple word, "No." But this was enough. We knew the word had been impressed there by occult power.

INDEPENDENT WRITING.

In two cases independent writings have occurred in my own house, with no person present in one case and with no one but myself present in the other. To detail the circumstances involved so that they might be clearly understood would occupy too much time. I will, therefore, only say that the conditions excluded the possibility of fraud, and were such as to demonstrate in both cases the fact that the physical energy which caused the writings was originally drawn from living persons, whatever the intelligence which directed them may have been. A woman known to the world as Mme. Blavatsky during the latter part of her life was the head of the society of Theosophists in Europe and America. I know very little about theosophy, but from that little judge that its teachings contain some golden grains of truth among the rather large proportion of chaff. Among the phenomena said to have been developed by Mme. Blavatsky was that of communication with the "masters" in India by writings upon paper inclosed in sealed envelopes and locked up in a cabinet. There are some who believe that this phenomena actually occurred, but a far greater number of people believe that Mme. Blavatsky produced the writings herself. Perhaps she did by psychic power; perhaps fraudulently; I do not know. But that writings sometimes are produced without physical hands, and with no person in contact with or near the articles upon which they appear, I know to be a fact, from my own personal observation and experiences. In the present state of psychic development, however, it is doubtful if there is anyone living who can always produce such writings at will.

In another case, sitting with a psychic in my study, I took a pad of paper from my desk, laid it on the table in front of me, turned out the light and took his hands. Almost immediately he passed into a state of hypnosis or trance, and shortly afterward, while I still held his hands firmly, the pad of paper was projected against my body and fell on the floor. When I again turned on the light I found a brief message addressed to myself impressed upon the paper, embracing a fact known to me but not to the psychic. I know he had not touched the paper, and therefore had evidence of an energy exerted by occult means, manifesting knowledge not possessed by the mind of the man from whose body, presumably, the physical energy was drawn.

In another case, sitting with this same psychic in my own house, when he was firmly held by the members of my family, the lights being turned out, various physical manifestations perceivable by the senses of hearing and touch occurred. At one moment, when an article weighing several ounces appeared to be striking the ceiling above our heads, an electric light was turned on in an adjoining room without warning. I then saw, as did others present, this article fall to the table around which we were sitting and we found every hand firmly clasped. In this case I had the evidence of three senses, including sight, of the power of mind over matter independently of physical contact. I have had many other like experiences, but none so remarkable as some that have been witnessed by personal friends in whose honesty and good judgment I have as much confidence as in my own. One gentleman of my acquaintance, distinguished as a soldier and statesman, sat on many occasions with a psychic in whose presence, in full daylight, a table would move about the room with no one touching it, responding with intelligible motions to questions asked. Another friend saw a table rise nearly to the ceiling of a room, with four men sitting on it, and no visible force lifting it. Such phenomena are so common, and have been witnessed by so many persons, that their actuality is seldom denied by intelligent people. And whatever else they may or may not demonstrate, these phenomena prove most positively that under some circumstances and conditions man can exert or control physical energy to operate upon inanimate material objects without direct contact.

MAN'S OCCULT FACULTY.

I have thus shown that man has occult power or faculties which may be classified under four heads, namely:

1. Thought perception or transference.
2. Projection of the perceptive consciousness, or perception of distant scenes and events.
3. Perception of the past experiences of animate and inanimate objects and of personal characteristics.
4. Exertion or control of physical energy without contact with the object acted upon.

Probably closer and more elaborate classification could be made, and other occult faculties could be demonstrated to be within the possible control of man; but under the first division of my subject I shall rest here.

The remainder of my subject, "Psychic Phenomena, Facts and Conclusions," has properly two divisions. Phenomena and facts may stand demonstrated of themselves, without pointing to absolute conclusions; and it is true that men are wide apart in their conclusions regarding the significance of psychic phenomena, the reality of which only ignorance questions. And at the outset of psychic investigation the honest seeker after truth will find himself confronted with phenomena which purport to be of a somewhat different character, the production of disembodied men, spiritual rather than psychic, and yet so intermingled that it is not always easy to discover the line of separation between the two, if there is any. The theory assumed as the basis of this intermingled phenomena is that life once individualized in man is continuous, and that at the death of the physical organism the real man leaves the body, taking on its counterpart in a spiritual body, and retaining consciousness, memory and individuality. I shall not attempt either to prove or disapprove this theory, but in reporting phenomena and facts will not seek to disguise either their real or assumed character.

At this point we meet wide differences of opinion and find the way blocked by walls of prejudice, crumbling somewhat at the present day, it is true, but still difficult to surmount.

The modern Spiritualist, whose era has not passed the half century mark, and the orthodox Christian have developed wonderfully in liberality of thought, sentiment and belief during the past quarter of a century, but are still antagonistic. Startled by the presentation of phenomena which appeared new, but were really as old as the race, many of those who accepted Spiritualistic theories during the first quarter of a century of the modern era imagined that their mission was to bring about both a social and religious revolution. Christianity and the Bible were attacked viciously; there was much talk of affinities, and some practice of the theory, and assumed spirits of the dead speaking through mediums, some fraudulent, were called upon to advise and direct business affairs. The result was to create intense prejudice against Spiritualists and Spiritualism, as the communistic and other unusual and revolutionary practices of the disciples and apostles of Christ created prejudice against them. During the last quarter of a century, however, Spiritualists have learned that the Bible and the teachings of Christ constitute their strongest support, and they do not longer tolerate the idea of a social revolution.

BIBLE SPIRITUALISM.

Turning to the element in the population of Christian countries—which is in the majority—the people who accept, either positively or nominally, the creeds of Christian churches, we find them to-day placed in a most peculiar position. While quite generally denying the genuineness of alleged occult spirit phenomena in the present age, they find the Bible full of reports of like phenomena, and the spirit of Jesus reported communing with the disciples and apostles and developing spiritual phenomena long after his death. Abraham was a remarkable psychic or medium having the ability to see spirits. One of these appeared to him with the declaration, "I am Almighty God." Later, according to the record in Genesis, the Lord appeared to Abraham as three men who came to his tent under the oaks, and one of these men manifested his occult power by reading Sarah's thoughts while she was hidden in the tent. Some hundreds of years later this same spirit is reported to have appeared to Moses, and acknowledged that he had deceived Abraham in declaring himself God Almighty, his real name being Yah-weh, or Jehova. At the manifestation in the burning bush Jehovah told Moses that as he had been the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, so he would be his God and guide and lead him with his people out of the land of Egypt. It is recorded that Moses cast his rod upon the ground at the command of Jehovah and it became a serpent, and when he took the serpent by the tail it became a rod again. This occurrence with many others recorded in the Bible is similar to phenomena said to be developed by Indian wonder workers at the present day. Aaron, the brother of Moses, was a remarkable psychic or necromancer, causing a rod to bud and blossom and iron to swim.

From Genesis to Revelation there is not a book of the Bible which does not record or refer to occult or spiritual manifestations. And the careful student of Bible occultism and Spiritualism will find the character of such phenomena and the conditions under which they were manifested in those days the same as those actually produced, or alleged to occur, to-day. The strictest conditions were required for the production of such phenomena by Moses and his successors. Specific details were given for the construction of the ark of the covenant, which appears to have been an electrical apparatus like the modern Leyden jar, so powerful that when charged it struck dead those who ventured to look into it and touch its inside and outside lining of beaten gold. Afterward this apparatus was placed in the temple and connected with rods covered with gold extending to the ouside air with chains of gold, making a complete electrical conductor. The tabernacle and afterward the holy of holies in the temple, were ingeniously constructed cabinets for occult or spirit manifestations, by the aid of electric and magnetic forces. The twenty-fifth, twenty-sixth and twenty-seventh chapters of Exodus contain minute instructions for the manufacture of apparatus which would enable Aaron and his sons and the priests and prophets of later days, to produce occult phenomena, or enable spirits to manifest themselves to the physical senses. Any person interested in the study of occult or alleged spirit manifestations will find the Bible an almost inexhaustible mine in which to delve for them.

The writers of the Old Testament books, and the people who were their contemporaries, had very indistinct ideas of a life after physical death; and no positive declarations on the subject can be found in the teachings of Christ. But the only foundation for the Christian belief in a future existence is the spiritual manifestations reported in the Bible, which are essentially the same as those alleged to occur in these days, with all their conditions and limitations, and the frequent appearance of false prophets or mediums. And if these did not occur as reported, then, as St Paul declared, the Christian faith and teaching are in vain. It is, therefore, most astonishing that many Christians should scout and condemn modern psychic phenomena, and the conclusions, that Spiritualists draw from them, with the words of Christ that "These signs shall follow them that believe," recorded in the Bible.

Another class of people whose habits of thought, prejudices and beliefs must be considered in the presentation to the world of psychic phenomena, and conclusions based upon such phenomena, comprises all who do not subscribe to are too numerous to attempt enumeration. It includes many who are simply indifferent, who seek nothing beyond the evidence of the physical senses and sensual gratification. Another division is made up of those who believe all phenomena, even life itself, to be the result of physical processes, the action of inanimate matter within and upon itself. This division, known as materialists, is rapidly decreasing in numbers.

SOME RELIGIOUS DOCTRINE.

Among physical scientists and investigators there are three divisions: Materialists, those who are in doubt and those who accept the facts of occult and spiritual phenomena, with conclusions more or less logical. Scientific inquiry is supposed to divest itself of prejudice, but many persons who assume to study mental and occult phenomena upon a scientific basis exhibit a weakness which is both pitiable and contemptible. For example, I read recently in an article which was one of a long series upon such phenomena by a professor of some note, published in a scientific magazine, his report of certain phenomena which purported to be the production of disembodied spirits, for which he apologized by saying: "Of course I did not believe it was caused by spirits." No effort whatever was made to weigh the evidence thus presented in the scale of scientific inquiry, but everything was twisted and contorted to account for all mental and occult phenomena on the materialistic theory. Not all scientific inquiries are like this one. Many of the men who stand highest in the ranks of the great army seeking to develop scientific truth at the present day are giving unprejudiced consideration to occult facts and phenomena and accept the logical conclusions drawn from such phenomena.

The last division of the large class of people who do not sacrifice their reason on the altar of creed comprises the agnostics—those who do not know but are always open to conviction. In this division I classed myself for more than a quarter of a century, and although I may have reached conclusions upon some points, I am still ready to receive new light and to give evidence which may be presented upon any point due weight, without prejudice. And if I know anything regarding the facts of life, consciousness and external phenomena, I am sure that what I do not know stands against my puny knowledge as a mountain to a molehill. I am a seeker after truth, and trust I shall never reach a condition of mind which will permit me to say, when phenomena and facts are presented, "Of course I do not believe these things are what they assume to be."

PSYCHIC PHENOMENA.

I have already cited various phenomena to demonstrate that man has certain occult faculties. Under the second division of my subject, within a reasonable time limit, I can give but an outline of psychic phenomena which have come under my observation. The phenomena of hypnotism are so common at the present time that it would be superfluous to cite cases. As now practiced, hypnosis is usually induced by suggestion from a second person. Jesus Christ had natural hypnotic power of such potency that his touch and his look were sufficient to control persons, especially sensitive to the influence. Peter, the apostle, hypnotized people by gazing steadfastly upon them, and if the Bible record is correct, was able to strike Ananias and his wife dead by the gaze, and the force of his will. Among the most important facts of hypnotism are these: In hypnosis induced by the suggestion or influence of a second person, the subject may be made to lose his own physical sensitiveness and take on that of the operator. To perceive the unspoken thoughts of the operator and the mental pictures formed in his brain. To regard an article or a sensation as something different from the reality To close all the senses to perception of things present or events occurring withing their ordinary reach. To control the tissues, organs and functions of the body abnormally. And to project the perceptive consciousness and observe distant scenes and events.

SUGGESTION DURING HYPNOSIS.

One of the most significant facts demonstrated in hypnotism is that a suggestion made during hypnosis may be carried into the normal consciousness. Under the influence of such suggestion a subject may be rendered unable to perceive a specified object as it actually exists, for a designated period of time. For example, if told while in hypnosis that a cheap paper soap box is a casket of rare jewels, and will appear as such to the subject for a period of three months, it will so appear. The physical senses will make their report correctly, but the picture formed in the brain will be perceived by the consciousness only as the object the hypnotized subject was told to regard it. This to me stands as absolute demonstration of the fact that the real man, the ego, the individual consciousness, is something which has an existence and powers of perception quite independent of the body and its sensory apparatus. And in the combined phenomena of hypnotism I find demonstration of the theory that the individualized energy which resides in living creatures, as in independent entity, operates the body and brain and produces all mental and physical phenomena that they can manifest. To the control of this entity over the bodily functions is to be credited all healing by the suggestion of a second person, by touch, by faith, or by other mental processes. There is no miracle about it; only the operation of normal faculties mostly undeveloped.

AN EXPOSER OF SPIRITUALISM.

My own study of occult phenomena, in a superficial and desultory way, began thirty years ago. At the outset I was in doubt regarding a future state of existence, but was firm in my conviction that spirits of the dead did not and could not communicate with the living. That thought transference and certain phases of clairvoyant perception were actualities I knew from experience, observation and experiment. In this frame of mind I visited a man who posed as an exposer of the alleged illusions and frauds of spiritism, and found that under test conditions he could and did read, mentally, concealed writings and give correct answers to them, signing the names of the dead persons to whom they were addressed. He also told me facts regarding a deceased cousin which I had never known, but afterward ascertained to be true, using the language, "He says so." Following this I did not scoff at the theory of the continuity of life and communication of spiritual and physical men. I simply said, "It may be so, I do not know."

(Concluded next week.)

While the cuneiform characters did not properly represent an alphabet, they were a singularly close approximation to it.

In the Latin alphabet as modified from the Greeks the third letter, C, was pronounced as G, like the Greek, Gamma.

According to an estimate made by Brewer the use of consonants in our language as proportioned to the vowels is 5977 to 3400.

The intent of every alphabet is to furnish one letter for every sound, but it is believed there is no alphabet which fully fulfills this purpose.

W is simply double U, no distinction being formerly made in the shape of the U and V. In some languages it is called double Vee.

C is the third letter in all alphabets derived from the Greek and Roman, but with the ancients it is believed to have had the sound of G.

About 400 B. C. the Greek alphabet was brought to the form in which it is now known by the Ionians in the Greek colonies of Asia.

The Wallachian language is written with Russian characters, but the number employed, instead of being thirty-six, is only twenty-seven.

He wears his faith but as the fashion of his hat; it ever changes with the next block.—Shakspeare.

There was a noble way, in former times, of saying things simply, and yet saying them proudly.—Irving.

Scintillations From the Pacific Coast.

WHY A SPIRITUALIST?

A Spicy and Philosophical Dissertation.

Theology Which Gives Satan the Cream of Everything.

When it is obvious that the same word or aggregation of words suggests different mental conceptions to different persons, we must try by new combinations to define what we individually mean by a word or phrase even of general use.

A French student defined the crab as "a red fish that walks backward." Cuvier said the definition had the high merit of lucidity, but a crab was not a fish, it was not red, neither did it walk backwards. Those who declare a Spiritualist to be a damphool are certainly terse enough in their definition, but in general our opponents do not seem to have a clear conception of what and why they condemn. I use the word simply to indicate one who asserts the possibility of intelligently communing with excarnate spirits, of an intelligent perception of spiritual things; and who believes that it is good for one whose aspirations are high to attain the condition requisite for such communion and perception.

All the sects of Christendom (and here is the important difference between the faith of Jesus and of other teachers) boldly pray for the holy spirit. That is, they obey the master's injunction in so far as they assume the childlike attitude of simple trust and receptivity of mind which is the essential condition of the prayer that "availeth much." For prayer is not of the mouth to Him that readeth the heart.

The enthusiastic, the most spiritual-minded among all these sects declare persistently and with the calm assurance of truth that they "feel" the contact of such spirit and that "he bears witness with their spirit that they are the sons of God." Now, the real point in dispute between the Presbyterian—who of all sects finds it hardest to pronounce "Shibboleth"—and the Spiritualist is that the latter claims the possibility not only of feeling but of seeing and hearing—aye, of tasting and smelling spiritual realities.

I think it is not unfair to state that when cornered the orthodox man really declares that the sense of feeling is of God, and the other senses of Satan. This is not inconsistent with that cold theology which in apportioning matters always gives Satan the cream of everything. In this allotment of the senses lies his principal error. However, because the heart of man cannot be thoroughly bound by creed or dogma, he rises out of himself and sometimes admits the divinity of these senses also.

GLAD LOOK OF RECOGNITION.

A celebrated teacher in the Congregational brotherhood, who within a few days has joined the great majority, recently declared that having witnessed the dissolution of a great many people, (none witnessed her own), she was convinced of immortality more by the glad look of recognition on the faces of the dying as they met the loved ones gone before, than by all the arguments ever invented by theologian or philosopher. To this, given as the best "reason for the faith that is in you," many Christians will say amen. But when apprised that it is an acknowledgment of the truth of Spiritualism, the "amen sticks in their throat."

LIKE NICODEMUS.

Like Nicodemus, they come to Jesus by night. When the darkness of death gathers about their loved ones—when the heart in which dwells God rises above dogma and creed, and they know but the one longing for spiritual sympathy and knowledge, they take comfort in the evidence that the dying child sees spirit forms and hears spirit voices even if they cannot.

RATIONALIST AND PREACHER.

To-morrow the rationalist, and next Sunday the preacher will demonstrate that these visions are ephemeral—born of lunacy or worse. And while the bereaved ones give the assent of silence, is it not strange that they take such delight in remembering and relating over and over to each other that their dear one went out into the great unknown a victim of such hallucinations.

The proud infidel, the intense agnostic, the scholarly theologian and the scientist who is either one or the other, teaches us that thought is but a record of sensations—that ideas can only enter the human brain originally, as we are constituted, by the nervous avenue, whatever division of the nervous system may be used to convey to the brain the sensations that culminate in an idea. Truth is of God and I am utterly incapable of contradicting this. It explains satisfactorily how every idea has come to us, and the idea of spirit-life is due to the fact that spirits have come in contact with our nervous system.

SPIRITS AND MATTER.

There is life in the grass as in the ox or the man. The grass is unconscious, the ox is semi-conscious and the man is fully aware of it. There is spiritual life wherever there is the ability to conceive the idea of a spiritual existence. One says: "But I am not able to conceive the expression of spirit-life except it be manifested through matter. Neither am I, nor do I find cause to assume that spirits ever made their presence known without being clothed to some extent in matter. Neither do I find reason to believe that any corner of the universe is void of matter, much less that spirits exist anywhere apart from it; but it may be refined or etherealized to a great degree.

SPIRITS AND THE NERVOUS SYSTEM.

We are all built on the same plan. We have all one father. Any experience possible to me is possible to another when he is able to enter the same conditions external and internal as I. We are all in daily contact with spirits, but the nervous system of many people is coarse and unresponsive and where we differ is, as a consequence, in the degree of consciousness evolved. One man is conscious of sensations so weak and indefinable that only a vague hope is born. Another on account of a clearer sensation is a man of faith, while a third has advanced to knowledge. "One day is to the Lord as a thousand years," and the man who yesterday was an agnostic may to-day be fully conscious of spirit presence.

JOHN BARLEYCORN.

It is the craving and hungering of his own spirit after these sensations that impel the agnostic and infidel to consider the question of spiritual things at all. If he were satisfied that the idea of a spiritual existence apart from the coarse material body were a delusion he would be silent, for he knows right well that the most effectual way to combat the belief is to ignore it. Every agitation of his grey matter but permits the deeper ramification of the roots of this idea, no matter how diligently he may cut away the outcroppings of it. The skeptic has through all generations been trying to stifle the wails of the spiritual man within him. He has buried him under mountains of the most ingenious argument, drowned him in sarcasm, wit and contumely. As Burns writes of another character:

"They took a pleugh and pleughed him down,
Put clods upon his head;
And they ha'e sworn a solemn aith
John Barleycorn was dead."

But like John Barleycorn the spiritual man rises again. He will not stay dead. The son or grandson of the infidel is the ecclesiastic of the next generation, perhaps, because that father or grandfather having discovered his error, through the channel of natural love is enabled in some degree to influence the son and remedy the matter.

THE SUBLIMINAL MAN.

A celebrated writer who has studied psychic phenomena—I think under hypnotic conditions mostly, and always from observation, not experience—is compelled to acknowledge that Jesus evidently went deeper into these investigations (by experience, of course) than any man who ever lived, and must be considered, therefore, as an authority on the question, in so far as he offers any explanation at all. This professor, noting the nervous disturbance incident to developing mediumship, warns us against it. As if the one purpose of Jesus' life and teaching was not to arouse the "subliminal man" of whom we are told to beware. That passage comes to my mind, "What have we to do with thee, Jesus, thou son of the most high. Art thou come hither to torment us before our time?"

Another eminent professor is quoted as saying in a recent lecture that "conversion is one of the most potent causes of degeneration." If changing from a brute into a spiritual being is degeneration, then he is right. He also advises against the "subliminal man" as theorists call him. Such teachers are Lilliputians trying to bind Gulliver.

The subliminal man is coming whether or no, and the wise virgins will trim their lamps and go out to meet him. I have been amazed by simply presenting my views to some of the most skeptical, to have them, one after another confess at last to certain psychic experiences that could not satisfactorily be accounted for by any other than the hypothesis of intelligent spirit interference, although they considered that the manifestations would be stronger if it were desired to make Spiritualists out of them. They would have had them if they had gone forth to meet the bridegroom. "Despise not thou the day of small things."

Consider, now, the case of the renowned Ingersoll, who is indeed "the voice of one crying in the wilderness" of speculation. When his soul is stirred to its depths, as on the occasion of his brother's death, he utters such sentiments as this: "In the night of death hope sees a star, and listening love can hear the rustle of an angel's wing." The subliminal man is asserting himself.

TOO SMALL TO BE REACHED.

I remember one day long ago of a fight between two schoolmates, one a tall, slender boy, the other short and stout. The big boy swung his arms about like flails while the little one kept punching him in the stomach. Finally the larger boy gave up, and in doleful accents said: "He's so small I can't reach him." I feel very much that way when I listen to some of the arguments used to dissuade people from a personal investigation of Spiritualism.

One very effective argument is: "Why do not spirits manifest to all of us?" That is a legitimate question, and the answer is forthcoming to the honest inquirer, but it does not furnish any proof that Abraham, Jesus or any other man did or does not see spirits even if you do not. Again, this unwarranted statement is considered as of weight: "If the spirit of my father desires to communicate with me, he can do it directly as well as through any medium. If he can do that, he can do this," etc.

You have no right to assume any such thing. The proper course for one confessedly ignorant is to humbly seek the light—not to assert that there is no light because he himself keeps his eyes closed. Nor does the wise man assume that the angel world is confined to one way of dealing with men in detail, and because there may be a difference in the method of communicating between a medium of to-day and of four thousand years ago, is no reason to spurn their advances to-day. Students of the Bible should prepare for God to "lead them in ways they have not known."

Again, the argument that mediums in some cases are not of a most lovable personality is no reason to deny that good spirits may use them as instruments. We are justified in concluding that when Jesus sent out the disciples two by two, Judas Iscariot took a part in the labors assigned to them. Truth is no less so if the vilest creature on earth be compelled or induced to acknowledge it.

THE FANNING OF ANGEL'S WINGS

Admitting the genuineness of the church-members' feeling, it must be noted that they feel in a vague way. The sense is not thoroughly awakened or organized. We may say they feel as a sponge. The spirit does not yet exhibit an intelligent personality. This yet but partially organized sense of feeling the spirit is not peculiar to orthodox people, although they think it is. Votaries of all religious systems are conscious of the like sensations. So also are men who outwardly profess allegiance to none. Where the Christian rises above others is in a dawning recognition that these strange sensations are the result of spirit contact. The "divine afflatus" of the poet—the "holy calm" of the philosopher are due to what in symbolical language may be described as the fanning of angels' wings about them. The thrills that sensitive persons feel as when under the spell of music or the drama are the result of unconsciously assuming the mental-nervous attitude which allows spirits to come in contact with their nerves.

The clergyman urges his flock to be spiritual-minded, but to avoid the society of spirits to which such a condition inevitably leads. Every time he tells them of a home over there inhabited by departed friends—every time he asks them to join in singing "Beulah Land," but hastens the day when they or their children will see ghosts. But every time he invokes superstition to arouse their fear of spirit, postpones that day. His attitude is well illustrated by the doggerel:

"Mother, may I go out to swim?
Yes, my darling daughter;
Hang your clothes on a hickory limb,
But don't go near the water."

ONLY CARRIED A LITTLE FURTHER.

I have not proven anything in this essay. My endeavor is to show that the hypothesis of spirit communing is in harmony with the experiences of Christians and others, being but an intelligent explanation of mysterious sensations; and that the Spiritualist is only carried a little further on the wave of evolution than the Methodist; also to show that this theory (it is not a theory with me now) is consistent with the scientific truth that all ideas are born of nervous sensations and that there is no effort without an immediate cause. I will also add that there can be no intelligible effect without an intelligent cause.

SEEK, AND YE SHALL FIND.

I would only direct the truth seeker to "go and see for yourselves." Rational discussion cannot prove. It may render a theory believable, but proof must more directly appeal to the senses. Only by personal experience can you acquire the proof that is unassailable by the arguments of those who, spiritually considered, "having eyes see not, having ears hear not, neither do they understand," and yet have a great gift of "darkening knowledge with words." Seek, and ye shall find. Our business is not so much to inquire into the methods God used in communicating with Moses, as in what way he is pleased, if at all, to permit intelligent, loving intercourse between men and angels to-day. To-day is the day of salvation.

Spiritualists, furnish phenomena worthy of your most careful and prayerful consideration—but do not stand apart and look on. You will never learn to swim by standing on the bank and criticising others who do sometimes make ludicrous efforts; much less by wading in shallow puddles.

LOVE IS THE PRINCIPAL THING.

Now as to the assertion that Spiritualism is good for the aspirational man, I shall avoid prolix argument, but remind the thinking man that the essential element in a heaven is love, and no condition of permanent happiness can be imagined on this or any other plane of existence, without love as the supreme law of relationship. The more sensitive one becomes the more he craves to give and receive love. It becomes to him the breath of life, and although sensitives are in certain stages of development irritable because of the transition going on, their office is in this day to demonstrate the truth which Solomon uttered ages ago, and upon which the permanent in all religions is founded, that "love is stronger than death." This is a matter of possible knowledge to you, and the condemnation is, as it always has been, that light is come into the world and men choose darkness.

"FEELING JESUS."

This "feeling Jesus," which so perplexes the man who wants to understand things, I know something about. The gift of the holy spirit that religious enthusiasts tell us they have received, I am not ignorant of. The joys and sorrows to which they testify, I have known. Their mind is to me, on that page at least, easily read. But in a search for fuller light this holy spirit began gradually to assert a distinct individual intelligence. Upon occasion I would be sensible of this, and again I would forget.

At last I concluded to examine the claims of Spiritualists. I soon began to furnish conditions with method and regularity favorable to manifestations. I saw that it was necessary if I should come to a clear understanding that I should personally lay myself open to experience—not stand away off and endeavor by the use of sarcasm or muddy combinations of words to pose as a great philosopher on the subject which I was personally afraid to investigate. I soon got much evidence, in various ways, that intelligent spirits were about me. I am now no prophet, but I am conscious always of spirit presences. I shall not in this essay detail my experience. I know there is a life for man apart from the coarse, physical body. I have the same reason to know there is a good spirit with me, whose sympathies are with all that is gentle, true and lovely, as I have to know the character of one in the mortal body.

It is true that at one period I had no clear proof of this, and had only to trust in the integrity of God and the authority of him who said: "Who is there among you, if his son ask bread, that will give him a stone. Much more will your father in heaven give the holy spirit to such as ask him." I never approached the spirit world without asking that, even if I did not use a great number of words in my prayers, and although doubts and fears prevented the free acceptance at one time. Our dangers are measured alone by our fears, and by investigation and effort those fears are dispelled.

The theologian will assert that when he prays for the holy spirit he does not mean a conscious personality but the general spirit of goodness, much as we say "the spirit of music," or "the spirit of beauty." I do not say he is wrong, but if a conscious personality comes to him in answer to that prayer, animated with goodness and love, are not the words applicable: "Whoso receiveth you receiveth me?" The question is simply this: Can you trust the God you preach about and accept what he sends? Is love, is goodness any less worthy if it comes through an intelligent conveyance?

SPIRITUALISM AND TELEPATHY.

It is not my purpose to try and explain in this essay the relation between Spiritualism and telepathy. There is, I doubt not, as much difference between a real spirit and the spirit form sometimes seen by clairvoyants, as between a doll and a baby. Some phenomena can be explained by mind-reading, but that hypothesis will not explain much of it, and until you become somewhat conscious yourself, there is no urgent need of arguing about the distinction. Suggestion from a mortal, or hypnotic action, have their place. We do not ignore them.

"TOO COMPREHENSIVE."

I shall not consider in this effort the objections of those who admit the genuineness of our phenomena, but have reasons as plentiful as blackberries against the cause of Spiritualism. It would take too much space. Like the Scotchman's objections to his preacher's discourse, they are too comprehensive, "firstly, I dinna like it because ye read it; secondly, because ye dinna read it weel; thirdly, because it was'na worth reading."

GOG AND MAGOG.

At the World's Congress of Religions the disciple of Confucius rubbed noses with the Episcopalian. The Buddhist kissed the Baptist. The Mohammedan embraced the Presbyterian, and the Methodist inquired of the priest about the health of His Holiness, the Pope. Spiritualism was not recognized. This religion, which is the natural product of the seed sown by the fishermen of Galilee nineteen hundred years ago, was ignored. "He came to his own and his own received him not." All their systems of theology combat Spiritualism. I must think of the prophecy when they would be "gathered together to battle against the great day of Almighty God, whose numbers are as the sands of the sea."

LOVE AGAINST CASUISTRY.

In the coming battle of Gog and Magog, Spiritualists must learn that the old weapons of the demagogue are not for them. The argument that depends on vengeful denunciation and bitter personalities, leave to our friends, the enemy. They fight not against us, but against their fathers, mothers, wives and children, who have gone before, and who now in all loving ways persist in the endeavor to assure them of a better land upon entering which they leave behind dogma and creed as one leaves his old clothes. It is a war of love against casuistry—of light against darkness—of knowledge against theory. Our part is, according to our gifts, to skirmish with false ideas. The only way to remove a bad man is to make him good. The only way to kill a Presbyterian so that he will stay dead is to make a Spiritualist out of him—to convince him

"That round about us, though unseen,
The dear immortal spirits tread.
The vast—the boundless universe
Is life. There are no dead."

J. T. MACDONALD.
San Francisco, Cal.

ANIMAL IMMORTALITY.

To the Editor:—In reading Dr. J. M. Peebles' worthy article—"Do Animals Have Immortality?" there seemed one point to be thought of in regard to his objection to it, worthy of notice: That in spirit-life we do not eat or have physical hunger to support the physical body, but only the mental hunger is there, for calls and needs of the mind.

If so, animals in the spirit-world are not obnoxious, because they do not hunger and eat to sustain the physical body. The mosquito, for instance, would never rise from the still water where it breeds its young, if it did not feel hunger to support its physical condition. They would hardly be more than a grain of sand in the peaceful waters of spirit-life, as they have no hunger of mind, scarcely. And so with all obnoxious insects to us here—they would never be seen. Always staying in their native haunts of propagation, only as some naturalist called them out to see the workings of inferior mind in different directions of developing thought. Or the love of some spirit calling for its earthly pet drew them to their society by reciprocating love.

With this view, as we have been taught, of spiritual conditions having no physical hunger, I do not see how animal life in the spirit-world would be the least obnoxious to human spirits so far above them in thought that there could be no common meeting between them of reciprocating intelligence that would attract them to us, without our will to do so. They would all be away in the elements where they procreate being, for their love of offspring and food is the only love in their being, yet developed, and their food hunger would be gone in spirit life, and only love of offspring being apparent, they would be with us only as we drew them to us.

It is physical hunger here that makes every and all animal life obnoxiously encroaching upon us. And when that disappears from their being by laying off the physical body, they would pay no more attention to us than the rock that bears the hungry moss that envelopes it.

Love for conditions where they come into being and propagate being would be the only law of love to them or mental hunger of animal being. The mosquito would hardly be more to us in the water than a grain of sand, or the fly would never come into our presence, for 'tis only now as it is seeking physical food, or the spider never leave the rocks or spin its web to catch its prey, or the lion or tiger, give aught but forest fierceness of varied life, or the bird sing sweetness to its sunny bowers.

And as we arose into more high mental being we would leave them behind for the music of vibrating winds which would be tones of sweetest melody. But without all that makes life beautiful and attractive here we would be at a loss to see and find again in immortal homes of bliss all that give naturalness and joy to earth being.

If life has the naure of immortality, then all life must be immortal, subject to progess.

L. A. SUNDERLIN NOURSE.
Moline, Ill.

A STARTLING FACT.

The Progressive Thinker was the only Spiritualist paper that had the enterprise to publish Prof. Barrett's address before the National Association Convention of Spiritualists We have his address, covering three pages, and five other fine addresses and articles, one by Col, Ingersoll, grouped in one paper, and we want to send out 1,000,000 of them. It is worth ten times its weight in gold.

Read the article on 5th page headed "Fifteen Cents."

"Human Culture and Cure, Marriage, Sexual Development, and Social Upbuilding." By E. D. Babbitt, M. D., LL.D. A most excellent and very valuable work, by the Dean of the College of Fine Forces, and author of other important volumes on Health, Social Science, Religion, etc. Price, cloth, 75c. For sale at this office.

"Right Living." By Susan H. Wixon. The author shows a wise practicality in her method of teaching the principle of ethics. She illustrates her subject with many brief narratives and anecdotes, which render the book more interesting and more easily comprehended. It is especially adapted for use in Children's Lyceum. In the hands of mothers and teachers it may be made very useful. Young and old will be benefited by it. Cloth $1. For sale at this office.

"The Priest, the Woman, and the Confessional." This book, by the well known Father Chiniquy, reveals the degrading, impure influences and results of the Romish confessional, as proved by the sad experience of many wrecked lives. Price, by mail $1. For sale at this office.

"Poems of Progress." By Lizzie Doten. In this volume, this peerless poet of Spiritualism may be read in her varied moods, "from grave to gay, from lively to severe." It is a book to be treasured and richly enjoyed by all who love genuine poetry, and especially by Spiritualists. The volume is tastily printed and bound. Price $1.

"Encyclopedia of Biblical Spiritualism: or a Concondance of the Principal Passages of the Old and New Testament Scriptures which prove or imply Spiritualism; together with a brief history of the origin of many of the important books of the Bible." By Moses Hull. The well-known talented and scholarly author has here embodied the results of his many years' study of the Bible in its relations to Spiritualism. As its title denotes, it is a veritable encyclopedia of infomation on the subject. Price $1., For sale at this office.

"The Philosophy of Spirit, and the Spirit-World." By Hudson Tuttle. A most able and interesting presentation of a most important subject. Every Spiritualist and every inquirer into the proofs and philosophy of Spiritualism should have this excellent book. Cloth, $1. For sale at this office.

THE METHOD OF THE CHURCH TO MAKE RELIGION ATTRACTIVE.

A SCATHING ARRAIGNMENT OF THE CHURCH—ITS POKER PARTY—ITS DUDE DRILL—ITS SACRED FEMALE MINSTRELS—THE LADY WHO ACTED THE PART OF HIGH KICKER—THE ANKLE AUCTION—IT MAKES ONE WEARY TO ENUMERATE THE SHOCKS TO THE NERVOUS TEMPERAMENT IMPARTED BY CHURCH SHOWS.

Rev. Dr. William Bayard Hale, who is warning vigorously against sectarianism, according to The Literary Digest, finds in the prevalence of church entertainments an additional evidence of the interference which the divisions among Christians have wrought with the spiritual work of the church. He has kept a record of entertainments given by religious societies in the United States from June 1. 1895, to June 1, 1896, and this record, which of course is but fragmentary, includes more than five hundred such occasions.

"It is with a sense of amazement, tinged with admiration," he says sarcastically, that a student discovers "with what increasing ardor the institution, founded not to be by the Peak Sisters, widely known in American religious circles, introducing that touching ballad, "Do You Know the Mouth of Man," in which the gentle art of kissing is referred to ninety times;" a Poker Party; a Dude Drill; a Great Moral Divine Show, "introducing McGinty, a dwarf, and a petrified man;" Dance of the Arab Maidens; a Blackbird Ballet; the Chew Glue Sisters, in their song and dance specialties; "Sacred Female Minstrels," in which the young ladies were not only corked but appeared in bloomers, and one of whom, "with enviable agility, if not discretion, kicked a tamborine held above her head;" a three-act opera in which the male roles were taken by girls in fleshings; the Trilby Party, otherwise the Foot Social, otherwise the Ankle Auction, in which "the young ladies of the church display their——feet, let us say, and be polite—behind a curtain which is lifted to a height described as 'tantalizing,'". and men in front of the curtain, viewing what is displayed, bid for the privilege of taking their particular choice of the females to supper.

After his formidable array of such titles, Rev. Dr. Hale proceeds to express his feelings as follows:

"I am launching no anathemas at any well-meant effort to make religion attractive. Dignity is not the chief consideration in a divine service, and it is conceivable that it is sometimes expedient to sacrifice good taste to a more important thing—the benefit of souls. But I deplore, and I feel that serious men must everywhere deplore the conditions which make the sensational Sunday show frequent and familiar. As a means of drawing a big house, I concede its convenience, under our present unhappy divisions; but I traverse the opinion, if it is anywhere held, that a Sunday show would be necessary under a sane and Christian—that is, a united, a catholic—administration of religion.

"Where now rival sects find it necessary to 'go to the masses' with prize texts, bicycle runs for Christ, cyclone evangelists, and lantern services, a united church, soberly engaged in its proper work, would find the masses eager to come to it. The raison d'etre of these things is in the fact that a hundred and forty sects have fastened themselves upon a people who can not support them. The show is the only means by which thousands of our innumerable and unnecessary religious societies can pay their bills. The theater and the music-hall, properly conducted, are not establishments upon which the church has any war to wage. But the church is not a system of theaters and music-halls. It is a divine institution with a definite, particular, and sacred office, distinct from that of all human agencies whatsoever. It is to teach the sacredness of life, by standing for the essentially sacred side of life. Its songs are not merry glees, but litanies of human hopes and sorrows, and chants of human hearts in winged aspirations seeking God. If there is in life anything pure and virginal, and sweet—God knows it is hard enough to keep the faith that there is—where is there to be kept any place and expression for it, if what are called the houses of God are given over to immodesty? We expect certain things from Mr. Hardy and the Zolaists, but we are hurt and grieved when the Galahad of our story-tellers descends too much to look for cleanliness on the professional stage; but surely it is beyond pardon that any body bearing the name of a church of Jesus, the undefiled Nazarene, should, by a doubtful exhibition, sully the mind of any pure lad or tender maiden committed to its care.

"If there is anywhere any witness for innocence, any illustration of the seriousness, nobility, and dignity of life; if there is anywhere any institution to preserve faith in the world, to administer the sacraments—that one which has taught former generations as nothing else ever could have taught, or ever can teach, the essential brotherhood of men, and that other which preaches the real presence of God in His world; any power to maintain, against the attacks of the foes of order, the sanctity of marriage; if there is anywhere any organ of God to set right the judgments of society, to absolve whom He has absolved, but to whom men refuse pardon; anywhere any authority also to declare the eternal righteousness, to thunder the demands of justice, and make plain the practical duties of honesty, chastity, and mercy; anywhere, in this time of social travail, any witness to the reality of the kingdom of heaven, bold to demand that it be set up in very truth upon this soil of earth; any corporate love to search out the poor and minister to the sick, to pour upon the wounds of the victims of our social injustice the compassionate healings of its sympathy—it is not easy to recognize it in an agglomeration of enfeebled sects which eke out miserable existence by pitifully entertaining a world which the church is intended to minister to, to lead, to teach, and to save.

